It is common to make the useful recommendation, in applying any powder to repel insects on plants, to perform the dusting in the morning while the dew is on the plants. The only objection to this recommendation is that plants are not moistened with dew every morning, or it is evaporated before the owner has time to do the work, or it may be too hot and dry for dew. The work is therefore put off till the insects may have done their mischief. A sure way, therefore, adapted to every morning or to any time in each day, is to procure a watering pot with a very fine rose, and with a fine mist moisten the plants and follow immediately with the dusting. Without waiting for a dewy morning, ashes, plaster, air slacked lime, hellebore or any of the numerous poisonous powders may be applied at any time of day.

Thumping the Bible.

In the country village of R—— there lived a Free Church minister who was greatly addicted to "thumping the book." One Sunday he was preaching from the text, "Ye are a stiff-necked people." In the middle of his discourse he repeated his text several times, and, to make it more impressive, brought down his fist with a thud on the edge of the hymnbook, which toppled off the cushion, and in its descent came into violent contact with the back of the precentor's head. The leader of praise, thus suddenly roused from the borders of a pleasant nap, rubbed the back of his head, and looking up, quietly remarked—"Losh, minister, the Israelites are unco near han' the day; I'm doubtin' ye've made me stiff-necked as wee as them wi' yer cantrips."

Wm. Roberts, M. D., Physician to the Manchester, Eng., Infirmary and Lunatic Hospital, Professor of Medicine in Owen's College, says: "In a great majority of cases Bright's Disease begins slowly and imperceptibly." This is sufficient warning, and justifies you in using Warner's Safe Cure before your kidney trouble becomes chronic or pronounced Bright's Disease.

—Very often the "May I?" of courtship is answered by the "You must" of matrimony.

GETTING INFORMATION.

A Reporter's Experience with the Patroness of a Philanthropical Institution.

It was the evening of the graduating exercises in a philanthropical institution. Said a New York Sun reporter to the lady in charge rustling around in the dignity of a new black silk:

"How many graduates have you?"

"Oh, dear me, are you a reporter. I just dread to see one come in. They never get anything right. I never knew one to. I think they do it on purpose. It is too mean for anything. I hate—

"But will you tell me the number of graduates?"

"Oh, ever so many, and they are just the brightest girls. Oh, it is such a wonderful thing that this institution can educate them as it does. It is perfectly splendid. I don't suppose its any use to tell you about it, for you won't get it right any way."

"What do they graduate in?"

"Why, every thing most. That's the idea of the institution, to make them so self-reliant and ready for emergencies and—"

"Who are the patrons of the institution?"

"Oh, nice people. Every body ought to be interested in it. They would be, too, if the papers took it up in the right way, but they won't. They never get any thing right, the reporters—oh, I can't tell how they twist things."

"How many instructors do you employ?"

"Oh, we have the loveliest teachers. I'll go and ask Miss B—— to come and tell you about them. She knows them personally—all the little family history, you know. But of course we don't want you to publish that. Papers are just filled with every one's private affairs now. It is just horrid, but I suppose the reporters don't care what they say if they just get their pay. Excuse me; I'll go and speak to Miss Smith," and she rustled away. The reporter waited while they counseled together, and, approaching, heard: "Oh, I think she's lovely in that dress. You know I advised her to put those revers on—so much more becoming than a plain waist. Oh, there's that dreadful reporter. I'm tired to death telling him about things. You tell him about the teachers, won't you, dear, and put those violets up a little nearer your chin."

"I? Why, I don't know anything about it, and I'm busy; I'm on the flower committee."

"Well, we might as well let it go. I've told him about it, but he'll get it all wrong, anyway. It is perfectly awful the way those reporters misconstrue things and never get anything right."

Grit versus Pluck.

A burro and a bull-dog had a fight recently in Fresno, Cal. Burro is Californian for donkey. The burro was browsing on cockle burs by the roadside when the bull-dog trotted along, stopped and without a growl, seized the donkey by the shank bone of the off hind leg. The burro kicked and kicked, and then he tried to reach the dog with his mouth, but unavailingly. Then the burro laid down on its back and brought its hind legs forward towards its head. He shut his jaws on the dog's back and slowly straightened out. The dog, without flinching, kept his grip on the shank bone. But the donkey had just as much grit, and kept on straightening itself out, though the strain was causing the flesh and muscles to be terribly lacerated. The dog let go first. The burro kept its hold on the dog's back, and in a second was on its feet, with the dog dangling from its mouth. The burro's leg was terribly lacerated, but it did not seem to mind. He limped across the road, and, deliberately pausing several times to rest, rubbed the dog back and forth over the barbed-wire fence until it was killed. The dog did not howl from the beginning to the end.—Chicago Journal.

Victoria's Interest in Funerals.

I hear that the Queen has recently been concerning herself with the arrangement of royal funerals, and that Her Majesty has caused a long memorandum on the subject to be drawn up, with a variety of new orders, which extend to the most minute detail. In future the body of a defunct male member of the royal family is to be placed in the coffin in an attire of quite different material to that worn by a deceased female, and married people are not to be treated the same as the unmarried. The Queen's solicitude extends even to the making of the coffins, and there are copious directions concerning them. Embalming is positively prohibited. One would suppose that the Queen was anticipating a large mortality among her kindred. It is no doubt expedient to be mindful of the uncertainty of human life, but there is surely no occasion to carry this forethought to such extravagant lengths.—London Truth.

How They Catch Fish in Georgia.

Last Monday morning it was our pleasure to go a-fishing with a party on Alapaha, near Grover, and see how fish are caught the "new way." From four to six men go into the water with a log in front of them, and a sheet with one edge on the log and the other edge held up by the man so that the fish can't jump over, but fall on the sheet. The log is pushed along to the land, and when near it the fish begin to try to make their escape back to the deep water by jumping. If they fail to make a good leap they lodge on the cloth, thereby becoming victims of their own destruction. It is amusing to see how they jump. It is supposed that about three hundred pounds were caught.—Abbeville (S.C.) Times.

The Shah of Persia has adopted some of the peculiarities of civilization, but is rather behindhand in others. He wears patent leather boots, but seems to regard a pocket handkerchief as a superfluity.

The wave of prohibition is undoubtedly receding. The defeat of a prohibitory amendment in Massachusetts will almost certainly be followed by the defeat of a similar amendment in Pennsylvania next month. This does not mean a relaxation of the people's resolve to regulate the liquor traffic and abate its worst evils. It means simply that the popular mind throughout the country is becoming fixed in the conviction that high license and local option are the most efficient methods of attaining the objects aimed at.—St. Louis Republican.

A CANINE HERO OF THE FLOOD.

How He Saved His Mistress from Death in the Overwhelming Water.

A large crowd of people attracted my attention about 6 o'clock this evening on Main street, says a Johnstown letter to the Philadelphia Inquirer. On going closer I noticed that a number of men and women were surrounding a dog, on which each and every one of the crowd was anxious to lavish with attentions and endearing terms more appropriately bestowed upon a favorite child than an animal.

"Come here, Romeo, my noble old dog!" said one woman.

"Give me a kiss; there is a dear." "Ah, Romeo," said another, "it was a pity Johnstown had not more such noble creatures as you are, and there would not be so many people dead here now."

The dog, a beautiful water spaniel whose fur was clipped so as to give him the appearance of a miniature lion, stood as quiet and dignified among the people as if he understood each word addressed to him, taking the evidence of appreciation as matters of course which he had every right to expect. Soon I understood what it all meant.

Romeo belongs to Mrs. C. F. Kress, of Washington street, Johnstown. The day the flood-gates of the South Fork reservoir broke loose that lady went to the house of her sister, Mrs. A. C. Bress, on Main street, taking the dog with her. While there the awfully disastrous waters came sweeping down upon them from Conemaugh, so that all the people in the house were compelled to get upon the roof. There were seven in the party and Romeo made a good eighth.

But soon the terrible waves and floating debris raised horrible havoc with the building. Suddenly a big wave dashed upon the roof. Mrs. C. F. Kress was knocked off her place of refuge and rapidly floated along with the wild stream. No human being attempted to jump after her or make any effort for her rescue, because the surging flood had already dragged her beyond all human reach. But Romeo, the lady's dog, forgetful of his own danger, had apparently been expecting what was coming.

The waters had no more than closed above the sinking lady when the dog jumped after her, and when her dress again appeared above the surface he immediately grasped it between his teeth. It was a heavy burden, but the animal seemed to make a double effort. Holding the dress in his mouth he gently but firmly pushed her forward through the waters toward a frame house, which was still defying the waves. Romeo's noble efforts proved successful, and in a few moments Mrs. Kress was able to lay hold of one of the spars on the frame house and drag herself into comparative safety.

But alas! It was only temporary safety. Even before the woman had realized her escape the devastating waves came mountain high, rushing against the frame house. This time the building could not withstand. With a terrific crash the wooden sills seemed to be bursting apart, and once more the woman and her dog were at the mercy of the flood.

The noble brute, however, was not to be daunted. Again he clung to his mistress very closely, not as if he were to rescue her from a watery grave, but as if his whole life depended upon her safety. Constantly swimming by her side while she was borne upon the current he contrived to keep her head above water so as to prevent her drowning. For over half an hour the dog battled with the waves for her preservation. His noble, faithful endurance was at last rewarded. He succeeded in directing his valued burden toward Alma Hall and here Mrs. Kress was pulled out of the water.

As she reached the roof unconsciousness overcame her, and during all that time Romeo, who seemed to think the woman dead, barked and howled in the most frantic manner. Only her returning breath pacified him and then he quietly and contently lay down at her feet.

This was the story gleaned from the people surrounding the dog, and when I called to see Mrs. Kress at her sister's home she verified every particular of the above.

A Risk in Shaving.

At this time of the year men have a way of cutting off their beards altogether, or making some new adjustment of the hair upon their faces. In this way very startling effects are often produced, disguises thrown off, and astounding revelations of character made. There is Major Blank, for example; I have been meeting him all winter, more or less, and inasmuch as he has a red face, a jovial eye and a hearty manner, I have been inclined to set him down as a sincere, whole-souled sort of person; but in an evil hour he cut off his moustache, thus revealing a very bad mouth. In his present aspect I consider the Major a man to be feared and avoided. I should hesitate to lend him $10; if any underhand villainy were perpetrated I should at once suspect him of being at the bottom of it; and—at least until snow flies again and the Major resumes his moustache—I shall keep his name on my index damnatus.—"Taverner" in Boston Post.

An Odd Recommendation.

The note writer of the St. James' Gazette says: "When a coachman or other servant leaves his place 'through death' he does not, as a rule, advertise for another place. But there are exceptions to every rule, as the following 'advertisement' from the Times shows:

The Hon. Mrs. Mitford wishes to recommend her coachman. Ten years' personal character. Leaving through death. Total abstainer. Age 33. Married. Address A., 7 Cavendish square, W.

"Of course the poor fellow, when the ten years' service is ended 'through death,' is now a total abstainer; but whose eye is this advertisement meant to catch? I was not aware that the Times circulated in other worlds than ours."

He Believed in It.

Miss Spook Chacer—Do you believe in second sight, Mr. Peck?

Mr. N. Peck—You just bet I do. My marriage was a result of love at first sight.

The Clyde seamen and firemen, who have been on a strike, have resumed work on the owners' terms.

While trying a wife-beating case last week, Magistrate Smith, of Philadelphia, laid down from the bench this proposition: "It's a woman's right to sass her husband."

FOR HIM WHO RUNS.

New Paragraphs Got Up on the Rapid Transit Plan.

A herd of elk numbering 1,000 head was seen on a point of the mountains near the residence of Mr. Robinson, on Upper Elk, Wyoming, one day last week.

Wright Burke, of Troup County, Ga., has been married fifteen years and has fourteen children—twins five times, triplets once and one solitary and alone.

John A. Phillips (colored), of Chepachet, Mass., has spent thirteen years in State prison on two sentences. In each case he was convicted on the testimony of his own wife and daughter. Now it has been ascertained that the women perjured themselves, and that he is an innocent and terribly wronged man.

Lima, O., has a Fagin, who offered a watch to the one of a gang of 10-year-old boys who would bring him the most stolen brass in a certain time. They have all captured the watch in the city jail, but they will carry no more coals to Newcastle in the shape of brass to Fagin.

Mr. McKibben, of Henry County, Ga., captured a turtle in Walnut Creek the other day that weighed eighty-eight pounds. "It's head was as large as a dog's," says a local newspaper man, "and when cut off snapped in two an inch plank which Mr. McKibben placed in its mouth."

John Barrett, of Perry Township, Ind., aged 74, is in jail for chastising Mrs. Barrett (aged 70) with the poker.

In Russia every man found inebriated in the public streets is imprisoned, and when he has recovered from his intoxi[illegible] set to sweep the streets for a

Over two years ago Marcus Counts was young lady nam[illegible] betrayed her a[illegible] Olathe. His b[illegible] girl he betray[illegible]

A Waldo [illegible] Portland Pr[illegible] Troy, Waldo [illegible] of Gracelon[illegible] birth to four [illegible] are all alive

I

Abraham

Talking [illegible] Private Se[illegible] Graphic te[illegible] the latter [illegible] stout, and [illegible] were once [illegible] presence [illegible] legs. "N[illegible] are altoge[illegible] I think a[illegible] what he t[illegible] had been [illegible] coln's over[illegible] ...sed it by saying: "Abe, what do you think about it?" Mr. Lincoln had a faraway look as he sat with one leg twisted around the other, but he responded to the question: "Think of what?" "Well, we're talking about the proper length of a man's legs. We think yours are too long and Douglas' too short, and we'd like to know what you think is the proper length." "Well," said Mr. Lincoln, "that's a matter that I've never given any thought to, so of course I may be mistaken; but my first impression is that a man's legs ought to be long enough to reach from his body to the ground."

A Peculiar Epitaph.

An observing lawyer said the other day: "I have often heard of peculiar inscriptions on tombstones; but one came under my observation a few days ago that I think deserves a notice. It was something decidedly out of the common, and, while the sentiment was praiseworthy and a 'consummation devoutly to be wished,' had a strong element of the ludicrous in it. I was passing along Main street, in Germantown, and I stopped at the corner of Queen street for a moment to look at the old-fashioned stucco and stone church there. Its old steeple and clock are landmarks. It is the old Trinity Church, and it stands in the centre of a grassy plot about half an acre in extent. Part of it is used as a burying ground. There are three graves close together, but only one of them is marked with a tombstone. On this are the name and date of death of the deceased occupier, and beneath it is the rather remarkable inscription:

'When shall we three meet again?'

The designer evidently thought it biblical and not Shakspearean, and he had probably never read the succeeding line, 'In thunder, lightning or in rain?'"—Philadelphia Inquirer.

He Made a Mistake.

He—My dear Miss Angel, will you not partake of just a little pale, pink cream and one bonbon, which I fear will not be so exquisite as you are accustomed to in Boston?

She—What a break! I'm not from Boston. I live in Kansas City.

"Well, I am a fish! Here, waiter, bring us a double order of pork chops and some turnips with the peeling on."

A Wise Expedient.

Maud—So you are going to marry your father's cashier?

Isabella—Yes. Papa says that if he runs away with the bank's funds, the money will still be in the family.

Frederick T. Roberts, M.D., Examiner in Medicine in the Royal College of Surgeons, London, Eng., in speaking of Bright's Disease, says: "Death is usually hastened by uric acid poisoning, serous inflammation, bronchitis, pneumonia, dropsy, or by apoplexy." Warner's Safe Cure is a guarantee against fatality from these terrible maladies, because it cures the cause (diseased kidneys), and puts the kidneys in a healthy condition, enabling them to expel the poison or waste matter from the system.

The trouble with most of the mothers who are trying to make Little Lord Fauntleroys of their boys is that they begin on the outside.

Between 15,000 and 16,000 children are lost in London every year, but nearly 98 per cent. of them are restored to their parents through the aid of the police.

Gaston Plante, inventor of the electrica accumulator, is dead. He was a brother o M. Francois Plante, the musician.

What one man thinks is fun another thinks is folly. That is what gives such picturesque variety to courting.

THAT SMALL BOY.

And Yet, With All His Faults, How We Love Him.

The small boy is the same the world over He has the universal language, and if he landed during the marble season in Timbuctoo he'd be perfectly able to make the Timbuctoo boy understand his opinion of alleys and tors. This small boy is a democrat—fine clothes do not obtain with him; indeed, they are rather scorned, and a well-dressed boy is at present grabbed by his fellows and taunted with bein' "Little Lord Fauntleroy" and asked in a whining tone: "Why doesn't 'oo go home to dearest?"

There is no sentiment about the small boy. He is all things to all men, and that is impudent. No pavement is too sacred to keep him from writing his opinion in whitest chalk upon it, and no lamp-post is too high and no step too much decorated for him to occupy it and view any passing show. He confesses to but one weakness, and that is dogs. Cats he holds in utter contempt, regarding their tails merely as an appendage by which to swing them, and girls he loathes and in his heart wonders what they were made for

For a few years he will run away from them, and after that time or until he gets married he will run after them. The small boy is an institution we could ill-afford to dispense with, says a writer in the Louisville Courier-Journal, and, like a great many other institutions, he occasionally needs a thorough warming up. I would like to suggest to his guardians that nothing is [illegible]

...o got her salary at the end of the week she found a substantial increase over the figure at which she had been engaged. She asked the cashier the reason.

Because of a sale you made the first day you came. If you remember, you sold half a dozen handkerchiefs to a gentleman after making a long talk."

"Yes, I remember."

"That was Mr. Pardridge. He thought your salary ought to be raised."

This was a good while ago. The lady is happily married again. You may be sure that a girl who can sell goods to the proprietor of the store will not be any too long in getting a husband, and a good one, too. —Chicago Mail.

The "Question" is Called.

George Amelia, I have a question.

Amelia—Pop it, George.

A small fishing craft came ashore at John Ritchie's, Amherst Island, yesterday morning. It was empty. It is thought to belong to one Ainsley, of Picton, or Indian Point, aged 59 years. He was at Bath Monday with a load of fish, which he disposed of, and filled himself up with whiskey before leaving in the evening. It is probable that he was drowned. In the boat were a sail set, and a hat. The craft had not been capsized.

About 3 o'clock yesterday afternoon whilst Ella Brown, an 11-year-old daughter of Mr. G. R. Brown, merchant tailor, Belleville, was picking flowers on the high western bank of the river she fell into the water and was rapidly borne down stream by the swift current. Simon Sanford witnessed the accident from the opposite shore, crossed the footbridge, plunged into the stream and rescued the drowning girl just as she was being carried under the sawlogs which dam the river for some distance at this point.

Eugene Emery, a farm hand, employed near Oak Orchard, near Medina, N.Y., and aged about 40 years, had been paying considerable attention to Cora, the 13-year-old daughter of John Grimes, a well-to-do farmer of that place. The young girl's parents forbade Emery going with her, and on Monday evening, when the father and mother were away, and when only Cora and her little brother were at home, Emery entered the house and, with a large club of wood, commenced an attack on the defenceless girl, and beat her till life was extinct. Emery was arrested yesterday morning at Albion.

THE BIRTH OF THE ROSE.

A happy little lamb that yet no evil knew
Nibbled a rose-branch that above its pasture blew.
On that the briar, for what the little lamb had done,
Nipped from its fleece a lock of wool, but only one.
The briar held fast the little lock on sharp thorn bent,
When came a nightingale on nest-building intent.
Said she: "Unloose thy hold and give the lock to me,
An I once my nest be built I will sing thanks to thee."
It gave, she took, she built, and lo! while yet she sang,
From out the briar for very joy a rosebud sprang.

A burglar entered the house of John Webber at Lacrosee, Wis., on Wednesday night through the window of a room occupied by his two daughters, Kate and Lena. The girls were awakened while the robber was searching their clothing, and Lena, aged 18, attempted to escape. She fell, and before she could arise she was seized by the burglar, who plunged a knife into her body below the tenth rib. The knife was pulled upward, and a deep gash nine inches long was cut, exposing the heart, lungs and intestines. The assassin then made a thrust at the other girl, who managed to escape the knife. The family were aroused by the noise but the burglar escaped. Lena Webber will die.

AN IMPROMPTU WEDDING.

It Was a Joke on James, But He Proved Equal to the Emergency.

James Gordon, of this city, was considerably surprised last night when three omnibus loads of his friends and acquaintances from Norwalk and the surrounding country alighted at his boarding house. As they poured in on him and began to mingle congratulations, with requests for an introduction to "the bride," he was staggered, and explained that as he had not yet secured that very necessary participant in a wedding there must be a mistake.

Thereupon his unexpected guests produced invitation cards and accused Jim of trifling about a serious subject. At any rate, they did not think it fair that he should disappoint his friends.

It was evident that some practical joker had been putting in his fine work, and the party convinced Jim that it was his duty to get even.

"A good-looking fellow like you should be able to find a girl willing to marry him," suggested one of the party.

"Well, I'll try," said James. "Amuse yourselves for half an hour, while I see what can be done."

He called upon Miss Lizzie Emmons, a neighbor, and explained his pressing necessity. The sudden proposal almost took her breath away, but, recognizing her neighborly duty, she amiably consented, and said she would get on her best dress and be ready within the half hour. Gordon meantime rushed back to his friends and [illegible]d them of his luck. It was too late to [illegible] a minister, but a Justice of the Peace [illegible] the party volunteered to tie the nuptial [illegible]ot. Other guests went out into the [illegible]ghways and byways and gathered in a [illegible]erman cornetist, an Irish fiddler and an [illegible]alian harpist, with "lashin's" of eata[illegible]s and drinkables. The bride came to [illegible]ne promptly, her health was toasted in [illegible]any a brimming beaker, and after the [illegible]ast there was a merry dance until past [illegible]idnight, when the newly-paired couple [illegible]parted on a bridal tour and the guests [illegible]led home in deep content.—Bridgeport [illegible]onn. letter in New York Press.

A Feeble Effort.

A Scotch clergyman of the old school [illegible]s this anecdote: Early in life, while [illegible]upying another charge, he invited a [illegible]ergyman, whom the unregenerate would [illegible]ll conceited and dull, to preach in his [illegible]lpit. During the sermon our old school [illegible]eacher dozed away in the sweet old way [illegible] he was suddenly called on to conclude [illegible]e service with prayer. Accustomed to [illegible]gard himself as the humblest of his [illegible]reator's instruments, and forgetting that [illegible] had not delivered the sermon, he began with "We beseech Thee to accept the weak and feeble effort that has been addressed to Thee, and more richly to endow Thy servant in the graces he so greatly lacks."

Women May be Dentists.

A woman dentist is somewhat of an innovation; but that she is likely to make her mark in the profession is indicated by the high standing of the young woman who has just been graduated from the Boston Dental College. According to the announcement of the Dean she stood No. 1 in a class of between thirty and forty, and in the race she has run she was so far ahead of her classmates that she could hardly hear the tread of the fellow next behind her. The dentist's chair is not exactly a synonym for everything that is comfortable and inviting, but the presence of a gentle woman operator promises to detract something from its terrors.—Boston Herald.

Called.

Van Doodlees—Waggs called me a fool to-day, don'tchewknaw.

Van Simpre—Aw, weally? What did you do, deaw chawppie?

Von Doodlees—Oh, I got even with him; I happened to have me old chestnut bell in me pawcket, and I wang it at him weal hawd, don'tchewknaw.

Von Simpire—Baw Jawve! Thawt was awful good, chawppie.

Tempora Mutantur.

HIS FIRST.

Bjenkins—By the way, Bjonse, how old is that baby of yours?

Bjones (promptly)—One year, two months and eight days.

HIS SIXTH.

Bjenkins—By the way, Bjones, how old is that youngest baby of yours now?

Bjones—Oh, hanged if I know. A year or so. Ask my wife.

The Royal Agricultural Show at Windsor, Eng., is a remarkable success. While on the grounds I heard great regret constantly expressed at the absence of the usual Canadian exhibit, this being the finest show the society has ever held. The Colony of Victoria this year sent an exhibit of produce, not for competition. Millars' cheese is the only sample of Canadian produce hitherto shown. I met very few Canadian buyers of live stock.

Prof. Alexander Graham Bell has built a house boat, in which he will cruise in Nova Scotian waters this summer. It is put together in catamaran style, and contains large parlors, billiard rooms, etc. On board Mr. and Mrs. Bell will entertain many friends.

They have a new way of planting orange trees near San Diego, Cal. They bore a small hole and drop in a dynamite cartridge, the explosion of which makes a hole big enough for the tree, and loosening the soil to the depth of several feet enables the tree to take root easier.

Mark Twain's forthcoming book, "A Yankee at King Arthur's Court," is said to be a satire on English nobility and royalty.

Mrs. Margaret Quinn, who died in New York the other day at the age of 110 years, smoked vigorously a strong pipe and possessed wit which was the marvel of the neighborhood.

Mr. Wm. Stilling, a Wellington street (London) baker, left home on Thursday evening, as he said, to pay a visit to the Sons of England Lodge in London West, and before starting handed his money to his wife. Since that time nothing has been heard of him, although the most diligent inquiry has been made. Mr. Stilling was a man of strictly temperate habits and his family relations all that could be desired. His friends can imagine no good reason for his disappearance.

FISHING AND FLIRTING.

A Sarcastic View of Angling Females.

A favorite delusion of mankind, in youth, or even in middle age, is that there is pleasure in fishing with a lady. About this let there be no error, says the London News. If you do not care about catching trout, and if the young lady is young and "conveniently handsome," as our father Walton says, go fishing with her by all means. In exactly ten minutes the following things will occur: First, she will entangle your lines and flies with hers. Next, she will wind her own cast all round her, and in her dress and in her hair, caught in the coils of the casting line, like Salammbo in those of her serpent. You will extricate her, and hand her your rod, but long before you have disentangled her flies, she will have hooked yours in the bottom of the boat. You snap the line with a jerk, and make a new cast, the boat meanwhile drifting on shore. You push off again, and begin casting, and by some accident you hook a trout. Then the fair one perhaps screams, averts her face, and calls you by a number of terms expressive of a tender and feeling but indignant heart, or she gets wildly excited, and twists the oar into your line. If the trout is firmly hooked she goes for him with the landing net, and if one thing more than another tries the human temper it is to see a woman hacking with a landing net at his line. She frightens the fish away several times, and then catches the net in the bobby, hits the half dead trout on the nose, breaks the cast, and permits him to join his relations, with a piece of gut and an artificial fly in his mouth. The horror of trying to troll with woman-kind, the extent to which all the many hooks of a phantom minnow get inextricably intertwined with her garments, ought not to be described by persons of feeling. If any one likes these recreations, let him be assured that he is no fisher, but a lover. If any one who does not want to fish can keep his temper in the midst of these distractions, he is no husband, but a saint. "All hope abandon, ye who fish with ladies," might be written over all Highland boathouses. The only thing to do is to abandon hope of sport, and fleet the time carelessly, not toying with the tangles of fly hooks in Neaera's hair. Land on an island, lunch, smoke, touch the light banjo, exchange sentimental confidences, but do not think to fish with a woman in a boat. And then, after all, when you come home she will mock you for not having caught any trout. As if Mr. Francis Francis, or Mr. Thomas Tod Stoddard, or Maui, who invented barbs for hooks, could have caught trout with a lady in the boat. Her presence may have other advantages, that is a matter of private taste and sentiment, but to loch fishing women is simply fatal. But her presence in a boat on a loch is a great lesson in the difficult art of grinning and bearing it. Fishers are now warned. Angling is quite difficult enough, thanks to weather and wariness of fish, to add the perplexities caused by woman is merely wanton. On the other side, he who has a woman with him on the loch has a beautiful and charming substitute for all the other excuses in which failure and incompetence find refuge.

Gretchen.

Her wealth of tangled yellow curls,
Her eyes cerulean blue,
The crimson dye of lips and cheeks
Outvie the rainbow's hue.

Two dimples nestle in her cheeks,
And one imprints her chin
Her sunny smiles play hide and seek,
To chase them out and in.

What a refreshing picture of youthful beauty and sweet temper! And Gretchen owes it all to the splendid health she enjoys. Wise beyond her years, she very sensibly avoids the ills and maladies which sap the health and strength of so many of the women of our land, by the use of Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription. This is the only remedy for women's peculiar weaknesses and ailments, sold by all druggists, under a positive guarantee from the manufacturers. For conditions, see wrapper around bottle.

The Last Resort.

First Kansas Tramp—Bill, I'm [illegible] off uv the road in a few days.

Second Kansas Tramp—What air ye goin' ter do for a livin'? Not goin' ter work.

First Kansas Tramp—No, I'm goin' ter start a new town.—Time.

Detectives Wanted to ferret out and discover, if they can, a single case where Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery has been used for torpid liver, indigestion, impure blood, or consumption in its early stages, without giving immediate and permanent relief, provided, of course, that the directions have been reasonably well followed.

Method in His Silence.

"Bolton told me he had borrowed some money from you. I was surprised, because I never heard you say anything about it."

"No, I still hope to get it back."

$500 offered for an incurable case of Catarrh in the head, by the manufacturers of Dr. Sage's Catarrh Remedy.

A London paper advertises: "Lady wanted to draw, at home, original designs for furniture."

DOM L. 28 89.

LADIES' SARAVIA, the great Mexican Remedy positively and permanently cures all female irregularities. Invaluable medicine. Relief immediate. Price $1. Send for circulars YUCATAN MEDICINE COMPANY, 18 W. 14th St. N. York.

IMPERIAL PEN AND PENCIL STAMP.

With your name, to print cards, mark books, linen, etc. Single stamp 25c. Club of six, $1.00. Cash to accompany order. H. BARNARD, Rubber Stamp Works, Hamilton, Ont.

DUNN'S BAKING POWDER
THE COOK'S BEST FRIEND

GEO. MITCHELL,
BANKER,
FLESHERTON.

DRAFTS BOUGHT AND SOLD.

[illegible] Attention paid to the collection [illegible] Accounts. 2nd door North [illegible]

The Local News.

What is Happening in Our Own Vicinity.

[illegible] was the [illegible] Twelfth.

Mr R. [illegible] home for [illegible]

[illegible] Owen Sound and this [illegible] examinations.

[illegible]

[illegible] Monday [illegible]

[illegible] of the Streets [illegible] his parents in Fast [illegible]

[illegible] of his friends [illegible]

[illegible] Tuesday [illegible] had ice cream [illegible] the order.

[illegible] free with each bottle [illegible] remedy. Price 50 cts [illegible] Medical Hall.

[illegible] Campbell's "Character [illegible] Mailed to any address [illegible] Advance office.

Mr A. A. Chesley shook the dust of Flesherton from his feet last week and [illegible] his footsteps for Toronto.

[illegible] mess of peas off the [illegible] on Monday last [illegible]

[illegible] when Shiloh's cure [illegible] immediate relief. Price 10 cts., [illegible] $1. For sale at the Medical [illegible]

[illegible] Esq., Maxwell, left for [illegible] Monday, where he will take [illegible] the military school during [illegible]

[illegible] Mr. Flannery has to say [illegible] His joke about [illegible] is good. We hope [illegible] you again, Mr. F.

[illegible] Edward Kennedy [illegible] whose [illegible] Salem Ar [illegible] seriously ill. His brother [illegible] have gone down to see him.

[illegible] sale of household furniture [illegible] at the residence of Mrs. [illegible] Priceville, on Monday next [illegible] Among other articles to be [illegible] weaving loom. See bills. D. McCormick, auctioneer.

[illegible] dyspepsia and liver complaint you have a printed guarantee on every bottle of Shiloh's vitalizer. It never fails to cure. For sale at the Medical Hall.

A very exceedingly interesting letter will appear in next week's Advance from the [illegible] pen of Mr Wm Purdy, of Winnipeg. It is one of the best things, among the many good ones, which has even been written by him. Read it.

[illegible] has been monkeying [illegible] all this week [illegible] stepped over the line of [illegible] Monday and Tuesday. Had the [illegible] been blessed with this kind of [illegible] what an enjoy[illegible] might have spent!

[illegible] by indigestion [illegible] dizziness, loss of appetite [illegible] Shiloh's vitalizer is a positive [illegible] For Sale at the Medical Hall.

[illegible] attended [illegible] at a little lake on the [illegible] Euphrasia, Saturday last, in [illegible] with two other Fleshertonians, [illegible] had a 75 line wood letter [illegible] boats and a "Stappy" canoe [illegible] party and the waste of [illegible]

[illegible] "Character De[illegible] printed in pamphlet [illegible] covers. It has been [illegible] to set the price at 10 [illegible] copies for pre[illegible] order im[illegible] limited. Address The Advance, Flesherton.

We have received a neat little book, [illegible] Johnson's Canadian School Short[illegible] It is the most scientific system we have yet examined, and from a perusal of it we would judge that it is destined to become, if not an authorized text book on the subject, at least an accepted authority. It is much easier learned and practiced than either Pitman, Graham or Munson, and having been invented by an old newspaper man it bears in some degree the stamp of practicability. The book is very neatly lithographed and is sold at the low price of 25 cents. Address G.W. Johnson, head master Central School, Hamilton.

[illegible] Fan us!

Dr. Sinclair, specialist, will be at Munshaw's hotel on Saturday, July 27. Consultation free. Wait for him.

Shiloh's catarrh remedy—a positive cure for catarrh, diptheria and canker-mouth. For sale at the Medical Hall.

Rev. Mr Massicot, of Montreal, will preach in the Methodist Church here next Sunday morning. The Rev. gentleman is a young man, a convert from Romanism, and will no doubt give an exceedingly interesting discourse. His subject will be "Roman Evangelization."

Killed by Lightning.

Robert Best, Lot 6, con. 2, Euphrasia, had two cattle killed by lightning on Tuesday of last week.

Flesherton P.O. Hours

Office hours from 8 a.m. till 7 p.m. On holidays the office will be open from 9 till 9.30 a.m., and 1 till 2 p.m.

Sunday School Anniversary

Anniversary services will be held in the Baptist chapel, Flesherton, on Sunday next when Rev. A. Grant, of Toronto, will preach in the morning at 11, and in the evening at 6.30. All are cordially invited. Collections will be taken [illegible] the Sunday school work.

A [illegible] Garden Party.

The [illegible] garden party which was held in Mr. Armstrong's beautiful grounds last Friday evening, was highly successful, although the gathering was not quite so large as desirable. The place was [illegible] with Chinese lanterns [illegible] very handsome [illegible] band was present and added much to [illegible] pleasure. We think ourselves that Mr. Armstrong should be tendered the heartfelt thanks of the Methodist people for freely giving the use of his residence and grounds twice in one summer for the purpose of a garden party.

The Toronto Industrial Fair

The directors of the fair, which is to be held this year from the 9th to the 21st September, are already actively at work making preparations for the same, and appear determined to make it exceed in magnitude and attractiveness any of its predecessors. We have received a copy of the prize list, which is very neatly gotten up, and any of our readers who may desire a copy can secure one by dropping a [illegible] to Mr H. J. Hill, the manager, at Toronto. A large amount has again been appropriated by the directors for new special attractions and the erection of additional buildings, etc.

Special Announcement.

We have made arrangements with Dr. B. J. Kendall Co., publishers of "A Treatise on the Horse and his Diseases," which will enable all our subscribers to obtain a copy of that valuable work free by sending their address enclosing a two cent stamp for mailing same to Dr. B. J. Kendall Co., Enosburgh Falls, Vt. This book is now recognized as standard authority upon all diseases of the horse, as its phenomenal sales attests, over four million copies having been sold in the past ten years, a sale never before reached by any publication in the same period of time. We feel confident that our patrons will appreciate the work, and be glad to avail themselves of this opportunity of obtaining a valuable book.

It is necessary that you mention this paper in sending for the "Treatise." This offer will remain open for only a short time.

Wedded

On Tuesday evening, at the residence of the brides mother, Artemesia, By Rev. J. Walker Shilton, B. A., Mr. Frederick G. Karsteolt, of Flesherton, to Miss Minnie Devin, Artemesia.

The interesting ceremony was performed on the lawn of the brides mother, where a very large company of friends and relatives of the contracting parties were assembled. The groom was supported by Mr. Bristol Evans, of Flesherton, and the bride by Miss Hannah Karsteolt, of Toronto. The presents were numerous and handsome. After the ceremony an elegant supper was provided, and the remainder of the evening was spent in music and games, the company dispersing at quite a late hour. Congratulations of The Advance attend the happy couple.

The Cheeky Manufacturer.

A cheeky manufacturer of Buffalo offers us $10 worth of shoe blacking in exchange for an advertisement. As we do not anticipate entering into the shoe blacking industry, and our family being limited, the chances are that our great great grand children would reap the largest share of the profits out of that advertisement. Anyhow the present straightened condition of our circumstances prevents us from providing for our prospective progeny. Just at present we are economizing as much as possible on shoe blacking, and have even persuaded ourselves and family that it is a needless luxury. We do not desire to disabuse their minds yet awhile, and are therefore reluctantly compelled to refuse the contract. What do these people take country editors for, anyway. We have already during the past year been offered half of a windmill, six dozen bottles of patent medicine, half of a sewing machine, plants, flowers, seeds, and other merchandise too numerous to mention, in exchange for advertising. We would like these enterprising individuals to understand, once for all, that we are no haberdashery store, and if we are married we are able to pay cash for all such luxuries as patent medicines and anti-wagon rattlers.

Improved Farm for Sale.

Lots 148, 149 and 150, 3rd range east, T. and S. R., containing 100 acres, 80 cleared, good clay loam well improved, good frame house and log barn, frame stable, good orchard, etc. This farm is well watered and improved, and is considered one of the best in this section. It is one mile and a half from the village of Flesherton. Will be sold on very easy terms. For further particulars apply to

JAS. BLECROFT,
Flesherton P.O.

LOTS FOR SALE BY TENDER
IN THE
VILLAGE OF EUGENIA.

[illegible] for sale by tender in the [illegible] following park lots [illegible] on the south side of [illegible] Nos. 5 and 7 on the north [illegible] containing one [illegible] being a part of the [illegible] Cairns, deceased [illegible] GEO. STEWART [illegible] 1889. The lowest [illegible] accepted. Terms [illegible]

[illegible] CAIRNS [illegible] Flesherton.

Mortgage Sale

Valuable Village Property.

[illegible]

Thursday, July 25th, 1889,

[illegible]

TERMS OF SALE.

[illegible]

W. [illegible]
Flesherton [illegible] 1889. Vendor.

Mortgage Sale

OF

VALUABLE PROPERTY,

IN THE

VILLAGE OF FLESHERTON.

UNDER and by virtue of the power of sale contained in a certain mortgage which will be produced at time of sale, there will be offered for sale by public auction at

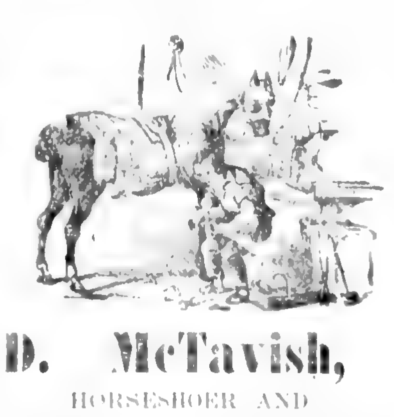
MUNSHAW'S HOTEL,

[illegible]

Thursday, the 25th Day of July, 1889.

at the hour of one o'clock in the afternoon all and singular that property known as [illegible] [illegible] on the south west [illegible] This desirable property adjoins the public school property and fronting on Main street [illegible] Terms and conditions made known on day of sale. For further particulars apply to

F. M. CHADWICK, vendor's solicitor, Beatty, Chadwick, Blackstock & Galt, Wellington street east, Toronto.



D. McTavish,

HORSESHOER AND
GENERAL BLACKSMITH,
Collingwood Street,
FLESHERTON, - ONT.

Manufacturing of Wagons, Sleighs, Buggies, Democrats, etc. Horseshoeing promptly attended to. Special attention given to contract ed or tender feet.

Logging and Plow Chains constantly on hand.

PRICES TO SUIT
The Times.

The time to offer bargains is when the times are dull and money scarce.

[illegible] we offer you [illegible]

[illegible]D BOYS' BOOTS.

[illegible] Kip boots. $[illegible]

[illegible]

$1.00.

LADIES' & CHILDRENS' BOOTS.

Women's whole stock Kip. $[illegible]
Women's split boots. $1.00.
A beautiful polished calf shoe. $1.20.
Ladies' fine Dongola Kid boots, full sizes, buttoned or laced. $[illegible]
Children's shoes lower than ever.

CLOTHING DEPARTMENT.

A nobby suit, blue serge, full size, and nicely made, $4.75
A nice pair wool pants cut in the latest style for $1.40.
A nice range of tweeds for boys' suits, from 30 cts. up to 50 cts. per yd. All wool.

DRY GOODS.

Factory cotton, full yard, only 4 cts. a yard.
Cottonades, nice patterns, 17 and 18 cts. a yd.
Our best prints at 10 and 11 cts. a yd.
Shirtings from 8 to 13 cts. a yd.
Beautiful ginghams at 8 cts. a yd.

GROCERIES.

A lovely Japan tea 5 lbs. for 90 cts. as good as any [illegible] ct. tea in town.
5 bars best Electric soap for 25 cts.
14 bars Nice Toilet soap for 25 cts.
24 lbs. best rice for $1.00
14 lbs. No. 1 currants for $1.00.
13 lbs. Valencia raisins for $1.00.
14 lbs. bright sugar for $1.00.

Oat meal, corn meal, cracked wheat, long clear bacon, spiced rolls, smoked hams, and bologna sausages constantly on hand, at close prices. Butter, eggs and wool taken at highest market prices.

The Old Reliable Stand.

R. Trimble.

Medical.

DR. CARTER,
M.C.P. & S., Ont.
PHYSICIAN, SURGEON, &c.
FLESHERTON
Office, Strain's block. Residence, J.G. Russel's

T. G. Hutton, M.D.C.M.
[illegible]

DRS. SPOULE & EGO.
MARKDALE ONT
Office: Manley's Drug Store.
[illegible]

J. P. OTTEWELL,
VETERINARY SURGEON
[illegible]
FLESHERTON

Dentistry.

DENTISTRY.
Dr. Thomas Henderson,
SURGEON DENTIST
[illegible]

J. P. MARSHALL,
L. D. S., DENTIST.
Visits Markdale the 1st and 3rd Wednesday of each month.
Flesherton each trip on the day following.

Legal.

J. W. FROST,
Barrister, Solicitor, Conveyancer, Etc.
FLESHERTON OFFICE, NEXT POST OFFICE, [illegible] BUILDINGS, ON THURSDAYS.
OWEN SOUND OFFICE, [illegible]

P. McCULLOUGH,
Barrister, Solicitor, &c.
Office, over McFarland's Store Markdale. Money to Loan.

Business Cards.

John W. Armstrong,
Flesherton, Co. Grey.

DIVISION COURT CLERK, COMMISSIONER [illegible] Conveyancer, &c. Agent to purchase and sale of lands. Appraiser for C. L. C. Company and P. P. B. & S. Society. Money to Loan on the most reasonable terms. Issuer of MARRIAGE LICENSES. NOTARY PUBLIC.

MONEY TO LOAN.
AT LOWEST CURRENT RATES
on Town or Farm Property.
S. DAMUDE,
Flesherton.

Mr. Wm. Karstedt,
Stone Mason, Bricklayer [illegible] sterer,
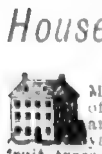
MATERIAL FURNISHED
Estimates given free. Ornamental Plastering a Specialty
[illegible] Office.

W. J. BELLAMY
TWP. CLERK, ARTEMESIA.
CONVEYANCER, COMMISSIONER, INSURANCE AGT. &c.
DEEDS MORTGAGES, LEASES, &c. [illegible] properly executed. Insurance effected in first class companies. Money to loan at lowest rates.

R. J. Sproule,
POSTMASTER Flesherton, Commissioner in B. R., Licensed Auctioneer, Conveyancer, Appraiser and Money Lender, Real Estate and Insurance Agent. Deeds, Mortgages, Leases and Wills drawn up and Valuations made on shortest notice. Auction Sales attended to in any part of the County. Money to loan at lowest rates of interest. Collections attended to with promptness and despatch. Charges low. Agent for the Dominion Steamship Company. Cheap tickets from Flesherton to Liverpool, Glasgow, London or any of the British Ports. Parties intending to visit England, Scotland or Ireland, will please ask rates before purchasing their tickets elsewhere.

House and Lot for Sale.



A good house and lot, opposite the Methodist Church, Flesherton, is now offered for sale. The house is large and roomy, fine lot, good stable and yard, splendid well on the premises, fruit trees, etc. This is a rare bargain. Apply to S. VANDUSEN, Flesherton

Prize Essays.

Awarded by the Centre Grey Farmers' Institute.

FRST PRIZE.

Home has through all stages of the world been the educating school of the young. It is there the first principles are instilled into the mind, whether good or evil, whether taught by example or precept. It is therefor of the greatest importance that the home should be as bright, instructive and pure as the inmates can make it, for there in lies the nation's strength.

[illegible] all humanity have a craving for pleasure and happiness we will leave prosperity till later, and first notice the method of securing happiness within the home. What greater blessing could man wish than home happiness? Here the poor may share equally with the rich, the peasant as [illegible] as the queen, for happiness is not [illegible] The [illegible] within [illegible] according to the [illegible] of its inmates. [illegible]

[illegible]

[illegible] Never take friends into confidence regarding family affairs, speak respectfully of one another's relations, and should a discussion arise or a mishap befall, never let the triumphant party say, I told you so. Always be agreeable, affectionate and kind, and happiness is sure to reign.

[illegible]

Cooking has a great deal to do with making a happy home. One writer has said that the road to a man's heart is through his stomach. Although this statement is rather absurd, one thing is certain, it is very agreeable to the husband [illegible] and indeed to the [illegible] to have a good, tempting [illegible] meal set before them. An ear [illegible] is forgotten, and [illegible] happiness are the reign.

Amusement should be [illegible] within the home so that the younger members of the family may [illegible] themselves. Allow them to play such games as are amusing and [illegible] furnish each with a library, which will not only afford pleasure, but give them an opportunity to cultivate their literary talent. Contrive to have something interesting to do which will keep them out of mischief and at the same time instruct, for

Satan finds some mischief still
For idle hands to do.

To prevent them from becoming talebearers allow no tales to be carried either to or from home, for if there is an abomination in a household or in a community it is a slanderous talebearer.

Furnish and arrange the home in such a manner as will be most convenient for its occupants. Too many ornaments in a house are a nuisance, as they become displaced too often and are a constant source of annoyance to the inmates. Have the house neat and tidy and yourself and family to match, not omitting a good supply of sunshine. Let your sunniest smiles and pleasantest words be for those within the home, and when worry and trials come be sure to keep your temper under control, even if the steak is burning, baby crying and your husband comes in hurriedly to get a button sewed on. Don't fly into a passion, but lift the baby in one hand, turn the steak with the other and tell John to bring you a needle and thread.

Then what should contribute more to home happiness than prosperity, to afford both necessities and luxuries for yourself and family or be able to relieve the wants of others should bring to you peace, happiness and contentment, for the Scriptures say, "it is more blessed to give than to receive."

I will now bring forward a few facts regarding home prosperity.

Industry is the very foundation of prosperity. Let a man or woman be industrious, hard-working and active and they are on the road to prosperity.

Industry keeps our teeth a cracking,
Industry us gives silk and satin,
Industry gives us bread, meat and honey
Industry gives us good ready money.

Good management is another feature of prosperity. Use good sound judgment in laying out money in order to obtain the best and cheapest article. Remember the cheapest is not always that which costs the least money. It takes just as much time and expense to make up bad goods as it does to make good ones which will often last twice as long.

Never purchase articles you have no use for even though they many be sold below value.

Under no circumstances run a store bill. Always live within your income and contrive to lay something past for future need. Dress according to your circumstances and never fret and worry for luxuries you are not able to afford; remember,

[illegible]

That is where a great many housekeepers fail [illegible]

[illegible]

Look well after the health of your family. Neglected colds often cause serious diseases which compel you to call in a doctor. Ill-health and doctor bills are very detrimental to home prosperity.

Rigid temperance in all things must be observed, temperance in drinking, eating, sleeping, recreation, pleasure, etc., etc. If these rules are observed we would have better, stronger, healthier, happier men and women and our homes will abound in happiness and prosperity.

[illegible]

[illegible] that is what we [illegible] a [illegible] looking [illegible]

And now I will say to every housekeeper, if she would practise the above rules she would in most cases find they would supply the home with an abundance of happiness and prosperity, and we would hear fewer people ask, is marriage a failure.

In conclusion I would say to those men who think the home should always be run on a scientific plan, that it is almost impossible to keep the domestic affairs from getting tangled sometimes, and it is not when the household is running smoothest that your partner needs most comfort and help, but when

[illegible]

It's to you, Johnnie, I wish to direct my remarks. If you wish your wife to love, honor and respect you more, or as she should do, take a more favorable opportunity for praising her good qualities. It would add more to the happiness and prosperity of home if you would give her a cheery smile, pleasant words and relieve her tired arms of the baby. Remember our partner within the home cannot make it either happy or prosperous.

MARY KENDALL,
Camperdown, P. O.
Collingwood Tp.
Ontario.

SECOND PRIZE.

1st, How to make a home happy.

Contentment with our position and circumstances in life, what ever they may be, in the first way in making a home happy. Happiness in a home does not depend on how handsomely or richly the home is furnished, nor the wealth of the inmates, as the poorest and plainest may be the brightest and happiest place on earth. A pure genial sprit of kindly affection and unselfish love for one another, and in advancing each others interests and welfare, repressing any little grievance and disturbance that may arise in the ordinary occurrences of life, and pleasing each other in all their particular fancies or desires. Be honest, upright and obedient, attending to each others wants and necessities, and thinking of others rather than themselves. Have the home in order, everything neat, clean and convenient; the meals promptly at the regular hour, and the victuals cooked to suit the taste. Do all that is in your power [illegible] home [illegible]

[illegible]

MARY WRIGHT,
[illegible] P.O.
[illegible]
[illegible] 1889.

[illegible] hacking cough [illegible] cured by Shiloh's Cure. We guarantee [illegible] For sale at the Medical Hall.

This Year's
MYRTLE
CUT [illegible] PLUG
SMOKING TOBACCO
FINER THAN EVER.
See
T & B
in bronze on
EACH PLUG and PACKAGE

The Most Successful Remedy ever discovered, as it is certain in its effects and does not blister. Read proof below.

KENDALL'S SPAVIN CURE.

OFFICE OF CHARLES A. SNYDER,
BREEDER OF
CLEVELAND BAY AND TROTTING BRED HORSES.
ELMWOOD, ILL., Nov. 20, 1888.
DR. B. J. KENDALL CO.
Dear Sirs: I have always purchased your Kendall's Spavin Cure by the half dozen bottles, I would like prices in larger quantity. I think it is one of the best liniments on earth. I have used it on my stables for three years.
Yours truly, CHAS. A. SNYDER.

KENDALL'S SPAVIN CURE.

BROOKLYN, N. Y., November 3, 1888.
DR. B. J. KENDALL CO.
Dear Sirs: I desire to give you testimonial of my good opinion of your Kendall's Spavin Cure. I have used it for Lameness, Stiff Joints and Spavins, and I have found it a sure cure. I cordially recommend it to all horsemen.
Yours truly, A. H. GILBERT,
Manager Troy Laundry Stables.

KENDALL'S SPAVIN CURE.

SANT, WINTON COUNTY, OHIO, Dec. 19, 1888.
DR. B. J. KENDALL CO.
Gents: I feel it my duty to say what I have done with your Kendall's Spavin Cure. I have cured twenty-five horses that had Spavins, ten of Ring Bone, nine afflicted with Big Head and seven of Big Jaw. Since I have had one of your books and followed the directions, I have never lost a case of any kind.
Yours truly, ANDREW TURNER,
Horse Doctor.

KENDALL'S SPAVIN CURE.

Price $1 per bottle, or six bottles for $5. All Druggists have it or can get it for you, or it will be sent to any address on receipt of price by the proprietors. DR. B. J. KENDALL CO., Enosburgh Falls, Vt.
SOLD BY ALL DRUGGISTS.

FLESHERTON FURNITURE WAREROOMS.

FOR CHURNS.
The best is always the cheapest, and we sell [illegible]

SEWING MACHINES

THE CELEBRATED NEW RAYMOND!
[illegible]
[illegible] fully warranted,
$30 00.

Still selling magnificent ORGANS,
AT $70.00.
Express Wagons
AT 75cts. EACH
BABY CARRIAGES
$10 00
STEP LADDERS
AT 75cts. EACH

See the Common Sense Blind Rollers and attachments for sale HERE!
The [illegible] complete, [illegible] stock [illegible] market.

BEDDING.
[illegible]
We are selling A. No. 1 mattresses with wool both sides in good striped ticking, [illegible] Woven wire spring beds at from $2.50 each.
DON'T MISS the PLACE.

J. E. MOORE,
FUNERAL DIRECTOR
AND
FURNITURE DEALER.
FLESHERTON FURNITURE WAREROOMS,
DURHAM ST.
FLESHERTON.

Preferences and Treasures.

I'd rather drink cold water from the brook
Than quaff excitement from a golden chalice,
I'd rather sleep on straw in the shepherd's hut
Than lie awake and restless in a palace.

I'd rather earn dry bread in lusty health,
And eat it with a sense of wholesome pleasure,
Than feed without the zest of appetite
Off gorgeous plate 'mid unavailing treasure.

I'd rather have one true, unfailing friend,
Than fifty parasites to crave my bounty,
And one poor lass who loved me for myself
Than one without a heart who owned a county.

Nature is kind if our desires are pure,
And strews rich blessings everywhere around us
While Fortune, if we join in her pursuit,
Too often grants her favors to confound us.

Fresh air and sunshine flowers and health and love,
These are endowments if we learn to prize them,
The wise man's treasures, better worth than gold,
And none but fools and wicked men despise them.

The Old Maid.

(By Rev. James Cooke Seymour.)

Who wakes the scoff of giddy mirth,
To many a wicked pun gives birth
'Mong all the daughters of the earth?
The odd, old maid!

Who would not wed for sake of gold?
Who would not barter love untold
For self or all could self unfold?
The first old maid,

Who would not cast herself away
On worthless man, whate'er they say?
Prefer for ever old maid to stay?
The wise old maid.

Who wears the face, if worn, yet meek?
Who searches round the sad to seek?
Who helps the poor, with tear-bedewed cheek
The kind old maid.

Whose heart has tender love for all?
Who hugs the children when they fall?
Her feet run swift at every call?
The dear old maid.

Who serves the Lord with earnest love?
Who waits in faith for joys above?
Her life's benediction proves?
The good old maid.

Disenchantment.

'Twas long ago in hammock days—
How very long it seems—
That down the winding country ways
Beside the singing streams
I went in search of dreams!

One dream I found as there I stayed,
A perfect vision, too!
A merry maiden girlhood maid,
Whose eyes were harebell-blue,
Most entrancing hue!

She smiled. I smiled. Ah! who can tell
What volumes there were said,
Although we spoke no syllable?
The clover blooms were red;
There was no cloud overhead.

I leaned. She lifted up her face—
What ruby lips she had!
Bliss for one little moment's space—
And then she cried, "There's dad!"
Oh, wasn't it too bad!

THE ORDEAL.

Tiny Clarence sat in her pretty little parlor as a bright, tropical bird balances itself on the swaying boughs of a palm tree, for the carpet was of green and the window draperies were green, and the walls were just tinted of that delicate sea green that shines translucently through the rolling billows of the deep, and she herself, curiously carrying out the unity of things, wore a dress of soft green cashmere, with silver lilies in her hair.

Her real name was Flora, but people called her Tiny; it was a pet name she had ever since she could remember perhaps because she was small and dimpled and fairy like, and had a fashion of nestling down on low ottomans and little footstools instead of perching herself on big, stiff chairs, like full size mortals.

She was very fair, with a transparent skin, flushed with pale rose, and hair like floss silk, where the burnished shadows came and went in golden glimmers, while her blue eyes were full of sweet, wistful expressions—a human lily of the valley, in short.

At least so Ernest Sargent thought, as he sat looking at her, with his heart in his eyes.

"You will not give me the answer, then, which is to seal my fate?"

"Not this morning, Mr. Sargent."

"Why not? I have surely the right to ask the question."

"I am not altogether certain that I have made up my mind, Mr. Sargent."

Ernest's eyes brightened.

"You will give me the benefit of the doubt, then?"

"I can't tell you just yet; I don't know myself. Cannot you comprehend, Mr. Sargent," she added, with a sudden spark of impatience in her soft eye, "that this matter of marriage is, with us women, something more important than the selection of a favorite shade in silks or the color of the spring ribbon?"

"I stand rebuked," he said, rising and bowing somewhat ceremoniously. "To-morrow morning, then, I am to call and get my answer."

"Yes, to-morrow morning, if you like."

So Ernest Sargent bent his head over Tiny Clarence's little rose leaf of a hand and went his way.

"Well, my dear," said Mrs. Clarence, as Tiny came slowly upstairs, twisting the green tassels that hung from her waist, "what have you decided?"

"I have decided upon nothing at all as yet, mamma."

"Don't you like Mr. Sargent?"

"Yes," answered Tiny, after a moment or two of grave consideration; "I suppose I do."

"He is very rich, and, your father says, in a business whose profits are continually increasing. You would be wealthy, my child."

"Is wealth the first object in life, mamma?"

"No, but it is more or less important; and then Mr. Sargent is very handsome."

"I know it, mamma."

And then Tiny Clarence went further still upstairs to the room where Bridget was sweeping and dusting, in a frenzy of energy.

"Bridget," she said, "will you lend me your brown cloth cloak this afternoon and the black silk bonnet? I want to wear them."

"Is it fun ye're making of a poor girl, Miss Tiny? Sure, you wouldn't even yourself to the likes o' them. And you, wid all the fine clothes a queen would wear!"

"But I am in earnest, Bridget. I am going to see a poor woman who lives in a tenement house down town, and I would rather dress so as to attract no particular attention."

Bridget still stared, but she made no further opposition.

"I can't understand at all, at all, so I can't," she said, shaking her frenzied head as she carried the aforesaid garments into Tiny's room. "Sure, miss, it's like dressin' the queen of the fairies up in a cabbage leaf. Your bonny face is lost entirely in the old bonnet, let alone the cloak covers you from head to foot, entirely."

"Never mind that, Bridget. Now lend me the veil. There; that will do."

Tiny Clarence felt curiously unlike the aristocratic little queen of fashion that she was as she rode down town in the extreme corner of a Second avenue car, and alighted at length at a cross street, whose narrow purlieus and swarming rows of tenement houses on either side betoken it the residing place of the poor.

Turning neither to the right hand nor to the left, Tiny Clarence kept on her way, until at length she entered a dwelling somewhere in the middle of the block, and ascended the long flight of carpeted wooden stairs, which was common property to all the inhabitants.

Pausing at a door on the fourth story, she knocked softly.

"Come in," was the reply, and opening the door Tiny Clarence entered.

It was a small room, comparatively bare of furniture, but very neat. A little bed occupied the farther corner of the room, and the smallest possible remnant of a fire smoldered in the tidy grate, while one or two chairs and a pine table constituted all the rest of the outfittings.

Close to the window a young woman sat sewing, while a crippled child played on the floor at her feet. She arose as Tiny entered.

"Is it you, Miss Clarence?" she said, her pale face momentarily dyed with a deep tinge of color, as she courtesied a timid welcome. "This is but a poor place for you to come."

"Miss Clarence!" repeated our little heroine, reproachfully. "You used to call me Tiny when we were school girls together, Helen!"

"But there is such a gulf between us now!"

"Because you are poor and I am rich? because you are a forsaken widow and I am still the favored child of fortune? Helen, you judge me unjustly!"

Helen Starr's eyes filled with tears.

"Dear Tiny, I will never do so again."

"I have brought you some more sewing," said Tiny carelessly, as she sat down by the side of her sadly changed school mate. "By the way, Helen, do you still sew for Sargent & Copley?"

"Yes, I am going there this afternoon to return some work and try to get a little more."

"Are you?"

Tiny strove to speak unconsciously, although the deep crimson flushed her neck and brow.

"Would you object to my going with you? I—I have a great curiosity to see the inner workings of one of those great manufacturing establishments."

"I shall be glad of your company."

"Do they pay you well?" went on Tiny, affecting to be deeply interested in removing a speck of mud from the hem of Bridget's brown cloth cloak. Mrs. Starr shook her head sadly.

"Starvation prices, Tiny, and Mr. Sargent has just cut down the wages one-quarter. He says times are hard and he cannot meet expenses."

"Yet he drives the handsomest horses in New York and lives in a brown stone palace," observed Tiny.

"I know it, but such is the universal justice between employer and employed. We are powerless and they know it, these grinding rich people.

She was folding up the bundle of neatly sewn shirts as she spoke and putting on her own worn and shabby outer garments.

"You will be good and quiet, Charlie, and not go near the fire until mamma returns?" she added, pausing on the threshold.

"Yes, mamma," the child answered, with docile meekness.

He was accustomed to being left alone, poor little fellow, and then Helen and Tiny set forth together on an errand entirely novel to the latter.

It was "pay day" at the establishment of Sargent & Copley, and a long string of worn looking women, some young and some old, but all pale and pinched, like plants that had grown in the shade, were waiting their turn for the miserable remuneration due them.

Mr. Copley, a fat, oily looking man, with a white neck-cloth and beaming spectacles, stood behind a ponderous ledger, a day-book and Mr. Sargent, with an expression of face very different from what he had that morning worn in Tiny Clarence's boudoir, leaned against the edge of the desk and took in the work, examining and commenting as he did so.

For Mr. Sargent chose himself to superintend this portion of his business. Nor was the tongue of slander behindhand in proclaiming that he contrived to make money out of this personal supervision.

"Clara Coyt!" he called out, sharply, as a pale, freckled young girl neared him; "how much due Clara Coyt? Ten dollars and seventy cents. Take off $1—work greased from sewing machine."

"But, sir," began the girl.

"Nine seventy—here you are! Pass on, Clara Coyt! Now, then, Mary Macalister—behind two days. Fine Mary Macalister 50 cents!"

So he went on, quick to detect or imagine faults, vigorous to punish, merciless to exact fines, until scarcely one of the waiting throng received the amount of money fairly due her.

When Helen Starr's name was called she advanced timidly, with her brown clad companion at her side.

"Helen Starr!" sharply enunciated Mr. Sargent, scrutinizing her roll of work. "Four dollars—deduct 40 cents!"

"On what account, sir?" faltered Mrs. Starr.

"Work soiled in making up—pass on!"

"You are mistaken, Mr. Sargent, indeed," pleaded Helen Starr; "the stains were in the linen when it was given out to me. It is not in the least soiled in my hands."

"I can't stop to argue matters with insolent sewing women in my employ!" snarled Ernest Sargent. "Take your $3.60, Mrs. Starr, without any more words, or leave the establishment. We can get plenty of hands who won't tell lies."

Helen Starr grew crimson and then pale, but knowing her own utter helplessness in the hands of this human vampire, she was about to take the miserable sum tendered her and pass on her way when a low, soft voice at her side detained her.

"Helen, stop an instant. Mr. Sargent," and turning back the long black veil which had hitherto concealed her face, Tiny Clarence looked calmly into the rich bully's eyes, "I am sure that my friend, Mrs. Starr, speaks only the truth. You lose all claim to the name of gentleman when you allow yourself to speak thus insolently to aught bearing the stamp and image of refined womanhood."

"Miss Clarence, he stammered, overcome with confusion, "there is some mistake here. I——"

"There is no mistake," she answered, calmly contemptuous. "I have been near making one that might have lasted a lifetime, but my eyes are fortunately opened. Pay Mrs. Starr the money rightly due her, and let us leave this den of money making iniquity."

Mr. Sargent paid Mrs. Starr the $4 with undisguised awkwardness, and strove to detain Tiny as she turned away.

"Miss Clarence," he faltered, "will you allow me to explain——"

"No, Mr. Sargent," she answered haughtily, "I will never allow you to speak to me again."

She kept her word. Ernest Sargent's nature had been tried in the balance of her womanly discrimination, and found wanting.

Tiny Clarence was heart whole still.—Chicago Evening Journal.

A Fish Hospital.

A hospital for fish! This is the oddest thing heard of for a very long time, but it exists, and an ichthyologist, who knows all about it, sends particulars. Hospitals are springing up in all parts of the kingdom for the benefit of domesticated animals. The horse, the dog, the cat and winged creatures are cared for, and now a hospital for fish has been opened at the Midland Counties Fish Culture establishment at Malvern Wells. All fish are liable to expedemic, endemic and fungoid diseases, together with other maladies which may be due to natural or accidental causes, and these suffering from any of these affections are removed from their habitats at the establishments and placed in the hospitals, where they are carefully attended to. The home of rest, or finny hospital, consists of ponds, constructed in such a way that the patients may be readily scrutinized and doctored. A hospital without surgical aid would be lacking in an essential, and, therefore, the art of fish-healing has been carefully studied by the founder and proprietor of the hospital, who has invented and manufactured special medicine solutions for application to fishes of different species, according to the nature of their sufferings.—London Sporting News.

Satisfactory All Around.

"I don't want to break the law," he said, as he stood in the presence of Capt. Starkweather at Police Headquarters the other day.

"You are very kind," replied the Captain. "What is your case?"

"My wife has skipped."

"Indeed."

"Yes, skipped out two days ago. As I said, I don't want to break the law. What is the customary rule in such cases?"

"Let her skip."

"I am not expected to pursue her and shoot somebody?"

"No."

"Thanks. She has skipped. Let her skip. If she returns I overlook and forgive. If she does not I marry the hired girl. Perfectly satisfactory, sir, all around, and I thank you for your kindness."—Detroit Free Press.

A Bad Omen.

"I've been a superstishus wuman a' ma life; aye carefu' no' to spill the saat, nor walk under ladders, an' wud never sit doon thirteen at a denner-table—espeashully when there was only denner for twal'. Ay, I'm a firm believer in the supernatural—an' no' without guid reason. I min' yince o' hearin' that if ye h'ard a doug barkin' at nicht time it was a verra bad omen indeed, an' a shair sign that somebody was gaun to de. Weel, yae nicht, some years syne noo, I was gaun to bed, an' was just on the point o' closin' ma een, when suddenly I h'ard a doug howlin', an' I made shair that some puir buddy was breathin' their last; an' sae help ma guidness, within a fort-nicht efter I happened to tak' up a newspaper and I fund that a man had drappit doon deed near Milngavie. Ever sin' that I've been terrible superstishus."

They Want Money.

The call from Johnstown for money instead of goods is a reasonable one. Nobody at a distance can tell what the destitute people most need, and many of the goods contributed are, as might have been expected, unavailable. With money all wants can be supplied. The large relief funds contributed in New York, Philadelphia, and some other places have in large part been held back—and wisely so, no doubt—but now the time has come when the money is needed, and there should be no delay in sending it forward. The appeal which the Relief Committee on the ground make for immediate assistance is unanswerable and irresistible.

Prof. Wm. R. Thompson, M.D., of the University of the City of New York, says that more adults are carried off in this country by chronic kidney disease than by any other one malady, except consumption, and yet many people look upon a slight kidney difficulty as of little consequence. Others take Warner's Safe Cure and remove any possible danger. When kidney disease becomes chronic, or Bright's Disease, it becomes a very serious matter.

A Hopeless Task.

Husband (100 years hence, when women rule)—My dear, I expect to go to town to-day. If you could spare me a little cash—

Wife (from bed)—Certainly, darling. You will find some loose change in my pocket.

The belt remains with Chicago for first-class murderers, discovered and undiscovered. It is a possession no one envies.

CURRENT TOPICS.

At last a man has gone on record as generous enough to bequeath his fortune to his widow on condition that she marries again, instead of depriving her of it if she pursues that course. The pity of it is that the man is dead.

In accordance with custom, the Court Journal of London, in announcing the completion of Queen Victoria's 70th year, gives the ages of her royal contemporaries as follows: King of the Netherlands, 72; King of Denmark, 71; King of Wurtemburg, 66; Emperor of Brazil, 63; King of Saxony, 61; King of Sweden and Norway, 60; Emperor of Austria, 58; King of the Belgians, 54; King of Portugal, 50; King of Roumania, 50; Sultan of Turkey, 46; King of Italy, 45; Emperor of Russia, 44; King of the Hellenes, 43; King of Bavaria, 41; King of Siam, 35; German Emperor, 30; Emperor of China, 17; King of Servia, 12; and the King of Spain, 3.

It is not often society finds itself in a shower of pearls, but it happened last week at a very smart ball in London. The Countess of Dudley broke a string of her famous necklace, causing for the moment a profound sensation in the crowded room, as the pearls flew in every direction, and were in imminent danger of being smashed or forever lost. Evidently Lady Dudley, beautiful as she is, antagonizes the family jewels. Not so many years ago the whole world was in arms because a casket filled with the almost priceless Dudley diamonds had been stolen in transitu from London to the earl's country seat. Nothing has ever been heard from the gems. Where they went to or who benefited by their possession remains a secret to this day, although an enormous reward was offered at the time for their recovery. The sense of this loss must have been keen in the minds of the titled company when it went down on all fours to search for the countess' fleeing pearls, pearls said to be second in size and color to no others in Europe.

Before the Royal Commission on English Elementary Education, Mr. J. G. Fitch testified what he saw done by a class of children 10 years of age in a school in Brussels. Around the room was a continuous blackboard and at its base a shelf. Both were marked off in sections, and on each shelf were crayons, compasses, clay, a wooden instrument for manipulating the clay and a graduated metrical rule. A child stood at each section, and the master standing in the middle of the room said: "Draw a horizontal line five centimeters long. Now draw a line three centimeters long at an angle of 45 degrees to the first." Thus continuing by a series of directions each completed a geometrical pattern. "Now," he said, "take clay and fasten it to the border of the pattern." That made an ornamental framework. Thereafter the pupils continued to add pieces of clay, making additional lines, dots etc., after their own ideas or inventions, until at the end of the lesson each had a different design before him. Mr. Fitch says the lesson throughout was an exercise not in hand-work only, but in intelligence, in measurement, in taste and in inventiveness

There appears to prevail among the laity a belief that the cure of cancer is seldom effected by the use of the knife, and that, when it is used, the disease is quite certain to reappear. At the recent congress of German surgeons a number of them told of the after results of operations for the removal of cancers from the tongue and throat. In one instance the whole tongue was removed from a patient 20 years ago, and the cancer never returned. Another patient first had the left side of his tongue removed, and as the disease reappeared, he was again operated upon and the other side taken out. That was between five and six years ago, and yet since that time he has remained perfectly well. Prof. Kuster, of Berlin, presented a case of carcinoma of the tongue upon which he operated 10 years ago, and which has not returned since. Prof. Von Bergmann exhibited two patients; one was a case operated upon two years previously, and the other four years before; the disease had not returned. As for carcinoma of the throat, several patients were presented who had had the entire larynx removed, and now, several years after the operation, there had been no signs of a recurrence of the disease.

Maxims for Memory.

Stilts are no better in conversation than in a foot-race.

Folly must hold its tongue while wearing the wig of wisdom.

It is the foolish aim of the atheist to scan infinitude with a microscope.

When poverty comes in at the cottage door, true love goes at it with an axe.

A vein of humor should be made visible without the help of a reduction mill.

All the paths of life lead to the grave, and the utmost that we can do is to avoid the short cuts.

The office should seek the man, but it should inspect him thoroughly before taking him.

The reformer becomes a fanatic when he begins to use his emotions as a substitute for his reasoning faculty.

Many an object in life must be attained by flank movements; it is the zigzag road that leads to the mountain top.

The Good Samaritan helps the unfortunate wayfarer without asking how he intends to vote.

Worth Remembering.

Many who drive do not understand that the law gives the right of way to the pedestrian. A man or woman crossing the street at a regular crossing is not obliged to look out for the person who is driving the team, but the person who is driving is to take care not to jostle or incommode a person walking. This is law and common courtesy as well. How frequently do we see teams drawn up at a crossing and pedestrians made to pass around them.

A Tired Skeleton.

Living Skeleton (only one in America, at dime museum)—These folks make me tired.

Sympathetic Visitor—In what way?

"Here I am earning $500 a week as the greatest living skeleton, yet hour after hour, day in an' day out, one old woman after another stops an' chins and chins at me about the things I ought to eat to get fat."

WAYS OF A WIZARD.

Glorious Visions of Gold and Bills Melt Into Thinnest Air.

Herrmann, the magician, is his own best advertiser. He declares himself that if he was able to mix in with the public enough he would need no advance man or press agent. Wherever he does go he always makes his presence felt, and almost every one of the people who witness his marvellous little sleight-of-hand tricks is anxious to go to the theatre and see more of him. The other afternoon he dropped in with a friend at a popular down-town resort, and was introduced to a couple of gentlemen at the bar. The magician's Mephistophelean face marks him everywhere and his two new acquaintances knew at once who he was, and regarded him wonderingly. Pretty soon Herrmann said: "Excuse me, sir," to one of the gentlemen, and, taking his hat from his head allowed a huge roll of bills to drop on the bar. "It is very careless of you to carry that amount of money there, my friend," said the wizard, and as the gentleman reached for the roll Herrmann threw it up into the air and it disappeared.

After the gentleman had been laughed at and had done the proper thing the wizard turned to the second gentleman and said: "My dear sir, you should light your cigar properly. The one you are smoking is burning up one side. Allow me," and gently removing the cigar from the gentleman's mouth, Herrmann deftly slipped a fresh cigar from its wrapper, returned the burning cigar, and then proceeded to light the fresh cigar as a cigar should be lighted. Both men now regarded the magician with amazement and some degree of suspicion. They closely eyed his every move. When he casually pulled out his watch to note the time they thought he would bring a rabbit or an egg along with it. Upon the little finger of his right hand Herrmann wears two beautiful rings. In the upper one is set a rare brown diamond between two white gems of purest ray serene. To show the first of his new friends that there was no hard feeling existing between them, the wizard agreed to loan him this ring. "Hold out your finger," he said, and the gentleman willingly did so. He thought surely that he was wearing the ring, when Herrmann exhibited it in its proper place on his own finger. The gentleman was dumfounded. Then Herrmann took off the ring and said: "You see I drop it in my sleeve," which he apparently did. Then he stroked his long imperial with his left hand, and there the ring glistened from his little finger. The man to whom it was to be loaned rubbed his eyes, looked dazed and told the man behind the white apron to make it the same as before. A gentleman in the party started to roll a cigarette, and Herrmann begged a paper. The little book was handed him and he tore out a leaf. "Now, watch me carefully," he said, and every eye was on him as he crushed up the delicate rice paper into a pellet, and then began to pick it to bits. One piece escaped him, but he caught it before it reached the floor and rolled it up with the other fragments. Handing the pellet to one of the gentleman, he asked him to carefully unroll it. This was done, and a whole and perfect cigarette paper was revealed, greatly to the astonishment of those who had seen him tear it to bits. Taking a curious gold coin from his pocket, he asked the man next him to examine it. The man took it and looked at it—it was an ordinary silver dollar. He looked sheepish and passed it back—the gold coin was in the palm of the wizard's hand.—Chicago Herald.

Marrying a Young Girl.

In the St. Mary's Established Church, Dumfries, on the 11th inst., an old man of 71 and a girl 17 were married in the presence of an amused assembly. The bridegroom is stated to be a land agent in Newcastle, a widower, with a grown-up family, one of whom is a clergyman. The bride being a minor, and the parents having refused their consent, the pair come to Dumfries five weeks ago to fulfil the requisite condition of a fifteen days' residence in Scotland with a view to a Scotch marriage. The officiating clergy was the Rev. A. Chapman, who produced a smile by giving out the 67th Psalm at the close of the ceremony, "Lord bless and pity us," which the congregation joined in singing. On leaving the church the bridegroom was cheered and hissed.—The Scottish American.

A Piece of Good Luck.

Country Editor's Wife—How happy you seem to-night, Edward. Have you had any good luck to-day?

Country Editor—Well, I should say I had. You can have that silk dress now.

"What has happened?"

"Farmer Hendricks, who hasn't paid for his paper for seven years, came in to-day and stopped his subscription."—Evening Wisconsin.

Something to Think About.

"No, Mr. Meredith, you must put away this madness. I can never, never be yours; there is an insurmountable obstacle."

"Do not say so! Tell me what this insurmountable obstacle is, love that I may crush it as I would a worm in my path."

"It's a husband in New York."

Honesty the Cause.

Chicago Sport—Our baseballists have become too honest for any use, all of a sudden.

Friend—Why do you think so?

Sport—Of late not one of them can be induced to even steal a base.—Chicago Globe.

Fully Equipped.

"Bromley, I hear you are going to start housekeeping?"

"Yes, Darlingger."

"What have you got toward it?"

"A wife."

Philadelphia Water.

Guest—A glass of water, please.

Waiter—Yes, sah; without?

Guest—With or without what?

Waiter—Microbes.

Guest—Without.

Waiter—Yes, sah. Distilled water for one.

It is said that arrangements have been concluded between Anderson & Co. and the Dominion Government for the establishment of a 19-knot steamship service between England and Canada.

A Modern Maiden.

When fair Aurora calls the dawn
The golden day to waken,
And robins on the verdant lawn
The early worms do rake in.
And Sol begins to light the skies
And tint the heaving billow,
My lady in her chamber lies
Asleep upon her pillow.

Oh, beauteous sight! A cheek so fair
On snowy arms reposing,
And lips just parted, rosebuds rare,
Two rows of pearls disclosing.
The light into her chamber streams,
Its bric-a-brac adorning,
And she awakens from her dreams
To greet the golden morning.

She springs from bed; how fair is she
All in her maiden glory.
Like Venus rising from the sea,
As told in classic story:
She opens the door, the charming sprite,
And calls her brother Freddy
To tell her ma the fire to light
And get the breakfast ready!

When she is dressed she goes downstairs
And gives the cook some orders,
Then to the dining room repairs
To mash the young men boarders,
The breakfast over up she springs,
And tells her ma and Hannah a
To wash the dishes while she sings
And bangs the grand piano.

Fairy Food.

Said my blue-eyed cousin John,
"What do fairies live upon?"
And he looked in eager wise
At me with his bright young eyes.

"Every morning time," I said,
"They bake tiny loaves of bread,
Cricket-steaks they often eat,
And their drink is honey sweet
From the honey-suckle bell,
Or the crimson clover cell,
They have berry pie and tarts
Flavored with a robin's heart,
And a very favorite thing
Is a slice of beetle's wing."

"Pooh!" cried John, "no wonder that Fairies are not big or fat!"

THE MUSIC WAS FLY.

And a Death Scene Was Changed to a Decidedly Lively One.

Last night an entire change of programme was presented. The play was a painful melo-drama with a sad act in it, where a handsome young woman dies a lingering death surrounded by her weeping friends.

In the first act four men are killed, a boiler explosion occurs in the second, and two steamboats have a collision in the third, all of which takes place prior to the death-bed scene. These realistic features, along with the incidental music, must have affected the trombone player's nerves. The invalid commenced to die and forgive cruel wrongs, while the orchestra played a low and mournful strain. A doctor stood by the bedside, watch in hand, counting the pulse beats. Muffled sobs came from the audience and the splash of falling tears could be heard in the gallery.

"She's growing weaker fast," whispered the doctor. "See! the death damp is on her brow. One—two—ah! She's gone."

A deathlike stillness pervaded the house, but suddenly the trombone player pulled the machine wide open and let out a blast that filled the building with a deafening volume of sound, extinguished the footlights, and brought the corpse to its feet in a hurry. The orchestra leader, white with passion, turned on the man with the double-geared horn and hissed: "Why did you do that, you old bald headed, weak-eyed, palsied remnant of hereditary insanity?"

"A fly lit on my music and I played it for a full note," and the stricken man bowed his head in silent anguish.—Chicago Times.

The Gray Eye.

The best eye to me is the gray eye. And if there is a flock of the hazel in it, or, better yet, a touch of the violet's hue, it is the more effective. The gray eye bespeaks the constant nature. It is the trustful eye, the intelligent eye, the eye that eloquently portrays the responsive, the sympathetic, the loyal character. There is in the expression of the gray eye an indefinable essence or aspect which fascinates and holds the attention and commands the confidence. The steel gray eye is the eye of cruelty. But the soft gray eye, with its pure and expressive look, who does not say that it is beautiful? And who can deny that the violet-gray eye—an eye that is so seldom seen—is not really ravishing?—Master Geoffrey, in the Detroit Free Press.

Two Salvation Army officers have been fined $15 and costs or sixty days at Battle Creek, Mich., for obstructing the streets.

At a meeting of the Imperial Cabinet on Saturday it was decided to send additional warships to Delagoa Bay.

M. de Cassagnac was expelled from the French Chamber of Deputies on Saturday for using violent language.

Many of the friends of Henry George are urging him to become a British subject and enter Parliament for a Scotch district.

Although the quality of mercy is not strained, as the bard truly says, still none of us complain about its coming too thick.

"Does the Captain say whether we shall break the record or not?" "Yes. He says that the record or the boiler must go." "How lovely!"—Munsey's Weekly.

An accident occurred at 6 p.m. on Thursday through the giving way of some part of the running gear of the elevator at the Ontario Wheel Company Works, Gananoque. Four of the employees, who were on the elevator at the time, were seriously injured, and it is thought that in one or two cases the injuries will be fatal. The names of the injured are Thos. Clark, Kingston; F. Black, Cardinal, F. Johnston and J. Reid, residents. Clark's injuries seem the most serious.

At the meeting of the Parnell Commission yesterday, Mr. Joseph Edward Kenny, M. P., denied that he had introduced Le Caron to Mr. Sexton. He never knew the man. He declared that he would not admit such a man to his house, as he showed by his face that he could not be trusted.

It is estimated that the number of horses and mules employed for street car services in Canada and the United States is, in round numbers, 115,000; 1 being the smallest number owned by any one company, 7,683 the largest and 105 the average. The general average of feed per animal is 26½ pounds, and the average for Kentucky is 45 pounds. The daily consumption of food is approximately 1,600 tons, or 584,000 tons per annum; and the cost of feed per animal varies from 17 to 50 cents per day, according to locality and season of the year.

A NEW CIGAR HORROR.

Elegant Wrappers for Cigars Now Made of Patent Rye Straw Paper.

Among the latest imitations which have been successfully introduced into the tobacco trade of this city and other cities are cigars, the wrappers of which are made out of a specially perfumed paper. A gentleman well known in the iron manufacturing circles of this vicinity was the first to inform a reporter that smoking material of this kind was new in the market. He has recently returned from a visit to Norfolk, Va., where he met a drummer for a large tobacco factory of New York State. This gentleman informed the Pittsburger that he was then introducing an imitation cigar wrapper which was so deceiving in its character that experts could scarcely distinguish it from the genuine. This preparation was made from rye straw, and one portion of the process was to steep the material in a strong solution made from tobacco stems. The grain of the straw, together with the manner in which the material was dressed would lead any person to suppose that it was sample of the leaf used in making wrappers for cigars of a more than ordinary quality. The flavor of tobacco was also present, owing to the paper having been immersed in the solution made from the genuine article. The gentleman subsequently examined cigars on sale in Norfolk and discovered that they were made with these patent wrappers. The samples examined were of an extra fine quality.—Pittsburg Commercial Gazette.

A RED CURRANT BONNET.

Floral Parasols and Other Items of Dress in London.

"Miss Mantalini," who supplies the Pall Mall Gazette with racy fashion paragraphs, says: There are few trimmed sunshades to be seen this year. The shopkeeper is trying to get rid of a few lace things he had left over from last summer. In Bond street windows there are some delightful floral parasols. The ground of one was of the palest pink, and over it pale pink hyacinths seemed to grow. There was a creamy lace border, with a narrow ruching of crepe de chine in grass green above it. A lady in mourning could use another sunshade just as pretty. It is made of soft black silk, and is trimmed at the top with bunches of Neapolitan violets. A wreath of violets and leaves forms a narrow border just above the black lace edge. A shopkeeper told me to-day that there was some fear that the demand for artificial flowers would be greater than the supply. "We can't get the more popular flowers quick enough from the warehouse," he said. "We are always short of laburnum and sweet peas." It is uncertain how long flower bonnets will be in vogue. Women will tire perhaps soon of spending twice the ordinary amount on headgear. Another novelty in millinery is a currant bonnet. A border of red currants just like those in the kitchen garden is arranged round the brim of the bonnet. The top is covered with leaves, young sprigs and berries not yet ripe. Then there is a very attractive hat with the brim and foundation made of the young twigs of the lilac tree. The top is covered with white lilac.

Chancery Sittings and Assizes.

The Chancery autumn sittings and Assize circuits have been fixed as follows:

CHANCERY AUTUMN SITTINGS.

THE HON. MR. JUSTICE PROUDFOOT.

Toronto—Monday, Nov. 4.

THE HON. THE CHANCELLOR.

Ottawa—Monday, Oct. 28.
Kingston—Monday, Nov. 4.
Belleville—Friday, Nov. 8.
Cobourg—Thursday, Nov. 14.
Cornwall—Monday, Nov. 18.
Brockville—Friday, Nov. 22.

THE HON. MR. JUSTICE BOYD.

Lindsay—Monday, Sept. 23.
Peterboro'—Friday, Oct. 22.
Woodstock—Thursday, Oct. 3.
Stratford—Thursday, Oct. 10.
Whitby—Wednesday, Oct. 16.
Barrie—Tuesday, Sept. 27.

THE HON. MR. JUSTICE FERGUSON.

St. Catharines—Tuesday, Sept. 17.
Guelph—Monday, Sept. 23.
Owen Sound—Monday, Sept. 30.
Brantford—Monday, Oct. 7.
Simcoe—Monday, Oct. 21.
Hamilton—Wednesday, Oct. 30.

THE HON. MR. JUSTICE ROBERTSON.

Goderich—Thursday, Sept. 19.
Walkerton—Monday, Sept. 30.
London—Wednesday, Oct. 9.
Chatham—Thursday, Oct. 24.
Sandwich—Thursday, Oct. 31.
Sarnia—Thursday, Nov. 7.
St. Thomas—Thursday, Nov. 14.

AUTUMN CIRCUIT, 1889.

The Courts of Oyer and Terminer and General Jail Delivery and of Assize and Nisi Prius for the several counties of Ontario will be held as follows:

THE HON. MR. JUSTICE FALCONBRIDGE.

Toronto—Civil Court, Tuesday, Sept. 10.
Toronto—Criminal Court, Monday, Oct. 7.
St. Catharines—Monday, Oct. 21.
Orangeville—Monday, Oct. 28.
Milton—Monday, Nov. 4.
Brampton—Monday, Nov. 11.

THE HON. CHIEF JUSTICE ARMOUR.

L'Orignal—Monday, Sept. 9.
Ottawa—Thursday, Sept. 12.
Pembroke—Tuesday, Sept. 24.
Perth—Monday, Sept. 30.
Peterboro'—Tuesday, Oct. 8.
Lindsay—Tuesday, Oct. 15.
Barrie—Tuesday, Oct. 22.
Owen Sound—Tuesday, Nov. 5.

THE HON. MR. JUSTICE ROSE.

London—Monday, Sept. 9.
Chatham—Monday, Sept. 23.
St. Thomas—Monday, Sept. 30.
Sandwich—Monday, Oct. 7.
Sarnia—Monday, Oct. 14.
Goderich—Tuesday, Oct. 22.
Walkerton—Monday, Oct. 28.
Woodstock—Monday, Nov. 4.

THE HON. MR. JUSTICE MACMAHON.

Whitby—Monday, Sept. 9.
Picton—Monday, Sept. 16.
Napanee—Thursday, Sept. 19.
Belleville—Monday Sept. 23.
Kingston—Monday, Oct. 7.
Cornwall—Monday, Oct. 14.
Brockville—Monday, Oct. 21.
Cobourg—Monday, Oct. 28.

THE HON. MR. JUSTICE STREET.

Welland—Tuesday, Sept. 10.
Stratford—Monday, Sept. 16.
Simcoe—Monday, Sept. 23.
Hamilton—Monday, Sept. 30.
Cayuga—Tuesday, Oct. 15.
Berlin—Monday, Oct. 21.
Guelph—Monday, Oct. 28.
Brantford—Monday, Nov. 4.

The new White Star line steamer Majestic was launched in England on Saturday.

There has been a decrease of about $15,000,000 in the public debt of the United States during June.

Prince Danilo, son of the reigning Prince, has been proclaimed heir-apparent to the throne of Montenegro.

TELEGRAPHIC SUMMARY.

The Arabs threaten to massacre sixty British Indians at Lindi if the man-of-war fires a single shot.

The burning of Mr. Wilson's house in Manotick recently has caused the death of Mr. Wilson himself and four of his family.

The annual meetings of the Liberal Associations of Centre Wellington, Cardwell and East and South Bruce were held yesterday.

Assistant State Attorney Baker, of Illinois, arrived at Winnipeg from Washington yesterday afternoon, where he has been receiving Burke the extradition papers.

King Alexander was warmly welcomed at Krujevacs on Thursday. Mottoes were displayed signifying the desire of the people for the restoration of the old Servian kingdom.

The 8 year-old son of Napoleon Delisle, of Valleyfield, while playing with a toy boat off the end of a barge, fell into the River Auraisin and was drowned about 11 a.m. yesterday.

The Oka Protestant Indians protest very vigorously against being dispossessed of the land that originally belonged to their fathers, and reject the idea of being bought out by the Seminary.

Michael Fenton, St. Thomas, aged 56, found guilty of an indecent assault on the 9-year-old daughter of D. McCready of that city, has been sentenced to one year in the Central Prison and 40 lashes.

Archbishop Tache has issued a pastoral letter to the clergy of the Archdiocese of St. Boniface, Man., announcing the holding of an ecclesiastical council of the Province on July 16th. This will be the first one ever held.

The policy of forbidding street demonstrations, hitherto employed only against Socialists, was applied to the Salvation Army in London on Thursday, when their procession in the Strand was dispersed by the police.

Young Carlson, whose parents own the cottage in which Dr. Cronin was murdered at Chicago, declared two men came to the cottage on Thursday and threatened him with death if he should identify Martin Burke, now under arrest in Winnipeg.

G. Remple, of Gretna, who bought two threshing machines at Stillwater, Minn., which were afterwards seized by the Canadian Customs officers on account of their having been manufactured in the States, has commenced suit against the Dominion Government for $1,000.

There was a remarkable vote in the British House of Commons on Thursday against the employment of children in theatres. The Cruelty to Children Bill proposed to disallow child labor after 10 o'clock at night. The Attorney General moved an exemption in favor of theatres. The House by a majority of 50 refused it.

Yesterday part of the Rome & Watertown Railroad was washed away between Chaumont and Cape Vincent. The waters carried away for a distance of forty feet all the earthworks. A passenger train from Watertown would have been wrecked had not an old woman signalled it to stop. The brakes were applied, and the train stopped in time to prevent a disaster.

Yesterday afternoon, while the ballast train on the double track of the Grand Trunk Railway was unloading about a mile west of Lancaster, Conductor Page, who was in charge of the train, was standing on the plough when it met with some obstruction and was overturned. Conductor Page falling directly under the plough was very badly crushed. He received internal injuries which caused his death.

Seventy-five earthquake shocks have been felt at Susanville, Cal., within the past two weeks.

Serious forest fires are raging on the mountains between Banff and Donald in the Northwest.

Sir Donald Smith has accepted the appointment of Chairman of the McGill University.

The French Canadians have selected Dominion Day to celebrate the festival of Jean Baptiste.

Owing to favorable weather in Russia all fears that the crops would prove a failure have been dispelled.

The Earl of Aberdeen will preside at the grand banquet to be given to Mr. Parnell at Edinburgh in July.

The San Francisco schooner Annie is supposed to have been lost in Behring Sea with a crew of eleven men.

Work is to be begun to-day on the Winnipeg & Southeastern Railway, which is intended to connect with the line at Duluth.

A resolution to condemn the Dominion Government on the Jesuit Estates matter was voted down at a Conservative meeting in West Huron.

Sir John Lester Kaye has 1,600 acres under crop on his Balgonie farm in the Northwest, and the entire crop is said to be in splendid condition.

While excavating for a flagstaff at Port Colborne yesterday, an Indian burying ground was discovered, and a quantity of relics were unearthed.

Major Nash, of the Royal Military College, Kingston, has purchased some carrier pigeons with a view to starting a carrier pigeon service in Canada.

President Harrison yesterday appointed Mr. Wm. Walter Phelps Minister to Germany.

The Russian army will be equipped with new rifles of small calibre. The weapons will be manufactured in France.

The joint committee representing London and London South have agreed on a basis for the union of the two corporations.

The body of an infant was found in a well at Lucan, Saturday last, in the rear of the old McLean foundry. There is no clue to its identity.

The Baptist Association, at its meeting at Peterboro' yesterday, passed resolutions in opposition to the exemption of church property from taxation.

R. G. L. Barnett was yesterday sentenced at Toronto by Judge McMahon to seven years at Kingston for fraud in connection with Central Bank transactions.

In the famous case of the Grande Ligne Mission and Morrissette, the Montreal Court of Appeals decided yesterday that there was no appeal from the judge's decision at St. John's, ordering the girl back to her father.

It is stated in Montreal that the Crown witnesses against Donald Morrison, the Megantic outlaw, are being rapidly spirited away, and unless something is done to check their departure the Crown will be without a case.

A woman of about 40 years of age, said to have come from Toronto, jumped overboard from the Levis ferry boat about 8 o'clock on Tuesday night, with the intention of drowning herself. She was fished out, however, and handed over to the police.

Capt. Edouard Lessard, of the tug Mersey, is missing from Quebec. He was last seen on Monday night about 10 30 on board his vessel asleep in the wheel-house. His hat was found on the deck of the tug yesterday morning, but no tidings of himself has yet been received.

Surgeon Foster, of the lumbermen's camps at Johnstown, Pa., reported last night that within the last twenty-four hours forty nine laborers were taken seriously sick with symptoms of typhoid fever. Many of them were sent home, and the others are being cared for in the hospital. The river channel above the railroad bridge was for the first time opened yesterday morning.

Last evening about 9 30 three young men named George Nixon, John McIntyre and John Dickson went for a row on the river, at Mount Forest, in a boat which they had made themselves, and in some manner the boat upset and Nixon, who could not swim, was drowned before assistance could reach him. The other two could swim and got out safely, but could not save their companion. The body has not yet been recovered.

As the Vaudreuil freight train, due at Bonaventure station, Montreal, yesterday morning, was one mile this side of St. Anne's under a full head of steam, a man was seen standing bolt upright in the centre of the track, only some dozen yards ahead and apparently staring deliberately at the train as it advanced to his sure destruction. Before anything could be done to slacken pace he was struck by the cow catcher and thrown on to the rail, the engine and the wheels of the entire train passing over him, cutting him literally to fragments. The train was promptly brought to a halt and the remains gathered together, when they were identified as those of a tramp, name not ascertained, but who was well known in the vicinity from his habits of walking on the track and his habitual drinking. It is surmised that the man, from his appearance as the train approached, had determined on suicide.

Rev. Peter Wright, of Stratford, has accepted the call lately addressed to him by the Presbyterian Church in Portage la Prairie, and will in a few days proceed to his new field of labor in the Northwest.

Steps are being taken at the Treasury Department at Washington for the establishment of life saving stations at Marquette, Mich., and Kewaunee, Wis., with a view of having them in operation before winter.

Bears have been playing great havoc lately amongst sheep in the Township of Lambton, Megantic, but one farmer, who has retaliated upon bruin, has killed no less than eight of his species within the past few weeks.

It is true that the North German Lloyds' steamers will no longer touch at Southampton, but they will touch at Cowes instead, so that the sensation which is said to have been caused in Southampton by their withdrawal was practicallly without cause.

On Thursday week Dan McNamara, 30 years old, formerly of Peterboro', Ont., was employed by contractors to go down shore at Cheboygan, Mich., and put in some logs. Sunday he disappeared and yesterday his body was found floating ashore.

The rivers have overflowed their banks and partially submerged the town of Barle-Duc, in the Department of Meuse, France, and the surrounding country. Many houses have been undermined and destroyed, and crops and vineyards been ruined.

Rev. Mr. Lariviere, before the Montreal Anglican Synod yesterday, said that the Protestant Church was losing ground in Quebec. He believed that since 1871 the Church of England had lost 6,000 adherents, and other denominations had lost proportionately.

William, the 15-year-old son of Henry Horace, Yarmouth, while trying to put a bridle on a horse, got his foot caught in the strap, and the horse becoming frightened, the lad was dragged a distance of 200 yards. He was picked up unconscious, and his injuries are serious.

Several families were evicted on the Ponsonby estate yesterday. The tenants offered a stout resistance, and in some cases the evictors had to use a battering-ram to effect an entrance into the cottages. Several persons were injured while resisting the bailiffs. Six arrests were made.

J. McGuin, an old man, was found under a culvert on the Grand Trunk Railway near Kingston with an arm so badly broken that amputation was necessary. Thursday he was under the influence of liquor, and the probabilities are that he fell off the culvert, inflicting the injuries. He is now at l'Hotel Dieu.

At a barn-raising at the residence of Mr. Bleuett, Southwold, on Thursday afternoon, Jeremiah Donohue, brother of the County Attorney, received probably fatal injuries. He was struck by a falling bent, his left leg broken at the thigh, his right leg injured, his chin crushed, and internal injuries inflicted. The physicians have but slight hope of his recovery.

For some time the domestic relations of Mr. and Mrs. Jonah Madden, Portland, have not been pleasant. The husband being sure that his wife was trying to put him out of the world, swore out a complaint that she had on several occasions attempted to administer poison in his food and medicine. Mrs. Madden was arrested and taken to Brockville jail. She is considered dangerous, having more than once threatened to burn the buildings of some of her neighbors.

A sad drowning accident occurred at Verdun, Que., on Thursday evening. A number of boys were bathing, among them Eddie Loucks, aged 15. A portion of a door was taken from shore and pushed out into the water. Loucks and a companion swam with it about the bathing place. His companion, after some time, let go his hold, but Eddie still kept by it and drifted out into the stream. He was suddenly seen to disappear and then rise and disappear again.

The residence of Mr. Felix Lafond, of Montreal, was, on Friday night last, the scene of an audacious piece of violence on the part of three unknown ruffians, who, in the absence of the owner, entered the house, assaulted Miss Celina Lafond, his sister, and upon her screaming for assistance fired two shots point blank at her. Fortunately, however, the bullets missed their mark and the lady hid herself on a stairway. The burglars then ransacked the house, and on leaving one of them fired a shot through one of the windows. On hearing of the circumstances Sheriff Marsolais made inquiries into the matter and has arrested a man named Marcil at St. Charles on suspicion, who has been placed in Joliette jail.

Details of a backwoods tragedy have come to light. Jas. Doolan, foreman in one J. R. Bert's lumber camp, got in a fight with a bush hand named Levecque. The encounter lasted about twenty minutes and Levecque got much the worst of it. It is alleged that Doolan beat him about the head with an iron bar. Levecque left the camp to go to the general depot in the woods, but he never reached there. Finding that he did not, his friends instituted a search, with the result that his dead body was found in a little lake, tributary to Lake Nipissing. When found it was discovered that his moccasin thongs had been tied so tightly around his neck as to be sufficient to cause death. A coroner's jury was empannelled and a verdict was returned that Doolan was guilty of manslaughter. Doolan, however, got word of these proceedings, and he immediately disappeared. It has been ascertained that he came to Ottawa and then paid a visit to his home in Manotick. His present whereabouts are unknown. Doolan is 27 years of age, tall and strong, with fair hair.

The Bishop of Ontario has deposed from his sacred office Rev. Robert. T. Burns, recently sent to the Penitentiary for embezzlement.

John W. Gibbard, 17 George street, Toronto, tried to commit suicide last evening by taking carbolic acid, but took too little and was arrested.

E. C. Goodenow, of Maine, has been appointed United States Consul at St. Stephens, N.B., and M. D. Sampson, of Kansas, Consul at St. John, N.B.

At Charleston, S. C., on Saturday, Dr. McDow, who was charged with the murder of Capt. Dawson, editor of the Charleston News, was acquitted on the ground of self-defence.

A lad named Ross Taylor, 246 Farley avenue, Toronto, was seized with an epileptic fit whilst bathing at the Island yesterday and died two hours after being taken out of the water.

The suburbs of Hyde Park, Lake, Lakeview, Cicero and Jefferson, on Saturday, voted to unite with Chicago, which will give that city an area of 174 square miles and a population of about 1,100,000.

Yesterday morning Bishop Cleary announced that he had no desire to be promoted to the Archbishopric of Waterford and Lismore, and had requested the Pope to permit him to remain in Kingston.

Gen. Wolseley, in his address at Blackheath, said the nation must consider the fact that an invasion of England could not last over a fortnight and that the volunteers should be equipped in accordance with this view.

The liberal wing of the Reformed Church in France is in session in Paris, ninety delegates being present. It is announced that they will almost immediately create a college at Nimes, which, if it be erected, will be the first Protestant seminary in France.

Senator Pugh, of the U. S. Senate Sub Committee on Foreign Relations, says that everywhere in the Northwest, on both sides of the border, there is a strong feeling in favor of a renewal of reciprocity relations between the United States and Canada.

The largest steamer upon the upper St. Lawrence, the John Armstrong, of Ogdensburg, N.Y., went to the bottom of the river at 11 a.m. Sunday while being used in ferrying cars from Morristown to Brockville. As far as can be learned no lives were lost.

Mail advices from West Africa confirm previous reports of the shocking privations to which Mr. Stanley has been subjected. It is stated his hair has turned snow white, that his clothes are rags, and that he is without shoes, being obliged to use skins to cover his feet.

While the Bersagliers regiment was marching in Naples yesterday a private named Borrelli, in a fit of madness, fired upon his comrades, killed the major of the regiment, and wounded a captain and others. The madman was finally killed with a revolver.

Belleville was shocked on Sunday by the intelligence of the drowning of Charles C. McFull, the Canadian passenger agent of the Delaware & Hudson Railway, and one of the best known and most popular railway men in Canada, which occurred there by the sinking of a ferry boat.

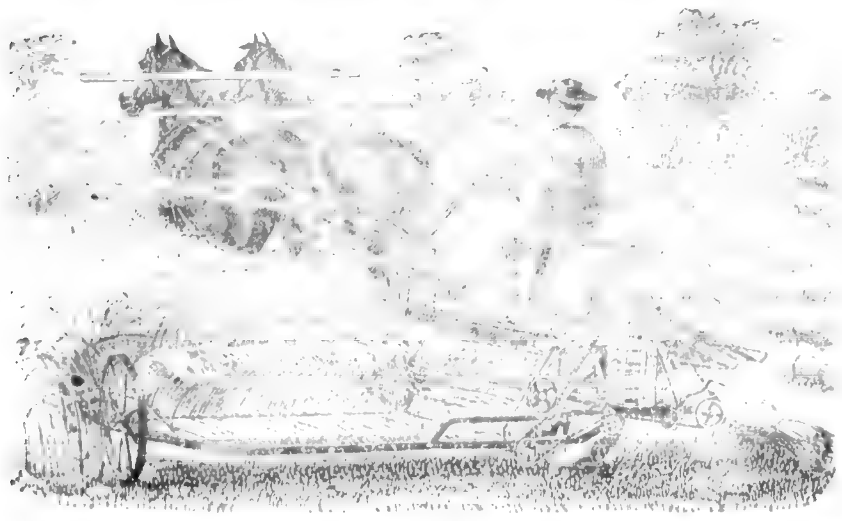
Grave alarm is still felt in Switzerland, where everybody is now convinced that Germany intends sweeping down through the Jura Pass into France and that war is very near. Upon this theory the Federal authorities are working like beavers to get war material together and the army in fighting trim.

It is rumored that the Portuguese Government will agree to submit the Delagoa Bay Railroad question to arbitration. Despatches from Delagoa Bay say that the Portuguese deny they fired upon English employees of the railway company as was reported. It is asserted that no violence whatever has been offered to the railroad men. Traffic will be resumed on Tuesday. The work of rebuilding the destroyed portion of the road and of extending the line will be begun immediately.

The more we study, we the more discover our ignorance.—Shelley.

—It has been decided by the New York committee that the next session of the Baptist Congress should be held in Toronto, Nov. 12th, 13th, 14th.

—Force of habit: Auctioneer—"How much for this racket?" Judge (absent-minded)—"Ten dollars or ten days."



THE BRANTFORD LIGHT STEEL BINDER!

Over Four Thousand Sold in Season 1888. Being More Than Half of all Other Binders made in Canada.

[illegible]

THOS. A. BLAKELY,
FLESHERTON

Heard's Carriage Works.

MANUFACTURER OF

Carriages, Buggies, Wagons, Sleighs, Cutters, &c., &c.

HEARD'S IMPROVED HARROWS AND GATES.

[illegible] Attention given to PAINTING, TRIMMING, HORSE SHOEING and all kinds of JOB WORK. Nothing but first class material used [illegible] and satisfaction guaranteed. We have for sale

— Lumber, Lath and Shingles. —

Agent for [illegible] Mowers and Binders, [illegible] Champion, [illegible] Granger and Standard Plows, [illegible] Furrow Gang Plows, Horse Powers [illegible] Straw Cutters [illegible] and Turnip Drills.

JOHN H. HEARD, Durham Street, Flesherton.

FLESHERTON
STOVE
EMPORIUM

[illegible]

F. G. Karstedt, Strain's old Stand Flesherton.

NOW IS THE TIME
—o—
Get Your Tailoring Done
—AT—
C. J. LEITCHE'S
FLESHERTON.

FLOUR, FLOUR,
STONE
FLOUR!

MR. P. LOUCKS

[illegible] Satisfaction Guaranteed.

P. LOUCKS Proprietor.
Good stabling for horses.

It Pays To

GO TO THE BEST

AND THAT IS THE Northern
Business College,
OF OWEN SOUND.

The best and most practical course of study
The best teaching talent
The best accommodation for students
The best methods of instruction
The best results from that instruction after students graduate
For annual announcements giving particulars regarding the course of study, terms &c. address
C. A. FLEMING, PRINCIPAL.
Owen Sound, Nov. 1st, 18[illegible]

REMOVAL

I desire to inform the public that I have removed my well known tin shop to

MOORE'S Block, Durham St.

A complete stock of tinware will be found in my new premises
REPAIRING
EAVETROUGHING
Etc. done as heretofore.
I have secured the agency for
the Celebrated Singer Sewing Machine.
Requesting my old friends to come and see me in my new shop, I remain, etc.,

JAS. SULLIVAN.

For Sale

Steam flour mill for sale at Flesherton Station 2 run stone, double reed bolt, smut mill, duster and purifier. Will be sold cheap and on easy terms. This is a bargain. Apply to
[illegible]
Flesherton P.O.

COUNTY & DISTRICT

A large frame building known [illegible] a.m. Sunday, and was totally [illegible] N. Brady, baker and confectioner, [illegible] how the fire originated. [illegible] week.

[illegible] Nixon [illegible] McIntyre [illegible] the mill pond here, in a new boat [illegible] capsized, throwing the three occupants in the water. Dixon and McIntyre [illegible] not swim was drowned. [Mt. Forest Representative.

During the severe thunder storm of Tuesday afternoon, Mrs. Stewart, wife of Robt. Stewart, of lot 8, con. 3, Melancthon, was struck by lightening. Mr. Stewart was standing in the doorway and the injured woman was in the house at the time. She was badly injured. The right side from her face down was slightly burned and paralyzed. Dr. Rooney was sent for and did all that was possible to relieve the sufferer. It is expected that she will recover. [Shelburne Free Press.

ROBBED AND MUTILATED. A Detroit despatch says: Last November William Snook, son of Henry Snook a prominent citizen, left home, and no tidings were had of him until yesterday, when his father received word that a person answering to the description of his son had been drowned at Newport, Ont., and was buried there. The father went to Newport and before opening the grave was notified that he must not be shocked if he found the body mutilated. When asked what they meant the Newport officers said that young Snook's body was stripped of all its valuables and then taken into a trench [illegible] inches deep and covered with sand. Mr. Snook demanded [illegible] the trench should be opened, and found that the report that he had been jammed into the earth, his face in the sand, both legs broken and turned back [illegible] the trunk, this having been done in order to crowd the body into the small hole [illegible]. The arms were also broken in several places. The corpse bore every evidence of having been jumped upon by [illegible] employed to bury it. Mr. Snook brought the horribly mutilated body to Detroit, and fears to go back after the [illegible] lest in his anger he may shoot the parties who committed the [illegible]

[illegible]

Honor Roll

[illegible]

Kimberley Public School Report for June.

[illegible]

Average Attendance 26

[illegible]

ADVICE TO MOTHERS. Are you disturbed at night and broken of your rest by a sick child suffering and crying with pain of Cutting Teeth? If so send at once and get a bottle of Mrs. Winslow's Soothing Syrup for Children Teething. Its value is incalculable. It will relieve the poor little sufferer immediately. Depend upon it, mothers, there is no mistake about it. It cures Dysentery and Diarrhea, regulates the Stomach and Bowels, cures Wind Colic, softens the Gums, reduces Inflammation, and gives tone and energy to the whole system. "Mrs. Winslow's Soothing Syrup" for children teething is pleasant to the taste and is the prescription of one of the oldest and best female physicians and nurses in the United States, and is for sale by all druggists throughout the world. Price twenty five cents a bottle. Be sure and ask for "MRS. WINSLOW'S SYRUP," and take no other kind.

ROLLER FLOUR
best in the markets at
Blackburn's.
Ice Cream Parlors!
all kinds of cooling summer drinks.
Cured Meats,
Lard, Bologna,
etc.
ALL FRUITS IN THEIR SEASON
—AT—
BLACKBURN'S

BOOTS & SHOES.

[illegible] A large supply on hand and

Selling Very Cheap.

IN LADIES WEAR. [illegible]

Misse's, Youth's and Children's

A large assortment, all sorts and sizes.

MENS WEAR

Fine Calf and Dongola, Balmorals and Gaiters, also Heavy Boots and Shoes. Prices and Material cannot be beat.

W. CLAYTON.

Photos,

Photos,

Photos.

We are now turning out work far superior in style and finish to any ever produced in Flesherton.

COPYING and ENLARGING at MODERATE RATES.

PICTURE FRAMING

done in all its branches. A good stock of FRAMES and MOULDINGS kept constantly on hand. Will also introduce the new BROMIDE PORTRAIT, a [illegible] SAMPLES can be seen [illegible] Call [illegible] where all particulars as to Price, Style &c., can be ascertained.

MRS. BULMER,
FLESHERTON

HEALTH FOR ALL.

HOLLOWAY'S PILLS & OINTMENT

THE PILLS

Purify the Blood, correct all Disorders of

Liver, Stomach, Kidn'ys, and Bowels.

They invigorate and restore to health Debilitated Constitutions, and are invaluable in all Complaints incidental to Females of all ages. For Children and the aged they are priceless.

THE OINTMENT

Is an infallible remedy for Bad Legs, Bad Breasts, Old Wounds, Sores and Ulcers. It is famous for Gout and Rheumatism. For disorders of the Chest it has no equal.

For SORE THROAT, BRONCHITIS, COUGHS, COLDS

Glandular Swellings, and all Skin Diseases it has no rival, and for contracted and stiff joints it acts like a charm.

Manufactured only at Professor Holloway's Establishment,

78, New Oxford Street (late 533, Oxford Street), London,

and are sold at 1s. 1½d., 2s. 9d., 4s. 6d., 11s., 22s. and 33s. each Box or Pot, and may be had of all Medicine Vendors throughout the World.

Purchasers should look to the Label on the Pots and Boxes. If the address is not 533, Oxford Street, London, they are spurious.

PRICEVILLE
BAKERY.

A. WATSON!

Desires to inform the public that he can furnish

CAKES AND PIES
To Order.

FIRST CLASS BREAD ALWAYS ON HAND.

will visit Flesherton twice a week on TUESDAYS and FRIDAYS, with a full supply of goods.

DROP A CARD IF YOU DESIRE ME TO CALL.

WEDDING and FANCY cakes a specialty

A. WATSON,
Priceville.

FLESHERTON
PLANING MILLS

Having purchased the Flesherton Planing Mills from R. J. Sproule, Esq., I now desire to inform the PUBLIC
that I am in a position to do
ALL KINDS
--OF--
General planing mill work,
such as
SASH, DOORS, DOOR FRAMES
Planing and Matching, re sawing, etc.
Good Workmanship Guaranteed.

A large quantity of good dry pine lumber on hand.

W. J. HOWARD,
Flesherton.

Situation.

with steady employment and good pay all the year round, to reliable men furnishing satisfactory references. S.A. McOMBER & Co., Nurserymen, Rochester, N. Y

LOOK!

HAVING done business in Canada for years our reputation is established. We want three men in your vicinity to represent us, to whom exclusive territory will be given. Handsome outfit free. Salary and expenses paid weekly. Previous experience not required. Write at once for terms. Hardy stock for Canada a specialty. MAY BROTHERS, Nurserymen, Rochester, N.Y

FLESHERTON ADVANCE.

"TRUTH BEFORE FAVOR."—"PRINCIPLES, NOT MEN."

VOL. VIII., NO 420. FLESHERTON, ONT., THURSDAY, JULY 18, 1889. W. H. THURSTON, EDITOR & PROP.

WATCHES,

Clocks, & Jewelry.

STUDY
Your Own Interests

by buying your Watches, Clocks, Jewelry & Spectacles and Silverware at

Russel's Noted
JEWELRY STORE,

FLESHERTON.

In watches we have a very large stock of Elgin, Waltham, Illinois Springfield, Columbus and Swiss Levers, in Ladies' and Gents' sizes. Gold, Silver and Silveroid cases. Brooches and Bar-pins, of the latest design. Fine Gold and Rolled Gold Earrings, Cuff Buttons, Charms, Chains, and a beautiful stock of Ladies' Gem Engagement Rings. A full supply of 18 K. Wedding Rings always on hand. Also a large and well-assorted stock of Silverware and Spectacles at very low prices, and remember the place to get your Watches, Clocks, Jewelry, etc. repaired is at

RUSSELL'S, FLESHERTON.

All work personally attended to by Mr. Russell.

THE ONE PRICE
Cash Store.

STILL ON DECK!

Goods cheaper than ever

This is the time for all farmers to lay in a good stock of

Groceries

for haying and harvesting. We have put the prices down to meet the demands.

Dry Goods, Boots, Shoes, Etc.

—AT—

ROCK - BOTTOM - PRICES.

More Customers wanted

To Carry off the Bargains.

McDONALD & EVANS,

Wright's Old Stand.

Pumps! Pumps!

J. McCullough.

Markdale,

manufacturer of pumps, desires to inform the public that he is prepared to furnish pumps for

Deep wells, gravel wells, etc.

parties who have heretofore had difficulty with their wells are

Guaranteed Satisfaction

by using my articles. I learned my business with the late J. Fear of Meaford, the superiority of whose pumps was a household word in Grey a few years ago.

Be sure and call on me if you desire anything in the pump line.

J. McCullough.

FARM FOR SALE CHEAP, AND ON EASY terms, lot 7, con. 2, township of Euphrasia containing 200 acres. This is a splendid, valuable timber farm. Well timbered with mixed hardwood, hemlock and cedar. Splendid soil. 1½ miles from the beautiful village of Kimberley in Queen's Valley where there are mills, stores, post office and church, and 11 miles from Flesherton on the C. P. R., where there is a splendid market for all kinds of produce, stock, lumber and timber. Apply to R. J. Sproule, auctioneer and real estate agent, Flesherton.

Flesherton Livery Stables.

D. CLAYTON, Proprietor.

First class horses and vehicles for hire at reasonable rates.

Stables opposite Munshaw's hotel.

Special attention paid to commercial business.

THE ADVANCE.

is published

Every Thursday,

FROM THE OFFICE,

Sydenham Street, - - Flesherton, Ont.

TERMS OF SUBSCRIPTION:

$1 per annum when paid strictly in advance $1 50 per annum when not so paid.

ADVERTISING RATES.

One column, 1 year $50; half col. do. $27 quarter col. do. $15

Transient advertisements charged at the rate of 8cts. per line for first insertion and 3cts. per line each subsequent insertion.

W. H. THURSTON.

Editor and Proprietor.

AMERICAN "HASH" FOR CANADA

The enterprise of the Canadian daily press along certain lines is not something of which Canadians should feel justly proud. The large New York dailies have special correspondents in London who forward to their employers long despatches relating to British affairs and institutions, which, of course, are written and served up with the one object of tickling the American palate, and are not in many instances complimentary to the subject. They are salted with sarcasm and seasoned with sneers at things British. These American dishes are reproduced by our Canadian daily press and do more harm in disaffecting the Canadian people in their allegiance to the British Crown than any agency which is now at work. The Toronto Globe is especially guilty in this matter, but then it can only be considered as another little strategy by which Commercial Union and eventually annexation may be reached. Why don't the Globe and Mail move their "cases" across the border where such hash would be better appreciated.

An unfortunate murder was perpetrated at the asylum, Toronto, on Thursday night last. A maniac named Potter, who had always been considered harmless, murdered a companion named McDonald with a piece of hoop iron which he had sharpened, by cutting his throat. McDonald has been in the asylum fourteen years and hails from the County of Grey. No blame appears to attach to any one, as Potter had always been considered a harmless religious maniac.

The Shah of Persia is the guest of Queen Victoria. It is said that his manners are very shahking to the English nobility, who desire his visit to be as shahrt as possible.

Osprey Items.

Gleaned by our own Reporter.

Fine dry weather now.

Crops are looking well but will be shorter than was anticipated.

The 12th passed off very quietly in Singhampton.

The Orange Hall in Feversham will soon be completed, also the bridge.

It is said that G. C. Brown, the new hotel keeper, keeps the law strictly with regard to Saturday night and Sunday selling.

Mrs. B. S. Kerr, of Toronto, is visiting friends in this locality.

Mrs. Robinson is slowly recovering from her severe illness.

Mr. E. Hamilton, wagon maker, intends removing to Maxwell shortly, having rented Mr. Guy's shop and dwelling.

Mr. R. Brown raised a fine stable 40x50 on Thursday, on the same place the other was burned.

Messrs. Brownridge and Miller are engaged burning a lime kiln on the banks of the Beaver this week.

Mr. John Inkster is away on a trip to the old sod.

Messrs. Wm. Seymour, M. Murphy and John Duncan have all purchased new binders lately, which speaks well for their side of the country.

Mr. Joseph Carr is home from Cheboygan and reports good times in that part of Michigan.

Haying will be pretty well advanced next week if the weather is fine. Hay in this section will be about an average crop.

A 1 new Honey for sale at this office, 10c a pound

Kimberley

From our own Correspondent.

The inhabitants of our village were honored by the presence of the ex-Lieutenant-Governor of Ontario on Tuesday last. He, with a number of other honorable gentlemen, and their ladies, were picnicing here, and seemed to enjoy themselves well.

Kimberley as desirable [illegible] much interest in the heart [illegible] and the interest [illegible] pleasant for visitors as [illegible]

Some fishermen [illegible] our village about midnight last Thursday and aroused the citizens by rapping on the windows and doors, and in one instance broke a pane of glass. They were the worse of liquor at the time, and caused a good deal of disturbance, but came back the next day and paid for the glass and made great apology for their misbehavior.

The foundation of the new church is now complete, and the committee intends building immediately.

The Misses Graham and Thurston were visiting friends in the vicinity of Vandeleur on Saturday and Sunday last.

General News.

The Erie and Niagara Railway has been amalgamated with the Canada Southern.

Farmer John Bates of Amaranth township, was thrown from his wagon by his team running away on Wednesday in Orangeville, and six of his ribs were broken, besides internal injuries. He has since died.

The Hon. T. B. Pardee, ex-Commissioner of Crown Lands, passed quietly away at 12.30 Sunday, apparently without much suffering. He has been very low for some time, and his death has been expected for weeks at any moment. The funeral took place on Tuesday at 3 p.m. and the remains were interred in Lakeview cemetery. Mr. Pardee has been afflicted with Bright's disease for years, and has been confined to his house for about a year. His resignation as a Minister of the Ontario Government was accepted some months ago, but Mr. Mowat refused to accept his resignation as a representative of West Lambton. The Hon. Mr. Pardee has represented Lambton continuously in the Local House since 1867. The death of Mr. Pardee leaves a blank in the representation of this riding which will be difficult to fill. He was universally respected. Conservatives and Reformers alike held deceased in high estimation for his many genial qualities, which endeared him to all who had the privilege of enjoying his friendship.

Why will you cough when Shiloh's cure will give immediate relief. Price 10 cts., 50 cts., and $1. For sale at the Medical Hall.

For dyspepsia and liver complaint you have a printed guarantee on every bottle of Shiloh's vitalizer. It never fails to cure. For sale at the Medical Hall.

Are you made miserable by indigestion, constipation, dizziness, loss of appetite, yellow skin? Shiloh's Vitalizer is a positive cure. For Sale at the Medical Hall.

Shiloh's catarrh remedy--a positive cure for catarrh, diptheria and canker mouth. For sale at the Medical Hall.

BORN.

STUART.—In Artemesia on the 12th inst. the wife of Mr. Jas. H. Stuart of a son.

Nasal injector free with each bottle of Shiloh's catarrh remedy. Price 50 cts. For sale at the Medical Hall.

THE MARKETS.

FLESHERTON.

Carefully Corrected Each Week.

Flour
Fall Wheat
Spring Wheat
Barley
Oats
Peas
Butter
Eggs fresh
Potatoes per bush	0 15
Pork	0 10
Hay per ton
Hides
Sheepskins	0 90	1 00
Geese	0 05	0
Turkeys	0 10	0 10
Chickens per pair	0 25	0 30
Ducks per lb
Wool		0 2

NOTICE!

TO CREDITORS & OTHERS.

PURSUANT to section 36, Cap. 170 of R. S. 1887, the creditors and all others having claims [illegible]

First day of August Next.

[illegible] and circulars [illegible] scription the full particulars [illegible] statement of their assets and a [illegible] of the securities if any held by the [illegible] on [illegible] thereof and [illegible] after such last named date the assets of the said estate will be distributed among the parties entitled thereto, regard being had only to the claims of which notice shall have been given as above required and the executors will not be liable for the said assets or any part thereof to any person whose claim notice shall not have been received as aforesaid at the time of such distribution.

HENRY CAIRNS
GEORGE STEWART } Executors
JOHN WRIGHT

Dated June 25th, 1889.

SIGN

"Big Spex"

Reliable watches in

Gold, filled gold and Coin-silver cases.

Ladies and Gents sizes.

Walnut and Nickle Clocks.

I am represented by A 1 watches [illegible] backed up by reliable warrants, in three [illegible] of Certificates from any jeweller [illegible] in this section.

Prices are not down rock [illegible]

QUALITY Considered.

I would not be able to hold [illegible] share of Grey Co. trade as I have at present

"CASH or CREDIT"

will positively do better by you

Goods, Work and Warrants Considered

than you can do elsewhere. Specially attended.

Work Carefully Done, Fair Charges.

Stock now complete in all lines.

Can save you $1 to $3.00 on watches.

Other lines will be held [illegible] and [illegible] live margins.

W. A. BROWN,

Jeweler and Optician,

MARKDALE, Ont.

Roller Flour $4.95, Shorts 75cts., Bran 60cts., at W. TRIMBLE'S

Sweet Little Somebody.

Somebody crawls into mamma's bed
Just at the break of day,
Snuggles up and whispers loud,
"Somebody's come to stay."

Somebody rushes through the house,
Never once shuts a door,
Scatters her playthings all around,
Over the nursery floor.

Climbs on the fence and tears her clothes—
Never a bit cares she—Swings on the gate and makes mud pies—
Who can somebody be?

Somebody looks with roguish eyes
Up through her tangled hair;
"Somebody's me," she says, "but then
"Somebody doesn't care."

Old Folks.

Ah, don't be sorrowful darling,
And don't be sorrowful, pray,
Taking the year together, my dear,
There isn't more night than day!

'Tis rainy weather, my darling,
Time's waves, they heavily run,
But taking the year together, my dear,
There isn't more cloud than sun!

We are old folks now, my darling,
Our heads they are growing gray,
But taking the year all round, my dear,
You will always find the May!

We had our May, my darling,
And our roses, long ago,
And the time of the year is coming, my dear,
For the silent night and snow!

And God is God, my darling,
Of night as well as day,
And we feel and know that we can go
Wherever he leads the way.

Ay, God of night, my darling—
Of the night of death, so grim,
The gate that leads out of life, good wife,
Is the gate that leads to Him.

—Alice Carey, in Boston Traveller.

Out of the Darkness.

Out of the darkness whence?
Into the darkness—whither?
O for the long suspense,
And the searching hither and thither
When the silver cord is loosed,
And the golden bowl is broken,
How is the light diffused
That has been, and leaves no token?

The sound of a tender strain,
The flash of a crystal river—
Then into the never again,
Or into the long forever?
Is it life for the living, and naught
But death 'neath the sable curtain?
Whence is the truth, and what?
And where is it clear and certain?

Fear not, for He is there,
And the curtain is withdrawn;
The truth is bright and fair,
And the light streams further on,
While over the world a dark strife
Sounds a voice of sweet direction—
"I am the way of Life,
I am the Resurrection."

FIDELITY AND LOVE.

"Will you take a sleeper?" the conductor asked and she replied, "Oh no. I cannot afford that."

So he found her a whole seat in the common car, and telling her that he would speak of her to the new conductor, bade her good bye, and she was left alone.

Very nervously she watched her fellow-passengers as they came hurrying in,—men, mostly,—it seemed to her,—rough looking men, too, for there had been a horse-race that day at a point on the Harlem road, and they were returning from it. Occasionally some one of them stopped and looked at the girl in black, who sat so straight and still, with her hand bag held down upon the vacant seat beside her as if to keep it intact. But no one offered to take it, and Maude breathed more freely as the crowded train moved slowly from the depot. After a little the new conductor came and spoke to her and looked at her ticket and went out, and then she was really alone. New England with its rocks and hills and mountains, was behind her. Mother, and John and home were far away, and the lump in her throat grew larger and there crept over her such a sense of dreariness and home-sickness that she would have cried outright if she dared to. There were only six women in the car besides herself. All the rest were wolves; she felt sure of that, they talked and laughed so loud, and spit so much tobacco juice. They were so different from the stranger on the boat, she thought, wondering who he was and where he had gone. How pleasantly he had spoken to her, and how she wished——. She got no farther, for a voice said to her, "Can I sit by you? every other seat is taken."

"Yes, oh, yes. I am so glad," Maude exclaimed involuntarily, in her delight at recognising the stranger, and springing to her feet she offered him the seat next to the window.

"Oh, no," he said with a smile which would have won the confidence of any girl. "Keep that yourself. You will be more comfortable there. Are you going to ride all night?"

"Yes, I am going to Canandaigua," she replied.

"To Canandaigua!" he repeated, looking at her a little curiously; but he asked no more questions then, and busied himself with adjusting his bag and his large travelling shawl, which last he put on the back of the seat more behind Maude than himself.

Then he took out a magazine, while Maude watched him furtively, thinking him the finest looking man she had ever seen, except her father, of whom in his manner he reminded her a little. Not nearly as old, certainly, as her father, and not young like Archie either, for there were a few threads of grey in his mustache and in his brown hair, which had a trick of curling slightly at the ends under his soft felt hat. Who was he? she wondered. The initials on his satchel were, "M. G.," but that told her nothing. How she hoped he was going as far as she was, she felt so safe with him, and at last as the darkness increased and he shut up his book, she ventured to ask, "Are you going far?"

"Yes," he replied, with a twinkle of humor in his blue eyes, "and if none of these men get out I am afraid I shall have to claim your forbearance all night, but I will make myself as small as possible. Look," and with a laugh he drew himself close to the arm of the seat, and leaving quite a space between them; but he did not tell her that he had engaged a berth in the sleeper, which he had abandoned when he found her alone, with that set of roughs whose character he knew.

"Inasmuch as ye have done it unto one of the least of these ye have done it unto Me," would surely be said to him some day, for he was always giving the cup of water, even to those who did not know they were thirsting until after they drank of what he offered them. Once he brought Maude some water in a little glass tumbler, which he took from his satchel, and once he offered her an apple which she declined lest she should seem too forward; then, as the hours crept on and her eye-lids began to droop, he folded his shawl carefully and made her let him put it behind her head, suggesting that she remove her hat, as she would rest more comfortably without it.

"Now sleep quietly," he said, and as if there were something mesmeric in his voice, Maude went to sleep at once, and dreamed she was at home with her mother beside her, occasionally fixing the pillow under her head and covering her with something which added to her comfort.

It was the stranger's light overcoat which, as the September night grew cold and chill, he put over the girl, whose upturned face he had studied as intently she had studied his. About 7 o'clock the conductor came in, lantern in hand, and as its rays fell upon the stranger he said, "Hallo, Gordon; you here? I thought you were in the sleeper. On guard I see as usual. Who is the lamb this time?"

"I don't know; do you?" the man called Gordon replied.

"No," the conductor said, turning his light full upon Maude; then, "Why, it's a little girl the Boston conductor put in my care; but she's safer with you. Comes from the mountains somewhere, I believe. Guess she is going to seek her fortune. She ought to find it, with that face. Isn't she pretty?" and he glanced admiringly at the sweet young face now turned to one side, with one hand under the flushed cheek and the short rings of damp hair curling around the forehead.

"Yes, very," Gordon replied, moving uneasily and finally holding a newspaper, between Maude and the conductor's lantern, for it did not seem right to him that any eyes except those of a near friend should take this advantage of a sleeping girl.

The conductor passed on, and then Gordon fell asleep until they reached a way station, where the sudden stopping of the train roused him to consciousness, and a moment after he was confronted by a young man, who, at sight of him, stopped short and exclaimed, "Max Gordon! as I live! I've hunted creation over for you, and given you up. Where have you been and why weren't you at Long Branch, as you said you'd be, when you wrote me to join you there?"

"Got tired of it, you were so long coming, so I went to the Adirondacks with Archie."

"Did you bring me any letters?" Max continued and his friend replied, "Yes, a cartload. Six, anyway," and he began to take them from his side-pocket. "One, two, three, four, five; there's another, somewhere. Oh, here 'tis," he said taking out the sixth, which looked rather soiled and worn. "I suppose it's for you," he continued, "although it's directed to Mr. Max Marshall, Esq., and it is in a school-girl's hand-writing. It came long ago, and we chaps puzzled over it a good while; then as no one appeared to claim it, and it was mailed at Merrivale, where your sister spends her summers, I ventured to bring it with the rest. If you were not such a saint I'd say you had been imposing a false name upon some innocent country girl, and, by George, I believe she's here now with your ulster over her! Running off with her, eh? What will Miss Raynor say?" he went on, as his eyes fell upon Maude, who just then stirred in her sleep and murmured softly, "Our Father who art in Heaven."

She was at home in her little white-curtained bedroom, kneeling with her mother and saying her nightly prayer, and, involuntarily, both the young men bowed their heads as if receiving a benediction.

"I think, Dick, that your vile insinuation is answered," Max said, and Dick rejoined, "Yes, I beg your pardon. Under your protection I s'pose. Well, she safe; but I must be finding that berth of mine. Will see you in the morning. Good-night."

He left the car, while Max Gordon tried to read his letters, as best he could by the dim light near him. One was from his sister, one from Archie, three on business, while the last puzzled him a little, and he held it awhile as if uncertain as to his right to open it.

"It must be for me," he said at last, and breaking the seal he read Maud's letter to him, unconscious that Maud was sleeping there beside him.

Indeed, he had never heard of Maude Graham before, and had scarcely given a thought to the former owners of Spring Farm. His sister had a mortgage upon it; the man was dead; the place must be sold, and Mrs. More asked him to buy it; that was all he knew when he bid it off.

"Poor little girl," he said to himself, "if I had known about you I don't believe I'd have bought the place. There was no necessity to foreclose, I'm sure; but it was just like Angie; and what must this Maude think of me not to have answered her letter. I am so sorry;" and his sorrow manifested itself in an increased attention to the girl over whom he adjusted his ulster more carefully, for the air in the car was growing very damp and chilly.

It was broad daylight when Maude awoke, starting up with a smile upon her face and reminding Max of some lovely child when first aroused from sleep.

"Why, I have slept all night," she exclaimed, as she tossed back her wavy hair, "and you have given me your shawl and ulster, too," she added, with a blush which made her face, as Max thought, the prettiest he had ever seen.

Who was she, he wondered, and once he thought to ask her the question directly then, he tried by a little finessing to find out who she was and where she came from, but Maude's mother had so strongly impressed it upon her not to be at all communicative to strangers that she was wholly non-committal even while suspecting his design, and when at last Canandaigua was reached he knew no more of her history than when he first saw her white and trembling on the boat. She was going to take the Genesee stage, she said, and expected her uncle to meet her at Oak's Corners, in Richland.

"Why that is funny," he said, "if it were not that a carriage is to meet me, I should still be your fellow-traveller, for my route lies that way."

And then he did ask her uncle's name. She surely might tell him so much Maude thought, and replied, "Captain James Allen, my mother's brother."

Her name was not Allen then, and reflecting that now he knew who her uncle was he could probably trace her, Max saw her into the stage, and taking her ungloved hand in his held it perhaps a trifle longer than he would have done if it had not been so very soft and white and pretty, and rested so confidently in his while she thanked him for his kindness. Then the stage drove away, while he stood watching it, and wondering why the morning was not quite so bright as it had been an hour ago, and why he had not asked her point-blank who she was, or had been so stupid as not to give her his card.

"Max Gordon, you certainly are getting into your dotage," he said to himself. "A man at your age to be so interested in a little unknown girl! What would Grace say? Poor Grace, I wonder if I shall find her improved, and why she has buried herself in this part of the country."

As he entered the hotel a thought of Maude Graham's letter came to his mind, and calling for pen and paper he dashed off the following:

CANANDAIGUA, September———, 18——.

MISS MAUDE GRAHAM,—Your letter did not reach me until last night, when it was brought me by a friend. I have not been in Boston since the first of last July, and the reason it was not forwarded to me is that you addressed it wrong, and they were in doubt as to its owner. My name is Gordon not Marshall, as you supposed, and I am very sorry for your sake and your mother's that I ever bought Spring Farm. Had I known what I do now I should not have done so. But it is too late, and I can only promise to keep it as you wish until you can buy it back. You are a brave little girl and I will sell it to you cheap. I should very much like to know you and when I am again in Merrivale I shall call upon you and your mother, if she will let me.—With kind regards to her I am, yours truly,

"MAX GORDON."

The letter finished he folded and directed it to Miss Maude Graham, Merrivale, Mass., while she for whom it was intended was huddled up in one corner of the crowded stage and going on as fast as four fleet horses could take her towards Oak Corners and the friends awaiting her there. Thus strangely do two lives sometimes meet and cross each other, and then drift widely apart, but not forever in this instance, let us hope.

CHAPTER V.

MISS RAYNOR.

About a mile from Laurel Hill, a little village in Richland, was an eminence, or plateau, from the top of which one could see for miles the rich, well cultivated farms in which the town abounded, the wooded hills and the deep gorges all slanting down to a common centre, the pretty little lake, lying as in the bottom of a basin, with its clear waters sparkling in the sunshine. And here, just on the top of the plateau, where the view was the finest, an eccentric old bachelor, Paul Raynor, had, a few years before our story opens, built himself a home after his own peculiar ideas of architecture, but which, when finished and furnished, was a most delightful place, especially in the summer when the flowers and shrubs, of which there was a great profusion, were in blossom, and the wide lawn in front of the house was like a piece of velvet. Here for two years Paul Raynor had lived quite en prince, and then, sickening with what he knew to be a fatal disease, he had sent for his invalid sister Grace, who came and stayed with him to the last, finding after he was dead that all his property had been left to her, with a request that she would make the Cedars, as the place was called, her home for a portion of the time at least. And so, though city bred and city born, Grace had stayed on for nearly a year, leading a lonely life, for she knew but few of her neighbors, while her crippled condition prevented her from mingling at all in the society she was so well fitted to adorn. As the reader will have guessed Grace Raynor was the girl, or rather woman, for she was over 30 now, to whom Max Gordon had devoted the years of his early manhood, in the vain hope that sometime she would be cured and become his wife. A few days before the one appointed for her bridal she had been thrown from her horse and had injuried her spine so badly that for months she suffered such agony that her beautiful hair turned white; then the pain ceased suddenly, but left her no power to move her lower limbs, and she had never walked since and never would. But through all the long years Max had clung to her with a devotion born first of his intense love for her and later of his sense of honor which would make him loyal to her even to the grave. Knowing how domestic he was in his tastes and how happy he would be with wife and children Grace had insisted that he should leave her and seek some other love. But his answer was always the same. "No, Grace, I am bound to you just as strongly as if the clergyman had made us one, and will marry you any day you will say the word. Your lameness is nothing so long as your soul is left untouched, and your face, too," he would some times add, kissing fondly the lovely face which, with each year, seemed to grow lovelier, and from which the snowy hair did not in the least detract.

But Grace knew better than to inflict herself upon him, and held fast to her resolve, even while her whole being went out to him with an intense longing for his constant love and companionship. Especially was this the case at the Cedars, where she found herself very lonely, notwithstanding the beauty of the place and its situation.

"If he asks me again, shall I refuse?" she said to herself on the September morning when Maude Graham was alighting from the dusty stage at Oak Corners, two miles away, and the carriage she had sent for Max was only an hour behind.

How pretty she was in the dainty white dress, with a shawl of scarlet wool wrapped around her, as she sat in her wheel chair on the broad piazza, which commanded a view of the distant lake and the green hills beyond. Not fresh and bright and glowing as Maude, who was like an opening rose with the early dew upon it, but more like a pale water-lily just beginning to droop, though very sweet and lovely still. There was a faint tinge of color in her cheek as she leaned her head against the cushion of her chair and wondered if she should find Max the same ardent lover as ever, ready to take her to his arms at any cost, or had he, during the past year, seen some other face fairer and younger than her own.

"I shall know in a moment if he is changed ever so little," she thought, and although she did not mean to be selfish and would at any moment have given him up and made no sign there was a throb of pain in her heart as she tried to think what life would be without Max to love her. "I should die," she whispered, "and, please God, I shall die before many years and leave my boy free."

He was her boy still, just as young and handsome as he had been 13 years ago, when he lifted her so tenderly from the ground and she felt his tears upon her forehead as she writhed in her fearful pain And now when at last he came and put her arms around her and took her face between his hands and looked fondly into it as he questioned her of her health she felt that he was unchanged, and thanked her Father for it. He was delighted with everything, and sat by her until after lunch, which was served on the piazza, and asked her of her life there and the people in the neighborhood and finally if she knew of a Capt. Alling.

"Capt. Alling," she replied; "Why, yes. He lives on a farm about two miles from here and we buy our honey from him. A very respectable man, I think, although I have no acquaintance with the family. Why do you ask?"

"Oh, nothing; only there was a girl on the train with me who told me she was his niece," Max answered indifferently, with a vigorous puff at his cigar, which Grace always insisted he should smoke in her presence. "She was very pretty and very young. I should like to see her again," he added, more to himself than to Grace, who, without knowing why, felt suddenly as if a cloud had crept across her sky.

Jealousy had no part in Grace's nature, nor was she jealous of this young, pretty girl whom Max would like to see again, and to prove that she was not she asked many questions about her and said she would try and find out who she was, and she presumed she had come to attend the wedding of Capt. Alling's daughter, who was soon to be married. This seemed very probable and no more was said of Maude until the afternoon of the day following, which was Sunday. Then, after Max returned from church, and they were seated at dinner he said abruptly, "I saw her again."

"Saw whom?" Grace asked, and he replied, "My girl of the train. She was at church with her uncle's family. A rather ordinary lot I thought them, but she looked as sweet as a June pink. You know they are my favorite flowers."

"Yes," Grace answered slowly, while again a breath of cold air seemed to blow over her and make her draw her shawl more closely around her.

But Max did not suspect it, and pared a peach for her and helped her to grapes, and after dinner wheeled her for an hour on the broad plateau, stooping over her once and caressing her white hair, which he told her was very becoming, and saying no more of the girl seen in church that morning. The Allings had been late and the rector was reading the first lesson when they came in, father and mother and two healthy buxom girls, followed by Maude, who, in her black dress, looked taller and slimmer than he had thought in the car, and prettier, too, with the brilliant color on her cheeks and the sparkle in the eyes which met his with such glad surprise in them that he felt something stir in his heart different from anything he had felt since he and Grace were young. The Allings occupied a pew in front of him and on the side, so that he could look at and study Maude's face, which he did far more than he listend to the sermon. And she knew he was looking at her, too, and always blushed when she met his earnest gaze. As they were leaving the church he managed to get near her, and said, "I hope you are quite well after your long journey. Miss——."

"Graham," she answered involuntarily, but so low that he only caught the first syllable and thought that she said Grey.

She was Miss Grey, then, and with this bit of information he was obliged to be content. Twice during the week he rode past the Alling house, hoping to see the eyes which had flashed so brightly upon him on the porch of the church, and never dreaming of the hot tears of homesickness they were weeping in the log school-house of the Bush district, where poor Maude was so desolate and lonely. If he had, he might, perhaps have gone there and tried to comfort her, so greatly was he interested in her, and so much was she in his mind.

He stayed at the Cedars several days and then, finding it a little tiresome, said good-bye to Grace and went his way again, leaving her with a vague consciousness that something had come between them; a shadow no larger than a man's hand, it is true, but a shadow, and as she watched him going down the walk she whispered sadly, "Max is slipping from me."

CHAPTER VI.

THE SCHOOL MISTRESS.

The setting sun of a raw January afternoon was shining into the dingy school-room where Maude sat by the iron rusted box-stove, with her feet on the hearth, reading a note which had been brought to her just before the close of school by a man who had been to the Post-Office in the village at the foot of the lake. It was nearly four months since she first crossed the threshold of the log shool-house, taking in at a glance the whole dreariness of her surroundings, and feeling for the moment that she could not endure it. But she was somewhat accustomed to it now, and not half so much afraid of the tall girls and boys, her scholars, as she had been at first, while the latter were wholly devoted to her and not a little proud of there "young school ma'am," as they called her. Everybody was kind to her, and she had not found "boarding round" so very dreadful after all for the fatted calf was always killed for her, and the best dishes brought out, while it was seldom that she was called upon to share her sleeping room with more than one member of the family. And still there was ever present with her a longing for her mother and for Johnnie and a life more congenial to her tastes. Dreaming was out of the question now, and the book which was to make her famous and buy back the old home seemed very far in the future. Just how large a portion of her thoughts was given to Max Gordon it was difficult to say. She had felt a thrill of joy when she saw him in church, and a little proud, too, it may be, of his notice of her. Very minutely her cousins had questioned her with regard to her acquaintance with him, deploring her stupidity in not having ascertained who he was. A relative most likely of Miss Raynor, in whose pew he sat, they concluded, and they told their cousin of the lady at the Cedars, Grace Raynor, who could not walk a step, but was wheeled in a chair, sometimes by a maid and sometimes by a man. The lady par excellence of the neighborhood she seemed to be, and Maude found herself greatly interested in her and in everything pertaining to her. Twice she had been through the grounds, which were open to the public, and had seen Grace both times in the distance, once sitting in her chair upon the piazza, and once being wheeled in the woods by her man servant, Tom. But beyond this she had not advanced, nothing could be farther from her thoughts than the idea that she would ever be anything to the lady of the Cedars. Max Gordon's letter had been forwarded to her from Merrivale, but had created no suspicion in her mind that he and her friend of the train were one. She had thought it a little strange that he should have been in Canandaigua the very day that she arrived there, and wished she might have seen him, but the truth never dawned upon her until sometime in December, when her mother wrote to her that he had called to see them, expressing much regret at Maude's absence, and when told where she was and when she went, exclaiming with energy, as he sprang to his feet, "Why, madam, your daughter was with me in the train,—a little blue eyed, brown haired girl in black, who said she was Capt. Alling's niece."

"He seemed greatly excited," Mrs. Graham wrote, "and regretted that he did not know who you were. He got an idea somehow that your name was Grey, and said he received your letter with you asleep beside him. He is a splendid looking man, with the pleasantest eyes and the kindest voice I ever heard or saw."

"Ye-es," Maude said slowly, as she recalled the voice which had spoken so kindly to her and the eyes which had looked so pleasantly into her own. "And that was Max Gordon! He was going to the Cedars, and Miss Raynor is the girl for whom he has lived single all these years. Oh-h!"

She was conscious of a vague regret that her stranger friend, was the betrothed husband of Grace Raynor, who, at that very time, was thinking of her and fighting down a feeling as near to jealousy as it was possible for her to harbor. In the same mail with Maude's letter from her mother there had come to the Cedars one from Max, who said that he had discovered who was his compagnon du voyage.

"She is teaching somewhere in your town," he wrote, "and I judge is not very happy there. Can't you do something for her, Grace? It has occurred to me that to have a girl like her about you would do you a great deal of good. We are both getting on in years, and need something young to keep us from growing old, and you might make her your companion. She is very pretty, with a soft cultivated voice, and must be a good reader. Think of it, and if you decide to do it, inquire for her at Capt. Alling's. Her name is Maude Graham.

Yours lovingly,
"Max."

This was Max's letter, which Grace read as she sat in her cozy sitting-room with every luxury around her which money could buy, from the hot-house roses on the stand beside her to the costly rug on which her chair was standing in the ruddy glow of the cheerful grate fire. And as she read it she felt again the cold breath which had swept over her when Max was telling her of the young girl who had interested him so much. And in a way Grace, too, had interested herself in Maude and through her maid had ascertained who she was and that she was teaching in the southern part of the town. And there her interest had ceased. But it revived again on the receipt of Max's letter and she said, "I must see this girl first and know what she is like. A woman can judge a woman better than a man, but I wish Max had not said what he did about our growing old. Am I greatly changed I wonder?"

She could manage her chair herself in the house and wheeling it before a long mirror, she leaned eagerly forward and examined the face reflected there. A pale, sweet face, framed in masses of snow white hair, which rather added to its youthful appearance than detracted from it, although she did not think so. She had been so proud of her golden hair, and the bitterest tears she had ever shed had been for the change in it.

"It's my hair," she whispered sadly,—"hair which belongs to a woman of sixty, rather than thirty-three, and there is a tired look about my eyes and mouth. Yes, I am growing old, oh, Max—," and the slender fingers were pressed over the beautiful blue eyes, where the tears came so fast;—"Yes, I'll see the girl," she said, "and if I like her face, I'll take her to please him."

She knew there was to be an illumination on Christmas Eve in the church on Laurel Hill and that Maude Graham was to sing a Christmas anthem alone.

"I'll go, and hear, and see," she decided, and when the evening came Grace was there in the Raynor pew listening while Maude Graham sang, her bright face glowing with excitement and her full rich voice rising higher and higher, clearer and clearer, until it had filled the church as it had never been filled before, and thrilled every nerve of the woman watching her so intently.

"Yes, she is pretty and good, too; I cannot be deceived in that face," she said to herself, and when, after the services were over and Maude came up the aisle past the pew where she was sitting, she put out her hand and said, "Come here, my dear, and let me thank you for the pleasure you have given me. You have a wonderful voice and sometime you must come and sing to me. I am Miss Raynor, and you are Maude Graham."

This was there introduction to each other and that night Maude dreamed of the lovely face which had smiled upon her, and the voice, the saddest and sweetest she had ever heard, which had spoken so kindly to her.

Two weeks afterwards Grace's note was brought to her and she read it with her feet upon the stove hearth and the low January sun shining in upon her.

Miss Raynor wanted her for a companion and friend, to read and sing to and soothe her in the hours of langour and depression, which were many.

"I am lonely," she wrote, "and as you know, wholly incapacitated from mingling with the world, and I want someone with me different from my maid. Will you come to me, Miss Graham? I will try to make you happy; if money is any object I will give you twice as much as you are now receiving, whatever that may be. Think of it and let me know your decision soon.

"Yours very truly,
"GRACE RAYNOR."

(To be Continued).

—An observer of human nature has discovered that when a Chinaman is pleased he takes off his shoes and opens his mouth.

FARM AND GARDEN.

How to Manage and Cultivate a Garden Plot.

USEFUL HINTS FOR FARMERS.

Small Fruits in Gardens.

Small fruits can be conveniently grown in a garden with but little loss of room. Currants, raspberries and gooseberries may be planted near the fence, out of the way of the vegetables, and will thrive better in such locations than anywhere else. Strawberries may be grown in close rows, and will give a fair yield on a small space. A few grape vines can be allowed to trail along the fence, or on arbors, and even a few peach trees may be grown, but it is better to have no trees in a garden, as the trees will largely appropriate the plant food and shade the plants from the warmth of the sun.

Cattle Stile.

Some years ago I was desirous of allowing my cattle the run of my hog pasture, but did not want the hogs in the cattle pasture. How to do this was a query. I finally arranged a contrivance and it worked admirably. Make an opening in your division fence so that the posts stand three feet apart. Twenty-two inches from the ground place a roller, which should be four or five inches in diameter, straight, and of any hard wood. The journals may be left on the roller, or the ends may be cut smooth and round, and smooth bolts inserted in the ends, with staples in the posts to receive them. If the former plan is used, 1¼ inch auger holes in the posts will answer. Care should be taken that the roller may work free and easy, for it answers a double purpose. Cows passing in and out will not injure the udder, but when Mr. Hog goes to jump into the other field he will land on his back on his own premises. Last summer I had a hog that would jump the roller—twenty two inches high. Not wishing to make it higher, I placed a board, ten inches high, eighteen inches from the roller, on the hog pasture side. This prevented the hog from facing the roller, and he could not jump; at the same time it did not interfere with the cattle in the least. As I have a nice grove in my hog pasture and no shade in my cattle pasture, I would hardly know how to do without this convenience.

Handle Milk Carefully.

Milk should be disturbed as little as possible before it is set, and should be strained directly into the creaming vessel after milking. It is bad policy to strain milk into a large pan and dip it thence into other vessels for creaming. The agitation and exposure to the air occasioned promotes the clothing of the fibrics and prevents a thorough separation of the cream. The creaming vessel should have a smooth surface and should be a good conductor of heat. Tin is the best material. Wood, earthen and glassware are all poor conductors of heat. A large can that cools off slowly will cream as well or better than a small can rapidly cooled; as in such the sides may be kept cool enough to prevent changes in the fibrin while the mass of milk is still moderately warm and affords the best physical conditions for the separation of the cream. The creaming vessel should have a shape giving as little surface of milk in proportion to the amount contained as it is possible to have. This condition is best fulfilled by a spherical vessel, but this form is inconvenient. The next best form is cylindrical. The ratio of surface volume diminishes as the size of the spherical cylinder increases. A shallow setting furnishes large surface exposure to the air and the bottom and sides of the vessel. The conditions are very favorable to the coagulation of fibrin, and it would be expected to get a slow and imperfect creaming. In reality this is the case, as milk set in this manner is not usually skimmed until after 36 hours. By this time some acid is developed which has a tendency to neutralize the effect of the fibrin clots, so that a fair creaming is obtained. This, however, is not as good as may be obtained in ten hours by setting under the most favorable conditions.

July Hints for Farmers.

It will pay to shake off a large proportion of the fruit from trees that are overloaded.

But few plants will thrive on a wet soil. A good drain is sometimes better than manure.

Bulls are very treacherous. It is usually the gentle bull that injures his keeps. The older they become the more dangerous they are.

Waggons and carts that are used daily should have the axles well greased at least three times a week. It lessens the work of the horses.

Horses should have at least two hours rest at noon. On very warm days horses suffer severely. They should be watered often, and at night should be swabbed and wiped dry.

Filthy quarters cause lice on all classes of stock, and at this season the vermin multiply very rapidly. An animal that is infested with vermin cannot be kept in good condition, even with the best of feeding.

A zigzag rail fence is supposed to be one of the cheapest that can be built, but unless the corners are kept free of weeds it is the most expensive fence that can be used, as it increases the labor of weed killing.

Dogs that become addicted to sheep-killing do so from pure viciousness. In a majority of cases the dogs do not eat any portion of the carcass, but will kill a dozen or more sheep for the delight of so doing.

Denmark expends $55,000 yearly for the maintenance of dairy schools. The result is an immense improvement in the quality of the dairy product, and an increase within twenty years in Denmark's butter export from $2,100,000 to $13,000,000 annually.

Before farrowing sows are the better for an abundance of exercise, and should have all they will take; and as soon after this event as they want to let them return to their accustomed exercise. But do not make a sow take exercise by compelling her to forage for a living.

The best time to use the cultivator is on warm, dry days. All weeds and grass will then be quickly killed by the sun, and will have no opportunity to take root and grow. If the ground is damp when it is cultivated the weeds and grass will not be entirely destroyed, and the work may have to be done over again.

Tomatoes may be trimmed of the lower branches and made to grow somewhat in the shape of a tree. The main stalks of the plants become stocky and are better able to bear the weight of the fruit. By supporting the vines on posts or arms more air and sunlight will enter, thus ripening the fruit more perfectly.

A gain in one direction may sometimes entail a loss in some other quarter. The bountiful rains of this season have given the crops an excellent opportunity, especially corn, but rains also benefit weeds and increase the labor of cultivation. The work is necessary and should not be neglected, as it may entail greater labor next season.

When it is desired to cut two or more crops of grass from a field the grass should be cut before the seed heads form, as the grass has performed its mission when it has seeded; hence if the first cutting is deferred until the seed is ripe there will be no second crop of importance. Such crops as Hungarian grass and alfalfa may be cut every five weeks.

The windmill is an implement that costs very little compared with the advantages derived. Water pumped into a tank can be conducted to the barnyard or to the pasture through pipes, thus saving the expense of pumps and the labor of pumping. Where there is no running water troughs can be arranged for stock and may be kept full without difficulty.

The season has been damp for potatoes, but if seeded now a late crop may be put in, as July is usually a dry month, the fall rains beginning in August. Use plenty of fertilizer and make the rows deep and broad. The seed should be of the best, and some care should be exercised in cutting the seed, so as to have strong sprouts, and good cultivation should be given.

The way to prevent soft-shell eggs is to feed food rich in lime. The grains are deficient in that mineral. If you feed too much grain you give too much starch, and soon the hens will be over fat. They cannot lay unless provided with material for eggs. Fat is useless on a laying hen. Her business is to convert the proper materials meat, milk and clover into eggs.

Those who patronize creameries cannot derive full profit therefrom unless swine breeding is made a pursuit. The whey and buttermilk is sold to the patrons at a very nominal price, and can be put to excellent use if made a part of the rations of hogs. Very often the only profit to be made is from the hogs, the milk about paying the expenses of the food of cows and swine.

In order to avoid paying high prices for binder twine, many western farmers decided before harvest to adopt the plan of handling the grain unbound. Some intended to use their binders without twine and leave the sheaves on the ground, just as they were dropped from the machine, for a day or two, or until the grain was sufficiently cured, and then thresh or stack it unbound.

MR. BLUE'S REPORT

On the Live Stock and Dairy Trade of the Province.

The following is an extract from the report of the Ontario Bureau of Statistics The condition of live stock throughout the Province is most gratifying. The pastures have been and still are in excellent condition, in consequence of the abundant supply of rain, although there are a few instances where they have suffered through flooding, and by the cattle having been turned out too early upon them. The milk yield has been much larger than usual, consequently butter is plentiful and good, while the cheese factories are working well in most localities. There seems, however, to be an impression among many that the milk is of inferior quality this year, which is attributed to various causes, but primarily to the cool, wet weather. To this cause may also be attributed the fact that fat cattle are not making flesh as rapidly as might be desired, and are stated to be somewhat poor and thin, more particularly in the northwestern counties. The fact that so much stock was disposed of during last winter is being very naturally regretted by many, especially in the eastern part of the Province, where it is believed the dairy supplies will be considerably affected. Sheep are reported in some localities as poor in condition, owing to damp pastures and cool weather, many having been sheared too early; but horses are in fine condition, and, like all other farm animals, they are exceptionally free from disease. The condition of stock in the spring of the year, although much better than anticipated, was not all that could be desired; it is gratifying therefore to find how quickly they have reached their present favorable condition, and that the freedom from infectious disease reported in our May bulletin still continues. Over the larger portion of the Province the dairy prospects are more promising than they have been for years, and the tenor of the reports in this regard is of an exceedingly cheerful character. Cheese and butter are of good quality and command very fair prices.

How to Manage a Plot.

The work in the garden is mostly done in the spring, and the seed is carefully planted, the ground kept clean, the early crops taken off and the ground abandoned to weeds. One of the most unsightly objects is a plot of ground overgrown with weeds; and as the garden plot is usually made rich the weeds grow very rank and soon mature. As they are allowed to die down, and the ground cleared off the next spring, the result is that the ground is so covered with seeds that it is almost impossible to eradicate the weeds the succeeding year. Leaving the garden in such condition also affords excellent opportunities to insects of all kinds, and the drawbacks are, therefore, multiplied. The proper way to manage a garden is to keep some crops growing in it from spring until the frosts appear late in the fall. Several objects will be gained by so doing, among them the destruction of all weeds, a finer condition of the soil, and a supply of fruits and vegetables for the table, as many vegetables grow quickly and give a supply in a short time after the seed is planted.

—This is the season when people are drowned as a result of trying to change their seats in row-boats.

AN ARMLESS GROOM.

A Dime-Museum Freak Weds a Rather Pretty Cincinnati Girl.

A very unique marriage was celebrated in 'Squire Hauser's office yesterday afternoon, the 'Squire officiating. The bride was Miss Jessie Troeger, who lives at the corner of Main street and McMicken avenue. She obtained some celebrity two years ago by leading a strike of the waitresses in Rockwell's restaurant. She is 20 years old. The groom was Charles K. Adams, better known in the dime museum world as the armless wonder. He was born without these useful members of the body, and, in lieu of a better and more profitable means of livelihood, hired himself out to dime museums. Adams is now about 30 years of age, and, barring the lack of arms, is a fine specimen of physical beauty. The absence of arms is little felt by the Wonder, however, for he has become very expert with his toes and mouth. He can thread a needle or write a neat letter with the former, while with the latter he paints dainty little pictures, decorates chinaware, etc., holding the brush between his teeth.

When the couple entered the 'Squire's office yesterday and said they wanted to be united in wedlock, that official was perplexed for a while.

"How can you join hands?" he asked, blandly pointing to Adams.

"Oh, that is easy enough," said the pretty bride, who stood fully three heads shorter than the groom. And she reached up and grasped the stump of his undeveloped left arm with her right hand.

"See, she said, as she stood smilingly on her tiptoes.

"But the ring. How can he put the marriage ring on your finger?"

"In this way," said Adams, and the astonished officials in the 'Squire's court were thunderstruck to see the circlet of gold between the armless man's teeth. Bending his head he deftly slipped it over the girl's finger.

Satisfied that the couple understood their business, the 'Squire went ahead and performed the ceremony.

After being made man and wife, Adams sat down and, slipping the shoe off his right foot, disclosing a stocking with the front of the foot cut off, he reached into his vest pocket with his toes and brought out a roll of bills. Selecting a $5 note he tendered it as a fee, and putting on his shoe, went away, his little wife sticking close to him.—Cincinnati Enquirer.

THE QUAINT AND DROLL

Answers Appropriate and Otherwise.

Occasionally some really amusing answers are given at examinations, and these lose none of their point by the absolute innocence of the pupil who perpetrates the witticism. "Who was Esau?" was asked an English school pupil. "Esau," said he, with great promptness and confidence, "was a man who became famous as a writer of fables, and who sold his copyright to a publisher for a bottle of potash." "Write an account of Cardinal Wolsey" brought the answer: "He was a famous general who fought in the Crimean war, and who, after being decapitated several times, remarked to Cromwell: 'Ah! if I had only served you as you have served me, I would not have been deserted in my old age.'" "What is the Age of Reason?" evoked the reply: "The time elapsing since that person's birth." A not too devoted student was asked: "What are the letters of Junius?" and his mentor almost fainted when he read the reply: "Letters written in the month of June." "What do we understand by the expression 'The year of Jubilee'?" was asked of a girls' class in an English Sunday School. "Leap year," was the prompt response, given with manner born of assurance of absolute correctness. "Why do we stamp on our coins 'In God we trust'?" was asked of a Weldon, N.C., class. Of course this was a puzzler, and after wrestling with it for a few minutes a sharp little girl put up her hand, saying, "Please, sir, that was a long time ago." It has always struck me that there was a good deal of point in the naive answer. Like the physiology pupil who described the bone of the upper arm as the "humorous," "because it is the funny bone," she got very near the truth.

The Painlessness of Death.

The act of dying, it is now ascertained, is absolutely free from suffering: is really unconscious, insensibility always preceding it. Any anguish that may attend mortal illness ceases before the close, as thousands who have recovered, after hope had been surrendered, have borne witness. Sudden and violent death, shocking to the senses, may not be, probably it is not, painful to the victim. Drowning, hanging, freezing, shooting, falling from a height, poisoning of many kinds, beget stupor or numbness of the nerves, which is incompatible with sensation. Persons who have met with such accidents, and survived them, testify to this. Records to the effect are numberless.—Forum.

The Queen Regent of Spain is an expert embroiderer and has done some remarkably beautiful work with her needle. Many of the dresses of the infant King are the product of her hands.

And now the Syracuse Standard gravely asks: "Is marriage a crime?"

A LOVER'S COMBINATION.

Sweet, lay your head upon my breast,
As Minnie, long ago,
Tell me, like Maud, you love me best
Of all the men you know,
Turn up, as Lilly used to do,
Those eyes, and look in mine,
Swear, as I have often sworn to Loo,
That I alone am thine.
A radiance flits about thy hair
That once framed Mollie's face,
A soft, seductive, baby air
Once loved so much in Grace.
A fragrance as the violet,
Reminding me of Fan,
Comes from thy balmy lips, my pet,
And makes me think of Nan.
But do not call me fickle, sweet,
For my lost Julia's sake!
This very morn, at Flora's feet,
I swore you took the cake.
Then kiss me dear—you kiss like Nell—
Your true love darling call,
To-morrow I shall Cora tell
I love you best of all!

Wife, emphatically—"Did you say marriage was a failure?" Husband, humbly—"No, my dear, I did not. A married man doesn't have to say what he thinks, does he?"

The woman who hesitates is lost or deserves to be but, unluckily, the world has never been able to lose her permanently yet.—Somerville Journal.

THE GHOST OF CAMERON PASS.

It Turned Out to be a Wild Girl of 25, Dressed in Skins.

In the summer of 1882 W. C. Hart, the geologist, and two other enthusiastic collectors of specimens were encamped near the lava beds between the head waters of the Cache de la Poudre River and North Park. It was a rough, broken region, and the desolation was heightened by the proximity of the crater of an extinct volcano, while bare rocks and dead timber were everywhere. The hope of securing rare formations for their cabinets attracted the gentlemen to the uncanny spot, for every one averred that Cameron Pass was haunted by the spirit of an emigrant's daughter. Joe Shepler, a well-known mountaineer, who was piloting the party through the hills, had often seen the ghost, and promised his companions that they should view the strange apparition before returning to their homes. He said the spirit was a thief, and frequently stole food and furniture from the camps of hunters who ventured within her uninviting domain. At dinner on August 2nd, 1882, Shepler calmly announced that the spirit of Cameron Pass was approaching, and pointed to a strange being which was swiftly moving toward the camp. The marauder came within 500 yards of the men, and seizing a haunch of venison which had been placed on a stone, ran off with it. Hart picked up his rifle, and, calling on his comrades to follow started in pursuit of the thief. She—they were sure it was a woman—led them all a lively race directly toward the lava beds. Being close pressed the hunted creature dropped the meat and sped onward to the opening of a cave. The pursuers entered the cavern on the heels of the strange robber and found the warm body of a dead woman. The fright and exertion had killed her. The corpse was that of a woman about 25 years old. Her only clothing was a rude gown, fashioned of skins. Her hair was very long and she was sunburned and barefooted. The remains were buried decently. An exploration of the cave disclosed the fact that it had for some time been used as a habitation by the alleged spirit. The ground was covered with bones, and, although there were cooking utensils about, it was evident that they had never been used. The unfortunate girl had subsisted on stolen meats, roots and leaves. She had dried meat for winter use. For several years she was thought to be a spirit.—Chicago Herald.

Courtship's Progress.

When a young girl detects the signs of a mutual attachment between herself and a man whose tastes and position in life are suited to hers, she can do no better than confide her thoughts on the subject to her mother, or if she be motherless, to some woman who is much older than herself, and upon whose sympathy and wisdom she can rely. If the older person approve, there are many ways of arranging opportunities for the pair to become better acquainted, and to discover whether their first impressions of each other were correct. A wise mother can easily arrange the social setting of her children. If she gathers about her only such young people as she deems fitting companions for them, the most natural consequence is that ties are formed which will be satisfactory to parents as well as children.

The young man finds easy and natural ways of expressing his regard for a young girl, and by a kind of intuition she can usually satisfy herself from the first of the nature of his feelings toward her. He will show considerateness, deference, and a preference for her society at all times, and yet he will carefully avoid anything that might convey to others the impression that he believes her to hold the same attitude of preference toward him. He will always accept her society as a courtesy which she has graciously conferred, and apart from which he has no claim. Indeed, in all manly and chivalric ways he will testify his admiration for her, until he feels a sufficient assurance of her interest in him to warrant him in putting the vital question to her.

If she be an ingenious and high-minded girl she will admit or deny with kindness and candor that she values as he wishes his devotion to her. If her consent is obtained he will then seek the approval of her parents or guardians. If her family objects to the proposed alliance it is the girl's duty to reserve her final decision, out of respect for them. If time and opportunity for knowing each other better only deepen their regard, and parental disapproval continues, the girl has two alternatives—patient waiting and an unhappy assumption of the consequence of disobedience. Each girl must determine this matter for herself, remembering, however, that no one can have a more unselfish interest in her happiness than her parents.

A Difficulty About Witnesses.

"Mr. Smith," said the electric light manager to his foreman, "we want some men to testify to the absolute harmlessness of the electric light current as used by us. You might send Roberts——"

Foreman—He was killed while fixing a wire last night, sir.

"Well, Jackson will do then."

"He accidentally grounded a wrong wire last week, and is scarcely expected to live, sir."

"Such awkwardness! Send Williams."

"Sorry, sir, but he was paralyzed while fixing an electric lamp on Thursday."

"Really. It's most annoying. Employ some new men at once and send them to testify to the committee before they have time to get themselves killed."—New York Herald.

The Fly Crop.

The common fly lays more than 100 eggs and the time from egg-laying to maturity is only about two weeks. Most of us have studied geometrical progression. Here we see it illustrated. Suppose one fly commences "to multiply and replenish the earth" about June 1st. June 15th, if all alive, would give 150. Suppose 75 of these are females; July 1st would give us, supposing no cruel wasp or other untoward circumstances to interfere, 11,259 flies. Suppose 5,625 of these are females; we might have, July 15th, 843,720 flies. It might cause bad dreams if carried on further.—Pittsburg Dispatch.

—Lord Tennyson is to receive $1,000 for the poem he is now writing. His first accepted poem brought him the munificent sum of 10 shillings.

THE SCIENTIFIC WORLD.

Items of Utility and Curiosity for Everybody.

The second elevator in the Eiffel Tower has been accepted by the committee. The four hemp ropes temporarily used to sustain the load of eleven tons were cut simultaneously in the test, allowing the load to drop eight inches, and the safety wedges were found to stand the strain.

A discussion of the mythical "joint snake" is going on again in herpetological circles, the popular idea being that there exists a snake which, when broken to pieces joins itself together again. There is, of course, no such reptile. The delusion owes its origin to popular credulity, and so much of fact as is found in connection with the habits of the ophisaurus ventralis, a species of snake lizard with a mere rudimentary development of legs. It is very brittle and a slight blow breaks it into fragments. If only the tail is lost a new one is sprouted, but the self-mending powers are purely mythical.

Recent tests at Manchester, by burning in oxygen, shows anthracite coal to give the highest yield, emitting 8,340 Centigrade units of heat.

J. E. Thickston, Metuchen, N.J., predicts disaster from the escape of natural gas in the Alleghany region, beside which the Johnstown calamity will appear trifling. His theory is that the escaping gas is not, as in the case of oil deposits, compensated for by the influx of water, and he anticipates a collapse or an explosion.

The manufacture of starch from the cassava, which frequently, under cultivation not the best, yields forty tons per acre, is becoming an important industry in some parts of Florida.

The Egyptian Exploration Fund expenditures since 1883 have been about $8,000 per year and have yielded rich results.

"Rapid dentrifices" are to be eschewed, as the basis of all are acids, whose action on the enamel and bony structure of the teeth is most deleterious. Precipitated chalk, flavored with powdered orris root, a little powdered myrrh added, and rubbed with fine Castile soap, is as good a dentrifice as can be had. Regular and careful brushing, with the use of a good quill toothpick, is safe dental treatment—always presupposing a dentist has first put the teeth in good condition.

The best cement for glass is glue. When it fails it fails through the action of moisture. This may be obviated by treating the glue with bichromate of potash, adding in a dark room one tenth the weight of the dry glue to the solution, apply in the dark. When exposed to light the glue will harden and effectually resist the action of moisture.

The U. S. Government recipe for permanent whitewash is: Half bushel lime, slaked under cover, strain and add one peck salt dissolved in warm water, and three pounds rice flour boiled in water to a thin paste; half pound Spanish whiting and one pound clear glue dissolved in warm water. This should stand several days and then be applied hot.

The cleanly housewife will find an almost odorless liquid stove blacking, cheap and effective in the following: Mix two parts of copperas, one of bone black, one pulverized graphite with enough water to make a creamy paste.

Uranus was in perihelion in 1883 and will not be again until 1966. At perihelion it is distant from the sun 1,681,864,000 miles. Neptune's next perihelion will be in 2048 when it will be 2,755,207,000 miles distant from Old Sol.

Farmers will find the following table of (inside) dimensions convenient: A box 8.4x8 in. and 4 in. deep holds half a peck; one 7x6.4 in. and 12 in. deep holds a peck; one 12x11.2 in. and 8 in. deep holds half a bushel; one 16x12 in. and 11.2 in. deep contains a bushel.

Some Literary Bon Mots.

The following, said to have been copied verbatim et literatim from a sign at Barnet, Eng., is found in a file of the Caledonian Mercury for 1789. The inscription shows that business was not so subdivided 100 years ago as it is to-day: "John Nust, Operator in Ordinary and Extraordinary, Mender of Soles, Uniter of the Disunited, Restorer of Order and Harmony though of ever so long and wide a separation. N. B.—Gives advice gratis in the most desperate cases, and never pockets his fee till he has performed a cure."

Dean Alford tells of a certain set of instructions posted by a railway company for the guidance of engineers, which read as follows: "Hereafter, when trains moving in an opposite direction are approaching each other on separate lines, conductors and engineers will be required to bring their respective trains to a dead halt before the point of meeting, and be very careful not to proceed till each train has passed the other."

Newspaper literary blunders are plentiful, but none familiar with the circumstances under which matter for the daily press is prepared will be hypercritical. Taken all round it is creditable to its producers. One reflects on this when he thinks of the sad blunders of eminent authors, whose work has all the advantages of careful revision. A notable instance occurs to me, where Mr. John Morley tells us that "Carlyle teaches us that silence is golden in thirty-six volumes."

Kansas Philosophy.

Man is ambitious to kill a lion until he meets one.

About all some men are good for is to marry and make a woman miserable.

When man economizes he buys less clothes; when a woman economizes she buys less to eat.

It is not the good who die young, but only those who have not lived long enough to be bad.

The most unfair thing that happens to women is that engagements are so short and marriages so long.

—"Hurry to the door, Mary, and let Mr. Smith in. He has rung twice.' "That isn't Mr. Smith, it is the other young gentleman." "Well, wait a minute, then I must change the photographs on the mantel.'

—Mrs. Phunnyman—If that Eiffel tower should fall the damage would be irreparable. Mr. Phunnyman—Oh, I guess not; there are too many newspaper correspondents over there. They would soon write it up.

GEO. MITCHELL,

BANKER,

FLESHERTON.

DEALTS BOUGHT AND SOLD.

Special Attention paid to the collection [illegible] North [illegible]

The Local News.

What is Happening in Our Own Vicinity.

Raspberries are ripe.

Mr W Trimble has placed a neat picket fence in front of his lot.

The Flesherton R.T. of T intend holding a picnic to Eugenia on Thursday, August 1

The Campbell residence, north of the Boyne, will be sold by auction to-day at Marshaw's hotel.

We have received the official program of the summer carnival and electrical exhibition, which is now in progress at St. John, N.B

Hay is a splendid crop in this vicinity this season. Mr. Wm. Gilchrist says he cut timothy the other day 4 foot 3 inches long

If you want good beef, veal and lamb that is butchered and dressed in style, go to Petch & Mitchell, as they are the only practical butchers in town.

The Baptist Sunday School picnic was held in Eugenia on Tuesday the 16th inst. There was a good attendence, beautiful weather, and a very happy time was spent

Next Sunday Rev. John Stafford, B A., B.D., will preach in the Flesherton Baptist Chapel at 11 a.m., in Priceville at 2.30 p.m. and in the Orange Hall, Flesherton Station, at 6.30

A very neat verandah has been placed on the Methodist parsonage, which adds greatly to the appearance of the building. As was built by Mr. Howard, who, by the way, is so rushed with business that he can scarcely fulfil his contracts.

Geo. Mitchell, Esq., banker, returned with his bride on Wednesday evening last and found a large number of friends awaiting him at his residence, where a very pleasant time was spent during the evening. The band serenaded the happy couple in grand style and were invited in to tea, but declined.

A lacrosse match between the Brantas, of Paris, and Dufferins, of Orangeville, will take place in Orangeville on July 25th, the day of the C.P.R.'s employes annual picnic there. The high standing of these clubs will guarantee a match which will be one of the greatest attractions of the day

East Grey Agricultural society will hold their annual fair this season, on Monday and Tuesday, Sept., 23 and 24. A substantial addition has been made to the prize list, and it is fully expected that this coming exhibition will exceed anything in interest which has ever been held here. Prize lists will be published in a few days.

Rev. John Stafford, B. A., B. D., preached in the Baptist Chapel on Sunday morning the 21st inst. His sermon was profoundly thoughtful, and by forcible reasoning and apt illustration he deeply interested his attentive audience in the great theme he handled so well the forenoon. Mr. Stafford is the first of Artemus's sons who has taken a B A at the Provincial University, and the only one who has succeeded in winning the hard earned, distinctive B A., from one of the best equipped theological seminaries in the United States.

Anniversary services in connection with Flesherton Baptist Sunday School were held on Sunday, the 14th inst. Rev A. Grant, superintendent of missions in the Baptist Missionary Society, was present and preached morning and evening, and also in the afternoon in Priceville. The scholars rendered several pieces of sacred songs with good effect. Miss Alice Moore presided at the organ in a most satisfactory manner. The school is in a very promising condition and all who attend take much interest in the quiet study of the inspired Word. The one aim of all concerned is simply to teach the truth and so train the young that they may be true christians and consequently good citizens and successful workers for the nation's progress.

Ho! for Niagara Falls. An excursion to Toronto and the Falls under the auspices of the O.S. Y.M.C.A., will leave here on Monday the 29th July. Excursionists may leave by either train on that day. At Toronto they will be conveyed to Lewiston by one of the special steamers, Cibola or Chicora, and thence along the mangnificent river scenery to to the falls Tickets, $2.75, children under 12 $1.75, good for three days, to return by any train on Wednesday. Do not miss this grand chance of a cheap trip. For particulars apply at the R.R. Station here

Notice to the Public.

I am in a position to do all kinds of cotton weaving, such as tweeds, flannels, full cloth and blankets. Rag carpet done to order by J. B. Barkley, weaver, next house to the Presbyterian Church

Sudden Death

Mrs. Jas. Ferguson, living near the station, was taken with convulsions on Sunday morning and died on Monday. Deceased was a young woman, married last winter. Her husband has the sympathy of all in his sudden and overwhelming bereavement

Remember Dr. Sinclair, Specialist, visits Flesherton next Saturday, July 27 Consulation free Face Burned.

The Thornbury paper of last week says: Our genial watchmaker, Mr. W. Clayton, of Clarksburg, met with a very painful accident on Thursday last by the explosion of his spirit lamp, being burned severely on the face nose and forehead. The pain for a while was intense. Mr. Clayton was attended by Dr Hunt, and he is now all right at his work again Injured by a Runaway.

Mrs. Richard Porteous, of The Gravel Road east, visited Flesherton one day last week with a horse and buggy. When returning home in the evening, and having arrived at her own gate she was obliged to alight and open it. When shutting the gate the horse took fright Mrs Porteous grabbed at the lines but was thrown to the ground, the buggy wheel passing over her breast, bruising her severely. The horse dashed away and broke the buggy into kindling wood Mrs. Porteous is recovering nicely from her bruises and fright.

Camping

Camping parties are nearly as plentiful as flies now. Last week Brad. Powell, R Keefer, R. Bates, Frank Vandusen and Blake Anderson pitched their tent at Bell's lake, returning on Saturday T. Hollinger, Fred Armstrong and W. Bellamy, are charming mosquitos in the vicinity of Eugenia, with the expectation of shooting a few rabbits and bear. Rev. Mr. Watson and family are drinking in pure air and beautiful scenery in the vicinity of Kimberley. The poor printer is the only coon who cannot enjoy these luxuries, He has to stay at home and wrestle with his pencil while his neighbors fight the black flies and bugs all alone. Oh, could we but get at them!

Personals

Miss Mamie Ayers, of Gorrie, is visiting at Jos. Blackburn's

Miss Fran o Beecroft has returned home from Collingwood.

Miss Sarah Smith has returned home from Owen Sound

Mr. Frank Evans, of St. Mary's, is the guest of his brother, merchant Evans.

Mr. Newt Henderson, of Toronto, spent a week with his family, who are summering in Flesherton.

Mr. Wesley Armstrong is now with Rice Bros., jewelers Toronto.

We had a short but very pleasant call from Mr Glendenning, of Markdale public school, Tuesday

Miss Geraldine Thurston, of Guelph, is visiting relatives here.

W K Flesher, Esq., and Miss Flesher returned from England last Friday.

First class Honey for sale at this office, 10c a pound Ordination and Tea Meeting.

Mr I. C Emes' ordination to the ministry and induction to this charge took place in the Presbyterian Church here on Tuesday afternoon, a large congregation being present. Rev. Mr. Wilson, of Caledon, presided Rev Mr. Hossack, of Orangeville, preached a most eloquent sermon from Acts 24 a nd 25: "Go thy way for this time; when I have a convenient season I will call for thee." Mr. Hossack is a young man, only having been in the ministry for a short time, but is justifying the anticipations of those who were wont to call him the Henry Ward Beecher of Knox College. His thrilling eloquence is of the highest order. After the sermon the ordination and induction services were proceeded with Rev. Mr. McLeod, of Priceville, addressing the new minister, and Rev. Mr McColl, of Proton, speaking to the congregation.

In the evening a tea and entertainment was held in the church, tea being served in the basement. The evening's entertainment consisted of music by the choir and Glee Club and speeches by Revs. Messrs. Emes, Watson, Shilton, Hossack and Wilson

MY EARLY SCHOOL DAYS.

Sixty Years Ago or Thereabout, Brockville, Vicinity, Canada.

"Telling Tales out of School"-Some Pleasing, Some Funny, Some Sad, Some Strange, Some Good and Some Bad, Loves Rule and the Gad, When I was a Lad "Only a Boy."

BY WM. PURDY

Specially Written for The Advance.

My next experience in getting an "edikaishun," was in a much more suitable building, than a supposed-to-be, Spook-haunted, private dwelling and conveniently situated a mile and an half above "our house.

"FULFORD'S SCHOOL HOUSE,"

My third teacher, (my first there,) was a Mr. Connell, but my attendance was brief, perhaps sickness in our family was the cause. I have but a dim recollection of that time. The fourth one, a Mr. Wells, taught but a few days, succeeded by Mr. McLaughlan. I went to his school, probably three months, but had not yet been taught to write. He "sat" my without enquiring whether I had any previous practice. He wrote it in "fine hand," and a fine job. (3) I made in "imitation thereof," after a while he came to see how I was getting along. "Oh," (said he,) "I was not aware that you did not know how to write."

FIRST COPY

He then set me a copy--"straight marks, hooks, and pot sticks." I than had a opportunity of beginning at the beginning. I was in the "Testament class about that time. "Master" McLaughry also "set" my first

SUM IN CYPHERING.

We din'nt call it, "in withmetic," or "counting" in that long ago. "Cyphering" was a term good enough for us, but those big names multiplication, subtraction, subtrehend dividend, etc., without verbal explanation of meaning—how hard they were to be understood. How "thick" my head felt sometimes when trying to "cypher out a sum" and "carry one for every ten." If all teachers would lay aside their "stiff" hard look, and manner, and sit down beside their scholars a minute or two, and in a friendly way give easy-to-be understood instruction, in a pleasant tone of voice, instead of harshly saying -"There's the book, read the "rulgs" in it yourself,' how much easier, and faster a young beginner could get along. However, I believe he gave general satisfaction, and, when his term ended was succeeded by, Miss who, (her a relation of "aunt" Laura, I do not know, but she was good-natured, and religiously inclined. Ruled by kindness, and the "birchen twig," respected by her pupils. I don't think she was related to Polly W- because

PHEBE FITZGERALD,

No superstitious, "spook-ish dread,
Disturbed her mind or filled her head, consequently our progress in reading, writing, spelling etc., was good. I mention spelling because it was a "feature" in those days. "The best speller in school," was an honorable a title as—as well, if I must say it, as "Governor of Upper or Lower Canada,"- "you know"

Having thus far escaped condign punishment of any importance for infraction of rules, and no fear now, as previously stated, I will continue "telling tales out of school" a while longer, and speak of an event in which I "figured" as one of the "chief actors"—whipped for at noon spell. "Fulford's school house" was about fifteen minutes' walk from where the river

GOING IN SWIMMING

The gentle St. Lawrence,
The noble St. Lawrence,
The far famed St. Lawrence,
"Roll down to the sea."

There was a somewhat secluded, sand beached bay. What boy could resist the "temptation" to "go in swimming?" Some of us scholars had "yielded" a few times against the "rule." The mistress then plainly stated that she would certainly whip whoever went in swimming again.

Well, one day at noon, a boy of our acquaintance who did not attend school, coaxed "Dan" and I to go for a "swim," and boy like, we went. After school was "called in," our teacher got the whip! We two knew "what was coming." Mistress "called up" my schoolfellow first. The stove stood in the middle of the floor. She gave him a "cut," he bawled, and started round the stove, she followed him, laying on the gad," He yelled while "Round and round the stove they ran Three hundred times, or more" (?)

And every time she struck poor Dan,
He gave a "horrid" roar!

How plainly I can see him now, throwing up his arm to loosen his coat, to lighten the stroke, ha, ha, ha! But stop! My "turn" is coming! "Dan take your seat." "William, come out here." I was sitting in my usual place, behind the desk The desks and seats were much higher than the floor. I didn't care about exposing my "devoted" back quite so easily to be got at, as was poor Dan's, so I just stood up where I was.

Perhaps Mistress did'nt wish for another race around the stove, so she "got at" me there, but being so much lower down than I was, she had to reach up. She gave me a few strokes, which only "tingled" a little. Of course I cried—crying, you know is the best thing to do under such circumstances, and we were "only boys." Did we go in swimming after that? No.

Our backs the birchen twig had felt,
A wholesome lesson we had spelt,
Learned not to disobey

The summer ended, the teacher's "time out," scholars and all, generally glad and sorry too. Good bye-ood bye, and home we go.

My seventh and last school teacher's name was then a young man, better known in after years as Rev. Henry Wilkinson. I attended his school the greater part of one summer and winter, being then about thirteen years old. He was a thorough-going man. Governed by friendship and force, by kindness and the rod, with some whipping but not very severe. He chastised me once.

HENRY WILKINSON,

My offence was laughing in school. He happened to see me, and enquired why I laughed I replied, Sam tickled me. "Well, I'll tickle both of you," said he. "Hold out your hand." Down came the "ruler" Slap! slap! slap! Three strokes in quick succession No desks or high up position to befriend me this time. I now laughed out of the other corner of my mouth." Of course he "tickled" Sam also. But I don't think he ever whipped because he "wanted to." He was a and tried earnestly, and faithfully to educate his scholars both by precept and example. Many an exhortation in morality and religion he gave us scholars, and I think all were benefitted thereby. His pupils made good progress, were obedient to his rules, and he was generally well liked by young and old.

GOOD SCHOOL MASTER,

Father having decided to sell out, and move to a distant and newer part of Ontario, to "get land for my boys," as he expressed it, I did not see "Master" Wilkinson until about thirty years after. He was then a minister of the Gospel. I was pleased to meet with him once more. We talked of old school days and scholars, but his time was too limited to allow of a lengthy visit, being on a journey. He was looking well, yet plainly to be seen was —"growing old.

Silver threads among the gold

I never saw him again, but a number of years afterwards, read an obituary in the "Christian Guardian" of probably the last one of my school teachers, the

REV. HENRY WILKINSON.

I am not quite certain whether I have placed all of my teachers in regular line of succession, nor the exact year in which each taught or length of time. I write from memory only. My schooling ended at thirteen. I am hundreds and thousands of miles distant from any who might be able to correct a mistake of which I fear there are some.

Possibly I may sometime write again concerning "Old Times" but now advise all school children to be kind and agreeable with each other. You know not where or with whom your future "lot may be cast." That school mate you once "hated", despised or wronged, perhaps was or will be your best friend, or nearest neighbor in a settled life

Teachers, great is your opportunity to implant right principles in the young mind. Next to a parent is the school teacher's position, responsibility and kindness the best weapon.

The original stanzas last week may be somewhat expressive of others' thoughts although in ordinary rhyme. My upwards of three score years admonish me that, e're long I, too will in the graveyard sleep like those of long ago.

Winnipeg, Canada, 1889.

Improved Farm for Sale.

Lots 148, 149 and 150, 3rd range east, T and S R, containing 100 acres, 80 cleared, good clay loam, well improved, good frame house and log barn, frame stable, good orchard, etc. This farm is well watered and improved, and is considered one of the best in this section. It is one mile and a half from the village of Flesherton. Will be sold on very easy terms. For further particulars apply to

JAS. BEECROFT,
Flesherton P.O.

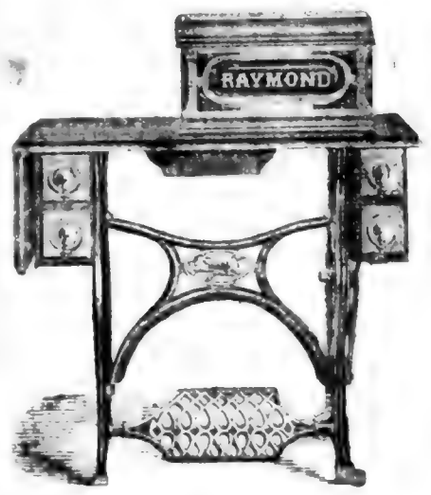
FLESHERTON FURNITURE WAREROOMS.

—FOR—

CHURNS.

The best is always the cheapest, and we sell the best at the lowest price.

SEWING MACHINES



THE CELEBRATED NEW

RAYMOND!

with every latest improvement, fully warranted, for $30.00.

Still selling magnificent

ORGANS,

AT $70.00.

Express Wagons

AT 75cts. EACH.

BABY CARRIAGES

Real beauties, at from $10.00.

STEP LADDERS

AT 75cts. EACH.

See the Common Sense Blind Rollers and attachments for sale HERE.

The most complete, simple, and cheepest fixture on the market.

—IN—

BEDDING,

our stock is very complete.

We are selling A. No. 1 mattresses with wool both sides in good striped ticking at $4.50, Woven wire spring beds at from $2.50 each.

DON'T MISS the PLACE.

J. E. MOORE,

FUNERAL DIRECTOR.

—AND—

FURNITURE DEALER

FLESHERTON FURNITURE WAREROOMS,

DURHAM St.

FLESHERTON.

Medical.

DR. CARTER,
M.C.P. & S., Ont.
PHYSICIAN, SURGEON, &c.
FLESHERTON.

J. G. Hutton, M.D.C.M.

Member of the College of Physicians and Surgeons, Ontario
Office at the one door east of Grier's store
Flesherton, Nov 10, 1888.

DRS. SPOULE & EGO.
MARKDALE ONT
Office :—Manley's Drug Store.
DR SPOULE M.D. etc ANGUS EGO M.D. etc
Office hours, the forenoon at Markdale House at night

J. P. OTTEWELL,
VETERINARY SURGEON.
Graduate of Ontario Vet. College.
RESIDENCE, NORTH ON COLLINGWOOD STREET
Second Door East of Flesherton Creamery
FLESHERTON

Dentistry.

DENTISTRY.
Dr. Thomas Henderson,
SURGEON DENTIST
Member of the College of Dental Surgeons of Ontario
R.C.D.S.,
Will visit FLESHERTON, Monshaw's Hotel on the 1st Tuesday of each month

J. P. MARSHALL,
L. D. S., DENTIST.
Visits Markdale the 1st and 3rd Wednesday of each month
Flesherton each trip on the day following

Legal.

J. W. FROST,
Barrister, Solicitor, Conveyancer, Etc.
FLESHERTON OFFICE, NEXT POST OFFICE, SPROULE'S BUILDING, ON THURSDAYS.
OWEN SOUND OFFICE, FROST'S BUILDING

P. McCULLOUGH,
Barrister, Solicitor, &c.
Office, over McFarland's Store Markdale. Money to Loan.

Business Cards.

John W. Armstrong,
FLESHERTON, CO. GREY.
DIVISION COURT CLERK, COMMISSIONER B. R., Conveyancer, &c. Agent for purchased sale of lands. Appraiser for C. L. S. Com and F. P. B. & S. Society. Money to Loan on the most reasonable terms. ISSUER OF MARRIAGE LICENSES. NOTARY PUBLIC.

MONEY TO LOAN.
AT LOWEST CURRENT RATES
Town or Farm Property.
S. DAMUDE.
Flesherton.

Mr. Wm. Karstedt,
Stone Mason, Bricklayer and Plasterer.
MATERIAL FURNISHED
Estimates given free. Ornamental Plastering a Specialty.
Residence one door south of Advance Office

W. J. BELLAMY
TWP. CLERK ARTEMESIA.
CONVEYANCER, COMMISSIONER, INSURANCE AGT, &C
DEEDS, MORTGAGES, LEASES, &c., prepared and properly executed. Insurance effected in first-class companies. Money to lend at lowest rates

R. J. Sproule,
POSTMASTER, Flesherton, Commissioner in B. R., Licensed Auctioneer, Conveyancer, Appraiser and Money Lender Real Estate and Insurance Agent. Deeds, Mortgages, Leases and Wills drawn up and Valuations made on shortest notice. Auction Sales attended to in any pary of the County. Money to Loan at lowest rates of interest. Collections attended to with promptness and despatch. Charges low. Agent for the Dominion Steamship Company. Cheap tickets from Flesherton to Liverpool Glasgow, London or any of the British Ports. Parties intending to visit England, Scotland or Ireland, will please ask rates before purchasing their tickets elsewhere.

House and Lot for Sale.

A good house and lot, opposite the Methodist Church, Flesherton, is now offered for sale. The house is large and roomy, fine lot, good stable and [illegible] yard, splendid well on the premises, fruit trees, etc. This is a rare bargain. Apply to A VANDUSEN, Flesherton

Prize Essays.

Competition Essay for Centre Grey Farmers' Institute on the "Benefits secured Through an Agricultural College Education."

FIRST PRIZE.

We, as Canadian farmers, have in the past been accustomed to look upon education as something to be shunned. This was no doubt due to the fact that a literary education, though good enough for its own specific purpose, has a tendency to allure men away from the farm, rather than causing them to take a deeper interest in the cultivation of the soil.

Education may be defined as something that renders its possessor better fitted for his life's work. With this object in view we see that a literary education as obtained at the various institutions of learning, entirely fails in fitting the agriculturist for his work. On the contrary such an education tends to direct the energies of the young in lines of work altogether [illegible] that of tilling the soil. This is true to such an extent that we seldom see a young man on the farm return and pursue farming as an occupation, after having been successful in passing the examinations as prescribed by our higher educational institutions.

Nevertheless there is no class of men whose surroundings present such a large field for investigation as the tillers of soil. Being surrounded by nature and her laws, which underlie all farm operations whether they are a success or failure, the farmers are thus brought into close contact with her and all her intricate variations. Indeed the farmer's success entirely depends upon the way in which he appropriates nature's laws to aid him in attaining his purpose. To do this profitably, it must be done intelligently, which demands a thorough knowledge of those sciences that relate to the soil, plant and animal.

The best way in which the farmer can obtain such knowledge is by spending a year or two at an institution where these subjects are dealt with, and where the course of study bears directly along the line work which is being carried out upon our farms every day. The need of such instruction is manifested by the great interest that has been taken in this matter by the most advanced nations of the earth. Great Britain, Germany and most of the European countries spend large sums of money in equipping and maintaining agricultural colleges, where the people can receive an education that meets the wants of the agriculturalists. Australia, although a comparatively new country, has found it necessary to have agricultural colleges to educate her yeomanry and thus keep pace with other lands. But not until coming to our own continent do we find this subject receiving the attention that its importance demands. Our cousins over the border, although having a world wide reputation for their advancements in the mechanical pursuits have, during the last two years, spent more money to advance the cause of agriculture than they ever have during a like period of time to any of their other industries. Large sums of money have been set aside for the use of every state in providing agricultural instruction for the people. Thus we find every state in the union has, or is shortly to have, an agricultural college or experimental station within its borders. Upon coming to our own province we find that we have had an agricultural college in our midst for the last 14 years which compares favorably with those of other lands as regards the nature and thoroughness of the course.

When we remember that these colleges are but poorly patronized by the class whom they were specially to help, we must say that the farmers are neglecting the means of education within their reach, which, if attended to, would be the means of improving their present condition so that they would be able to take that position which the importance of their calling demands. The few who avail themselves of these opportunities receive an education which will benefit them greatly in after life.

By studying the works written by advanced men, showing the relation the sciences bear to agriculture, the energies of the student are directed along the proper course of work and he takes a deeper interest in his studies on account of the very close connection they have with his work upon the farm. Thus by taking a college course the student has the whole field of agriculture unfolded before him in its different phases. The position which the soil occupies to the plant, and that of the plant to the animal is all carefully traced out and fully explained by the professors in their respective courses of lectures on the different sciences, such as Geology, Zoology, Botany, Chemistry, Veterinary, Dairying, and Live Stock, etc. By the study of these subjects the student gets a thorough knowledge of the principles which underlie agriculture.

By the study of live stock on the farm the student becomes thoroughly conversant with the different breeds as regards origin, characteristics and points. This cannot but be of great practical benefit to a man engaged in farming, for having a thorough knowledge of the capabilities of his farm he can from his knowledge of the different breeds of live stock, select those that will do best under his conditions. The possession of such knowledge may be worth hundreds of dollars to its possessor in these days of keen competition, where very small changes decide whether a man is going to succeed or fail in his undertakings.

Further, in the course of veterinary science he studies the structure and diseases of the different farm animals. This is very important, every farmer must of necessity be a stock raiser, for every stock owner's success will vary in proportion to his knowledge of the animals and their diseases. I do not mean to say that every farmer should be a veterinary surgeon, but every farmer should have sufficient knowledge of the more common forms of diseases and their methods of treatment, to enable him to keep his animals in a state of health. By possessing such knowledge the agricultural college graduate will often be enabled to save the life of a valuable animal, or avoid it's becoming what is commonly termed a "scrub."

So pressing is the need for the adoption of different methods of farming that the farmers are rapidly [illegible] themselves how they can get the land tillage that will cause it to yield larger returns? And while drainage and the adoption of other methods are being largely discussed as a way out of the difficulty, it is evident that if the owners of the farms had a thorough knowledge of the science of farming they would be better able to decide what alterations would be necessary for them to make in order to put their business upon a paying basis. Different methods must be adopted upon different farms according as the capabilities of the soil and circumstances vary, hence the importance of every man being capable to decide which methods he should adopt for success, instead of blindly following his neighbors and their ways, thinking their methods will produce the same result upon his farm.

The growing of plants upon the farm so as to supply food for man and animals is the first work of the husbandman. His success at this work will largely depend upon his knowledge of plant life and its requirements as well as the amount of skill he can put into the crop he undertakes to grow. A person to possess such knowledge, must become thoroughly acquainted with every part of the plant, knowing how it obtains its food and what changes take place in the plant during its growth. This involves the studies of botany and plant chemistry with which the student is familiar. But if the plants are going to be grown under the most favorable conditions it will be necessary to place them in a soil suited to their requirements. This requires the farmer to know something about drainage, for he will find that a certain portion of his farm is too wet for the profitable growing of plants. All weeds and noxious plants must be kept out of the land so as to produce as much of the cultivated crop as possible.

Now after having reaped a bountiful harvest as a result of skill and industry, the farmer cannot expect to take a place in the front rank of agriculturists without he is capable of disposing of his crop to the best advantage. This is done by having the principal part of the crop, especially all of the fodder and coarse grains manufactured into animal products which are concentrated in their character and which sold off the farm they carry away but a small portion of the mineral constituents of the land. To do this successfully the farmer must be well grounded in animal chemistry as well as scientific dairy and practice; for if animals are to be fed at a profit it must be done upon proper principles, and it will be found to be more advantageous to feed milch cows and send the surplus animal products away in the form of butter or cheese rather than meat.

The man who is doing this successfully is engaged in no mean work, for he is directing the energy of the sun through the soil, the plant, and the animal, and gathering the produce in a concentrated form fit for man's use. But while attaining this end every opportunity has been offered him for the exercise of skill and science, and a person who can go along the line of work and direct the various agents with certainty of success is engaged in a work that will vie with that of the chemist or sculpter.

When we see the importance of the farmer's work, and how it is connected with the different sciences, we cannot make a mistake in deciding that the agricultural college graduate is better fitted to succeed at farming than those who have not attended such a place. He has a thorough knowledge of the principles bearing upon the farmer's work and will apply them as opportunities are offered. We cannot improve upon the idea of the ancient poet, Virgil—

"Happy is he who knows the causes of things, and it is very applicable to the farmer, surrounded as he is by matters of the most intricate nature that are taking place around him every day.

But some may ask "How are these results to be brought by agricultural colleges?" To satisfy such it will be necessary [illegible] how these principles are to be applied [illegible]

[illegible] that attendance at these institutions [illegible] for the young [illegible]

[illegible] enabled him to [illegible] the possessor [illegible] farm [illegible] will be [illegible] by the application [illegible] as to [illegible] fields [illegible] weeds [illegible] acquainted with them [illegible] would be [illegible] ignorant of the [illegible] principles [illegible] he will only keep those that come up to the standard [illegible] making the dairy pay, not with [illegible] cows [illegible] pastures [illegible] a two months [illegible] summer. [illegible] will [illegible] and grass [illegible] [illegible] fodder [illegible] pest. By [illegible] manure [illegible] will [illegible] the [illegible] receive [illegible] of milk [illegible] The [illegible] of a [illegible] the principles of breeding [illegible] size, [illegible] and by [illegible] he will soon have [illegible] up as to be equal to pure [illegible] for all practical purposes.

These few practical illustrations will suffice to show you how the farmer is personally benefited in his work by the course which he has taken; but beyond these there are other benefits secured which are more general in their character. By this I mean that he secures benefits which are shared by his neighbors. He is reading the latest agricultural works and constantly adopting some new methods of working which will be copied in turn by his observing neighbors. He will also take a very active part in anything that is going to improve the condition of the farmers. Being aware of the benefits to be derived by having the farmers attend public meetings to discuss questions of interest he will give them hearty support and try to have these meetings increased by [illegible] the organization of literary societies in every neighborhood where they may [illegible] a training in public speaking that will be useful to him in after life when attending farmers institutes or other public meetings.

In conclusion, we see that the agricultural college graduate is in every way better fitted to [illegible] work than he who has had [illegible] He [illegible] a better farmer [illegible] respect [illegible] office in [illegible] which he may be [illegible] the benefits to be [illegible] at their meetings [illegible] realized by the [illegible] rapid strides [illegible] ahead of any other [illegible] and owing [illegible] sent their sons [illegible] they have re- [illegible] training. Then [illegible] many times more [illegible]

[illegible] farmers are [illegible] the farm will be [illegible] for, [illegible] the great [illegible] agriculture, having become [illegible] of the sciences underlying their work, and having a thorough knowledge of the habits of plants and animals they have to [illegible] they will not [illegible] old homestead where these things abound, and go to the vast tracts of land where [illegible] do so, and [illegible] want of nature's [illegible]

WM [illegible]

That hacking cough can be so quickly cured by Shiloh's Cure. We guarantee it. For sale at the Medical Hall

Shiloh's Cure will immediately relieve Croup, Whooping Cough and Bronchitis. For sale at the Medical Hall

The Most Successful Remedy ever discovered, as it is certain in its effects and does not blister. Read proof below.

KENDALL'S SPAVIN CURE.

OFFICE OF CHARLES A. SNYDER, BREEDER OF [illegible] AND CATTLE. [illegible] HEAD
ELMWOOD, ILL., Nov. 3, 1888.
Dr. B. J. Kendall Co.
Dear Sirs: I have always purchased your Kendall's Spavin Cure by the half dozen bottles. I would like your cure in larger quantity. I think it is one of the best liniments on earth. I have used it on my stables for three years.
Yours truly, CHAS. A. SNYDER.

KENDALL'S SPAVIN CURE.

BROOKLYN, N. Y., November 3, 1888.
Dr. B. J. Kendall Co.
Dear Sirs: I desire to give you testimonial of my use and success of your Kendall's Spavin Cure. I have used it for Lameness, Stiff Joints and Spavins, and I have found it a sure cure. I cordially recommend it to all horsemen.
Yours truly, A. H. [illegible]
Manager Troy Laundry Stables.

KENDALL'S SPAVIN CURE.

SANT, WINTON COUNTY, OHIO, Dec. 19, 1888.
Dr. B. J. Kendall Co.
Gents: I feel it my duty to say what I have done with your Kendall's Spavin Cure. I have cured twenty-five horses that had Spavins, ten of Ring Bone, nine afflicted with Big Head and seven of Big Jaw. Since I have had one of your books and followed the directions, I have never lost a case of any kind.
Yours truly, ANDREW [illegible]
Horse Doctor.

KENDALL'S SPAVIN CURE.

Price $1 per bottle, or six bottles for $5. All Druggists have it or can get it for you, or it will be sent to any address on receipt of price by the proprietors. Dr. B. J. Kendall Co., Enosburgh Falls, Vt.
SOLD BY ALL DRUGGISTS.

TO BE EXTRADITED.

Judge Bain Remands Burke for Extradition.

A Winnipeg despatch of Wednesday says: In the Burke case to-day Judge Bain, on the conclusion of the arguments, summed up the case, making a most able review of the evidence, and showing how the links of evidence fitted into each other and formed a complete chain. As to the depositions, he had to take them as being properly authenticated. He had little doubt as to their admissibility. It only remained for him to consider whether or not the evidence was sufficient to justify him in committing the prisoner for extradition. It had not been questioned that the crime was one for extradition under the Act. All the prosecution sought to show was that the prisoner was an accessory before the fact. Clause 25 of the Act provides that a man can be tried as a principal, if accessory before the fact. There was no question, if a presumptive case was shown that the prisoner was accessory to the murder of Dr. Cronin, that he comes under this clause of the Act. He was sitting, not for the purpose of trying the prisoner, whether he was guilty or innocent, but just as if the prisoner were brought before him as a magistrate. With regard to the spirit in which it seemed to him the principles of the Act should be administered in our courts, he agreed with the expressions of the learned judges that had been cited by the lawyers for the prosecution.

For his own part, he thought that the formalities and technicalities in the law of extradition should be very much simplified, and it would seem to him that the fact of an indictment being found by the grand jury of his countrymen should be sufficient to warrant a judge in sending the prisoner back for his trial. In considering the evidence, he regarded his position as somewhat different from that of sitting as a judge trying the case. He thought it proper that any leanings he might have should be in favor of extradition, and he was pleased to find he was supported in that view by the learned Chief Justice of Ontario. On the evidence adduced he could come to no other conclusion than that the evidence raised a strong presumption that the prisoner was an accessory to the murder of Dr. Cronin, and that being the case he had no alternative but to remand him for extradition. He accordingly held the prisoner for extradition, stating that the matter of extradition rested with the Department of Justice at Ottawa. He committed Burke to the jail of the eastern district, to await transference to Chicago. He notified the prisoner that he would not be delivered up for fifteen days, and that he could in the meantime apply for a writ of habeas corpus and have his case reviewed by the full court. Burke was then sent back to jail. It is not likely an appeal will be taken as the prisoner's counsel refuse to take the case further until funds are forthcoming.

A Chicago despatch says: A paper here says that young Mrs. Carlson will swear when Cronin's murderers are brought to trial that she saw the doctor enter the cottage on the fatal night and heard the struggle in the house. There has not heretofore been known to be any direct proof that the doctor was murdered in the cottage.

CROPS IN THE STATES.

Interesting Reports From the Department of Agriculture.

A Washington despatch says: The June crop report of the Department of Agriculture makes an increase in the area planted in maize of about one and one-third million acres, and the total over 77,000,000. This is only a preliminary estimate. The largest increase is west of the Mississippi. The condition of the crop is only medium. It is lower than usual at this period of its development. Excessive moisture delayed planting, and low temperatures and a saturated soil retarded growth on the Atlantic coast north of South Carolina. In the Ohio Valley the condition is lower than elsewhere. The extremely cold weather of the latter part of May and the first week in June was very unfavorable to germination, and the frosts of that period injured or destroyed that which was above ground. The replanting was slow and the plants are therefore small. In Michigan there has been some loss of area by ploughing up. Cut worms have been very destructive in the west. The crop is late and dependent on July weather for improvement. West of the Mississippi, in the subhumid belt and border of the arid region, the crop is generally in fine condition. The general average of condition is about .90. The condition of winter wheat is well sustained, notwithstanding injury by storm and flood, the general condition standing at .92. In the heart of the west the harvest is generally finished by this date. It is entirely completed in the south, and threshing is in progress. The straw is generally short and unusually well headed and plump in grain. The general average of spring wheat is about .83, which is very low at this stage of growth. Rye maintains its condition, and barley declines to about .92. A falling off of the area in tobacco of over 23 per cent. on both cigar and manufacturing leaf is reported. The total value of exports of mineral oils from the United States for the year ending June 30th was $49,420,817, against $46,585,551 in the previous year.

Original and Attractive.

Rev. Charles Spurgeon, a son of the celebrated London preacher, who is delivering religious addresses throughout the States, takes "Nails" as the subject of one of his discourses, and uses a number of these articles as illustrations of human character. With a hidden electric battery to represent Divine love he causes the nails to approach and cling to a small steel cross, thus giving at the same time a lesson in theology and natural science.

"Bright's Disease has no symptoms of its own," says Dr. Frederick Roberts, of University College, London. First get rid of the kidney disease by using Warner's Safe Cure, then the effects of symptoms will be removed.

The usual summer cry against ice water is abroad. Ice does not seem to be objectionable in anything but water. It looks suspicious.—Boston Globe.

A GALLOWS HORROR.

Sickening Scene at a Rochester Execution—Kelly Pays the Dread Penalty.

A Wednesday's Rochester despatch says: John Kelly, convicted of the murder of Eleanor O'Shea, near Geneva, November 6th, 1888, was hanged at Canandaigua at noon to-day. Kelly passed the time from 9 o'clock in his cell. At 10 o'clock there was a scene in the room, his family being there for the purpose of bidding him farewell. The loud wails of his daughters could be heard out in the street. At 11.45 the condemned man was escorted from the cell to the gallows by Sheriff Corwin, of Ontario county, Sheriff Hodgson, of Monroe, Father English, of Canandaigua, and a number of deputies. He walked firmly, and mounted the scaffold without assistance. Father English said a brief prayer, and Sheriff Corwin asked Kelly if he wished to say anything. The man said "Yes," and commenced a rambling speech, which lasted seven minutes. He said he was sure he would go to heaven, and hoped everyone else would. "I did not intend to kill Eleanor O'Shea, and I am not wholly to blame," said Kelly. He finally said: "I have only a few words more to say. I am sorry the crops hereabouts are bad. I give you all my blessing." Sheriff Hodgson, of Monroe county, then adjusted the cap. While doing so the condemned man said, "I am going soon, goodbye. You are too slow." At 12.05 the drop was touched, and down fell the body. As soon as the rope straightened out blood shot out from the neck, and then a perfect stream of bright red blood flowed down the outside the man's clothing and formed a pool beneath his feet. The spectators were horror stricken and every one save the doctors turned deathly pale. The physicians at once took charge of the body and listened for the pulsations of the heart. At 12.14½ he was pronounced dead. He was cut down at 12.15. When the cap was removed it was found that there was a great gash in his throat just as if it had been slashed with a razor. The blood flowed from this gash even after the body had been cut down. The face presented a horrible appearance, being distorted greatly. The body was at once taken to Geneva.

Kelly's crime was the murder of Eleanor O'Shea, a woman 65 years old, housekeeper for George Kippen, a farmer residing near Geneva, by whom the murderer was employed. It is said Kelly was unduly intimate with his employer's daughter, a half-witted woman. The housekeeper upbraided the pair, and in a fight Kelly struck her on the head with a hammer, killing her.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVORERS.

The General Secretary Presents a Most Interesting Report.

A Philadelphia despatch says: At the Christian Endeavor Convention yesterday the report of the General Secretary, Mr George M. Ward, was read by the Rev. J. L. Hill, of Medford, Mass. The report stated that in 1881 there was one society, now the number is 7,670. A vast band of nearly 500,000 young people now marches under our banner in regularly enlisted, united service. To day we can add nothing in territory, for twelve months ago it had encircled the globe. Everywhere along the road it has gained in numbers. Single societies of last year have multiplied and increased. England has made a great advance, and to-day sends greeting from thirty seven societies of Christian Endeavor. The foreign mission field is also awakening, and about fifty societies are aiding the hard-working missionary in all its foreign fields. In our own country New York still holds the banner, with 1,387 societies, as many societies in a single State as the whole world could show a few years ago. Next comes old Massachusetts, with her 742; then Illinois, with her 541 societies. New York, with two national gatherings, has held the lead for two years, and now Illinois, from the effect of last year's convention, jumps up to 541. One of the most noticeable growths of the year past is that of Ohio, which has increased from about 200 to 465 societies. California has also doubled her lists. Two thousand one hundred and forty one societies report that there had been 15,672 young people come from their associate membership to acknowledge Christ. The Secretary covered 25,000 miles of territory and presented the cause on about 160 different occasions. Utah is not ready to be admitted as a State, nor can she have representatives in a national congress, but she does deserve a front seat in a National Endeavor Convention. The work in Washington Territory is gaining a stronghold, although it is yet in its infancy. The Secretary did not know when the cause has had a more generous hearing, as regards all classes of listeners, than it received in Tacoma. The Convention sermon was preached by Rev. George H. Wells, D.D., of Montreal.

Parnell Will Not Recede.

A London cable says: George Lewis, solicitor for Mr. Parnell, in an interview Friday professed ignorance of any intention of Mr. Parnell to withdraw his case from before the Special Commission.

The Dublin Freeman's Journal asserts that counsel for the defence in the Times' case against Parnell have subpœnaed the Secretary of the Irish Loyal and Patriotic Union to produce the books of the Union before the Parnell Commission. It is stated, moreover, that counsel have also subpœnaed the members of the commission who advanced money to Houston, including Sir Rowland Bennerhasset. Yesterday's evidence was little more than a dull procession of Irish Mayors and Town Councillors, the tone of whose evidence was only a repeated confirmation of that which every one is already convinced, namely, the innocence of Parnell and his intimate associates of all connections with the crimes with which the criminal set of Irishmen have soiled Ireland's struggle for justice.

A Highly Spiced Dinner.

A Mt. Pleasant, Fla., despatch says: Tuesday Frances Cooper, colored, invited three other negro women to dinner. After dinner the guests were taken with convulsions and one expired in agony. Investigation established the fact of poisoning. To-day Frances confessed that she had a grudge against these women, and had placed rat poison in a dish of beans for the purpose of poisoning them. She said her husband had urged her to do it. Austin Cooper, her husband, confirmed his wife's confession. The two surviving victims will probably die.

NORTHWEST NOTES.

The promoters of the Winnipeg Transfer Railway, that is to connect the Northern Pacific and Canadian Pacific roads by a line along the river front, says it will be in operation in a month's time.

A Bryant boy, aged 13 was drowned while bathing in the Red River to-night.

Mr. James Fisher, Liberal member for Russell, was given a banquet at Russell village to-night.

The Indian Agents of the Northern Treaties have left to make their annual payments. Dr. Orton left yesterday with Commissioner McLean to attend the Indians in the neighborhood of Cumberland House, disease having broken out among them.

At the Baptist Convention of the Northwest to-day the report of the Educational Committee was presented. It recommended the erection of a college at Brandon, providing that city gave $10,000, the college to cost $25,000 and have a staff of four first-class professors to begin with and have fine arts and musical departments. Steps, it was said, would be taken to secure an endowment of $5,000 a year for three years to carry on the work. A committee in connection with the scheme was appointed.

Mr. Buchanan, General Manager of the Bank of Montreal, is making a trip through the Province.

The Plum Creek Lacrosse Club visited the city and played matches with the city clubs. The Winnipegs defeated them four to one last night, and the Nineteenth with the same score to-day.

There have been light showers of rain in various parts of the Province last night and to day. The indications are that harvesting will begin about August 1st.

The body of Willie Bryant, the boy who was drowned in the river yesterday, was recovered this morning near the place where the lad sank.

Bishop Farand, from the Athabasca region, has arrived for the purpose of attending the Catholic Council at St. Boniface on the 16th inst. He says a good many Indians died from starvation last spring.

St. Paul and Manitoba people are reported to be behind the scheme for building a railroad between Winnipeg and Duluth.

Sir John Lester Kaye is having made 44 sprinkling carts in Winnipeg. These he intends to use on his Western farms with a view to overcoming the effects of drouth.

The Provincial Sunday School Convention at Portage la Prairie closed its proceedings to day. A resolution was passed condemning the Provincial papers for publishing reports of the Sullivan Kilrain prize fight.

Immediate application will be made to the Department of Justice for authority to extradite the prisoner Burke, but until the appeal is settled action will be deferred.

It is practically settled that the writ of habeas corpus in the Burke case will be applied for next week. Burke has no money, but a few citizens who desire to see the accused receive the best of fair play have intimated that if his lawyer will appeal it will be seen that all disbursements at any rate will be paid. This is sufficient to satisfy the lawyers, and there is practically no doubt an appeal will be made. It will be made next week before one judge, it being quite impossible to get it on during term. The lawyers for the defence think they have a very good fighting case. In fact Mr Perdue is quite confident that the date flaw in the depositions will prove fatal to them. If it does, the whole business will be dropped, as without the depositions Cronin's death is not proved, and there is no crime upon which the prisoner can be sent back.

Showers of rain fell throughout the province to day. Mr. John T. Moore, of Toronto, managing director of the Saskatchewan Land Company says the damage by drought has been greatly overestimated. A good many cried before they were hurt.

About four hundred Orangemen went from this city to-day to celebrate the 12th at Brandon. A demonstration was also held at Rapid City.

Detective Broderick has received definite orders for himself and John Collins to wait in Winnipeg until Burke is surrendered, as it is most desirable they should bring him back with them.

Bishop Clute, of the Diocese of Mackenzie River, arrived here to day from Montreal to attend the meeting of bishops to be held next week. Bishop Clute has been living in Montreal for two years owing to ill-health, but will return to Mackenzie River in a few weeks.

O'Connor's Code.

A London cable of Thursday says: Upon John O'Connor's refusal to violate his Fenian oath or to tell anything which he has promised to keep secret, notwithstanding his hostility to the extremes to which the secret societies had gone, Sir James Hannen, after reproving the witness in somewhat strong language, asked him whether he were a Protestant or a Roman Catholic; and then whether the Church justified him in refusing to answer all questions in giving evidence on the ground that he had taken an illegal oath. O'Connor replied that he had not studied the theological aspect of the subject. "Nor the moral?" asked Justice Hannen. "No," replied O'Connor; "but I know my own code of honor." Everyone in the Court room thought that something serious was about to happen, but the matter was dropped. The presiding Justice exhibits a disposition to give an ultimate judgment unfavorable to the Parnellites if he can, but he tries to be careful not to be unjust during the evidence.

Wm. Roberts, M.D., Physician to the Manchester (Eng.) Infirmary and Lunatic Hospital and Professor of Medicine in Owen's College, says: "Deep sleep nervous or rapidly failing eyesight, dropsy of the lungs, or a violent inflammation, any one of them, is a symptom of kidney trouble." Warner's Safe Cure is the only reliable and guaranteed remedy for kidney disorders.

Before her husband boiled Mrs. Humphry Ward's "Robert Elsmere" down it was four times its present size.

"What business are you going to put your son into, Mr. Sloons?" "Well, I don't know. He is not quick to apprehend anything." "Not quick to apprehend? I'll tell you the very place for him." "Indeed, where is it?" "On the Chicago detective force."

WICKED CHICAGO.

A Vivid Picture Thereof Painted by a Home Artist.

The truth is not always palatable even to us Chicagoans. The greater the truth, if it be a disagreeable truth, the deeper it cuts. The New York Sun says: "What Chicago needs is more virtue and more intelligence in the hearts and minds of her people. Mere bigness, a million and a quarter of population, will not suffice to make Chicago great."

Here is a solid chunk of truth, well aimed, that hits us squarely between the eyes.

As to our virtue—is it necessary to particularize? Where are there filthier slums? Where is there a more open and brazen disregard for common decency than our down-town streets present after nightfall? Where are concert halls, dance halls and dives of every description tolerated to a greater or more shamefull extent? Where are blacklegs permitted to follow their calling with more freedom? Where are gambling hells run more wide open? Where are the police on more intimate terms with thugs and thieves? Where do the divorce courts present greater attraction for people of depraved tastes? Where is there a more reckless disregard for morality among all classes?

As to our intelligence—is it necessary to particularize? What sort of literature finds the readiest sale in Chicago? What kind of news is devoured the soonest? What sort of newspapers do the masses of the people demand? What sort of men are most certain to be elected to office? What sort of men are, generally speaking, the most popular? Where is integrity of the cast-iron stamp held for less, and where is dishonesty of the genteel kind held for more? Where is the money getter asked fewer questions as to the manner of his getting it? Where is talent without means a less desirable or a less profitable thing to be possessed of? Where on God's footstool is genius without a bank account likely to have fewer admirers?

The virtue and intelligence of the populace, using the words in their highest meaning, have not been generally considered essential here to the greatness of the city. They are not generally considered essential now. Perhaps when we shall all have become rich, no matter how, we will pay a little more attention to those things. At present the poor are striving for the dollar, the well to-do for real estate, and the millionaire for the earth. There is no time to spare—no time to be wasted upon virtue, intelligence, and other immaterial things.—Chicago Times.

Great Damage by Floods.

An Albany despatch of Thursday says: Superintendent of Public Works Stranahan and his assistant, John E. Ashe, have just returned from the region of the flood at Johnstown and Fonda. They give the following information as to the extent of the damage done: At Aiken, three miles west of Amsterdam, 100 feet of the New York Central's track have been washed away. At Fonda the highway bridge spanning Cayadutta Creek is gone. The New York Central bridge adjacent to that village was also swept away. What was known as Segroff's bridge, midway between Tribes Hill and Fonda, together with the four tracks of the Central Railroad, was carried away. The water stood three feet deep in the streets of Fonda. Cellars were flooded and much damage was done to the plank road leading to Johnstown. Two miles west of Fonda the Central's tracks were carried away for a distance of 500 feet. At Johnstown and in its immediate vicinity nine bridges were destroyed. Between Tribes Hill and Fonda the West Shore Road is accommodating travel and is being strained to its utmost capacity. Several miles of freight cars are stranded between Amsterdam and Johnstown. The only damage done to the canals is on double lock 28 of the Erie Canal, the bank on one side having caved in. Navigation is not suspended, as the other side of the lock was not injured.

A Johnstown, N.Y., despatch says: Rain here during the night raised the Cayadutta Creek and shut off the search for the bodies. Only the bodies of Alfred Coakley, Charles Frear and Albert Steadwell have thus far been recovered, but Willie Myers, aged 10, and R. G. Simmons, aged 35, are also known to have been drowned. The most careful inquiry fails to reveal that any woman is missing. There were five men rescued from the flood. It is estimated that the loss by the flood will reach $200,000.

A Greensburg, Pa., despatch says: A destructive storm passed over the northern end of this county last evening. Crops of wheat, hay and oats were carried down the streams. Every bridge from Crabtree to Saltsburg has been carried away, and two or three hundred yards of the Crabtree Branch Railroad has been completely washed out. No lives reported lost. All along the Loyal Hannan Creek the damage is great. The Crabtree Railroad is a branch of the Pennsylvania Road. The water is now falling rapidly.

Something Like a Blaze.

A Ruthven despatch says: During Tuesday night a miscreant or miscreants partly removed the capping from Coste well No. 1, near Ruthven, and set fire to the escaping gas. The flames melted a portion of the iron stoppers and piping, burnt down the frame building that rose above and enclosed the well, and are now spreading far out on all sides, rendering near approach impossible. As the gas well has a yield of 16,000,000 feet per day, the terrible violence, heat and deafening roar of the flames may be imagined. All day yesterday was spent in vainly endeavoring to devise means to extinguish the burning gas. It is now thought that a cannon will have to be brought on the scene in order to shoot a ball that will break the piping and cut off the flames. The roar of the burning gas can be heard several miles distant from the well.

After Which He Probably Struck Out.

"I am sorry to give you pain, Mr. Ferguson," she said to the kneeling youth, "but your score is a goose-egg this time."

"Not much, Miss Kajones," he replied, haughtily, as he rose up and took his hat: "you can't prevent me from scoring a home run."

There are now in actual operation in Bengal 844 miles of canal, of which 614 are navigable. The area commanded by irrigation canals is 2,698,846 acres.

THE HAND OF DEATH.

Diphtheria Claims 360 Victims in a Year in St. John's, Nfld.

The returns for last week show that diphtheria is steadily though slowly abating. Twenty-three cases only are now under treatment; the number of new cases during the week was thirty-six, and there were but four deaths. It is thus evident that under the vigorous and judicious means employed the destructive pestilence which has desolated so many homes, and caused such an amount of suffering, is fast disappearing. That it will linger for some time yet may be expected; but its operations are curtailed, and we may reasonably hope that it will decline more and more till we shall at no distant date be delivered from it entirely. There must be no relaxation of vigilance for some time to come, for we have a treacherous foe to deal with; but we can now breathe more freely, in the hope of entire deliverance.

At this stage we may glance backward at the history of the epidemic and the ravages it has wrought. There were but few cases of diphtheria up to the 1st of July last year, and these were in the sporadic form. The disease presented no symptoms of becoming epidemic. On the 28th of June, 1888, the Board of Health, from the medical reports, were able to affirm that "St. John's was more free from infectious diseases than for a great many previous years—more free than ever in their experience."

From that date a change began. The number of cases began to increase. From a foul locality at King's bridge, where a number of families were infected, it spread into the city and appeared at various places. The efforts of the Board of Health were baffled by the concealment practised in too many cases, and thus intercourse with infected houses where it was not suspected to exist, diffused the germs of the disease widely. Still, during the fall months the extent of the disease was not very serious, and did not create much alarm. It was not till near Christmas that its proportions began to create a panic. Just before Christmas, there were 76 cases and 10 deaths. The increase went on, and in the first half of February there were 124 cases and 24 deaths, and in the second half 91 cases and 6 deaths. From March 14th to the 25th there were 124 cases and 18 deaths. The returns from that time showed that cases ranged from 47 to 69 each week. May proved to be a particularly fatal month. For the week ending May 5th there were 70 new cases and 14 deaths; in the second week 55 new cases, 11 deaths; third week 83 new cases, 11 deaths; fourth week 69 new cases, 9 deaths. Since then, there has been a gradual abatement.

From the returns compiled by that able and intelligent Health Inspector, Head Constable Winslow, who has rendered most valuable services throughout, we are now able to give the statistics of the epidemic since its first appearance, with a very close approximation to the facts. Altogether, there have been, up to the present time, 2,000 cases of diphtheria in St. John's and the immediate vicinity, and 360 deaths. The death rate has thus been 18 per cent. This is considerably lower than the death rate of other places, where diphtheria has been epidemic. The average of death ranges from 20 to 25 per cent. This lighter death rate speaks well for the skill and care of our medical men, as well as for the efficient energy of our Board of Health, especially in their efforts to aid the poor with medicines and necessaries.

We have had a severe lesson in the ravages of this epidemic—one that will not soon be forgotten. Two thousand out of a population of 30,000 have been attacked. Death has darkened many a dwelling. The amount of suffering, sorrow, anxiety, who can calculate? The mere loss of money—the disturbance of business—the public expenditure in meeting the visitation—the loss of time and labor—have been immense. The lesson will be thrown away upon us if we do not adopt the most stringent and efficient means in the future to improve the sanitary condition of the city, and guard the community from the invasion of infectious diseases.—St. John's (Nfld.) Mercury.

The Last Suez Canal Report.

The receipts for 1888 were 67,000,000 fr. and the expenses 7,743 000 fr., or only 11½ per cent., though including 400 000 fr. for the working of the night service. The expenses have only increased by 2,500,000 fr. since the opening of the canal, for canals, unlike railways, do not use up rails or coal, and increasing traffic requires but a very slight increase of the staff. The dividend, including the sum paid on account, will be 84 fr. The reserve being already above the obligatory amount, will not be increased, but 300,000 fr. is allotted towards the new works; 3,440 vessels used the canal last year, the passengers numbering 183,000; 1,680 vessels passed through by night. The average duration of the transit was 30¾ hours, which shows a steady reduction of time.

Placed Behind the Bars.

A Chicago despatch of Friday says Judge Horton to-day, after hearing the arguments, refused to issue a writ of habeas corpus looking to the release on bail of John J. Beggs, the chief officer of camp No. 20, Clan-na Gael, indicted for conspiracy to murder Dr. Cronin. Judge Horton held that the indictment was sufficient presumption of guilt to warrant holding the prisoner without bail. He did not require the State to disclose the evidence on which the indictment was found. It was said that the application was made partly with a view to obtain this evidence, that it might be used to assist Burke in his fight against extradition at Winnipeg.

Prof. Semmola, of the University of Paris, in an article published in the Gazette Medicale de Paris, says: "Dryness of the skin, imperfect digestion and transformation of albuminoid food are present at the beginning of chronic Bright's Disease." Warner's Safe Cure removes digestive disorders. Why? Because it enables the kidneys to perform their functions in a healthy manner, when both cause and resulting symptoms disappear.

The St. Mary's, Pa., Herald states that a Ridgway minister who had favored Prohibition was saved in the late flood by a beer-keg that opportunely floated to him, and he thereupon decided to vote against the amendment.

CURRENT TOPICS.

THE colored man is now having an inning. Frederick Douglass has been appointed U. S. Minister to Hayti. He gets $5,000 a year as advance agent of the great republic.

THE new harbor works at Buenos Ayres will confer great advantages on that rising port. It will no longer be necessary for ocean steamers to anchor twelve miles from shore. Excessive lighterage amounting sometimes to more than the entire freight charges from Europe or the United States will be also avoided for the same reason.

THE year 1889 is the fiftieth anniversary of the establishment of the penny post in England. It was in 1839 that a committee of the House of Commons reported favorably upon Sir Rowland Hill's scheme for the establishment of cheap postage. The Bill received a majority of 100 votes and became a law on August 17th, 1839.

THE ice cream freezer and the ice water pitcher are doing their deadly work these days. The other day a Toronto man lost his life by tarrying too long at the ice water pitcher, and to-day's despatches announce that some sixty people were more or less poisoned by dallying too much with the freezer. The lager beer keg must be off on a holiday, for we have not heard of it laying out any of its customers.

THE ship canal connecting Manchester, Eng., with the sea will be completed within four years. The canal is to be thirty-five miles long and from 170 to 260 feet above and 130 feet wide at the bottom. The minimum depth will be 25 feet. The contract for digging the canal has been taken by a company of engineers for £5,750,000. Such a waterway will be of incalculable benefit to the whole of England.

THE English naval authorities propose to construct two war vessels, which shall surpass anything of the kind yet built by that country. They will be named respectively the Hood and the Hawk. The first will be of 14,600 tons measurement, and will have engines of 20,000 horse-power. The second will also be of 20,000 horse-power, but the tonnage will be little more than half that of the first mentioned, or 7,500 tons.

ENGLAND owns over half of the entire ocean tonnage of the world. The exact figures are 51.4 per cent. The increase of the steam tonnage of the world in 1888 was 633,948 tons, and half of this increase was built by British owners. In the same year the United States added to her tonnage only twenty-seven new steamers and 20,274 tons. Even Japan has gone beyond this figure in the same period, by the addition of fifty steamers and 36,084 tons.

THE Johnstown disaster has aroused public apprehension in England, lest similar accidents may occur there. There are many large storage reservoirs in various parts of Great Britain, and Parliamentary inquiry is to be made into their condition. There is an immense reservoir in Wales, from which Liverpool is supplied with water. It is four times the size of the Conemaugh lake, and is formed by a wall of solid masonry ninety feet thick. This wall, though comparatively new, is said to have shown signs of weakening, and an immediate inquiry is demanded into its condition.

M. TOPINARD has been making a statistical inquiry into the colors of the eyes and hair in France, and from his 180,000 observations he deduces many interesting results, one of the most curious being that where the race is formed from a mixture of blondes and brunettes the hereditary blood-coloring comes out in the eyes and the brunette element reappears in the hair. To this tendency, probably, is to be attributed the rarity of a combination of light hair with dark eyes. Several observers have asserted that the American people, who are pre-eminently a mixed race, are becoming a dark-haired and blue-eyed nation, and if this be true such a development must be owing to the working of the law formulated by M. Topinard.

THE same trouble with pavement is met in European cities as in American, and experiments have been made with all sorts of materials. The use of wood has met with much greater success there than on this side of the Atlantic. The reason is said to be that a solid foundation of concrete is used upon which the blocks rest. Owing to its hardness and resinous quality American yellow pine, it is said, has become the favorite wood for this purpose in Berlin and Hamburg, and an official report says that Frederick's Bridge, Berlin, which was paved in the spring of 1879 with the wood in question, is still in good condition, while the approaches, paved with granite blocks, have twice since required repaving.

A CABLE despatch announces the death in the Caucasus of Prince Nicholas Dadiani of Mingrelia, at one time a candidate for the Bulgarian throne. Prince Nicholas was about 52 years old, and had been divorced from his wife, who was the daughter of General Count Adleberg, aide-de-camp to the Emperor of Russia, and a former maid of honor to the Empress. He held the rank of colonel in the Russian army, and was described as a man of the world. He was married in 1860, and ten children were the fruit of the union. In the early part of 1887 Russia pressed Prince Nicholas forward as her candidate for the throne of Bulgaria. For a time all Europe talked about him. Little was known about him or his family, however, but that little was eagerly devoured. The Bulgarians were not pleased with his nomination. They were violently opposed to any one proposed by Russia and bitterly fought against her candidacy. After much delay the Sobranje declared it would not have him, and as a ruler had to be appointed at once Prince Ferdinand was given the throne.

A CABLE despatch announces the death of Sir Salar Jung, K.C.S.I., formerly Dewan or Prime Minister of Hyderabad. He was the descendant of a line of statesmen who have directed the affairs of the Nizam of Hyderabad since the beginning of the 18th century. Engaged in official work from his youth, he succeeded his uncle, Surdj-ul-Mulk, as Dewan in 1853. The State was a prey to anarchy, the capital was terrorized by Arab mercenaries, and the British Government had recently deprived the Nizam of the Province of Berar. It was evident, indeed, that Lord Dalhousie contemplated the annexation of the remainder of that ruler's dominions. To avert the supreme disaster and to gain back Berar was the great task set before him by Salar Jung, and despite the meddling and muddling of the Nizam, Afzul-ul-Doulah, he had completely succeeded in the first part of his task by the time of the mutiny. During the mutiny his energies were wisely devoted to keeping back the fanatical element of the population of Hyderabad, and by holding the Deccan tranquil during this great crisis he removed the last pretext the Calcutta authorities could possibly entertain for annexing the country. The death of the Nizam, in 1869, gave Salar Jung a free hand, the new sovereign being a mere child, and the State being administered by a regency composed of the chief of the nobility, Amir-i-Kabir and Salar Jung. What abuses remained were promptly swept away, and Hyderabad became a model State. In 1876 Sir Salar undertook a voluntary mission to England in the hope of procuring the restoration of Berar. In that he was disappointed, but he must have found some consolation in the genuine admiration entertained for him by Englishmen. He was knighted and created a K. C. S. I.

FOR HOT WEATHER.

Four Recipes for Making Good and Inexpensive Drinks.

Ginger water, which is simply water sweetened with molasses, with two tablespoonfuls of cider vinegar added to each cup of molasses, and the whole spiced with ginger, is a very palatable drink, and one which may be safely used by farm laborers, unless indulged in too freely when overheated.

Cocoa tea is healthful and inexpensive. It is made from the shells or nibs, which cost three cents per pound. Wet two ounces with a little cold water, and pour over them a quart of boiling water; cook one and a half hours; strain and add a quart of milk heated to boiling. It should be slightly sweetened.

Oatmeal water is the cheapest and one of the most healthful hot weather drinks. It is simply oatmeal stirred into cold water and allowed to settle before drinking. This is sold in New York at a penny a glass, giving the vendor about 99 per cent. of profit. It makes a pleasanter drink if a very thin gruel is made, using one tablespoonful of oatmeal to a quart of water. Boil for an hour, strain and let it get very cold. Still another improvement is to add the juice of one lemon and two tablespoonfuls of sugar to each quart.

Ginger Beer.—A ginger beer costing about fifteen cents a gallon is a good standby. There are many different recipes for this, but the following is one of the simplest. Pour four quarts of boiling water over three-fourths of a pound of white sugar; add the minced yellow peel of one lemon and an ounce of ground ginger. Let this stand covered until lukewarm, then add the juice of the lemon and a gill of good yeast. Mix thoroughly, cover and stand in a warm place over night. Next day strain, bottle and cork; tying down the corks securely. Lay the bottles on their sides in a cool place.

Sadder Than Death.

Last Friday afternoon a district telegraph messenger who was speeding along the street with a telegram valued at 15 cents a minute, was run over and seriously injured by a blind man named Standfast. Standfast is a cripple, having a wooden leg. He had taken his leg off to rest it, while he sat by the wayside and begged, and some mischief-loving boys had taken the leg and hid it. Standfast missing it, was groping along the sidewalk feeling for it, and inadvertently moved right in the messenger boy's wake. Several persons, seeing that he would run the boy down, shouted to the latter that the blind man was after him, and the boy, realizing his peril, made a desperate sprint for his life, and for a few feet gained on his pursuer, but before he was far enough ahead to turn out with safety the cripple was upon him and ran clear over him before he could be stopped. The boy's injuries were very serious, as he fell upon his wrist, spraining it so that it will probably be two weeks before he can hang on the steps of an omnibus going in the wrong direction. It was reported late that night, owing to his inability to utilize his favorite official time killer, the boy had delivered one message nearly on time, but the rumor was indignantly denied at headquarters, the superintendent offering to prove by the books that such a thing had never occurred since the invention of human speed. At a late hour this morning it was feared that the boy was recovering his inertia, which had been severely disturbed.—Robert J. Burdette.

Notes From Scotland.

It is said that Mr. Arrol, the leading contractor for the Forth bridge, will be knighted on the completion of the enterprise.

The Duke of Argyll has resolved to feu the Roseneath estate, and through his agents is offering sites on that part of the estate extending eastwards towards Kilcreggan, and embracing the Gallowhill heights.

Mr. Ian Macpherson-Grant, eldest son of Sir George Macpherson-Grant, was married in St. Mark's Church, London, on June 26th, to Miss Mary Dennistoun, youngest daughter of Mr. Alexander Dennistoun, of Golfbill, Lanarkshire.

Mr. Gladstone intends addressing his constituents in Midlothian in October at Edinburgh, Dalkeith and Mid-Calder respectively. He will be the guest of Lord Rosebery at Dalmeny, and will probably thereafter go to Aberdeen on a visit to Lord Aberdeen at Haddo House.

Breeding English Pheasants.

Rutherford Stuyvesant, the wealthy landowner of Abamuchy, some time ago set 4,000 English pheasant eggs under hens and now has hundreds of little birds running about his place and the number is increasing daily. He will set them free on his large reserve some time during the summer or fall. He employs regular gamekeepers.

—A young man in Pennsylvania could not afford to take his bride on a wedding tour; so he purchased $5 worth of rides on a merry-go-round, and they travelled until tired out.

In 1774 a Yorkshire village school bore the sign: "Wrighten and Readden and Trow Spellen and allso Marchantte Ackounts with Double Entery. Post Skript Girlls and Bouys Boarded and good Yozitch for Chillderen."

MAKING ANAGRAMS.

A Pleasant Diversion for a Quiet Evening Hour at Home.

Making anagrams is a pleasant diversion for a quiet evening hour, says the New York World. Let our boys and girls get out their paper and pencils and prove this. In the first place, though, let us find out what an anagram is. An anagram is the dissolving of a person's name or some familiar phrase, historical or otherwise, into its letters, as elements, from which, without addition, subtraction or change, a new sentence or connection of words is made so as to form complete sense. The more applicable the sentence so formed is to the subject annagrammatized so much greater is the merit of the anagram.

A good subject for our young people to try first is their own or the name of some friend, and if there is a good sprinkling of vowels in the name selected some surprising results may be reached. The pith of the anagram is, of course, that it shall in some way relate to the person whose name is used. Cornelius Vanderbilt's name has been aptly transformed into "On curb death in silver," but some one has done even better than that by discovering that it also may be made to read: "Vanderbilt rules coin." From Lord Beaconsfield's name is gleaned "I faced nobles," and "I moyl in law" is a good transposition of William Noy, who was Attorney-General to Charles I.

The flatterers of James I. of England proved his right to the British monarchy as the descendant of the mythical King Arthur, from his name, "Charles James Stuart," which becomes "Claims Arthur's Seat." An author, in dedicating a book to the same monarch, finds that in "James Stuart" he has "a just master."

Comparatively few people are aware that the name of Voltaire, the witty Frenchman, is Francois Marie Aronet, and that the assumed name (Voltaire) is simply an anagram of Aronet, l. j. (le jeune), u being synonymous with v, and j with i. See if our young people cannot make some equally happy hits as the above.

Anagram-making is no recent institution, but has long been a fashionable amusement of the witty and learned. At the court of Louis XVI it was the leading pastime, and the King, it is said, employed a learned man especially for the purpose of composing these fancies of wit for the amusement of himself and court. It was a great triumph of the mediæval anagrammatist to find in Pilate's question, "Quid est veritas?" (What is truth?) its own answer, "Est vir qui adest" (It is the man who is here). This certainly is most singular. Our modern anagrammatists have also done some good work, among the best of which is the following:

The Declaration of Independence—Open hate dare lend it confidence.

Washington Crossing the Delaware—A hard, howling, tossing water scene.

The Last Days of Pompeii—Past homes of Italy pied.

Where Old Shoes Go.

It may have been noticed that nowadays very few old shoes and scraps of leather are observable lying in our streets or dustheaps. This is in a great measure due to the collections of old scraps of leather, which are taken to mills, where they are cut up almost into fine dust. To this is added about 40 per cent. of Indian rubber, and the whole is then subjected to a pressure of 6,000 or 10,000 pounds per square foot. The substance is then colored, and is sold at prices some 50 per cent. below that of natural leather. It is manifestly a very poor substitute, and it is wholly wanting in fibre; in fact, if it were not for the insane craze for cheap articles, which buyers vainly hope to substitute for those which, though the original cost is greater, are yet in the end cheaper, we should never hear of this compound, which might almost as well be made of saw-dust as leather-dust. In consequence of the manufacture and sale of large quantities of inferior leather many old established tanners are now stamping their's with a trade mark, which is some guarantee to the buyer, as he may be sure no man will put his name or trade mark on an inferior article. It is hoped by this means to enable those who desire to buy the best quality of leather to be able to secure what they want, namely, a reliable article at a moderate cost.—Shoe and Leather Review.

A Scottish Spurgeon.

A preacher who is being more talked about, perhaps, than any other man in England is the Rev. John MacNeill, who has just accepted a call from Scotland to Regent's Square Chapel, London. A correspondent, who heard him recently, writes: "I had thought from anything I had seen published of MacNeill's sermons that he was only a Scotch edition of Spurgeon or Moody, but though there is something that reminds one of Moody in things he says his individualism is very pronounced. His homely Scotch accent and reverence in prayer drew me at once; and then his plain, earnest, unpretentious talk in preaching, with here and there a telling illustration, with some light touches both of humor and pathos, all combined to make you forget the man under the power of his utterances. So far as I could see he seemed a plain, broad shouldered, sturdy Scot, with an honest, good humored face."

Visitors to the Whipping Post.

"There is not in the State of Delaware to-day a single penitentiary. If a man beats his wife or sets fire to a neighbor's barn, or breaks into a house, he isn't shut up with a lot of other criminals, with full time and opportunity to learn all their tricks of deviltry that he did not know before. As a preventive of crime the whipping post has a much greater terror than a term in the penitentiary, and I have never known of a man that came back for second dose. He simply leaves the State. Maybe he comes to New York; I don't know. At any rate he seeks another home, and you may rest assured that if he stays in Delaware he lives a very quiet life. To be sure it is a relic of barbarism, but it is our way."—Governor Biggs in the New York Star.

Cooler Than a Flannel Shirt.

The flannel shirt is coming in for its full share of adoration during the hot spell, when starched linen wilts so easily. There is only one thing that is cooler than this article, and that is a calm and contented mind. There's nothing more heating than fret and worry.—Boston Herald.

CRAWLING UNDER.

An Old-time Sport and Its Modern Disheartening Dangers.

The red lemonade isn't anything like as red as it used to be, and the facilities for crawling under the canvas are absolutely wanting. This is not fair. It is a discrimination against the boy who has not collected enough scrap-iron to produce the price of a ticket. In the good old one-ring days as soon as the bills were up every boy, whose father could see nothing ennobling in the circus, plunged madly into the junk business until the necessary 13 pounds of wrought iron at 2 cents per pound or 50 pounds of cast iron at one half cent per pound were collected. But sometimes there was great stringency in the scrap-iron market. This frequently happened when circuses came a few weeks apart, and after the first one folks learned to carry in their garden tools and kettles nights. In such events competition ran high to secure a situation as water-carrier to a Prohibition elephant. In default of securing this there was no recourse but to crawl under the canvas. I believe canvasmen preferred this way. They were accustomed to permit a boy to get his head under the bolt-ropes and then help him on his way rejoicing with a kick which boosted him into a flight only equaled by the man who jumps from one trapeze to another at that critical moment when the bass-horn snorts. Now all this is changed. The most impecunious boy you ever saw can not get within 100 feet of the promised land without being yelled at by a vulgar second-mate kind of person who has the bad taste to kick outward instead of inward. Such is progress. Such are the brutal tactics indulged in by the exponents of the tent-show renaissance to popularize the ticket-waggon. That which is missed by the present generation more than anything else is the above mentioned temperance elephant whose motto is "Water, cold, cold water for me." Now, with a whole "drove of performing pachyderms" there is no longer a chance to carry water for six hours to pay for two-hours bliss. The drove simply connects its hose to the water plugs, while the householders of the neighboring wards send complaints to the water office and abuse the Commissioner of Public Works. The boy of to-day misses the toothless old "Monarch of the Forest," which is the professional alias of the misanthropic, weary lion, and also fails to know intimately the man who stood in front of the cage and told how many little boys he had eaten at the last stand. The combination of liar and lion furnished more good thrill than the dozen cages of sleek "Monarchs" in the big show of to-day.—Chicago Inter Ocean.

GAMBLING ON BOARD SHIP.

Poker the Most Popular Game Among the Crowds Crossing the Ocean.

The Paris Exposition has been a godsend to the steamship gamblers, who have plied their trade with vigor during the past few months. They have followed their profession regularly, and with profit, until complaints at the steamship offices about transatlantic gamblers have been as thick as flies.

"More people have been carried across the ocean this year by the different lines of steamers than ever before," said an agent the other day. "Our steamers have been crowded, and from all accounts those from other lines have been in the same condition. The great crowd has been attracted by the Exposition, and many of them being young men with plenty of money, have been fleeced by the gamblers.

Gambling is not allowed on board of the steamers, but how can you help it when it is done in private state-rooms, where no one sees it? It is in their state-rooms that the professional high sea sharpers fleece the young men whose fortunes are greater than their knowledge of cards.

"Poker is the most popular game on shipboard, although on one of the recent voyages a gambler tried to start a game of faro in his stateroom, but was stopped by the ship authorities. There is hardly a ship that leaves the city but carries one or more professional gamblers on board, although none of the agents of the big lines would sell tickets to them if they knew it beforehand. Men love gambling too well to be deprived of it and they will have professional card players so long as they are willing to put up small or large stakes. It is hard work to amuse oneself on the steamships during a long voyage, and it is only natural that many should take to their favorite game of cards. They gamble in a friendly way; make acquaintances until they find that they are fleeced out of large amounts by some professional. Then, rather than let it be known, they fail to report it to the proper authorities. I know of two or three club men from New York and Philadelphia who were fleeced out of several thousand dollars this summer in coming from Queenstown to New York. But they would willingly give several thousand dollars more rather than have their losses made public. They don't want their names connected with cards or the gambling table, and so the matter is hushed up.—New York Letter to Philadelphia Times.

Cure for Indigestion.

For indigestion, the external application of something warm to the stomach, a piece of flannel, or anything to keep the stomach warm and promote a supply of blood, is sometimes of great benefit. In taking hot water internally, it is best to sip it by spoonfuls, waiting a moment after each for an eructation of the gas disengaged by the hot water from the fermenting contents of the stomach.

Warner's Safe Cure cures both malaria and kidney disease by taking out of the blood the poisonous malarial germs, and by putting the kidneys in a healthy condition.

—Lawyer—My conscience troubled me a little last night about that fee I charged Jones yesterday. Friend (astonished)—Your conscience? Lawyer—Certainly. I was afraid that I had been unjust to myself.

Emeline—Alfred, I am very fond of you, but I doubt if I love you enough to be your wife. Alfred—Emeline, give me, oh give me the benefit of the doubt! Emeline—I will, Alfred. Henceforth all is over between us.

Fault is one of those little things that do not need to be seen in order to be found. A blind man can find fault.

FACTS ABOUT INSOMNIA.

Those Who Always Practice Punctuality and Those Who Do Not.

Are you afflicted with insomnia? Perhaps you have too much time for sleep. Perhaps you depend too much on sleep for rest and recuperation. For sleep is not the sole rest of used-up nerves. Sociability, congeniality and the enjoyment of good company rest the body quite as much as sleep. The dreary monotony of life in many a household, involving this tumbling into bed with the mechanical regularity of a machine at 9 or 10 o'clock in the evening, does not always rest weary bodies. "Early to bed and early to rise" does not always make a man healthy, wealthy or wise. Numbers of organizations are only capable of five or six hours sleep at a time, and their early lying down to rest is often succeeded by an early waking up and a consequent restless tossing for hours preceding daybreak. The practicers of punctuality are often surprised after breaking their own cast-iron rules, and passing two or three later hours of mirth and jollity past their usual bed time, to find themselves even more refreshed in the morning than usual. The relaxation of sociability had rested them more than sleep would or an attempt to sleep. But these are conditions not so easily reached in the average family. In fashionable life we have a formal, exhausting, mechanical evening of more or less dissipation. On the other hand the evenings of many families are monotonous humdrum. They involve the assemblage of the same people, the same surroundings, the same paterfamilias yawning over his paper, and the same querulous mamma overladen with family cares. Fresh people, with fresh thought, fresh atmosphere, anything to stir up and agitate the pool of domestic stagnation, are sadly needed and sadly scarce. There needs to be also a constant succession of such fresh people to bring about these results. The world is full of men and women, and in a better regulated life it would be their business after the day's work was done to entertain each other, and give each other fresh life. As it is now, hundreds, if not thousands, of our households are little better than cells for the incarceration of each family. Thousands are thus worn out prematurely from utter lack of domestic recreation. There might be written over the graves of hundreds of thousands: "Bored to death by the stagnation of domestic life."—The Christian at Work.

"She's Much Older Than Her Husband."

We heard a young girl make the above remark the other day about a lady with whom we are slightly acquainted. It was not true, yet the lady in question actually does look five years older than her husband, although she is really several years his junior. She is prematurely aged, and functional derangement is the cause. Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription would cure her, and should be recommended to her, and to all others who are in the same condition. If the reader of this chances to be a similar sufferer, let her get the "Prescription." It will bring back her lost beauty, and, better still, it will remove all those distressing symptoms which have made life a burden to her so long. Money refunded if it don't give satisfaction. See guarantee printed on the bottle wrapper.

A Popular Error Corrected.

There is a widespread popular impression that a very large proportion of deaths from disease take place in the early morning hours—between 4 and 6 o'clock. That this is an error is well known to most medical men. From time to time careful observations have been made in hospitals which have resulted in showing that the act of death takes place with fairly equal frequency during the whole 24 hours of the day.

$500 Not Called For.

It seems strange that it is necessary to persuade men that you can cure their disease by offering a premium to the man who fails to receive benefit. And yet Dr. Sage undoubtedly cured thousands of cases of obstinate catarrh with his "Catarrh Remedy," who would never have applied to him if it had not been for his offer of the above sum for an incurable case. Who is the next bidder for cure or cash?

An Understanding at Last.

Old Mr. Widower had been sitting silently alone with Miss Autumn for fifteen minutes. Finally he spoke: "Miss Autumn, you are pretty—" "Oh, Mr. Widower!" "You are pret—" "How can you, Mr. Widower?" "I started to say you were pretty—" "Oh, you horrid man, stop!" "Condemn it all, woman," shouted Mr. Widower, rising and breaking for the door. "I wanted to say that you were pretty near as old as I am. Now, demme, I think you're twice as old."—San Francisco Examiner.

P stands for Pierce, the wonderful doctor,
Providing safe remedies, of which he is concoctor
Pleasant to taste and easy to take,
Purgative Pellets now bear off the cake.

Raspberry vinegar is a luxury that may be indulged in by families living in the country who have an abundance of fruit. Put four quarts of berries in a stone jar, with one quart of the best cider vinegar, and mash to a paste with a wooden pestle. Set in the sun twelve hours and then place all night in a cool place. Strain off the juice the next day and pour it over four quarts of fresh berries. The second day strain, and to each quart of the juice allow one pint of water and five pounds of granulated sugar. Heat over a slow fire until the sugar is dissolved. Bring to a boil slowly, skimming off the scum. As soon as it reaches the boiling point, strain and bottle while warm, sealing the corks with wax. This syrup, or cordial, although too expensive for ordinary use, is a delightful drink for summer-evening gatherings. Put two tablespoonfuls in a glass of ice-water and embellish with any fruit in season.

DUNL 30 89.

DUNN'S BAKING POWDER
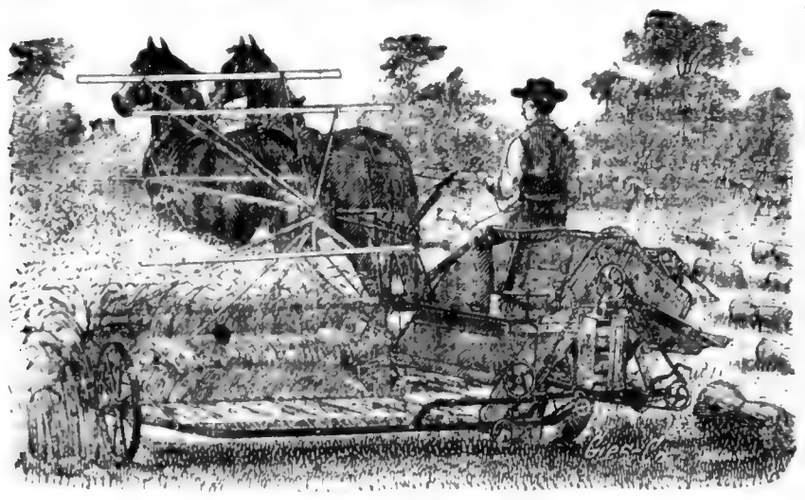
THE COOK'S BEST FRIEND



THE BRANTFORD LIGHT STEEL BINDER!

Over Four Thousand Sold in Season 1888. Being More Than Half of all Other Binders made in Canada.

Before purchasing I would respectfully request the farmers to
1st. Carefully examine the "Brantford Machines" and faithfully compare with others.
2nd. Enquire of your neighbors who have used "Brantford Machines" and get their opinion o their working and lasting qualities.
If you will follow the above advice, you will be convinced of these two facts
1st. "Brantford Machines" are possessed of more improvements and are better made than any other machines in Canada.
2nd. "Brantford Machines" are more popular, give better satisfaction, and are more durable than any other machines in Canada.
Therefore 1st. Give your order EARLY for a Brantford Binder or Mower.
2nd. And you will be sure to be perfectly satisfied with the machine you get.

THOS. A. BLAKELY,
FLESHERTON

Heard's Carriage Works.

—:— MANUFACTURER OF —:—

Carriages, Buggies, Wagons, Sleighs, Cutters, &c., &c.

HEARD'S IMPROVED HARROWS AND GATES.

Special Attention given to PAINTING, TRIMMING, HORSE-SHOEING and al Kinds of JOB WORK. Nothing but first-class material used throughout and satisfaction guaranteed. We have for sale

—Lumber, Lath and Shingles.—

Also Agent for Dick's Rollers, Mowers and Binders, Dick's Champion, Royal Rob Roy, Granger and Standard Plows. Two and Three Furrow Gang Plows. Horse Powers for 4 Horses. Straw Cutters, Scufflers and Turnip Drills.

JOHN H. HEARD, Durham Street, Flesherton.

FLESHERTON
STOVE
EMPORIUM

A large assortment of STOVES, ca makes STOVE FURNISHINGS, TIN WARE, COPPERWARE, LAMP GOODS etc ,constantly on hand

EVETROUGHING A SPECI ALITY

F. G. Karstedt, Strain's old Stand Flesherton.

NOW IS THE TIME
Get Your Tailoring Done
AT
C. J. LEITCHE'S
FLESHERTON.

REMOVAL

I desire to inform the public that I have removed my well known tin shop to

MOORE'S Block, Durham St.

A complete stock of tinware will be found in my new premises

REPAIRING
EAVETROUGHING
Etc. done as heretofore

I have secured the agency for
the Celebrated Singer Sewing Machine.

Requesting my old friends to come and see me in my new shop, I remain, etc.,

JAS. SULLIVAN.

FLOUR, FLOUR,

STONE
FLOUR!

MR. P. LOUCKS

Is prepared to do your Grist ing on short notice and grinds on the old terms of every twelfth bushel. Seven cents per bag of two bushels for Chopping done every day. The Little Mill is big in the estimation of the public.

Satisfaction Guaranteed

P. LOUCKS, Proprietor

Good stabling for horses

It Pays To

GO TO THE BEST

AND THAT IS THE Northern
Business College,
OF OWEN SOUND.

The best and most practical course of study
The best teaching talent.
The best accommodation for students
The best methods of instruction
The best results from that instruction after students graduate

For annual announcements giving particulars regarding the course of study, terms, &c., address
C. A. FLEMING, PRINCIPAL.

Owen Sound, Nov 1st, 88

For Sale

Steam flour mill for sale at Flesherton Station 2 run stone, double reel bolt, smut mill, duster and purifier. Will be sold cheap and on easy terms. This is a bargain. Apply to

ROGER LEVER
Flesherton P. O

COUNTY & DISTRICT

Mr. W. H. Blair, the popular and widely known piano, organ and sewing machine man, while at Bell's Corners the other day, heard of a farmer in the neighborhood owning a colt of most extraordinary description. Mr. Blair drove out and purchased the animal, and we venture to say it is one of the greatest freaks of nature which that dame has ever produced. It is a fully developed colt with one exception that it is a biped, having only two legs—the hind ones. Mr. Blair's stables were visited by hundreds of persons on Friday and Saturday. The animal died on Saturday morning, having injured itself during the night. It is the intention to have it preserved as a curiosity.—[Arthur Enterprise.

BAD ACCIDENT.—On Monday last a young boy, only child of Mr. Vick Bates, of Melancthon, was injured by being kicked by a horse. His scull was badly fractured, and only slight hopes are entertained for his recovery.—[Shelburne Free Press.

A FATAL ACCIDENT.—On Tuesday last a son of Mr. McAlpine, of Chatsworth, aged about 25 years, being home for holidays, went out with other young men to spend an afternoon shooting; and while returning he was in the act of lifting his gun over the seat in the rig in which they were riding, bringing the gun towards him by the muzzle when the trigger caught on something, discharging the load, the ball entering his breast. He was brought home and medical aid was summoned; but he continued to sink, and died at 3 o'clock the following morning. The sad event is a severe blow to his parents.—[Markdale Standard.

LOTS FOR SALE BY TENDER

—IN THE—

VILLAGE OF EUGENIA.

There is now offered for sale by tender in the village of Eugenia, the following park lots, namely: Lot No. 6 and 7 on the south side of Raglan street, and lots No. 6 and 7 on the north side of Raglan street, each lot containing one-half acre more or less, and being a part of the estate of the late Archibald Cairns, deceased. Tenders must be addressed to GEO. STEWART Sr., Flesherton P.O., and must be received by him on or before August 1st, 1889. The lowest or any tender not necessarily accepted. Terms cash.

HENRY CAIRNS
GEORGE STEWART } Executors
JOHN WRIGHT

D. McTavish,

HORSESHOER AND
GENERAL BLACKSMITH,
Collingwood Street,
FLESHERTON, - ONT.

Manufacturing of Wagons, Sleighs, Buggies, Delivery carts, etc. Horseshoeing promptly attended to. Special attention given to contract work for tender feet.

Logging and Plow Chains constantly on hand.

ROLLER FLOUR
best in the markets at
Blackburn's.
Ice Cream Parlors!
all kinds of cooling summer drinks.
Cured Meats,
Lard, Bologna,
etc.
ALL FRUITS IN THEIR SEASON
—AT—
BLACKBURN'S

'This Year's
MYRTLE
CUT and PLUG
SMOKING TOBACCO
FINER THAN EVER.
See
T & B

in bronze on
EACH PLUG and PACKAGE

BOOTS & SHOES.

I have a very large supply on hand and

Selling very Cheap.

IN LADIES WEAR. Prunella, Kid, Polish Calf and Buff Congolas, Lace and Button

Misse's, Youth's and Children's

A large assortment, all sorts and sizes.

MENS WEAR

Fine Calf and Congola, Balmorals and Gaiters, also Heavy Boots and Shoes. Prices and Material cannot be beat.

W. CLAYTON.

Photos, Photos, Photos.

We are now turning out work far superior in style and finish to any ever produced in Flesherton.

COPYING and ENLARGING at MODERATE RATES.

PICTURE FRAMING

done in all its branches. A good stock of FRAMES and MOULDINGS kept constantly on hand. Will also introduce the new BROMIDE PORTRAIT, a picture that is giving entire satisfaction wherever introduced. SAMPLES can be seen at my Gallery where all particulars as to Price, Style &c., can be ascertained.

MRS. BULMER,
FLESHERTON

HEALTH FOR ALL.

HOLLOWAY'S PILLS & OINTMENT

THE PILLS

Purify the Blood, correct all Disorders of

Liver, Stomach, Kidn'ys, and Bowels.

They invigorate and restore to health Debilitated Constitutions, and are invaluable in all Complaints incidental to Females of all ages. For Children and the aged they are priceless.

THE OINTMENT

an infallible remedy for Bad Legs, Bad Breasts, Old Wounds, Sores and Ulcers. It is famous for Gout and Rheumatism. For disorders of the Chest it has no equal.

For SORE THROAT, BRONCHITIS, COUGHS, COLDS

Glandular swellings, and all Skin Diseases it has no rival, and for contracted and stiff joints it acts like a charm.

Manufactured only at Professor HOLLOWAY'S Establishment

78, New Oxford Street (late 533, Oxford Street), London,

and are sold at 1s 1½d, 2s. 9d., 4s 6d., 11s., 22s., and 33s each Box or Pot, and may be had of all Medicine Vendors throughout the World.

Purchasers should look to the Label on the Pots and Boxes. If the address is not 533, Oxford Street, London, they are spurious.

PRICEVILLE
BAKERY.
A. WATSON!

Desires to inform the public that he can furnish

CAKES AND PIES
To Order.

FIRST CLASS BREAD ALWAYS ON HAND.

will visit Flesherton twice a week: on TUESDAYS and FRIDAYS, with a full supply of goods.

DROP A CARD IF YOU DESIRE ME TO CALL.

WEDDING and FANCY cakes a specialty

A. WATSON,
Priceville.

Situation.

with steady employment and good pay all the year round, to reliable men furnishing satisfactory references. S.A. McCOMBER & Co., Nurserymen, Rochester, N. Y.

FLESHERTON
PLANING MILLS

Having purchased the Flesherton Planing Mills from B. J. Sproule, Esq., I now desire to inform the PUBLIC
that I am in a position to do
ALL KINDS
-OF
General planing mill work,
such as
SASH, DOORS, DOOR FRAMES
Planing and Matching, re-sawing, etc.

Good Workmanship Guaranteed.

A large quantity of good dry pine lumber on hand.

W. J. BOWERS,
Flesherton.

LOOK!

HAVING done business in Canada for years, our reputation is established. We want three men in your vicinity to represent us, to whom exclusive territory will be given. Handsome outfit free. Salary and expenses paid weekly. Previous experience not required. Write at once for terms. Hardy stock for Canada a specialty. MAY BROTHERS, Nurserymen, Rochester, N. Y.

FLESHERTON ADVANCE.

"TRUTH BEFORE FAVOR"—"PRINCIPLES, NOT MEN."

VOL. VIII., NO 420. FLESHERTON, ONT., THURSDAY, JULY 15, 1889. W. H. THURSTON, WATCHES,

Clocks, & Jewelry.
STUDY
Your Own Interests
by buying your Watches, Clocks, Jewelry Spectacles at Silverware at Russell's Noted
JEWELRY STORE.
FLESHERTON.

In watches we have a very large stock of Elgin, Waltham, Illinois Springfield, Columbus and Swiss Levers, in Ladies' and Gents' sizes. Gold, Silver and Silver ore cases. Brooches and Barpins, of the latest design. Fine Gold and Rolled Gold Earings, Cuff Buttons, Charms, Chains, and a beautiful stock of Ladies' Gem Engagemen Rings. A full supply of 18 K. Wedding Rings always on hand. Also a large and well-assorted stock of Silverware and Spectacles at very low prices, and remember the place to get your Watches, Clocks, Jewelry, etc., repaired is at

RUSSELL'S, FLESHERTON.

All work personally attended to by J. G. Russell.

THE ONE PRICE
Cash Store.
STILL ON DECK!
Goods cheaper than ever

This is the time for all farmers to lay in a good stock of

Groceries

for haying and harvesting. We have put the prices down to meet the demands.

Dry Goods, Boots, Shoes, Etc.
—AT—
ROCK - BOTTOM - PRICES.
More Customers wanted
To Carry off the Bargains.
McDONALD & EVANS,
Wright's Old Stand.

Pumps ! Pumps !

J. McCullough,
Markdale,

manufacturer of pumps, desires to inform the public that he is prepared to furnish pumps for

Deep wells, gravel wells, etc.

parties who have heretofore had difficulty with both wells are

Guaranteed Satisfaction

by using my articles. I learned my business with the late J. Fear of Meaford, the superiority of whose pumps was a household word in Grey a few years ago.

Be sure and call on me if you desire anything in the pump line.

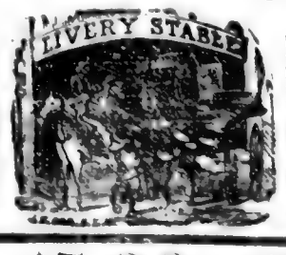
J. McCullough.

Durham Bull for service.

Mr. Alex. Stewart, lot 15?, 3rd range west, Artemesia, desires to inform the public that he has a fine thoroughbred Durham Bull for service on his premises.

TERMS—$1, payable 1st Feb., 1890. For four cows or over a liberal reduction will be made

Flesherton Livery Stables.
D. CLAYTON, Proprietor.



First class horses and vehicles for hire at reasonable rates.

Stables opposite Munshaw's hotel.

Special attention paid to commercial business.

THE ADVANCE.

Is published
Every Thursday,
FROM THE OFFICE,
Sydenham Street, - - Flesherton, Ont.

TERMS OF SUBSCRIPTION:

$1 per annum when paid strictly in advance
$1.50 per annum when not so paid.

W. H. THURSTON,
Editor and Proprietor.

The editor of the Streetsville Review still has a fatherly eye upon Flesherton and the County of Grey in general. Here is how his optics see matters in this county re high school matters :

The County of Grey is three times as large as Peel. It sends three members to the House of Commons and three to the Legislative Assembly. There are seventeen townships and the County Town, Owen Sound, is situated on the extreme Northern boundary. The population of the County is between 80,000 and 90,000. There are three Public School Inspectors. And yet the large district, with its teeming population, possesses but one High School, and that is located about as far away from the center as it is possible to get it. Efforts have been made time and again to get other High Schools established, but the County Council have repeatedly voted them down, and by their shortsiged and retrogressive policy have driven scores of pupils to seek for higher educational facilities in outside places. There should be at least two more High Schools in Grey than there is—one, say, at Meaford and the other at Flesherton. Let the press keep up the agitation until these are secured. It will only be a matter of time—the reins of power will not always remain in the hands of the opponents of increased educational facilities.

Sullivan and Kilrain are fugitives from justice, and it is said they are "are on the way to Canada" and will meet in Toronto. It is rather hard on Toronto to have these gentlemen seek its hospitality in this manner, when it has such an unblemished character to defend, and no doubt the good people of that city will endeavor to persuade the pugilists that Hamilton or Mimico is a much healthier point to rusticate in—that is if they have not got considerable money to squander.

From a late Parliamentary return it is learned that there are still 104 veterans of the war of 1812 still living and receiving pensions, divided among the provinces as follows : Ontario 42, Quebec 52, New Brunswick 4, Nova Scotia 1, Manitoba 1, United States 4.

Maxwell.

From our own Correspondent.

Mr. R. Brown intends putting up a stable and shed this week.

Mrs. T. Clark returned to Parry Sound last week.

Miss Lilly Long was visiting friends near Dundalk last week.

Mrs. T. Hamlin, of Collingwood, is visiting friends near Maxwell.

Miss Etta Spotford is home from Collingwood, where she has been attending the Collegiate Institute.

George Heron intends leaving for Dakota this month.

Meaford Road.

From our own Correspondent.

A good investment has been made at the Wesley church by putting on a new gate.

Mr. S. Osburn is erecting a new building on the school premises.

Mr. J. Brodie was down to Toronto last week attending a meeting of the grange salt company.

Mrs. Wm. Hutchinson is away on a visit to her daughter, Mrs. Dean at Emery.

Mr. J. Warling, Mrs. Warling, and Mr. R. Warling were away on a visit to Durham last week.

Mrs. Johnston of Wiarton, is visiting at her father's.

Mormonism.

To the Editor of The Advance.

SIR—With your permission I will give your readers a short sketch of the teaching of the Mormons. We had some of them lately in Balsam Valley, trying to convert us to their faith, giving us to understand that all other churches are on the road to perdition. Elder McIntosh began by showing 1. That the Church of Rome departed from the faith and is the great whore and mother of harlots, and that all the other churches are harlots and their preachers impostors, as the signs do not follow their preaching. This is certainly Mormon impudence, for I know not of any other society that the words whore, harlots and impositors will apply to or suit better than to them. They are the only church known in America that is charged with polygamy and polytheism. They maintain that they are the only people on earth to-day that have any authority to preach or baptise, and that they hold the keys of the Aaronic and Melchisedek priesthood, for that they were ordained by John the Baptist, sent from heaven for that purpose by Peter, James and John, who they say, held the keys of the Melchisedek priesthood, and as they claim to be the only authorised priesthood and church. I will give to your readers their authority for preaching from their own writings, which be sufficient to prove their whole system is an imposture and a beastly system of idolatry, composed of Mormonism, Mahommedanism, Smithism, Rigdonism, Prattism, and almost every other ism, including infidelity. I will give you the corner stone of Mormonism. Their ordination : We, on a certain day, went into the woods to pray and enquire of the Lord respecting baptism for the remission of sins, as we found mention in the translation of the plates. While we were thus engaged praying and calling on the Lord, a messenger from heaven descended in a cloud of light, and having laid his hands on us he ordained us, saying : "On you, my fellow servants, in the name of the Messiah, I confer the priesthood of Aaron, which holds the keys of the ministering of angels, and of the gospel of repentance, and by baptism, by immersion, for the remission of sins. And this shall never be taken again from the earth until the sons of Levi do offer again an offering to the Lord in righteousness, he said that this Aaronic priesthood had not the power of laying on of hands for the gift of the holy spirit, but that this should be conferred on us hereafter, and he commanded us to go and be baptised, and gave us directions that I should baptise Oliver Cowdry, and that afterwards he should baptise me. Accordingly we went and were baptised. I baptised him first and afterwards he baptised me. After that I laid my hands on his head and ordained him to the Aaronic priesthood ; and afterwards he laid his hands on me and ordained me to the same priesthood, as we were commanded. The messenger who visited us on this occasion and conferred this priesthood on us said that his name was John, the same that is called John the Baptist in the New Testament, and that he acted under the direction of Peter, James and John, who held the keys of the priesthood of Melchisedek, which priesthood he said should in due time be conferred on us, and I should be the first elder and he the second." Joe Smith was always sure to be the first in everything. On page 102, Book of Doctrine and Covenants, Joe is to be called 1. Seer, 2. Translator, 3. Prophet, 4 Apostle, 5. Elder. In my next I will show to the readers of The Advance the absurdity of their claim to be so ordained, and that their claim is a flat contradiction of the Scriptures, and they are not entitled to any encouragement from those who love the truth.

ANTI-MORMON

Sixty Years Ago

Sung "Twenty Years Ago."

I'm thinking of our school days, Tom,
When we were young you know
Some things seem but as yesterday
Tho' sixty years ago.

And memories come, of that long past
Return but as a dream—
Part of a long forgotten
Adown time's restless stream

Those long, hard words, and "tables" learned
And writing "sure but slow"
And reading too, and rithmetic,
Of sixty years ago.

Our schoolmates, Tom, those boys and girls
We played with on the green,
Or hand sleigh riding down the hill,
How near to us they seem

Although some sixty years have fled,
Of sunshine, wintry snow,
Bright hopes, and disappointment too
Since three score years ago

See that old man with faltering step
Eyes dimmed, and hair so gray
Can that be "Rush," that sprightly boy
Our schoolmate once so gay ?

Ah, yes, and in the graveyard sleep
'Neath many a silent mound,
Some younger older, teachers dear
While yet we're "homeward bound

The old school house has crumbled down
Wild vines and grasses grow
Few school mates now are left, dear Tom
Of sixty years ago.

WM PURDY

Winnipeg, Canada, 1889

THE MARKETS.

FLESHERTON.

Carefully Corrected Each Week.

Flour	$5 25	$
Fall Wheat	90	0
Spring Wheat	88
Barley	0 30	0
Oats	0 25	0
Peas	0 50	0
Butter	0 15	0
Eggs, fresh	0 12	0
Potatos bush	0 15	0
Pork	6 00	6
Hay per ton	9 00	9
Hides	5 50	6
Sheepskins	0 50	0
Geese	0 05	0
Turkeys	0 10	0
Chickens per pair	0 25	0
Ducks per lb	0 06	0
Wool	0 18

SIGN
"Big Spex"

Reliable watches in

Gold, filled gold and Coin-silver cases.

Ladies and Gents'

Walnut and Nickle Clocks.

I am represented by A 1 watches and clocks backed up by reliable warrants, in more homes of Central Grey, than any jeweler doing biz. in this section.

If prices are not shed rock every time.

QUALITY Considered.

I would not be able to hold such a large share of Grey Co. trade as I have at present

"CASH or CREDIT"

will positivily do better by you,

Goods, Work and Warrants Considered.

than you can do elsewhere. Spex artistically fitted.

Work Carefully Done.

Fair Charges.

Stock now complete in all lines

Can save you $1 to $3.00 on watches.

Other lines will be held on live and let live margins

W. A. BROWN,
Jeweler and Optician
MARKDALE, Ont.

Roller Flour $5.00, Shorts 85cts., Bran 65cts., at W. TRIMBLE'S.

Three Stages.

I.

Sighing like a furnace,
Over ears in love,
Lost in adoration
Of his lady's glove.
Thinks no girl was ever
Quite as sweet as she.
Tells you she's an angel,
Expects you to agree.

II.

Moping and repining,
Glum and morose,
Asks the price of poison,
Thinks he'll take a dose.
Women are so fickle,
Love is all a sham,
Marriage is a failure
Like a broken dam.

III.

Whistling, blithe and cheerful,
Always bright and gay,
Dancing, singing, laughing,
All the livelong day,
Full of fun and frolic,
Caught in Fashion's whirl,
Thinks no more of poison—
Got another girl.

What Was It?

Guess what he had in his pocket,
Marbles and tops and sundry toys,
Such as always belong to boys,
A bitter apple, a leathern ball?—
Not at all.

What did he have in his pocket?
A bubble pipe and a rusty screw,
A brass watch-key broken in two,
A fish hook in a tangle of string?—
No such thing.

What did he have in his pocket?
Gingerbread crumbs, a whistle he made,
Buttons, a knife with a broken blade,
A nail or two and a rubber gun?—
Neither one.

What did he have in his pocket?
Before he knew it slyly crept
Under the treasures carefully kept,
And away they all of them quickly stole—
Wasn't it?

FIDELITY AND LOVE.

CHAPTER I.

AT THE FARM HOUSE.

It was a very pleasant, homelike old farm house, standing there among the New England hills, with the summer sunshine falling upon it, and the summer air, sweet with the perfumes of roses and June pinks, filling the wide hall and great square room, where, on the morning when our story opens, the utmost confusion prevailed. Carpets were up; curtains were down; huge boxes were standing everywhere, while into them two men and a boy were packing the furniture scattered promiscously around, for on the morrow the family, who had owned and occupied the house so long, were to leave the premises and seek another home in the little village about two miles away. In one of the lower rooms in the wing to the right, where the sunshine was the brightest and the rose-scented air the sweetest, a white-faced woman lay upon a couch looking at and listening to a lady who sat talking to her, with money and pride and selfishness stamped upon her as plainly as if the words had been placarded upon her back. The lady was Mrs. Marshall-More of Boston, whose handsome country house was not far from the red farmhouse, which, with its rich, well cultivated acres, had, by the foreclosure of a mortgage she held upon it, recently come into her possession, or rather into that of her half brother, who had bidden it off for her.

Mrs. Marshall-More had once been plain Mrs. John More, but since her husband's death, she had prefixed her maiden name, with a hyphen to the More, making herself Mrs. Marshall-More which, she thought, had a very aristocratic look and sound. She was a great lady in her own immediate circle of friends in the city, and a greater lady in Merrivale, where she passed her summers, and her manner toward the little woman on the couch was one of infinite superiority and patronage, mingled with a show of interest and pity. She had driven to the farmhouse that morning, ostenibly to say good-bye to the family, but really to go over the place which she had coveted so long as a most desirable adjunct to her possessions. What she was saying to the white-faced woman in the widow's cap was this:

"I am very sorry for you, Mrs. Graham, and I hope you do not blame me for foreclosing the mortgage. I had to have the money, for Archie's college expenses will be very heavy, and then I am going to Europe this summer, and I did not care to draw from my other investments."

"Oh, no, I blame no one, but it is very hard all the same to leave the old home where I have been so happy," Mrs. Graham replied, and Mrs. Marshall-More went on: "I am glad to hear you say so, for the Merrivale people have been very ill-natured about it and I have heard more than once that I hastened the foreclosure and intend to tear down the old house and build a cottage, which is false."

To this Mrs. Graham made no reply, and Mrs. Marshall-More continued:

"You will be much better off in the village than in this great rambling house, and your children will find employment there. Maude must be 18, and ought to be a help to you. I hear she is a sentimental dreamer, living mostly in the clouds with people only known to herself, and perhaps she needed this change to rouse her to the realities of life."

"Maude is the dearest girl in the world," was the mother's quick protest against what seemed like disapprobation of her daughter.

"Yes of course," was Mrs. Marshall-More's response. "Maude is a nice girl and a pretty girl and will be a great comfort to you when she wakes to the fact that life is earnest and not all a dream, and in time you will be quite as happy in your new home as you could be here, where it must be very dreary in the winter, when the snow drifts are piled up to the very window ledges, and the wind screams at you through every crevice."

"Oh-h," Mrs. Graham said, with a shudder, her thoughts going back to the day when the blinding snow had come down in great billows upon the newly-made grave in which she left her husband and went back alone to the desolate home where he would never come again.

It had been so terrible and sudden, his going from her. Well in the morning, and dead at night; killed by a locomotive and brought to her so mangled that she could never have recognized him as her husband. People had called him over-generous and extravagant, and perhaps he was, but the money he spent so lavishly was always for others, not for himself, and, as the holder of the heavy mortgage on his farm had been content with the interest and never pressed his claim, he had made no effort to lessen it, even after he knew it had passed into the hands of Mrs. Marshall-More, who had oftened expressed a wish to own the place known as the Spring Farm and so-called from the mumerous springs upon it. She would fill it with her city friends and set up quite an English establishment, she said; and now it was hers, to all intents and purposes, for though the deed was in her brother's name, it was understood that she was mistress of the place and could do what she liked with it. Of the real owner, Max Gordon, her half-brother, little was known, expect the fact that he was very wealthy and had for years been engaged to a lady who, by a fall from a horse, had been crippled for life. It was also rumored that the lady had insisted upon releasing her lover from his engagement, but he had refused to be released, and still clung to the hope that she would eventually recover. Just where he was at present, nobody knew. He seldomed visited his sister, although she was very proud of him and very fond of of talking of her brother Max, who, she said, was so generous and good, although a little queer. He had bidden off the Spring Farm because she asked him to do so, and a few thousand dollars more or less were nothing to him; then, telling her to do what she liked with it, he had gone his way, while poor Lucy Graham's heart was breaking at the thought of leaving the home which her husband had made so beautiful for her. An old-fashioned place, it is true, but one of those old-fashioned places to which our memory clings fondly, and our thoughts go back with an intense longing, years after the flowers we have watered are dead, and the shrubs we have planted are trees pointing to the sky. A great square house, with a wing on either side, a wide hall through the centre and a fireplace in every room. A well-kept lawn in front, dotted with shade trees and flowering shrubs, and on one side of it a running brook, fed by a spring on the hillside to the west; borders and beds and mounds of flowers—tulips and roses and pansies, and pinks and peonies and lilies, and geraniums and verbenas, each blossoming in its turn and making the garden and grounds a picture of beauty all the summer long. No wonder that Lucy Graham loved it and shrank from leaving it and shrank, too, from Mrs. Marshall-More's attempts at consolation, saying only when that lady rose to go, "It was kind in you to come and I thank you for it; but just now my heart aches too hard to be comforted. Good-bye."

"Good-bye, I shall call when you get settled in town, and if I can be of any service to you I will gladly do so," Mrs. Marshall More said, as she left the room and went out to her carriage, where she stood for a moment looking up and down the road, and saying to herself, "Where can Archie be?"

CHAPTER II.

WHERE AR HIE WAS.

A long lane wound to the westward across a strip of land called the mowing lot, through a bit of woods and on to a grassy hillside, where, under the shade of a butternut tree a pair of fat sleek oxen were standing with a look of content in their large, bright eyes as if well pleased with this unwonted freedom from the plough and the cart. Against the side of one of them a young girl was leaning, with her arm thrown across its neck and her hand caressing the long white horn of the dumb creature which seemed to enjoy it. The girl was Maude Graham, and she made a very pretty picture as she stood there with her short brown hair curling in soft rings about her forehead, her dark blue eyes; her bright, glowing face, and a mouth which looked as if made for kisses and sweetness rather than the angry words she was hurling at the young man, or boy, for he was only 20, who stood before her.

"Archie More," she was saying, "I don't think it very nice in you to talk to me in that patronising kinp of way as if you were so much my superior in everything and trying to convince me that it is nothing for us to give up the dear old place where every stone and stump means somebody to me, for I know them all and have talked with all and called them by name, just as I know the maiden ferns and water lilies and where the earliest arbutus blossoms in the spring. Oh, Archie, how can I leave Spring Farm and never come back again. I think I hate you all for taking it from us, and especially your uncle Max."

Here she broke down entirely, and laying her face on the shining coat of the ox began to cry as if her heart would break, while Archie looked at her in real distress wondering what he should say. He was a city-bred young man, with a handsome boyish face, and in a way very fond of Maude, whom he had known ever since he was 13 and she 11, and he first came to Merrivale to spend the summer. They had played and fished together in the brook, and rowed together on the pond and quarreled and made up, and latterly they had flirted a little, too, although Archie was careful that the flirting should not go too far, for he felt that there was a vast difference between Archie More, son of Mrs. Marshall-More, and Maude Graham, daughter of a country farmer. And still he thought her the sweet, prettiest girl he had ever seen, a jolly lot he called her, and he writhed under her bitter words, and when she cried he wanted to cry and tried to comfort and explain matters as best he could. But Maude was not to be appeased. She had felt all the time that the place need not have been sold, that it was a hasty thing, and though she did not blame Archie she was very sore against Mrs. Marshall-More and her brother, and her only answer to all Archie could say was, "You needn't talk. I hate you all, and your uncle Max the most, and if I ever see him I'll tell him so, and if I don't you may tell him for me!"

Archie could keep silent and hear his mother blamed and himself, but he roused in defence of his uncle Max.

"Hate my uncle Max!" he exclaimed. "Why, he is the best man that ever lived, and the kindest. He knew nothing of you, or how you'd feel, when he bought the place; if he had he wouldn't have done it; and if he could see you now, crying on that ox's neck, he'd give it back to you. That would be just like him."

"As if I'd take it," Maud said scornfully as she lifted up her head and dashed the tears from her eyes with a rapid movement of both hands. "No, Archie More, I shall never take Spring Farm as a gift from any one, much less from your uncle Max; but I shall buy it of him some day if he keeps it long enough."

"You?" Archie asked, and Maude replied, "Yes, I, why not? I know I am poor now, but I shall not always be so. People call me crazy, a dreamer, a crank, and all that, because they cannot see what I see; the people who are with me always, my friends, and I know their names and how they look and where they live; Mrs. Kimbrick, with her fifty daughters, all Eliza Anns, and Mrs. Webster, with her fifty daughters, all Ann Elizas, and Angeline Mason, who comes and talks to me in the twilight, wearing a yellow dress; they are real to me as you are, and do you think I am crazy and a crank because of that?"

Archie said he didn't, but he looked a little suspiciously at the girl standing there so erect, her eyes shining with a strange light as she talked to him of things he could not understand. He had heard of this Mrs. Kimbrick and Mrs. Webster before, with their fifty daughters each, and had thought Maude queer, to say the least. He was sure of it now as she went on:

"Is the earth crazy because there is in it a little acorn which you can't see, but which is still there, maturing and taking root for the grand old oak, whose branches will one day give shelter to many a tired head? Of course not; neither am I, and sometimes these brain children, or brain seeds, call them what you like, will take shape and grow, and the world will hear of them, and of me; and you and your mother will be proud to say you knew me once, when the people praise the book I am going to write."

"A book!" and Archie laughed incredulously, it seemed so absurd that little Maude Graham should ever become an author of whom the world would hear.

"Yes," she answered him decidedly. "A book! Why not? it is in me; it has been there always, and I can no more help writing it than you can help doing——well, nothing, as you always have. Yes, I shall write a book, and you will read it, Archie More, and thousands more, too; and I shall put Spring Farm in it, and you, and your uncle Max. I think I shall make him the villian."

She was very hard upon poor Max, whose only offence was that he had bidden off Spring Farm to please his sister, but Archie was ready to defend him again:

"If you knew uncle Max," he said, "you would make him your hero instead of your villian, for a better man never lived. He is kindness itself and the soul of honor. Why, when he was very young he was engaged to a girl who fell from a horse and broke her leg, or neck, or her back, I've forgotten which. Anyhow, she cannot walk and has to be wheeled in a chair, but Max sticks to her like a burr, because he thinks he ought. I am sure I hope he will never marry her."

"Why not?" Maude asked, and he replied, "Because you see, Max has a heap of money, and if he never marries and I outlive him some of it will come to me. Money is a good thing, I tell you."

"I didn't suppose you as mean as that Archie More! and I hope Mr. Max will marry that broken-backed woman and that she will live a thousand years! Yes, I do!"

The last three words were emphasized with so vigorous blows on the back of the ox that he started away suddenly and Maude would have fallen if Archie had not caught her in his arms.

"Now, Maude," he said, as he held her for a moment closely to him, "don't let's quarrel any more. I'm going away to-morrow to the Adirondacks, then in the fall to college, and may not see you again for a long time; but I shan't forget you. I like you the best of any girl in the world; I do, upon my honor."

No you don't. I know exactly what you think of me, and always have, but it does not matter now," Maude answered vehemently. "You are going your way, and I'm going mine, and the two ways will never meet."

And so, quarrelling and making up, but making up rather more than they quarrelled, the two went slowly along the gravelly lane until they reached the house where Mrs. Marshall-More was standing with a very severe look upon her face as she said to her son, "Do you know how long you have kept me waiting?" Then to Maude, "Been crying? I am sorry you take it so hard; believe me, you will be better off in the village. Neither your mother nor you could run the farm, and you will find employment there. I hear that Mrs. Nipe is wanting an apprentice and that she will give small wages at first, which is not usual with dressmakers. You'd better apply at once."

"Thank you," Maude answered quickly. "I do not think I shall learn dressmaking," and Maude looked at the lady as proudly as a queen might look upon her subject. "Mrs. More do you think your brother would promise to keep Spring Farm until I can buy it back?" she continued.

The idea that Maude Graham could ever buy Spring Farm was so preposterous that Mrs. Marshall-More laughed immoderately, as she replied, "Perhaps so. I will ask him; or you can do it yourself. I don't know where he is now. I seldom do know, but anything addressed to his club, No.—, ——street, Boston, will reach him in time. And now we must go. Good-bye."

She offered the tips of her fingers to the girl who just touched them and then giving her hand to Archie said, "Good-bye, Archie, I am sorry we quarrelled so, and I did not mean half I said to you. I hope you will forget it. Good-bye; I may never see you again."

If Archie had dared he would have kissed the sweet face which had never looked so sweet to him as now; but his mother's eyes were upon him and so he only said "Good-bye" and took his seat in the carriage with a feeling that something which had been very dear had dropped out of his life.

CHAPTER III.

GOING WEST.

It was a very plain but pretty little cottage of which Mrs. Graham took possession with her children, Maude and John, who was two years younger than his sister. As most of the furniture had been sold it did not take them long to settle, and then the question arose as to how they were to live. A thousand dollars was all they had in the world, and these Mrs. Graham placed in the saving's bank against a time of greater need, hoping that, as her friends assured her, something would turn up. "If there was anything I could do, I would do so willingly," Maude was constantly saying to herself, while busy with the household duties which now fell to her lot and to which she was unaccostumed. During her father's life two strong German girls had been employed in the house and Maude had been as tenderly and delicately reared as are the daughters of millionaires. But now everything was changed, and those, who had known her only as an idle dreamer and devourer of books, were astonished at the energy and capability which she developed. But these did not understand the girl or know that all the stronger part of her nature had been called into being by the exigencies of the case. Maude's love for her mother was deep and unselfish, and for her sake she tried to make the most and the best of everything. Stifling with a smile born of a sob all her longings for the past, she turned her thoughts steadily to the one purpose of her life,—buying Spring Farm back! But how? The book she was going to write did not seem quite so certain now. Her brain children had turned traitors and fled away from the sweeping, dusting, dishwashing and bedmaking which fell to her lot and which she did with a smile and a song upon her lips lest her mother should detect the headache which was always with her, even when her face was the brigheest and her song the sweetest. She had written to Archie's uncle without a suspicion that she did not know his real name. As he was a brother of Mrs. More, whose maiden name was Marshall, his must be Marshall, too, she reasoned, forgetting to have heard that Mrs. More was only his half-sister and that there had been two fathers. Of course he was Max Marshall, and she addressed him as follows:

MERRIVALE, July——, 18——

Mr. Max Marshall,

DEAR SIR,—I am Maude Graham, and you bought my old home, Spring Farm, and it nearly broke my own and mamma's heart to have it sold. I don't blame you much now for buying it, but I did once, and I said some hard things about you to Archie More, your nephew, which he may repeat to you. But I was angry then at him and everybody, and I am sorrow that I said them. I am only 18 and very poor, but I shall be rich some day,—I am sure of it,—and able to buy Spring Farm, and I want you to keep it for me and not sell it to anyone else. It may be years, but the day will come when I shall have the money of my own. Will you keep the place till then? I think I shall be happier and have more courage to work if you write and say you will.—Yours truly,

"MAUDE GRAHAM.

After this letter was sent and before she had reason to expect an answer, Maude began to look for it, but none came, and the summer stretched on into August, and the house at Spring Farm was shut up, for Mrs. Marshall-More was in Europe, and Maude's great anxiety was to find something to do for her own and her mother's support. Miss Nipe, the dressmaker, would give her a dollar a week while she was learning the trade, and this, with the $3 per week which her brother John was earning, in a grocery store, would be better than nothing, and she was seriously considering the matter, when a letter from her mother's brother, who lived "out West," as that portion of New York between Cayuga Bridge and Buffalo was then called, changed the whole aspect of her affairs, and forged the first link in the chain of her destiny. He could not take his sister and her children into his own large family he wrote, but he had a plan to propose, which he thought, would prove advantageous to Maude, if her mother approved of it, and would spare her from home. About six miles from his place was a school, which his daughter had taught for two years, but as she was about to be married, the position was open to Maude at $4 a week and her board, provided she would take it. Maude is rather young, I know," Mr. Allen wrote in conclusion, "but no younger than Annie was when she began to teach, so her age need not stand in the way, if she chooses to come. The country will seem new and strange to her; there are still log-houses in the Bush district, indeed, the school-house is built of logs and the people ride in lumber wagons and not like Bostonians or New Yorkers, but they are very kind, and Maude will get accustomed to them in time. My advice is that she accept."

At first Mrs. Graham refused to let her young daughter go so far from home, but Maude was persistent and eager. Log-houses and lumber wagons had no terrors for her. Indeed they were rather attractions than otherwise, and fired her imagination, which began at once to people those houses of olden time with Kembricks and the Websters, who had forsaken her so long. Four dollars a week seemed a fortune to her, and she would save it all, she said, and send it to her mother, who unwillingly consented at last and fortunately found a gentleman in town who was going to Chicago and would take charge of Maude as far as Canandaigua, where she was to leave the train and finish her journey by stage. But on the evening of the day before the one when Maude was to start, the gentleman received word that his son was very ill in Portland and required his immediate presence.

"I can go alone," Maude said courageously, though with a little sickening of the heart. "No one will harm me. Crossing the river at Albany is the worst, but I can do as the rest do, and after that I do not leave the car again until we reach Canandaigua."

"Don't feel so badly, mamma," she continued winding her arms around her mother's neck and kissing away her tears. "I am not afraid, and don't you know how often you have said that God cared for the fatherless, and I am that, and I shall ask him all the time I am in the car to take care of me, and he will answer. He will hear. I'm not a child. I am 18 in the Bible and a great deal older than that since father died. Don't cry darling mamma, and make it harder for me. I must go to-morrow, for school begins next Monday."

So, for her daughter's sake Mrs. Graham tried to be calm, and Maude's little hair trunk was packed with the garments, in each one of which was folded a mother's prayer for the safety of her child; and the morning came, and the ticket was bought, and the conductor, with whom Mrs. Graham had a slight acquaintance, promised to see to the little girl as far as Albany, where he put her in charge of the man who took his place. When the good-byes were said, the train moved on past the village on the hillside, passed the dear old Spring Farm which she looked at through blinding tears as long as a treetop was in sight, past the graveyard where her father was lying, past the meadows and woods and hills she loved so well, and on towards the new country and the new life of which she knew so little.

CHAPTER IV.

ON THE ROAD.

Those were the days when the Boston train westward-bound moved at a snail's pace compared with what it does now, and 24 hours instead of 12 were required for the trip from Merrivale to Canandaigua, so that the afternoon was drawing to a close when the cars stopped in Greenbush and the passengers alighted and rushed for the boat which was to take them across the river. This and re-checking her trunk, was what Maude dreaded the most, and her face was very white and scared, and her heart beating violently as she followed the crowd, wondering if she should ever find her trunk among all that pile of baggage they were handling so roughly, and if it would be smashed to pieces when she did, and if she should get into the right car or be carried somewhere else.

She had lost sight of the conductor. Her head was beginning to ache, and there was a lump in her throat every time she thought of her mother and John, who would soon be taking their simple evening meal and talking of her.

"I wonder if I can bear it," she said to herself, as she sat in the cabin the very image of despair, clasping her hand-bag tightly and looking anxiously at the people around her as if in search of some friendly face which she could trust.

She had heard so much before leaving home of wolves in sheep's or rather men's clothing, who infest railway trains, ready to pounce upon any unsuspecting girl who chanced to fall in their way, and had been so much afraid that some of the wolves might be on her train, lying in wait for her, that she had resolutely kept her head turned to the window all the time with a prayer in her heart that God would not let any one speak to and frighten her. And thus far no one had spoken to her, except the conductor, but God must have deserted her now, for just as they were reaching the opposite shore, a gentleman, who had been watching her ever since she crouched down in the shadowy corner, and who had seen her wipe the tears away more than once, came up to her and said, "Are you alone, and can I do anything for you?"

"Yes—no; oh, I don't know," Maude gasped as she clutched her bag, in which was her purse, more tightly, and looked up at the face which was above her.

It was such a pleasant face, and the voice was so kind and reassuring, that she forgot the wolves and might have given him her bag, purse, check and all, if the conductor had not just then appeared and taken her in charge. Lifting his hat politely the stranger walked away, while Maude went to identify her trunk.

(To be Continued).

Church Statistics Compared.

The comparative statistics of the three Presbyterian Churches of Scotland are always curiously scanned by those who think the progress of a religious body is to be measured in terms of the multiplication table. This year the returns of the churches, while presenting nothing decisive one way or other, gives the friends of the voluntary principle sufficient ground for satisfaction. As regards communicants, the Established Church claims 581,569, and the Free Church and United Presbyterian Church together 504,355, being in the former case an increase of 2,566 during the year, and in the latter an increase of 4,030; so that while the Established Church maintains its superiority according to its unpurged roll, it does not show so high a relative advance. In point of contributions, the statistics are very much against the State Church, which reports the sum of £349,973, or a decrease of £7,957; while the other two churches are able to report contributions amounting to £1,014,045, or an increase of £53,180. Another point of comparison is afforded by the Sunday schools. The Established Church claims an increase of 1,302, and a total of 216,446; the Free and United Presbyterian Churches together report an increase of 9,317, and a total of 276,434.

How a Picture is Telegraphed.

The fac-simile telegraph, by which manuscript, maps or pictures may be transmitted, is a species of the automatic method in which the receiver is actuated synchronously with its transmitter. By Lenoir's method a picture or map is outlined with insulating ink upon the cylindrical surface of a rotating drum, which revolves under a point having a slow movement along the axis of the cylinder, and thus the conducting point goes over the cylindrical surface in a spiral path. The electrical circuit will be broken by every ink-mark on the cylinder which is in its path, and thereby corresponding marks are made in a spiral line by an ink-marker upon a drum at the receiving end. To produce these outlines it is only necessary that the two drums be rotated in unison. This system is of little utility, there being no apparent demand for fac-simile transmission, particularly at so great an expense of speed, for it will be seen that instead of making a character of the alphabet by a very few separate pulses, as is done by Morse, the number must be greatly increased. Many dots become necessary to show the outlines of the more complex characters.—Scribner's Magazine.

EXTREME wakefulness, distressing nervousness, chronic rheumatic pains, sciatica, neuralgia; any of the above disorders are symptoms of advanced kidney or Bright's Disease. Prof. Wm. H. Thompson, of the University of the city of New York, says: "More adults are carried off in this country by chronic kidney disease than by any other one malady except consumption." The late Dr. Dio Lewis, in speaking of Warner's Safe Cure, said over his own signature: "If I found myself the victim of a serious kidney trouble, I would use your preparation."

They Scaled the Walls.

Six inmates escaped from the Mercer Reformatory on Monday evening by scaling the walls. So far only one has been found, and she was discovered by P. C. Stewart (149) in a shed in rear of 42 Centre street. The authorities have endeavored to keep the matter secret, but it leaked out yesterday.

Mahomet and Pike's Peak.

Patron—This set of teeth you made me is too big.

Dentist—Yes, sir. Sit down in the chair and I will enlarge your mouth a little.

July 1889

Always Some One Below.

On the lowest round of the ladder
I firmly planted my feet,
And looked up at the dim, vast distance
That made my future so sweet.

I climbed till my vision grew weary,
I climbed till my brain was on fire,
I planted each footstep with wisdom—
Yet I never seemed to get higher.

For this round was glazed with indifference,
And that one was gilded with scorn,
And when I grasped firmly another
I found, under velvet, a thorn.

Till my brain grew weary of planning,
And my heart strength began to fail,
And the flush of the morning's excitement
Ere evening commenced to pale.

But just when my hands were unclasping
Their hold on the last gained round,
When my hopes, coming back from the future,
Were sinking again to the ground—

One had climbed near to the summit
Reached backward a helping hand,
And refreshed, encouraged and strengthened
I took once again my stand.

And I wish—oh, I wish—that the climbers
Would never forget as they go
That though weary may seem their climb
There is always some one below.

The Picnic—Before and After.

O, joyous, glads me picnic morn!
How cool the air, the skies how bright!
A thousand mental joys are born
To fill the heart with wild delight.
The incense from the tree-crowned hills
The babble of the woodland rills,
The wild bird's song which grandly thrills
And all the forest arches fills;
The mystic whisper of the trees,
The drowsy hum of honey bees;
A scene designed the gods to please
A dream of happiness and ease
That all our being thrills

O, weary, dreadful picnic night!
I almost wish that I were dead;
I'm looking like a perfect fright,
And filled with aches from feet to head.
It's rained incessantly since morn.
My clothes are wet and strained and torn,
I'm feeling miserably forlorn,
I can't now think why I was born.
The woods were full of beggar's lice,
We drank rain-water without ice,
And dinners full of ants aren't nice
Hereafter a picnic device
Will catch me—in a horn

A Song of Killarney.

By the lakes of Killarney, one morning in May
On my pipe of green holly I warbled away,
While a blackbird, high upon the arbutus-tree,
Gave back my gay music with gushes of glee,
When my Eileen's voice stole
From the thicket of holly,
And turned just the whole
Of our flirting to folly,
And softly along
Through the myrtle and heather
The maid and her song
Swept upon us together.

'Twas an old Irish tale, full of passionate trust,
Of two faithful lovers long and in the dust.
And her eyes as she sang looked so far, far away,
She went by me, nor knew she went by, where I lay,
And myself and the grass,
And the little red daisies
Should let our dear pass,
Only whisp'ring her praises,
Till the lass and her lay
Through the myrtle and heather,
Like a dream died away
O'er the mountain together.

AMONG THE LADIES.

What is Transpiring Throughout the Women's World.

FASHION AND MISCELLANY.

Girls in Starched Shirt Fronts.

The girl is pretty. Oh, yes—but look at the shirt front on her! It is well enough for us to adopt the clothes of the other sex if only we can feminize them bewitchingly. Tailor-made clothes were a pretty innovation, because, in spite of their masculine characteristics, they had to take on the shapes of women. Those little stand-up collars are piquant, too, when they encircle a round, fine, white throat. But when the girl tennis-player puts on a manish shirt (it would be a misnomer to call it a chemise), as she has done in some influential instances, I record the fact as deplorable, like a murder or a disaster. The bosom is starched stiffly, and it reaches from neck to waistband, from side to side of the body's frontage. Only a slim creature, or at least one to whom nature has given only a flat frontispiece, can wear such a bosom at all, for it must not be wrinkled or irregular in its undeviating surface. The smooth, glossy expanse of linen is exposed by an open jacket. The girls of the suitable configuration—which is practically no configuration at all—are just the ones who ordinarily hang jabots outside their wish bones and by devices not so public extend the outlines of their corsages; but when arrayed for tennis this summer they might as well be boys, so far as their shirt bosoms are concerned. I can't help thinking "how stale, flat and unprofitable are the uses" of the physiques thus confessed to by the wearers of men's fronts.—Cincinnati Enquirer.

A Wealthy New York Widow.

Mrs. Robert L. Stuart is the widow of a very rich man, who left his entire wealth—some $10,000,000—to her, and her influence in New York is widespread and beneficent, and yet few people know her. She is of a very religious turn and cares little for art or literature, music or society, and probably never saw the inside of a theatre; but the poor and afflicted know her bounties, if not herself. She keeps a person whose sole occupation it is to visit the different police courts and give bail for any deserving person whose detention would be a hardship until proved guilty, and often pays their fines when the offence is light. This lady has now been a widow many years, and is a sweet, simple, retiring woman of the noblest type, quiet and self-sacrificing. She does more genuine good than the world dreams of, but then she does not do it for the world to know or herald.

The Divorce Mill.

The quickest divorce ever granted in York county, Me., was decreed by Judge Haskell at Alfred, last week. Mrs. Edward W. Kelley, of Saco, had applied for a divorce, and she appeared before the court to plead her reasons. Her husband had spent most of his time since their marriage in jail, and had just been brought up on a charge of stealing hens. "Is that man your husband?" asked the judge. The woman replied in the affirmative. "You're divorced," said the court—with a celerity of action equal to that of the hustling New Hampshire parson who married his patrons in this fashion: "You take this woman for a wife? You take this man for a husband? Married. Two dollars."

The New Duchess.

The new Duchess of Portland is said to look very young, though she is so tall. Her coloring is perfect, but not to be sketched with pen and ink, comprising, as it does, dark brown hair with an auburn gleam where it catches the light, violet-blue eyes with large pupils, and a complexion of milk and roses. A London writer says: "Is it not sweet and nice of her to let a country dress-maker make her wedding-gown because she had promised her long ago that she should? Perhaps neither of them dreamed then that it would be the bridal dress of a duchess."

The Man Milliner.

Worth, the famous "French" dressmaker, is a native-born Englishman. He is a man of striking appearance, with rather a Scotch type of face, which is made more noticeable by the Scotch cap he usually wears. His parents intended him for a printer, but he disliked to soil his fingers with printers' ink, and decided for the dry goods trade, beginning in London and finally going to Paris, where he found favor with the Empress Eugenie, and consequently with the fashionable world which she led. M. Worth has a fine chateau near Paris, where he is very fond of entertaining his friends and customers, among whom a large percentage are Americans.

Divorce in Five Countries.

If the wife of a Turkoman asks his permission to go out, and he says "Go," without adding "Come back again," they are divorced.

In Siberia if a man is dissatisfied with the most trifling acts of his wife, he tears a cap or veil from her face, and that constitutes a divorce.

In Siam the first wife may be divorced, but not sold as the others may be. She may claim the first child. The others belong to her husband.

Among the Moors if the wife does not become the mother of a boy she may be divorced, with the consent of the tribe, and can marry again.

In the Arctic region a man who wants a divorce leaves home in anger, and does not return for several days. The wife takes the hint and departs.

Fashion Notes.

Mutton-leg sleeves are becoming to every one.

The hem of a widow's veil is deeper than ever.

Sailor hats in colored straw are effectively trimmed with black lace.

Narrow plaitings are no longer used to finish the edge of dresses.

Fruit is only occasionally used as decoration for hats and bonnets.

Nainsook morning jackets have their entire front laid in narrow tucks.

Dressy young married ladies wear white tulle veils with capote-shaped bonnets.

Many of the summer dresses made of thin fabrics have bodices without darts.

Mourning is worn for a longer period in the United States than any other country.

The directoire ruffle of white or black lace is one of the features of summer gowns.

The ribbons used for sewing in rows on net dresses are generally two inches wide.

Yellow daffodils were the floral table decorations much used in London this spring.

Cool and pretty summer toilets in white and green, or white and gold, are of white crepaline or India veiling, with garniture of China silk arranged as a soft, easy empire vest.

White silk brocaded or lace parasols are not seen to advantage in an unexpected shower.

Bathing stockings which are rubber finished and cork-soled find a large sale just now.

Scarf veils three-eighths of a yard wide, scalloped on the lower edge, are worn with traveling hats.

The handwriting of educated women a generation ago was far more legible than it is at the present time.

Twenty yards of ribbon is a very meagre estimate of an allowance for trimming on a summer dress.

Piazza and ball-room wraps resemble very much the talmas of other days. The garments now worn, however, are much more graceful, the cape portion being adjusted snugly to the figure.

Sage tea mixed with a little bay rum is an excellent wash for the hair, and prevents its falling out.

Sailor hats, which are again used for summer wear, are much more trimmed than they were last season.

Plain coat-sleeves are rarely seen. There is always some plaiting or fullness at the top about the armholes.

An ancient fashion, revived by gentlemen of changeable tastes, is the watch fob on the right side of the trousers.

Travelling and walking costumes may be made in any of a large variety of light woolen cloths and Irish homespuns.

Dresses made up largely of pink should not show color combinations, although of course white lace may be used freely.

Enormous sleeves are necessary appendages to the light taffeta and surah silk dust cloaks worn by ladies when driving.

Flower-crowned hats in empire and directoire styles are popular. Those known as the "Tosca" style have a bacchanalian air and are decidedly ugly.

At the fashionable resorts a popular toilet for youthful wearers is a tinted silk blouse waist with skirts of lace, either white or matched to the blouse in color.

The pale, shadowy broche patterns produced by the Jacquard looms are noticeable in many of the beautiful semi-diaphanous textiles imported for summer wear.

Bridesmaids and debutantes wear very stylish toilets of real China crepe in willow green, old rose and primrose yellow over soft repped sicilienne, with fronts of pearled lisse.

A pretty dancing toilet recently seen at a seaside resort was of anemone pink. The color was as faint as could be without being pure white, and the effect is described as charming.

Hats of green or brown rushes are a hot weather luxury. One of these hats is wholly veiled with green tulle, with moss buds and great yellow Tosca roses and leaves around the front of the crown.

Rich black toilets are in vogue and reach the height of fashionable elegance. Soft silks of various kinds, lace veiling, grenadine, crepe de chine, plain and beaded nets, and other handsome materials are in popular use.

Simple white waists of French nainsook, India linen, American surah or China silk are worn over skirts of various kinds. They may be shirred, tucked or plaited to suit the form and fancy, and are made with bishop sleeves.

A pretty toilet for summer evening wear is a gown worn by a young New York woman. It is a skirt of cream-white China silk trimmed with rows of narrow moire ribbon, the silk pressed in accordion plaits from the hips, where it is joined by a close jersey shaped bodice of cream lace, while the joining is covered by an immense sash of moire. A similar skirt is garnitured with ribbon bands and sash of apple-green silk.

Miscellaneous Notes.

Mrs. Harriet Beecher Stowe is 77 years old.

The only sister of Mrs. Henry George is a Sister of Charity in St. Louis.

The wedding presents received by the new Duchess of Portland were no less than 5,000 in number.

Queen Victoria is the richest woman in the United Kingdom. She has accumulated a fortune of $20,000,000.

The Queen of Roumania has accepted the presidency of the new Woman's Library which is shortly to be opened in Paris.

Women who object to smoking should shun matrimony. the husband smokes in the parlor and the stove smokes in the kitchen.

Some 14,000 girls attended the London school board cookery centres, and arrangements are being made for the accommodation of a still larger number.

There are five girls in one of the Humphries families of Fleming county, Ky., and their names are Arkansas, Louisiana, Tennessee, Florida and Virginia.

The Empress of China has been presented by her husband with an immense tiara of gold, having a very lofty cap of Siberian sable, embroidered with rows of pearls and the feathers of the golden pheasant. Twenty skilled workmen were two months in making it.

Buffalo has a Woman's Wheel Club and a Woman's Pedestrian Club. The wheel women comprise the elite of Buffalo's society, and the pedestrians are of the upper ten. The latter club walks two miles every day and twice a week takes a "tramp" of about fifteen miles.

Mrs. Millicent Garret Fawcett and her daughter have made a joint present of $2,000 to the National Association for Supplying Female Medical Aid to the Women of India, the money to be spent in founding two scholarships for native female medical students, one in Calcutta and one in Bombay.

Florence Nightingale is 69 years of age and an invalid, but she has written a letter of sympathy for the Johnstown sufferers with her own hand. She seldom leaves her house nowadays, but she keeps up a lively interest in all that is going on, and she attends to an enormous correspondence from all parts of the world.

The wife of Count Tolstoi, the Russian novelist, is the business member of the family firm. She has sole charge of the sale and distribution of her husband's books, and is his amanuensis, revisor and translator. Besides all this, she superintends the bringing up and education of their thirteen children, and looks after all domestic matters.

Onion parties are a fad of the day in the select circles of Nebraska society. Six girls stand in a row, while one bites a small chunk out of an onion, and a young man pays 10 cents for a guess as to which one it was. If he guesses right he kisses the other five, but if he doesn't he is only allowed to kiss the one with the onion-scented breath.

The athletic fad bids fair to speedily distance all of the latest fashionable fads and crazes. It has grown very rapidly during the last few weeks. The lawn-tennis girl, the equestrian girl, the girl who swims, and the girl who rows are found everywhere. Even boxing and fencing are in order, and there is one woman's club, at least, in New York whose members hold little pugilistic frays once a week.

Asking the Interlocutor.

After Mr. Tooter Barestone had sung "The Harp That Tears Through Overalls," Mr. Celluloid Dickey asked of the interlocutor: "William, can you tell me why angels' visits are like Chicago sewers?" "I don't know, Richard," replied the interlocutor in his rich bass voice; "why are angels' visits like Chicago sewers?" "Because, sir," said the comedian, with a mighty effort, "they are—phew! and far between." Then while a solemn hush fell upon the audience the interlocutor announced that Mr. Laring Geetis would sing "Down Where the Sandwich Blooms."—America.

True, Every Word.

Thus talks an old farmer about his boys: From 16 to 20 they knew more than I did; at 25 they knew as much; at 30 they were willing to hear what I had to say; at 35 they asked my advice; and I think when they get to be 40 they will acknowledge that the old man does know something.—Ex.

Every drop of blood in the system passes through both the kidneys and lungs many thousand times in each twenty-four hours. This explains why 52 per cent. of the patients of Brompton Hospital for Consumptives, London, Eng., have unsuspected kidney disorder. If the kidneys were in a healthy condition they would expel the waste matter or poisonous acid and prevent the irritation of the lungs. But if diseased they are unable to perform their functions. This explains why Warner's Safe Cure has proved so valuable in cases of lung trouble. It removes the cause.

The pastor's wife—Dr. Talkwell exchanges with my husband next Sunday! Thoughtless parishioner—Indeed! Perhaps I can persuade my husband to come to church.—Life.

—About 30,000 people a day go up the Eiffel tower. Of these between 3,000 and 4,000 go to the top. On an average a person has to wait about an hour to go up in the lift.

"That fellow Gagley tried to borrow $500 of me this morning." "Five hundred? He must be cracked." "No, he's broke."—Life.

HOW THEY DO IT.

Subtle Advertising That Beats the Garrulous Advance Agent Hollow.

In the fine art of advertising the men and women of the stage have obtained an efficiency that sometimes puts to shame their merely dramatic achievements, and that excites the bitterest envy among those steady-going people who pay for what is said about them and their goods at the usual rates per column. To keep thus constantly in view, to leave no false impression on the popular mind as to the clothes, food, furniture, books, papers, beverages cigars, chewing-gum, sports and hobbies most affected by the hero of the stage argues the possession of something akin to genius, and he is an obsolete sort of manager who cannot furnish new and frequent excitements respecting the star that he works for.

The agent who swaggered into the offices of provincial newspapers and by gifts of injurious cigars and a fitting dispersal of free tickets secured the publication of items avouching that he did $60 more business in Kalamazoo than "Humpty Dumpty" did on the previous week, that his advance sale in Paterson, N. J., was $14 larger than it was last year, that the Poquannock Partyblower spoke of his show in higher terms than it did of Booth—this grewsome and fatiguing person is failing from view and his place is taken by unseen agents who from unseen places set agoing rumors that require much more inventiveness and particulars that require a better memory than the perfunctory advance agent of the last decade was ever known to show. And these rumors and particulars will be printed, too, because they are interesting, whereas the items about Kalamazoo and Paterson are not. When we learn, for instance, that Mrs. Langtry is to wed the Prince of Wales immediately on the death of the Princess, that Mrs. Potter has discovered a posthumous tragedy by Shakspeare and will play it next winter, that Minnie Palmer has been asked to stop for a week at Windsor and has been escorted from the station by a regiment of the Queen's Own, that James Owen O'Connor on playing before the coal miners of Honesdale was pelted with $20 gold pieces, that Henry E. Dixey has just bought the Koh-i-noor and will wear it in his thumb ring, or that Mr. Worth the man milliner, not Jacot, is comprising 207 gowns for Lillian Russell, we read these facts with interest, not to say surprise, and eagerly watch for sequels. When Mr. Mansfield appeared in "The Strange case of Dr. Jeayll and Mr. Hyde" we were not long in ignorance as to how he made up, how his postures and expressions affected his muscles, how the effects of lights were produced, what scientists said of his stertorous breathing, how many clergymen had preached on the moral of his performance, and how many people had fainted with terror at the murder scene and had to be laid out in rows in the lobby until they recovered, and as a result every body from Maine to the Gulf was anxious to see the dual personation.—Los Angeles Express.

The Graduate's Lesson.

We must own that we are wofully disappointed in the sweet girl graduate this year. Not that she isn't as pretty as ever with her white fixings on—not knowing the technical terminology, it is just as well to use the generic name—oh no. The reports which reach us from all quarters tend to show that the visible supply of pretty girls far exceeds that of last year while there are many hold-overs. But we had looked for an essay on two on "Success in Life," or "Our Pathway in Life," or some such oracular theme. Failing that we expected something in the comedy vein with a caption like this: "Peeps," and we had fancied that the sweet girl graduate had a squeeky voice, lisped and "juked" her chin in and out as she shrilled out: "Peepth into thome peopl'th liveth I mean." But we have been disappointed grievously. The young ladies have taken up subjects on which interesting special articles might be written, and it's an even thing that they did pretty well with them. When you come right down to hard, cold facts, it's the sweet boy-graduate who slops over about "Success in Life" and stacks up a lot of pretty adjectives like "amethystine" and large sentences about "the infinite abysses of the unknown" which don't mean a blessed thing. But the sweet boy-graduate will get all that knocked out of him when he comes to solicit life insurance or starts selling dump-waggons on commission. He'll find out then that his "life work" will consist principally in gathering in enough shekels per week to pay the landlady and the laundryman, and that all the other things are like the chaff which the wind drives away.—Chicago News.

Friends of the Farmer.

It may be an advantage to point out some of the friends of the farmer, which, consequently, no farmer should destroy or allow to be destroyed. Among these are toads, which are, under all circumstances, the farmer's friend; moles and field mice, probably, do a vast deal more of good than harm; all birds, especially robins, wrens, thrushes, orioles, cuckoos, phebes, blue birds, woodpeckers, swallows and cat birds. The destruction of all these and many others, except for scientific purposes, should be made, under very heavy penalties, illegal everywhere. The house sparrow, known better as the English sparrow, is to be rated an exception. This bird is now universally regarded as a nuisance, first, because of its grain and vegetable destroying propensities; secondly, because it drives away insect-destroying birds. Among insects, many wasps are friends, especially those with a more or less protruding horn or sting at the end of the abdomen. Lady-bugs and lace-wing flies live entirely upon destructive insects, especially plant lice and scale insects, and should never be destroyed. Dragon flies, or devil's darning-needles, are also useful as well as harmless.—Bulletin 46, New Jersey A. C. E. S.

Vital Statistics from Europe.

Here are some vital statistics from England: The greatest number of births occur in February, the fewest in June. Five per cent. of all marriages are fruitless, ten per cent. among the "nobility." Out of 1,000 persons, 602 are unmarried, 345 married and 53 widowed; and over half of the women between 15 and 45 are unmarried. There are 33 births yearly for each 1,000 of population; 11 twins in 1,000 births.

LINCOLN AS A LOVER.

How He Proposed Marriage—A Curious Love Letter.

Abraham Lincoln's offer of marriage was a very curious one and, singularly enough, it has but recently come to light. Numerous as his biographers have been, and closely as they have gleaned for new facts and materials, it was left for the latest one, Jesse Weik, of Greencastle, to discover this unique and characteristic production of Mr. Lincoln's almost untutored mind. The letter is one of several written, presumably, to the lady he afterward married. Addressed to "My dear Mary," it reads as follows:

"You must know that I cannot see you or think of you with entire indifference; and yet it may be that you are mistaken in regard to what my real feelings toward you are. If I knew you were not I would not trouble you with this letter. Perhaps any other man would know enough without further information, but I consider it my peculiar right to plead ignorance, and your bounden duty to allow the plea. I want in all cases to do right, and most particularly so in all cases with women. I want at this particular time, more than anything else, to do right with you: and if I knew it would be doing right, as I rather suspect it would, to let you alone I would do it. And, for the purpose of making the matter as plain as possible, I now say you can drown the subject, dismiss your thoughts—if you ever had any—from me forever, and leave this letter unanswered, without calling forth one accusing murmur from me. And I will even go further and say that if it will add anything to your comfort or peace of mind to do so, it is my sincere wish that you should. Do not understand by this that I wish to cut your acquaintance. I mean no such thing. What I do wish is that our further acquaintance shall depend upon yourself. If such further acquaintance would contribute nothing to your happiness, I am sure it would not to mine. If you feel yourself in any degree bound to me, I am now willing to release you, provided you wish it, while, on the other hand, I am willing, and even anxious, to bind you faster, if I can be convinced that it will in any degree add to your happiness. This indeed, is the whole question with me. Nothing would make me more miserable than to believe you miserable, nothing more happy than to know you were so. In what I have now said I think I cannot be misunderstood; and to make myself understood is the only object of this letter. If it suits you best not to answer this, farewell. A long life and a merry one attend you. But if you conclude to write back, speak as plainly as I do. There can be neither harm nor danger in saying to me anything you think just in the manner you think it. Your friend,

"Lincoln."

Probably this is the queerest love letter on record and the most remarkable offer of marriage ever made. It is a love letter without a word of love and a proposal of marriage that does not propose. Every line of it breathes admiration, affection, devotion, unselfish desire for the lady's happiness the writer's sense of unworthiness and his genuine adoration of the lady he was addressing, but it does not mention love.—Indianapolis Journal.

Queer Things That Are Patented.

The Louisville Courier-Journal says: There is a claim in the patent office for a patent on the Lord's prayer, the specifications being that the repitition of the same "rapidly and in a rapid tone of voice" will cure stammering.

Among odd inventions are "chicken hopples," which walk the chicken right out of the garden when she tries to scratch; "the bee moth excluder," which automatically shuts up all the beehives when the bees go to roost; "the tapeworm fish-hook," which speaks for itself; the "educational baloon," a toy baloon with a map of the world or its surface; side hill annihilators—suits to fit on the down-hill legs of a horse when he is plowing along a side-hill, and the "hen surpriser," a device that drops the newly-laid egg through the bottom of the nest, with intent to beguile and wheedle the hen into at once laying another.

One of the latest patents is an automatic bath-tub, which starts the hot and cold water at a given moment in the morning to which it has been set, maintains exactly the right temperature of it by graduating the flow of water, rings a bell when all is ready, and, two minutes later, suddenly drops the sleeper's pillow about a foot and turns him out.

The First Person Singular.

When a great man overworks the big personal pronoun I, people are ready enough to laugh at him and charge him with having an exaggerated sense of his own importance. But the use or misuse of the first person singular is no test. Washington, a modest man, used it twenty times in his inaugural address of 1,800 words, and Lincoln, another modest man, used it forty-three times in his first inaugural of 3,588 words. Arthur, who was not modest, but who was always on dress parade, used the big I only once in a brief address of 431 words. Cleveland used it five times in his 1,683 words, and our new President used it fifteen times in speaking 4,588 words. This much abused pronoun is all right. It is better taste to use it when it is needed than it is to dodge around it in a dreary mass of circumlocutory phrases. When a man is afraid to speak of himself in the first person singular it shows a weakness in his make-up. Every man has the Ego in his mind, whether it is on his lips or not. After all, it is the man himself. There is no use in hiding it. Let it come out.—Atlanta Constitution.

A Matrimonial Boycott.

Mr. Hickey, County Waterford, Ireland, has been boycotted not only by the men but by the women. At a recent meeting, a Miss Sheehan, seconded by Miss Sullivan, moved this resolution: "That we, the young girls of Waterford, Tipperary and Kilkenny, resolve and promise to treat with scorn and contempt any matrimonial proposals from Michael Hickey." Thus Mr. Hickey finds himself not only boycotted but girlcotted as well.

Ex-President Cleveland always keeps an appointment with his wife without regard to what other matter may be pressing upon his attention.—Exchange.

GEO. MITCHELL,

BANKER,

FLESHERTON.

DRAFTS BOUGHT AND SOLD.

Special Attention paid to the collection Notes and Accounts. 2nd door North Richardson & Co's.

The Local News.

What is Happening in Our Own Vicinity.

The Messrs. Hawk Bros. have disposed of their egg business here to Mr. John Nichol

The prize list of the Provincial Exhibition, to be held at London on Sept. 9 to 14, has been received.

Messrs. Cook and McMullen made a large shipment of cattle last week, which proved quite successful.

Mr. S. Damude and Joseph Blackburn, Esq., are attending the Masonic Grand Lodge at Owen Sound, which is in session there

J Whitten has been elected to represents the Flesherton I.O.O.F at the Grand Lodge which meets at St. Catharines shortly

Mr. George Thompson, jr., Artemesia, had a rib broken Friday week while burying a stone by the lever flying back and hitting him.

LOST—A pocket book containing a two dollar bill, a due bill on M. Richardson & Co., and about 15 cents in change. The finder will kindly leave it at this office

Mr A. Muir, near the station, raised a fine barn on Wednesday last, 70 by 52 feet. Mr. John McFayden was the framer, and the building reflects much credit upon him.

Mr Geo. Mitchell, Flesherton's genial and portly banker, committed matrimony yesterday by uniting in marriage with Miss Sara E. McGirr, of Feversham. Our slipper is thrown.

Crops in the vicinity of Toronto are much in advance of what they are in this section. We saw last week below Woodbridge fall wheat in shock and other fields ready for the reaper.

Mr James Beecroft laid three huge stocks of rhubarb upon our table the other day, the largest of which gave the following measurements: Leaf 30 inches wide, 36 inches long. Stem 32½ inches long and 4½ inches in circumference.

Mr. Stephen Spirit has opened out a palace ice cream saloon and general grocery store in Strain's block, where he will be glad to welcome all his old friends once more. New fruits, flour, and every thing else in his line constantly in stock.

Catarrh cured, health and sweet breath secured, by Shiloh's Catarrh Remedy Price 50 cents. Nasal Injector free. For sale at the Medical Hall

The landmarks are passing quickly away now. On Sunday last another old settler gave up his labors upon earth, in the person of Mr. Chas. Irwin, sr., who died at the ripe age of 75 years, having been a resident of Artemesia for 35 years.

An auction sale of farm stock, implements and 35 acres of grain, will be held on the farm of Mr. R. Meldrum, lot 8, con. 4, Osprey, on Thursday, July 25, next. Usual terms. Eight per cent discount for cash. See bills. J. Speers, auctioneer.

We have received "copy" of the first and second prize essays awarded by Centre Grey Farmers' Institute on the "Benefits secured through an Agricultural College Education, but owing to lateness of the hour at which it arrived are unable to publish them this issue. They will appear next week

The Rev. Geo. H. Thayer, of Burbone Ind., says: "Both myself and my wife owe our lives to Shiloh's Consumption Cure. For sale at the Medical Hall.

Mr Massicott, of Montreal, gave an exceedingly interesting lecture in the Methodist Church on Sunday morning last upon Roman Evangelization. The gentleman is a young convert from Romanism, and is preparing himself for the ministry. Through his instrumentality the whole family had been converted to the Protestant faith. He showed a number of relics and paraphernalia of the Catholic Church, and explained its workings in a lucid and forcible manner.

For lame back, side or chest, use Shiloh's Porous Plaster Price 25 cents For sale at the Medical Hall.

Sleepless nights, made miserable by that terrible cough. Shiloh's Cure is the Remedy for you. For sale at the Medical Hall

Notice to the Public.

I am in a position to do all kinds of cotton weaving, such as tweeds, flannels, full cloth and blankets. Rag carpet done to order by J. B. Barkley, weaver, next house to the Presbyterian Church

Barns Burned.

Mr. John Thibeaudeau, living on the Toronto and Sydneham road, near Markdale, had his frame barn struck by lightening on Saturday morning last and burned to the ground with all the contents. Mr. John Anderson had a buggy in the barn, which was also burned.

Mr. Wm. Brown, of Markdale, had his barn burned the same night, supposed to be incendiary.

To the Editor of The Advance.

I would like to draw the attention of the Methodist Church trustees to the dilapidated condition of the carriage block at the church. It is a regular trap for ladies, and bristles with nails for the purpose of manufacturing ribbons out of good silk dresses. Fix up the block, gentlemen. I would also whisperingly enquire when the pew labels which were presented to the church a long time ago will be placed on the backs of the seats?

METHODIST.

Old Fashioned Union Picnic

The Sabbath Schools of the Methodist and Presbyterian church in Flesherton intend holding their annual picnic on Monday, the 24th of July next, in the beaver-meadow near Flesherton. All the friends of the schools are earnestly invited to come along. Make this as on former occasions the picnic of the season. Games and amusements will be provided for the children and friends. Schools will leave for the grounds at 10 a.m. The committee will not sanction refreshment stands on the grounds. J. W. Armstrong, Supt. Methodist S. S. J. Blackburn Supt. Presbyterian S. S.

Special Announcement.

We have made arrangements with Dr. B.J. Kendall Co., publishers of "A Treatise of the Horse and his Diseases" which will enable all our subscribers to obtain a copy of the valuable work free by sending their address enclosing a two-cent stamp for mailing same) to Dr. B.J. Kendall Co., Enosburgh Falls, Vt. This book is now recognized as standard authority upon all diseases of the horse, as its phenomenal sales attests, over four million copies having been sold in the past ten years, a sale never before reached by any publication in the same period of time. We feel confident that our patrons will appreciate the work, and be glad to avail themselves of this opportunity of obtaining a valuable book.

It is necessary that you mention this paper in sending for the "Treatise." This offer will remain open for only a short time

Orangeism Takes a Drop.

While Rev. Mr Watson was making his speech at the demonstration on Friday last an accident occurred which happily resulted in no injury to any person beyond a few slight bruises. Mr. Watson said he hoped we were not all pessimists. There were some who said that everything was going to the bad. Just at this juncture a crash was heard and the platform upon which the speakers and band were situated fell to the earth, creating considerable commotion. The drop was considered a favorable omen for the pessimists. It was some time before Mr. Watson was able to resume the thread of his discourse. Some boys who had been driven from beneath the platform a few moments before narrowly escaped being squeezed into pemican.

Croup, whooping cough and Bronchitis immediately relieved by Shiloh's Cure. For sale at the Medical Hall.

Ordination and Induction Services

The ordination of Mr. L. C. Emes to the ministry, and his induction to the charge of Flesherton and Markdale congregations will take place in Chalmer's Church, Flesherton, on Tuesday, 23rd July, at 2 p.m. This will be a very interesting ceremony and all should witness it. Rev. Mr. Wilson, the late pastor, will preside. Rev. Mr. Hossack, of Orangeville, will preach. Rev. Mr. McLeod, of Priceville, will address the newly inducted pastor. Rev. Mr. McCole, of Proton, will address the congregation. Tea will be served in the basement by the ladies of the congregation. A social entertainment will commence at 8 p.m The chair will be taken by the newly inducted pastor, Rev. Mr. Emes. Speeches by the Rev. gentlemen taking a part in the ordination and induction services, and by Revs. Mr. Shilton and Watson. Music by the choir and Glee Club. All are cordially invited.

Personals.

Miss Foster, of Union City, Pennsylvania, is visiting at Mrs. W. K. Flesher's

The Misses Annie and Lizzie Richardson, who have been attending the Owen Sound Collegiate Institute, returned home on Monday morning last.

Miss Kells, of Meaford Road is visiting at Mr. P. Munshaw's.

Mrs. Southgate and daughter, of Toronto, are the guests of Mr. M. Richardson.

Misses M. and J. Peters, of Michigan, are spending a few days with their uncle, Dr. Christoe.

Mrs. J. F. Sproule, of Winnipeg, sister-in-law of R. J. Sproule, is visiting friends and relatives in the vicinity of Markdale and Flesherton.

Mr. S. Ranton, son-in-law of Mr. Thos. Leitch, Flesherton, is now editor of the Stratford Advertiser.

Mrs. Hiram Savage, of Novar, Muskoka, is visiting her sister here, Mrs. William Mitchell.

The Prince of Orange.

Has his Praises Sung Once More by a Monster Crowd at Flesherton Station.

The Orange lodges of this district celebrated the historical Twelfth in a royal style at Flesherton Station on Friday last. It is just ten years since the station was honored with their presence before. Of course many changes have taken place in that period of time within the village, which has grown to much larger proportions; but Orangeism in this section has apparently kept pace with the expansion of the Station, judging by the great turnout of enthusiastic celebrators on Friday. It is estimated that there were some 1,000 people present, and a more orderly gathering was never convened on a Twelfth of July. Everything passed off pleasantly with nothing to mar the enjoyment The speeches were short, but pithy, and were listened to with the greatest attention. One of the features of the celebration was the unique and elaborate turn-out of Flesherton brass band, which was drawn by a double team neatly decorated with evergreens, rosettes and colored nets. We strongly insist, anyway, that Flesherton has a brass band which any city might be proud to possess. The speakers of the day were Rev. Mr. Watson, who delivered a sound speech upon Romish influences and aggression, but was unfortunately interrupted by breaking down of the platform, which tended to spoil the line of argument. Dr. Christoe said he was like the small stones which masons use to fill in the chinks between the larger ones. However, before the Dr. concluded he had proven himself to be a very fair-sized stone, indeed, and one that was very liable to hurt if it fell upon a person. He regretted very much the state of affairs and showed that the Reform party in Ontario was equally guilty with the other in pandering to Romish influences. He said we must stand as one man and be united.

Rev. J. W. Shilton, B. A., delivered a most vigorous speech, which was listened to with great attention. After a few congratulatory remarks by way of introduction, he began his subject by enquiring, Why are we here? and proceeded to tell the story of King James and the causes which led up to the calling over of William, Prince of Orange, the siege of Derry and battle of the Boyne. There were men in those days who would not abide the condition of things caused by Roman aggression Mr. Shilton then gave a graphic description of the siege of Londonderry, and the heroism displayed by those within the city's walls while surrounded by the enemy. Then came the battle of the Boyne and the fall of Papal supremacy and the triumph of Protestant liberty. To-day we have these liberties and the Bible. The speaker asked his hearers to remember that God had set up a Christian Sabbath. The Twelfth of July was to celebrate the valiant deeds of our forefathers. The Christian Sabbath was to memorialize us of the liberty which had been accorded us. He would now ask, why should we keep up this celebration? Rome was still attempting to-day what it had attempted 200 years ago. Eternal "vigilance is the price of liberty." There is as much need to-day as then. We should teach our children the principles of Protestantism. The speaker was sorry that none of the members for Grey were present. He thought that they had made a grave mistake in voting as they did. With reference to Ontario's right to interfere in this Jesuit matter, he said that $400,000 seemed a small thing, but Quebec formed a part of the Dominion confederacy, and what affected our brethern in Quebec affected us. If the speaker saw that his own child was liable to get burned he would be remiss in his duty if he did not make an attempt to prevent it. Jesuit aggression was reaching beyond Quebec and the thin edge of the wedge had been inserted in Prescott, Essex and Russell, where they must have French teachers from Quebec. With reference to the Essex schools Mr. Shilton could speak from experience. The French teachers there had been imported from Quebec and were allowed to teach upon permits year after year, owing to Catholic influences. There was danger in apathy, as familiarity tended to engender a feeling of security which was only imaginary. The educative force which was at work aimed to sap the foundations of Protestantism. The speaker insisted that there was great need to educate true principles into our young men that they might follow in the footsteps of our forefathers. He believed that if the supremacy of Protestantism was not settled peaceably in this generation it would be by bloodshed in the next. Protestant ministers of the gospel had struck out against the common danger, and the people should awaken to the seriousness of that danger. We want unity of purpose. He did not blame the 188, but the people themselves. They (the people) were the government in themselves and should elect men who would fight for Protestantism and avert the catastrophe which the speaker saw in the near future. The remarkably united front of the Catholic Church and fecundity of the French people constituted the breastworks behind which their legions were advancing. The speaker wound up an eloquent 20 minute oration by warning the people once more to inculcate principles of right into the minds of the young

Mr. L.C. Emes was the last speaker. The meeting then broke up.

D. McTavish,

HORSESHOER AND

GENERAL BLACKSMITH,

Collingwood Street,

FLESHERTON, - ONT.

Manufacturing of Waggons, Sleighs, Buggies, Democrats, etc. Horseshoeing promptly attended to. Special attention given to contract work or tender work.

Logging and Plow Chains constantly on hand.

The Most Successful Remedy ever discovered, as it is certain in its effects and does not blister. Read proof below.

KENDALL'S SPAVIN CURE.

OFFICE OF CHARLES A. SNYDER,
BREEDER OF
CLEVELAND BAY AND TROTTING BRED HORSES
FLEWOOD, ILL., Nov. 23, 1888.

DR. B. J. KENDALL CO.

Dear Sirs: I have always purchased your Kendall's Spavin Cure by the half dozen bottles, I would like prices in larger quantity. I think it is one of the best liniments on earth. I have used it on my stables for three years.

Yours truly, CHAS. A. SNYDER.

KENDALL'S SPAVIN CURE.

BROOKLYN, N. Y., November 3, 1888.

DR. B. J. KENDALL CO.

Dear Sirs: I desire to give you testimonial of my own opinion of your Kendall's Spavin Cure. I have used it for Lameness, Stiff Joints and Spavins, and I have found it a sure cure, I cordially recommend it to all horsemen.

Yours truly, A. H. GILBERT,
Manager Troy Laundry Stables.

KENDALL'S SPAVIN CURE.

SAVY, WYRON COUNTY, OHIO, Dec. 10, 1888.

DR. B. J. KENDALL CO.

Gents: I feel it my duty to say what I have done with your Kendall's Spavin Cure. I have cured twenty five horses that had Spavins, ten of Ring Bone, nine afflicted with Big Head and seven of Big Jaw. Since I have had one of your books and followed the directions, I have never lost a case of any kind.

Yours truly, ANDREW TURNER,
Horse Doctor.

KENDALL'S SPAVIN CURE.

Price $1 per bottle, or six bottles for $5. All Druggists have it or can get it for you, or it will be sent to any address on receipt of price by the proprietors. DR. B. J. KENDALL CO., Enosburgh Falls, Vt.

SOLD BY ALL DRUGGISTS.

Improved Farm for Sale.

Lots 148, 149 and 150, 3rd range east, T. and S. R., containing 100 acres, 85 cleared, good clay loam, well improved, good frame house and log barn, frame stable, good orchard, etc. This farm is well watered and improved, and is considered one of the best in this section. It is one mile and a half from the village of Flesherton. Will be sold on very easy terms. For further particulars apply to

JAS. BEECROFT

LOTS FOR SALE BY TENDER

—IN THE—

VILLAGE OF EUGENIA.

There is now offered for sale by tender in the village of Eugenia, the following lots, namely: Lot No 6 and 7 on the south side of Raglan street, and lots No 6 and 7 on the north side of Raglan street, each lot containing one half acre more or less, and being a part of the estate of the late Archibald Cairns. Tenders must be addressed to G. & O. Stewart, Flesherton P.O., and must be sent to him on or before August 1st, 1889. The highest or any tender not necessarily accepted. Terms cash

HENRY CAIRNS
GEORGE STEWART } Executors
JOHN WRIGHT

NOTICE!

TO CREDITORS & OTHERS.

PURSUANT to sec. 38 Cap. 110 R.S.O. that all persons having claims against the estate of the late Thomas Wright, who died in his lifetime, of the Township of Artemesia, in the county of Grey, farmer, who died on the 12th of April A.D. 1889, are required to send by post prepaid or deliver to the undersigned, executors of the estate of deceased, on or before their christian and surnames, addresses and description, the full particulars of their claims, a statement of their accounts and the nature of the securities (if any) held by them, and that after the said first day of August the executors will proceed to distribute the assets of the said deceased among the parties entitled thereto, having regard only to the claims of which they shall then have had notice, and the executors will not be liable for the said assets or any part thereof to any person or persons whose claim or notice of claim they shall not have received at the time of such distribution.

First day of August Next,

HENRY CAIRNS
GEORGE STEWART } Executors
JOHN WRIGHT

Dated Flesherton, June 20th, 1889.

Mortgage Sale

—OF—

Valuable Village Property.

IN pursuance of power of sale contained in a certain mortgage to the Vendor, which mortgage will be produced at the time of sale, there will be sold by D McCormick, Esq., auctioneer, by public auction, at Atkinson's Hotel, in the village of Priceville, on Thursday, July 25th, 1889,

at the hour of two o'clock in the forenoon, the following lands and premises in the VILLAGE OF PRICEVILLE,

in the county of Grey, being composed of part of lot number two on the west side of Queen street in the said village of Priceville. There is on the premises a one and a half story frame dwelling house, 18x24, said to be in a fair state of repair.

TERMS of SALE

This property will be sold subject to a reserve bid. Twenty per cent of purchase money is to be paid at time of sale, and a sufficient amount with the said twenty per cent to make up a sum of $200 within three months thereafter. Time will be given for the balance if required on terms to be made known at time of sale

For further particulars apply to D McCormick, Esq., auctioneer, Francis Waite, Esq., Priceville, or to the undersigned.

J. W. FROST,
Vendor's Solicitor

Flesherton June 24th 1889

Mortgage Sale

OF

VALUABLE PROPERTY,

IN THE

VILLAGE OF FLESHERTON.

UNDER and by virtue of the power of sale contained in a certain mortgage which will be produced at time of sale, there will be offered for sale by public auction, at

MUNSHAW'S HOTEL,

in the village of Flesherton, on Thursday, the 25th Day of July, 1889.

at the hour of one o'clock in the afternoon all and singular that property known as village lots numbers 16, 17, 18 and 19, on the south west side of Sydneham street, containing by measurement one acre and one-third of a square perch more or less, according to registered plan of subdivision of lot number 148, in the first range or concession south west of the Toronto and Sydneham Road, in the Township of Artemesia. This desirable property adjoins the public school property, and fronting on Main street, being about 60 yards from the business portion of the village. Erected thereon is a 1½ story brick dwelling house on stone foundation, containing ten rooms and cellar, with wood shed attached. The property will be sold subject to a reserve bid. Terms and conditions made known on day of sale. For further particulars apply to

R. M. CHADWICK, vendors' solicitor
Beatty, Chadwick, Blackstock & Galt,
58 Wellington street east, Toronto.

FARM FOR SALE CHEAP, AND ON EASY terms, lot 7, con 2, township of Euphrasia containing 200 acres. This is a splendid valuable timber farm Well timbered with mixed hardwood, hemlock and cedar. Splendid soil 14 miles from the beautiful village of Kimberley in Queen's Valley where there are mills, stores post office and church, and 11 miles from Flesherton on the C. P. R., where there is a splendid market for all kinds of produce, stock, lumber and timber. Apply to R J Sproule, auctioneer and real estate agent, Flesherton.

THE BEST IS CHEAPEST.

Farmer's Advocate & Home Magazine

Every farmer should read the leading and only independent publication devoted to his interests. Thousands say, there is none equal to it, and no dollar ever expended from the farm returns so much good. It treats on all branches connected with the farm, and is highly prized by the ladies and children; it has saved many a farmer from the loss of his farm; it has saved the farmers millions of dollars by checking the introduction and spread of contagious stock diseases; it has increased the receipts from our cereals by millions of dollars. Commended by City and County Councils and Agricultural Societies. Agents wanted. Sample copies free. Price $1 per annum. Address FARMER'S ADVOCATE OFFICE, London, Canada.

~~1883~~ 1889

Medical.

DR. CARTER,
M.C.P. & S., ONT.
PHYSICIAN, SURGEON, &c.
FLESHERTON.

J. G. Hutton, M.D.C.M.

DRS. SPOULE & EGO.
MARKDALE ONT
Office:—Manley's Drug Store.

J. P. OTTEWELL.
VETERINARY SURGEON.
Graduate of Ontario Vet. College.
RESIDENCE, ELGIN & COLLINGWOOD STREET
Next P. O. or East of Presbyterian Church.
FLESHERTON.

Dentistry.

DENTISTRY.
Dr. Thomas Henderson,
FLESHERTON.

J. P. MARSHALL,
L. D. S., DENTIST.
Markdale the 1st and 3rd Wednesday of each month.
Flesherton each trip on the day following.

Legal.

J. W. FROST,
Barrister, Solicitor, Conveyancer, Etc.
FLESHERTON OFFICE, NEXT POST OFFICE, SPROULE'S BUILDING, ON THURSDAYS.
OWEN SOUND OFFICE, FROST'S BUILDING

P. McCULLOUGH,
Barrister, Solicitor, &c.
Office, over McFarland's Store Markdale. Money to Loan.

Business Cards.

John W. Armstrong,
FLESHERTON, Co. GREY.
DIVISION COURT CLERK, COMMISSIONER, &c. Conveyancer, &c. Agent for purchase and sale of lands. Appraiser for C. L. C. Co. and F. P. B. & S. Society. Money to Loan on the most reasonable terms. ISSUER OF MARRIAGE LICENSES. NOTARY PUBLIC.

MONEY TO LOAN.
AT LOWEST CURRENT RATES
on Town or Farm Property.
S. DAMUDE.
Flesherton.

Mr. Wm. Karstedt,
Stone Mason, Bricklayer and Plasterer.
MATERIAL FURNISHED
Estimates given free. Ornamental Plastering a Specialty.
Residence one door south of Advance Office

W. J. BELLAMY
TWP. CLERK ARTEMESIA.
CONVEYANCER, COMMISSIONER, INSURANCE AGT, &c
DEEDS, MORTGAGES, LEASES, &c., prepared and properly executed. Insurance effected in first-class companies. Money to lend at lowest rates.

R. J. Sproule,
POSTMASTER, Flesherton, Commissioner in B. R., Licensed Auctioneer, Conveyancer, Appraiser and Money Lender Real Estate and Insurance Agent. Deeds Mortgages, Leases and Wills drawn up and Valuations made on shortest notice. Auction Sales attended to in any part of the County. Money to loan at lowest rates of interest. Collections attended to with promptness and despatch. Charges low. Agent for the Dominion Steamship Company. Cheap tickets from Flesherton to Liverpool, Glasgow, London or any of the British Ports. Parties intending to visit England, Scotland or Ireland, will please ask rates before purchasing their tickets elsewhere.

House and Lot for Sale.

A good house and lot, opposite the Methodist Church, Flesherton, is now offered for sale. The house is large and roomy, the lot, good stable and yard, splendid well on the premises, fruit trees, etc. This is a rare bargain. Apply to S. VANDUSEN, Flesherton.

MY EARLY SCHOOL DAYS.

Sixty Years Ago or Thereabout. Brockville, Vicinity, Canada.

"Telling Tales out of School"-Some Pleasing, Some Funny, Some Sad, Some Strange, Some Good and Some Bad. Loves Rule and the Gad. When I was a Lad. "Only a Boy."

BY W. F. [illegible]

Special to The [illegible]

I am growing old. Only one of my seven school teachers yet living, I think. No fear now of getting "whipped" for "telling tales out of school." Anyway I have nothing very bad to tell, because my teachers were not "bad." There were "bad scholars," and I was not a "bad boy."

Perfectly in my seventh year I began going to school, but adverse circumstances prevented my getting only a few months schooling at a time. So frequent change of teachers in those days. I only obtained about a year and a half schooling, all told. No opportunity for studying grammar or geography. "Webster's spelling book," "New Testament," "Cobb's English Reader," "Murray's" were our "daily (mental) bread." Where now, can better be obtained? My great school teacher's name was who ruled by love, more than the rod. She was an elderly, good natured woman, and probably on this account was familiarly called "aunt." I cannot recall of her ever whipping a scholar. She had names of her own making for "titles," for the school children, few of which I now remember, but as human beings are generally remembered best what [illegible] I recollect of her own[illegible]

"AUNT" LAURA ELLIOTT

"GOVERNOR OF UPPER [illegible]

partly by way of encouragement, also because I happened to live "up the road" from the school house, and I think no other boy from farther up the country attended her school.

"Down the road" below the school house, there lived another boy about my size and age—a relative of mine, whom she called the

"GOVERNOR OF LOWER CANADA"

His name was Samuel McLean, son of the late John McLean, Esq., who owned and occupied the first and only brick house then between Brockville and Gananoque to my knowledge. Poor fellow, an accident while yet a young man cut short his prospect of a long life, so far at least as good health and long lived ancestry gave promise.

"Aunt" Laura taught one term in that neighborhood. On account of the following, I may here remark that the school was held in a farm house, once belonging to the late Mr. Randall, the family having moved out. My second teachers name was

POLLY W[illegible]

I think she was a "Miss," but, married or single, in those days female teachers were called "Mistress." I do not believe she recognized me as "Governor of Upper Canada," because she never called me by that title. However, the omission did not trouble me any. Young as I was, I preferred knowledge to fame.

"The clouds may drop down titles and estates, wealth may seek us, but wisdom must be sought."

Of course, like other boys, I played at "noon spell." What boy wouldn't? This teacher—"Mistress," was afraid of "spooks," and in consequence of a report having gone out that the felt "ill at ease" while in it. There were two rooms and an "up stairs," dimly lighted, where a few things were stored belonging to the family, including an old hat worn by the late Mr. Randall. Query: Is there anything more suggestive of the nearness of the person, presence, or spirit of man, than his hat? or a "man's hat?

HOUSE WAS HAUNTED

Well, if during school hours any little noise was heard overhead our mistress, fearing it was would send some of her scholars to try and find out. Of course this was a fearful undertaking. I well remember the time when I and the "Governor of Lower Canada" were "petitioned" to investigate.

A SPOOK,

How slowly we crawled up stairs, step by step, on our hands and knees. Being little boys then, we only ventured to "poke" our heads up far enough to look around. We saw no spook, but plainest of all was the dead man's hat hanging in a remote part of the room and

When thus reminded of his death
The very greatest would draw breath
We scarcely dared to move.

After watching, waiting, listening long as our courage held out, and too "backward to go forward," we slowly backed down, "crab fashion," not daring to turn around lest the spook, spying our unguarded position, might suddenly pounce upon and annihilate us. During our reconnoitering

There were faces sad with woe
In the school room down below,
"There was silence deep as death"
Many sad hearts teachers all.

If an unusual sound seemed to be outside, she would tell us to go and look for the s[illegible] I recollect one time seeing a little woodpecker fly off the roof which I had been the innocent cause of a

[illegible]

"Quiet at s[illegible] times more.

Failing to discover anything supernatural and not allaying her fears. Her custom was, whether "bird or beast or thing of evil" make a overheard in one room, to move the school into the other room. Books, benches, chairs, writing tables, etc., (we had no desks) and there teach us until the spook "changed base of operation," and then for greater safety remove back again, and so on.

UNUSUAL SOUND

Well, we must "praise the bridge that carries us safe over." By her good (?) "generalship" we were all carried safely over that never-to-be-forgotten term of [illegible] receiving no personal injury from spooks, ghosts or goblins, but, whether much mental benefit resulted, I will leave the reader to "guess."

Not by way of egotism [illegible] I may remark that, [illegible] as those spook-searching expeditions were, I never felt in[illegible] fear. I wished to see for [illegible]. Not many pleasant memories [illegible] that second schooling of my early days, especially which I call to mind the she gave my little brother just because he happened to laugh too loud to suit her rules when playing at "noon spell." I don't think he laughed any louder than the other boys. Perhaps she thought it right to whip somebody. There were some teachers then who seemed to take a "vicious delight" in whipping. Are there any such now? My brother could scarcely cease crying and sobbing in time for his afternoon lesson.

CRUEL WHIPPING

He is now an elderly man, I am a few years older, yet to this day, could weep for him if it would do any good. We attended her school one term.

[illegible]

General News.

Thomas Rooney and Daniel Bohan, of Mitchell, went boating Friday, and were capsized. Rooney was saved, but Bohan drowned.

The jail at Jacksonville, Oregon, took fire Friday night and three prisoners were suffocated.

Trouble is said to be brewing at Oklahoma City, owing to a new crowd of settlers opposing the city administration.

The Burke matter at Winnipeg has been enlarged for two weeks, as there is a prospect that a habeas corpus will be applied for.

Thomas Jackson, colored, who is in Sandwich jail awaiting trial for killing his little stepson, has eaten nothing since last Tuesday, and proposes to starve himself to death.

Neil Gilchrist, a farmer of Hartley, while going home from the Orange demonstration at Lindsay on Friday night, was thrown violently against a fence by his team running away, and had several ribs broken and an arm fractured in two places.

The Masonic Grand Lodge of Ontario met in Owen Sound yesterday.

Two post office clerks at Kingston have been suspended for opening letters.

A Memphis, Mich., despatch says that James Couch, of Chesley, suicided with Paris green there on Saturday night.

Kilrain and Murphy reached Chicago Sunday morning in a bedraggled condition, leaving Pony Moore in the woods. They went to the residence of Parson Davies, who fixed them up, loaned them $100 and sent them east. They are said to be making for Toronto.

Shiloh's cough and Consumption Cure is sold by us on a guarantee. It cures Consumption. For sale at the Medical Hall.

Will you suffer with Dyspepsia and Liver Complaint? Shiloh's Vitalizer is guaranteed to cure you.- For sale at the Medical Hall.

The Canadian Northwest.

Until within a very few years, the accepted opinion, as to the character of the Canadian Northwest, was that, except as a hunting ground for fur-bearing animals, it was of little value. Even now well-informed people have, as a general rule, a most inadequate conception of its resources and immense natural advantages.

The Canadian Senate has recently collected a great mass of information in regard to this territory, and as a result have revealed to the world the existence of a vast region possessing a highly fertile soil and a genial summer climate in a latitude surprisingly near the polar circle.

It has been shown that wheat can be successfully grown at Fort Simpson, on the Mackenzie River, in latitude 61° 51', or eight hundred and sixty-two miles north of the northern boundry of the United States; that barley is a safe crop at Fort Norman, on the same river, in latitude 65°; and that potatoes can be grown with fair success within the Arctic zone. It is a revelation to be informed that the Peace River country, which lies between 56° and 59° north latitude, is "almost semi-tropical," it is the region of the cactus.

The Peace River is a feeder to the great river and lake system, of which the Mackenzie is the outlet. The Mackenzie has its source in the Great Slave Lake, a vast inland sea, rivalling Superior in magnitude, and empties into the Arctic Ocean, after a course of one thousand one hundred miles. With the great lakes which it drains, and the tributary rivers received by them in turn, it forms one of the most extensive waterways in the world.

From the source of the Peace River in the mountains of British Columbia to the ocean the distance is upwards of two thousand five hundred miles, and for the greater part of the way the navigation is excellent, in some places for the largest steamers. The Athabasca is another river of this system. It is a thousand miles long, and empties its waters into the lake of the same name, which, in its turn, finds an outlet in the Great Slave Lake by means of the Slave River.

The rivers named flow for nearly two thousand miles through a region highly adapted to agricultural pursuits. The Canadian Senate Committee reports that they, with the Saskatchewan River, drain an area of eight hundred and sixty thousand square miles, of which there is a possible area of three hundred and sixteen thousand square miles—over two hundred million square acres—suitable for wheat.

If this is even approximately correct, its bearing upon the food supply of the hundreds of millions of people who will inhabit North America within half a century, at present rates of increase, can hardly be overestimated. The whole area sown to wheat in the United States in 1888 was, according to the reports of the Department of Agriculture, thirty-six million acres.

On first consideration it will seem incredible that conditions favorable to agriculture can exist at such high latitudes, but when the explanation has been given, the case appears plain enough.

As it is well known elevation above the sea level has a potent effect in determing temperature. The Canadian Northwest is much lower than the Western States. For a distance of fifty miles east of the Rocky Mountains, the average elevation above the sea level of the Union Pacific Railway is five thousand feet.

As we go northward there is a gradual descent, until when the Mackenzie River Valley is reached, the altitude is only three hundred feet. It is asserted that this difference of latitude is equal to thirty degrees of latitude.

If a close examination of any good map of America is made, it will be seen that no great river enters the Pacific Ocean along the coast of California and Oregon, and, as most people know, the mountains form a lofty barrier to the warm winds, which sweep eastward over the Pacific. But just at the northern boundary of Oregon, the Columbia River debouches, and still further north, a short distance above the international boundary, the Fraser River empties its floods into Queen Charlotte's Sound.

The numerous tributaries of these great rivers penetrate far into the mountains, so far, indeed, that they interlock with the upper branches of the Saskatchewan, which flows into Lake Winnipeg, and of the Athabasca and Peace Rivers, already spoken of.

Through the passes thus formed, the Pacific winds, the Chinooks, as they are called, find their way out on the Canadian plains, and carry a genial summer climate far beyond the Arctic circle.

In addition to the Pacific winds, there is a constant current of air, warmed on the plains west of the Mississippi, flowing northward. Canada has all the disadvantage resulting from the cold current from the Polar region, as passing down over Labrador it drives the isothermal lines far below the latitude they occupy in Europe. It is only a just compensation, therefore, that the warm currents, which ascend to supply the vacancy at the North, should render the climate of the Canadian Northwest, for a large part of the year, very delightful.

An important influence in determining the agricultural capability of this north land is the length of the summer days. In the centre of the Peace River country, the longest summer day is seventeen hours twenty-eight minutes long, that is, from sunrise to sunset. The prolonged sunlight promotes rapid and vigorous growth.

It is a recognized fact that all plants are produced in their greatest perfection at the northern limit of the zone which they characterize. Wheat, oats and barley are essentially the products of the north temperate zone. Hence we would expect to find them in their greatest perfection in high latitudes where the conditions necessary for their growth can be found. It is therefore not a matter for surprise that the best wheat shown at the Centennial Exhibition in Philadelphia was grown in the Peace River country.

Deaf Mute Race.

[illegible] of The Advance.

DEAR SIR,—You have [illegible]ness noticed in various newspapers articles stating that a deaf-mute [illegible]ety of the human race is likely to be the result of the near future of the marriage of deaf mutes. From the [illegible] I have been able to gather up to this time, I have only learned of one deaf child in Ontario, a little boy now about four years of age, whose parents are deaf and dumb. Of the hundreds of children who are now attending or have attended this Institution there is not one congenital deaf child who has deaf-mute parents. I would like to obtain full and accurate information in regard to this matter, and if you or any of your readers know of any deaf-mute married persons, with or without children, if they will kindly send me their addresses, I shall feel much obliged.

There are deaf children of school age in the Province that I have not heard of and I am making an effort to get them into this Institution where they may receive an education that will fit them for the duties of life. The condition of an uneducated deaf-mute is more deplorable than that of any other human being. Will you be good enough to bring these children to school? You can do more than any other person I might address. The parents of some are not aware that an institution exists where their deaf children can be taught to read and write. There are others who have heard of the Institution but are probably not acquainted with its real character, or from other causes fail to send their children to us. These might be induced by a little effort to send them. Deaf children between the ages of seven and twenty are admitted, boarded and learned at the expense of the Province. It is only required that the child shall be sound in mind and that the parents [illegible] pay if the parents are unable, pay the railroad fare and provide necessary clothing. Application papers may be had by writing to me at Belleville and any information required will be cheerfully supplied.

Yours faithfully,
R. MATHISON,
Superintendant.

Inistioge.

From our own Correspondent.

The S. S. picnic held here on Wednesday afternoon was a very enjoyable affair. The visitors present were a fair representative of this vicinity, and all seemed to enjoy themselves well. The amount of the collections was $7.87. At 6 o'clock all were invited to the church to hear the program that was discoursed.

Mr. Henry Armstrong has purchased the farm of Mr. E. Williams for the sum of $1100.00. Mr. W. has bought a farm in Holland.

Mrs. John L. Moor, has been sick for some time and is not recovering quickly.

Mr. Samuel Rosborough is sick with intermittent fever.

Miss C. Atchison and Miss E. Armstrong have returned from Owen Sound.

Mr. Thomas Ludlow's little boy had the misfortune to fall and fracture one of his wrists recently.

THE NET CLOSING.

Evidence in the Cronin Case Accumulating.

KUNZE'S IMPORTANT CONFESSION.

Denouncing the Clan-na-Gael—Evidence Against Burke.

A despatch from New York says: It has come out that when the Clan-na-Gael "Triangle" was in full power, and the dynamite operations in England were frequent, Dr. John McInerney and J. J. Maroney were entrusted with carrying them out. The "Triangle"—Sullivan, Boland and Feeley—was the Supreme Executive to decide on the work to be done. McInerney was always despatched to the scene of the proposed outrage, and, being an engineer as well as a chemist, he took plans of the premises or the structure, sized up how the work was to be done, and decided upon the amount of explosives it would be necessary to use. Maroney had charge of the financial end of the business, and as soon as the actual perpetrators had received their instructions from McInerney, Maroney equipped them and supplied them with money for their journey. When the bills for these expeditions began to come in McInerney opened his eyes at the amounts asked for. This was in 1883 or 1884, and was the keynote of the fight afterwards taken up and waged by Cronin, McCahey and others.

It was said Thursday by some of McInerney's friends that fully $2,000,000 had passed into the hands of the Sullivan faction. The Clan-na-Gael has been in existence for twenty years, and the contributions were hoarded up until Sullivan, by reason of his acquired power, called for 25 per cent. This was followed by a demand for 50 per cent, and a third call absorbed the remainder. When vouchers were asked for concerning the expenditure of this money, Sullivan freely announced that all vouchers had been destroyed because they would implicate prominent men in English and Irish politics. The anti-Sullivanites here now believe these vouchers never existed, and the knowledge possessed by McInerney concerning the disposition of these funds made him a mark for hatred.

The Limerick men in the Clan-na-Gael camps in the city and in Brooklyn are greatly excited and loud in their threats against the leaders of the inner circle. Several of them wanted to start to-day for Chicago to shoot those they suspect of complicity in McInerney's murder. It took the persuasive power of two leaders to calm them.

A Wednesday's Chicago despatch says: The arrest of John Kunze, or "Cooney," the German concerned in the murder of Cronin, is regarded with great delight by the police and the State Attorney. For months Kunze was the trusted friend of Dan Coughlin, and he is believed to know more about the conspiracy than any one else, except Coughlin. The police are very careful of Kunze. Last evening he was identified by Mertes, the milkman, and by a Mr. James, who picked him out at once from among five prisoners as the man who drove the buggy which stopped before the Carlson cottage on the night of May 4th—the buggy in which Cronin rode to the cottage to be butchered.

There are so many conflicting stories of Kunze's arrest that many believe he was in the hands of the police two weeks ago, and that he has been giving them all along an interior view of his conscience. He was known to be in custody twenty minutes after the indictment against him was brought in by the Grand Jury. The police are either trying to assume credit for a quick and clever capture or else trying to hide knowledge of a "squeal" that furnishes them with important evidence.

According to Capt. Schuttler, Kunze took his arrest coolly. "He's a game fellow and very fly," said the captain.

"Hasn't he squealed?"

"Not a bit of it."

"Did he not give you the last important information that was presented to the Grand Jury?"

The Captain would not acknowledge this, any more than he would that Kunze had been a prisoner for two weeks.

The Grand Jury seemed to be fully agreed on one point—that Dan Coughlin was at the Carlson cottage on the very night and at the very time of the murder. He was driven there behind a dark bay or brown horse with a bald face. O'Sullivan, the iceman, owned two horses, either of which would answer the description. The driver of the rig was "Coonsey," who remained outside and held the horse while Coughlin went inside and either assisted in the dealing of the blows or in the subsequent removal of the body. It is almost positively established that Kunze and Coughlin were together on the night of May 4th.

A despatch was received by State Attorney Longenecker to-day from Assistant State Attorney Baker, who is in Winnipeg, stating that to secure Burke's extradition stronger evidence will have to be presented before the Manitoba Court connecting him with the Carlson cottage tragedy. Judge Longenecker conferred with Luther Laflin Mills over the unexpected obstruction, and it is understood that both the Carlsons will be sent to Winnipeg at once.

There are two men yet wanted by the police. One of them is the man who drove Dinan's white horse, and the other is the man "Simons," who purchased the furniture at Revell's and rented the rooms at 117 Clark street. The police think that Cooney may be the man, although Salesman Hatfield and Book-keeper Throckmorton have not been able to identify the photograph of Cooney as that of their customer.

A Winnipeg despatch of Wednesday says: The Burke case was continued before Judge Bain to day. Officer McKinnon, of the city police, gave evidence as to the arrest and search of the prisoner in the police station. Chief McRae told the prisoner he was arrested on suspicion, and that anything he said would be used in evidence against him. The prisoner was then asked several questions. Witness asked if the name on the ticket was his real name, and the prisoner said it was not his name, as it was Martin Burke, and he was sometimes called Delanoy. The prisoner said he had taken the name of Cooper because he was watched by one or two men. The chief asked him where he lived, and he replied with an aunt at the corner of Erie and Sedgwick streets Chicago. Witness examined the hat found in the valise in the prisoner's possession. There appeared to have been a name on the hat-band, but it was almost obliterated by scratches of ink. It was impossible to make out the name.

A Chicago despatch of Thursday says: John Kunze, the young German who drove Dan Coughlin to the Carlson cottage the night Dr. Cronin was murdered, has broken down and made a confession. For three days he maintained a stolid silence. The change in his demeanor was brought about by a visit of Attorney Furthmann, who defended Kunze last year and secured his acquittal on a charge of swindling. Furthmann said to him: "Tell all you know if you expect to save your neck." Kunze was badly frightened by these words. Furthmann told him he was in a bad fix and left.

Shortly afterwards Captain Schuettler had a two hours' talk with Kunze. The German made a clean breast. He was a sort of confidence operator, and enjoyed the protection of Dan Coughlin, who employed him in many dirty jobs—among others the obtaining of money from the Schufeldt Distilling Company for doing pretended detective work. He has told where he got the rig in which he drove Coughlin to the Carlson cottage. He also has told how he returned to the cottage an hour after, and, meeting Coughlin in the vicinity of the house, drove him into the city. The captain is loth to give any part of Kunze's statement to the public without verifying it, because he sees in Kunze a German edition of Woodruff.

Speaking of Kunze, Attorney Furthmann said: "He is a bad egg and an unconscionable liar—worse than Woodruff, I believe. I defended him once, and even then he lied to me. He is a bad type of the German confidence man."

The triangle men are in abject terror lest Beggs should squeal, and under a flimsy pretext Coughlin's lawyer had an interview with Beggs yesterday. Clearly Coughlin's attorney has too much liberty. Kunze has no attorney yet, and on account of his having confessed he is not in the county jail, although, like the others, he has been indicted. He is at the Halsted street police station.

At a meeting in the Second Regiment Armory last night resolutions denouncing secret political societies were passed. There were 2,000 men present, and the meeting was thoroughly American in sentiment. "Before the officers of justice of the nation we impeach the United Brotherhood, or Clan-na-Gael, as an association of assassins," was the voice of the meeting.

State Attorney Longenecker remarked to-day that he almost despaired of ever getting at the root of the Cronin conspiracy. "We can hang Coughlin, O'Sullivan, Beggs, Woodruff, Burke, Cooney, when we get him, and Kunze," he said, "and then not be doing justice to the case. These fellows are all guilty, but they are not the principals. Back of them stands the man we are after; but he may die a natural death unless by some slip or hook or crook we can get hold of the thread of the mystery."

Wm. Connolly persists in saying that Dr. McInerney is alive and well. "I am not at liberty," he says, "to declare where he is at this moment, for it is a confidential matter. But in order to settle the question and to satisfy his friends I to-day telegraphed to certain places where I supposed he could be reached, and have received a reply from him. This message I have shown to John Devoy and convinced him that his fears are unfounded. He has been given the information confidentially. Beyond this my lips are sealed."

"But why do you conceal the where abouts of Dr. McInerney?" asked the reporter.

"Because I am not at liberty to reveal it. He has gone away on business, and is travelling with a wealthy patient. I am not going to say whether he is in the United States or in South America or in Europe, because it would annoy him. I remember a case where a young physician joined a gentleman in an extensive tour of travel, and made himself a pleasant companion. In some way it leaked out that the physician had been employed by the family because his fellow-traveller was weak in intellect. The family blamed the physician for letting out the secret and he lost a very remunerative engagement. Dr. McInerney's business is of a private nature and I do not intend to reveal it."

"You will not show the telegram you have received?"

"No. Mr. Devoy has seen it, and he is contented with knowing that our friend is not dead but very much alive. That must satisfy the public."

Mr. Devoy admitted that he had seen the telegram from Dr. McInerney, and seemed glad to find his fears unfounded.

A Winnipeg despatch of same date says: After the evidence of Hakan Martenson, the Chicago expressman, before Judge Bain, the extradition of Martin Burke is assured. The honest Swede swore to Burke's identity, and in broken English told his story of how Burke superintended the removal of the furniture and trunk from Clark street to the Carlson cottage. In his cross examination Martenson said: "I did not know the prisoner's name. I was shown a group of photographs in the Chicago Court House. I picked it up by accident, and I at once selected the prisoner's face from among the group."

Affidavits declaring Burke's identity with the man Frank Williams, who was concerned in the renting and furnishing of the Carlson cottage, have been filed. They are sworn to by Mrs. Carlson and Michael Gavin.

It is likely that the end of the week will see Burke back in Chicago. There was a report to-day that his friends would attempt a rescue from the train. The officers smile at the idea and say they will take proper precautions.

Should Judge Bain issue an order for Burke's extradition to-morrow, it is thought that the defence will move before a full court for a writ of habeas corpus. This is anticipated, even by the prosecution, and they look upon them carrying their present point as only the beginning of a legal fight that will be necessary to enforce Burke's return to Chicago.

—Some scientist has estimated that quinine has added at least two years to the life of civilized man.

AS OTHERS SEE US.

Ben Butler Tells an Audience of Canada's Immense Size.

A Waterville, Me., despatch says: Gen. Benjamin F. Butler delivered an address before the literary societies of Colby University last evening on "The Annexation of Canada." These are some of the things he said:

We hear men, some of whom hold positions which statesmen should fill, speak of the annexation of Canada to the country with the same levity as one in the ordinary walks of life might speak of the joining of a tail to a dog—a little difficult to do, but of itself a very small matter. But how should this be spoken of if the tail might happen to be larger than the dog? In my belief, this frivolous talk, belittling alike to the Canadian and insulting to the might and power of Great Britain, is one of the chief obstacles to what every patriot in the United States, and every Englishman in Canada, if not in the Empire, must, if the question is fully understood, greatly desire—the union of these two great English-speaking peoples on this continent, which must happen if democracy is not to be a failure, so that this continent shall be the home and exemplar of English freedom and of the English language, as modified and improved by American genius and American enterprise. The first great fact to be taken into consideration when we speak so lightly of the annexation of Canada is her immense area, which includes 40 per cent. of all the possessions of Great Britain, wherever situated on the globe. There is room for three British Indian possessions within the Dominion of Canada, and enough territory left over out of which the area of Great Britain might be five times taken. Modern empires are pigmies to it, for there is room in Canada to carve out nine German empires. The Dominion of Canada holds within its boundaries an area of 3,470,392 square miles, while the United States (not including Alaska, of which the limits are unknown) has an area of 2,970,000 square miles, or rising 500,000 square miles less than Canada. Canada and her surrounding waters contain quite one-half of all the fresh water of the globe. Please bear this great fact in mind, for I repeat it is a foundation of the resources to make one of the greatest nations on earth. The general idea, when thinking of Canada, is that her high latitudes must be regions of Arctic cold. The immense body of water known as Hudson's Bay, 1,000 miles long and 600 miles wide, thrust down into the centre of Canada, and which in ordinary comprehension, being connected with the waters of the Arctic ocean, is deemed to be wholly frozen over for a great part of the year, averages three or four degrees higher temperature than the water on the south-western shores of Lake Superior. And we must remember that on the south-western shores of Lake Superior lie Michigan, Wisconsin and Minnesota of our Northwest. Do we claim any States more flourishing, any land more fruitful, or any part of the United States which has made greater progress than the great Northwest, to which the star of empire takes its way? Canada has quite one-quarter more land fitted for wheat cultivation than has the whole United States. It may be safely said, that, leaving out the worn-out wheat lands of the United States, Canada has twice the extent of unworn-out lands, which produce an average of more than twice the number of bushels to the acre than are produced by the average lands of the United States, and on some lands wheat has been raised in the largest producing quantities for twenty years in succession without a fertilizer.

DAVITT OPENS HIS CASE.

He Will Conduct It in Person—His Charges Against the Police.

A yesterday's London cable says: Mr. Davitt opened his own case before the Parnell Commission to-day. The first witness he called was Mr. London, ex-member of Parliament, who testified that periodic famines occurred in county Mayo owing to rack rents. Witness assisted in founding the Mayo branch of the League. It never voted a farthing to foment crime. The murders of Lymen, Hudd and Kavanagh were the work of the Herds League, a part of whose policy was to shoot Land Leaguers. The Herds League was in the pay of the police. It was organized by Whelan, who lost his life in consequence. Presiding Justice Hannen questioned the witness, who persisted that the police incited the outrges perpetrated by the Herds League. Witness said he did not inform the authorities because he would not put himself on a level with an informer. He had frequently denounced the Herds League publicly.

The Lynchburg Railway Wreck.

A Roanoke, Va., despatch of Wednesday says: The debris at the wreck on the Norfolk & Western Railway has been removed and a number of charred bodies have been found. The names of seventeen persons who were killed have been ascertained. The list of killed, which is official, is as follows: Pat Donovan, engineer; J. E. Bruce, fireman; A. M. Jones, road foreman of engines; M. S. Bruce, mail agent; S. W. Lipsey, train despatcher, Roanoke, Va.; Will Hopkins, express messenger. Passengers—Dennis Mellon, Roanoke; W. D. Stevenson, Cleveland, Tenn.; L. A. Moore, Chattanooga; C. W. Steeds, W. F. Marshall, J. M. Hardwick, all of Cleveland, Tenn.

Constipation followed by fitful diarrhœa, shooting pains in the breasts, drawing down aching pains, burning sensation in the small of the back, scanty, dark-colored fluids which scald in passing, and many deposits sand, mucous, tube casts and fluids covered by a greasy scum, any one of the foregoing signifies advanced kidney trouble. Prof. Wm. H. Thompson, M. D., of the University of the city of New York, says: "More adults are carried off in this country by chronic kidney disease than by any other one malady except consumption." The late Dr. Dio Lewis, in speaking of Warner's Safe Cure, said over his own signature: "If I found myself the victim of serious kidney trouble, I would use your preparation."

The woman who weeps is not a pleasing object to look upon, but heartless husbands may console themselves with the thought that the women who dissolves in a flood of tears never throws flatirons.—Somerville Journal.

SOLD BY BRITISH SPIES.

Irish Revolutionists Who Have Been Betrayed to England.

Twenty-nine Irish revolutionists have been sent from America into English prisons in the last eight years. In almost every instance it is known for a fact certain that these victims were betrayed to the Government against which their attack was to be delivered before they had left the vessel which carried them over. P. J. Tynan, the No. 1 of the Phœnix Park assassination, when Lord Frederick Cavendish and Mr. Burke were "removed," is still being sought for all over the world. The other successful fugitive is James Moorhead, better known by the nom de dynamite of Thomas J. Mooney. Moorhead with one Terence McDermott managed the explosion at local Government Board offices at Whitehall in London March 15th, 1883. He is supposed to have had a hand in the Glasgow outrages which occurred six weeks earlier. There is no such doubt about the addresses of the other and less lucky dynamitards. The list, as given officially, is as follows:

A LIST OF THOSE SENTENCED.

James McGrath and James McKevitt, attempt to blow up Liverpool Town Hall. Sentenced May, 1881, to 20 years.

John Tobin, illegal possession of nitro-glycerine. Sentenced January 31st, 1885, to 7 years.

Thomas Walsh, illegal possession of nitro-glycerine. Sentenced July 31st, 1882, to 7 years.

Thomas Gallagher, A. G. Whitehead, H. H. Wilson, John Curtin, illegal manufacture of nitro-glycerine at Birmingham and transfer of it to London. Sentenced May 28th, 1883, for life.

William Tansey, Pat Naughton, Pat Rogerson, James Kelly, explosion at Weston House in Galway. Sentenced July, 1882, to 14, 8, 12, 2 years respectively.

Timothy Featherstone, Dennis Deasy, Pat Flanigan, Henry Dalton, illegal possession of infernal machines. Sentenced July 30th, 1882, for life.

James McCullough, Thomas Dewanney, Peter Callahan, Henry McCann, Terrance McDermott, outrages at Glasgow in January, 1883. Sentenced Dec. 21st, 1883, for life.

Dennis Casey, Pat McCabe, James Kelly, James Donnelly, Patrick Drum, outrages at Glasgow in January, 1883. Sentenced Dec. 21st, 1883, for 7 years.

John Daly, Illegal possession of infernal machines. Sentenced July 20th, 1884, for life.

J. F. Egan, illegal possession of infernal machines. Sentenced July 20th, 1884, for 20 years.

Patrick Levy, explosion at Mill street barracks. Sentenced March 1882, for 1 year at hard labor.

J. G. Cunningham, H. Burton, explosion at Tower of London, etc. Sentenced May 18th, 1885, for life.

J. Wallace, alias Duff, murder at Solihull. Sentenced Nov. 18th, 1885, for 20 years.

This makes thirty-two imprisoned for dynamite outrages, for the conviction of Wallace, for the Solihull murder, was only brought about by his arrest in one of the criminal conspiracies. The Solihull murder was a Fenian "removal." Of these thirty-two two died, and one, Patrick Drum, was released immediately after conviction, leaving twenty-nine persons sent to jail to serve out sentences for their share in the murder plot. Some of these sentences have been already ended, but there are still in British jails twenty-two men under punishment for the conspiracy, and it is a curious fact that none of these men have been permitted to earn good time or get the indulgence granted to other convicts, if the stories told by their friends be true.

Of the dynamitards two are dead. These are Capt. Mackey Lomasney and Peter Malone, although there is much doubt about the name of this latter. They were killed in the abortive explosion at London Bridge about a quarter to 6 o'clock the evening of Dec. 13th, 1884. Neither of the bodies was ever found and it is supposed that the men and boat were so torn to pieces that nothing but human and other wreckage remained after the premature explosion of the cartridges. Lomasney's widow still lives in Detroit and it will be remembered that it was the failure to provide properly for her that was one of Dr. Cronin's charges against the triangle.—Chicago Personal Rights Advocate.

Villard's Romantic Career.

Henry Villard is once more a recognized power in Wall street. He has been elected President of the Oregon & Transcontinental Railroad, after a desperate struggle, by a majority of 16,999 shares. Thus begins another chapter in one of the most romantic lives of this generation. A youthful foreigner, poor, unknown, depending on nothing but pluck and brains, becomes clerk, newspaper reporter, correspondent, confidential friend of millionaires, speculator, millionaire himself, constructor of a railroad across this continent, guest of princes, dweller in his own palace that a prince might envy. Then the wheel goes the other way. Stocks shrink, friends deceive, enemies bear down hard, and a big fortune made like magic is lost more rapidly than it was won. The palace is sold and its owner seeks employment to earn his daily bread. By dint of fine sense and invincible energy, he gets on the upward turn again and is soon on top, once more a millionaire, once more a railroad king, once more honored, flattered and hated as only successful men are.—Macon (Ga.) Telegraph.

One More Chance.

Billy Dobson, proprietor of the Blue Front saloon and gambling house, was the first subscriber to the Kicker. He encouraged us and occasionally lent us money, and our gratitude has prevented us from drawing public attention to his den of iniquity. We can't promise to hold off much longer. We shall give him one more chance to reform the place, and if he doesn't improve it, we shall give him three or four columns per week of the hottest kind of language. Gratitude is all right up to a certain limit. Beyond that an editor owes a duty to the public.—Arizona Kicker.

Mr. Noodleboy—"No wonder you girls are so fond of tennis. There's so much 'love' going on in it, isn't there?" Miss Sharpley—"Yes; but 'love' stands for nothing in this game, you know."

THE TIME TO BATHE.

When it is Dangerous to Plunge in Cold Water—Before Noon and Before Going to Bed the Best Time for the Bath.

In considering the subject of injudicious bathing one of the medical journals reiterates that it is highly dangerous to plunge into the water just after a meal or while fatigued. An hour before noon and before going to bed are the best times to bathe. The average duration of the bath should be from five to ten minutes for children, fifteen minutes for women and but little longer for men. To delay much beyond these periods is a pernicious practice inviting debility and injury. How often one sees in a stroll along a popular sea beach groups of drenched, miserable objects with blue lips, chattering teeth and wrinkled, clammy skin, who have been spending half a morning in alternately plunging into the waves and walking about, dripping, in the cool air. From what should have been an invigorating dip, they return in a condition approaching collapse. Such abuse of sea bathing is unfortunately too common, even among those who have sought the seaside for the improvement of impaired health. The immediate effect of a cold bath is to chill the surface of the body, the temperature of which, as tested by a thermometer may fall several degrees—as much even as three or four. The skin becomes pale, the lips blue, there is chilliness, shivering, goose skin and the breath has a spasmodic and catching character. Cold bathing is salutary under certain conditions of the system, while in others it is capable of great harm. It benefits the strong and robust and it can be made a restorative and tonic, a revitalizer, to the "run down" when wisely and judiciously used. Aged people should use it with much care and not oftener than every other day; and should not remain in the water longer than ten minutes at the most. Persons who have heart or kidney disease and those in a feeble state of health should not indulge. If the bather do not remain in too long, "reaction" sets in, the chilliness gives place to a pleasant glow and a feeling of comfort and agreeable exhilaration. This reaction follows most quickly when the bath is of short duration. The shorter the bath the less is the ultimate depression of the temperature of the blood. The shorter the bath the greater is its power of stimulating the functions; the longer it is continued the greater is the cooling effect and the consequent lowering of vitality. The best of all baths is the swimming bath, for in it the bather can indulge in a free exercise of his limbs, such as is hardly attainable under any other circumstances. Swimming is a very valuable exercise, as it brings into action a large number of muscles. It employs the arms equally with the legs and leads to a healthy development of the muscles of the chest. Nearly all good swimmers are big chested. A sea bath has also another great advantage over all other forms of bath, that it is taken in the purest air possible. Reaction more readily occurs after a sea bath than after a river bath, and thus the liability to "catch cold" is less, although the popular belief that it is impossible to take cold from a wetting with salt water is far from the truth. The practice into which the fair sex has fallen, of sitting about for a long time after "coming out" in order to dry their hair, is injurious and should be avoided. As soon as the bather leaves the water the body should be dried thoroughly and the clothing assumed as rapidly as possible. Serious injury of the ear, resulting even in deafness, has occurred in consequence of the waves striking forcibly on the side of the head. Put a light cotton plug into each ear.—New York News.

A Nova Scotia Elopement.

A runaway pair from St. Margaret's Bay arrived in the city this on Friday morning in time to take the steamer Halifax for Boston. The man's name is David Johnston, and he is married; while the girl's name is Sadie Boutiller, about 17 years of age. As near as can be learned the elopement was planned about a week ago. The couple had been frequently seen walking along the roads in the evenings at the bay. Johnston had been reprimanded by his wife, but all to no purpose. The elopers drove into town early this morning and registered on the passenger list under assumed names. The deserted wife is the mother of two children. Mrs. Johnston's father arrived in town just in time to see the steamer sail down the harbor.

Typhoid Epidemic at Wilkesbarre.

A despatch of Wednesday from Wilkesbarre says: This city is threatened with an epidemic of typhoid fever. Within the past few weeks numerous cases have developed among the people using the water of Laurel Run, which supplies the eastern portion of the city. The physicians to-day made a careful canvass of the stricken district and over 150 cases of typhoid were discovered. All the cases are attributed to the impurity of the water supply aggravated by the prolonged wet weather.

Fun For Women.

Wives should never conceal anything from their husbands—excepting their faults, of course.

Next to hearing that she is pretty herself, a woman likes best to be told how homely some other woman is.

When the boys in one of the public schools at Atlanta, Ga., swear, they are made to rinse their mouths out with water that has stood in a quassia cup. One application is said to convince them of the superior advantages of the editorial method of using simply consonants and dashes.

IN CLOVER.

Down in the meadow red clover is nodding,
Out in the sunshine bright song birds flit by;
Apart from this all I sit steeped in sadness,
For to Love's question I gained no reply.

When evening had come and down in the meadow
My love and I strolled mid clover-tops red,
To my query of noontime, while the stars shone out bravely,
"In clover or out, I love you," she said.

—"Who is the haggard looking man with the expression of deep melancholy on his face that is fleeing before the mob?" "He is an editor." "Who are they and what has he done to excite their wrath?" "They are college graduates, and they are pursuing him in order to get places on his paper." "How many did you say there were?" "Five hundred."

FREE ENGLISH LIBRARIES.

Valuable Opinion About Reading by the Bishop of London.

The Bishop of London, in formally opening a new free library at Fulham, said he looked upon libraries everywhere as being of the highest importance and value for the cultivation of the great body of people at large. There would be, he was quite certain, a perpetually increasing number of those who would be glad to have the opportunity of reading books which it would be impossible for them to buy or hire. It was a very excellent arrangement that there should be, for common good, libraries of the kind, to which all might resort—libraries which were open to the highest and the lowest, the richest and the poorest. The most important feature of that which had been commonly called the "republic of letters," was that all found themselves equal at the commencement, and the difference between one man and another only consisted in the kind of books which were read, and the degree of diligence used in reading them. At that library every man who had brains would be able to gratify his love of learning to the very utmost extent. He thought that in a very short time there would be a demand springing up for books. Those who had been endowed with gifts and special faculties, and to whom it was the greatest blessing, not only to themselves, but to society, would be able to cultivate their particular faculties. He frequently came across men who were engaged in the ordinary occupations of life, and who had very little education, who had cultivated themselves by a diligent pursuit of the one study for which they were specially adapted. The thing which was wanted was to enable these men to enter upon such a career as was precisely provided by that library. He would be very glad if libraries were hereafter developed still further, and there were added to them by the Legislature museums for the purpose of instruction in such subjects as the books described. It was an excellent plan that men should see those things which they were studying, and it also tended to make study complete. The intelligence of the body of the public at large was sure to be raised if those persons who were naturally the most intelligent were allowed to study, and it was always well worth while in any community to give opportunities to the few to cultivate their natural faculties, because of all the things that educate the great body of the people there was nothing which educated them so much, so effectually and so permanently as the cultivation of the few who were daily among them, and whose ready explanation on difficult questions would permeate the whole mass.

A Romance and a Mystery.

The well-dressed body of a young woman found floating in New York bay off the Battery, twelve days ago, was identified as Laura Wilder, of South Easton, Pa., and the fact of such identification was published far and wide. Now it turns out that the person who so identified the dead was Laura Wilder herself, whose purpose was to win back a wandering lover. As the Evening World tells the story, Laura had been engaged to Fred Bowman, and in a fit of jealousy he had left her. Bowman was travelling in the West when he saw in the papers the statement that the dead had been identified as Laura Wilder. His heart was softened; he telegraphed money to have the girl buried; he came himself to attend the funeral. When he came and saw that the body was a stranger, he was puzzled; but the live Laura was watching for him, and they soon came to an understanding. Last Saturday they were married. Last Sunday they started for the West. Mr. Bowman's money was used to bury the dead girl in Evergreen Cemetery. Whose Laura was she?

What a Madstone is Like.

We were shown, a few days ago, by Mr. William Howe, two madstones which were taken from deer killed by his wife's grandfather, Mr. Bryant, in Montgomery County. They have been in his possession 43 years and are supposed to be over 100 years old. They are about the size of a small pullet's egg, and light yellow in color and light in weight. They were found in the stomachs of deer. One of them is broken and discloses in the centre a small piece of lead, from which we infer that these stones are produced by an effort of nature to cover up foreign substances and prevent them from harming the stomach. The formation seems to be gradual and something in the nature of an oyster pearl. These stones have never been used in cases of hydrophobia, but Mr. Howe is willing to have them tested at any time.—Americus (Ga.) Recorder.

We Will Soon Wear Paper Clothing.

It is by no means improbable that paper clothing will yet supersede cotton and woollen cloth as the material of the people. One establishment in the West is already doing an extensive business in the manufacture of paper clothing, and the fabric is said to equal that of any other class of goods in style and durability. For blankets, piano coverings and similar purposes the paper fabrics are an established success. They are light and serviceable. Paper pails, dishes and canes are familiar to almost everybody. Paper boards for making houses, paper boats, paper water pipes, column pipes, tanks and a thousand other new uses are becoming popular. Paper made from wood pulp is becoming a very important article in manufacturing, and its products are being exported from this country to every part of the globe.—Manufacturer.

"The deaths of women from Bright's Disease during the child-bearing years of life (from 20 to 45) is as high as 80 women to 100 men. After the age of 45 the proportion of deaths from Bright's Disease sank to 59 women for every 100 men. There seems no other conclusion to be drawn from this, than that pregnancy is a frequent cause of Bright's Disease." So writes Wm. Roberts, M. D., F. R. C. P., London, Physician to the Manchester, Eng., Royal Infirmary, Professor of Medicine in the Owen's College, Manchester. All women during pregnancy and the "getting-up" period, should use Warner's Safe Cure, and prevent disease of the kidneys.

—It takes a man with a pretty strong constitution to rise with the lark after being out on one all night.

SHOOTING STARS.

Forty Million Meteorites Fall Each Night.

Observations of falling stars have been used to determine roughly the average number of meteorites which attempt to pierce the earth's atmosphere during each twenty-four hours. Dr. Schmidt, of Athens, from observations made during seventeen years, found that the mean hourly number of luminous meteors visible on a clear moonless night by one observer was fourteen, taking the time of observation from midnight to 1 a.m. It has been further experimentally shown that a large group of observers who might include the whole horizon in their observations would see about six times as many as are visible to one eye. Professor H. A. Newton and others have calculated that, making all proper corrections, the number which might be visible over the whole earth would be a little greater than 10,000 times as many as could be seen at one place. From this we gather that not less than 20,000,000 luminous meteors fall upon our planet daily, each of which in a dark clear night would present us with the well-known phenomenon of a shooting star.

This number, however, by no means represents the total number of minute meteorites that enter our atmosphere, because many entirely invisible to the naked eye are often seen in telescopes. It has been calculated that the number of meteorites, if these were included, would be increased at least twenty-fold. This would give us 400,000,000 of meteorites falling in the earth's atmosphere daily.—Harper's Magazine.

Some Mighty Loose Notions About Marriage.

No subject has been more discussed of late than the marriage relation.

Is it because we wish to render marriage more sacred and its vows more binding, or because we desire to make divorce easy?

We prate a good deal about the spiritual horrors of being mismated and the fathomless bliss of finding our affinity. We paint in lurid colors the sulphurous hell on earth in which a couple "continually do dwell" who once thought they loved each other and afterward find out that they do not.

The practical result of this superfine philosophy is that the husband and wife who swore to stand by each other "until death us do part" are on the still hunt throughout society—the man for another woman and the woman for another man.

When the man has found the woman and the woman has found the man, then they seem to regard their marriage as a sacrilegious thing, and proceed at once to break the laws of God and man in order to insure domestic happiness.

Now, why not carry this logic to its proper conclusion? For example, two young people go to the altar. They are dead sure that their love will be eternal. At the end of five years they grow cool, get a divorce and remarry. There is no reason to suppose that the second marriage will prove happier than the first. At the end of a second five years they find they have made a second mistake. Why not another divorce and another remarriage? Why not a quinquennial recurrence of this experience until the average number of marriages and divorces in an ordinary lifetime shall be, well, say ten or twelve?

Take this Plunkett case as an example. The man and wife were Christian scientists. Heaven save the mark! They quietly declared themselves divorced by their own act, without form of law. They lived in the atmosphere of exceeding holiness, and were so awfully pure and saintly that they wanted to be regarded as specimens of the best results that could be produced from human nature. They opened a school and invited the public to come and be taught how to be as heavenly as they were themselves at the moderate rate of $2 per lesson.

Mrs. Plunkett joined herself to another husband. That is to say, she told her friends she was married to him. She thinks all this bosh is religion—that is, she says she thinks so, which shows that she is either putting on the cloak of religion to serve the devil in or else that the Lord has endowed her with an unusual amount of imbecility.

Is this an isolated case, the case of a pitiful crank, or does it indicate a tendency of modern thought?

Well, Dr. Stillman is the unenvied hero of another episode of the same nature. He is a man of culture and social standing and supposes himself to be honorable. Already married to one wife, he searches for another. He had an irrepressible yearning for sympathy, or something of that sort, and couldn't find it at home.

But omit the details; you are familiar with them. The upshot of the matter is that his early vows are whistled down the wind on some romantic pretext or other. Under the excuse of protecting the young girl he is living, according to his own confession, in open shame. That a man of honor should be willing to bring everlasting disgrace on the woman he loves is one of the psychological curiosities of the age. To ruin a woman's future may not excite surprise, but to do it because you love her with a manly and protecting affection presents a problem which is past finding out.

All of which leads us to ask, What are we coming to? Is this the road to an earthly paradise, strewn as it is with broken vows and broken hearts, or have we misread the sign at the crossing and taken the road to the devil under a mistake?

Perhaps it is a higher philosophy that is being taught; but if so we have a strong prejudice in favor of something not quite so ethereal. The old fashioned fidelity to home, the old time loyalty to the marriage relation, even when it is somewhat irksome, is better than this new fangled notion about affinity, soul partners and the rest of the poppycock with which the air is filled.

It is dreadfully æsthetic, we know, but we have a faint suspicion that a great many people mistake the amorous for the holy.—New York Herald.

A Boy's Chance Spoiled.

Farmer's Boy—Father, why cannot I rise in the world the same as other men? For instance, why cannot I some day become Secretary of Agriculture? Old Farmer—Too late, too late, my son, you know too much about farmin'.—New York Weekly.

—Husband—Half the time I don't know whether I am crazy or not. Wife—I know all the time.

PECULIAR SYSTEM OF POLYANDRY

Something About the People of Tibet.

The most curious of the many remarkable customs of the country with which our latest war has brought us in contact is polyandry. One of the most recent writers on the subject is the late Mr. Andrew Wilson, who devotes a chapter of his work, "The Abode of Snow," to Tibetan polyandry. Polyandry is that species of polygamy in which the wife has more husbands than one, and it prevails wherever the Tibetan language is spoken. Tibetan polyandry has the peculiarity that the husbands are all brothers, or, at least, very nearly related, so that the woman becomes the wife of a whole family. It does not appear to be in any way connected with the Tibetan religion, but to owe its existence to the poverty of the country and the desire to limit the population. It is practiced by all classes of the population, rich and poor, and is only superseded by polygamy, or multiplicity of wives, where the people have been much in contact with Hindoos or Mahommedans. Mr. Wilson met a case in which one woman was married to six brothers, one of whom was quite a boy, but he thinks in most cases there are only two husbands, not because five or six were objectionable, but because families with more than two brothers are not common. He attributes the fact that the system works peacefully to the calm, unimpassioned temperament of the people, who subordinate all other interests to those of the family. The children are regarded as scions of the house rather than of any individual member of it: all the husbands are treated as the fathers of the children, and there is no noticeable difference in the relations of a child to the different fathers. The surplus women left by the system are provided for in the Lama nunneries, where they learn to read and copy the Tibetan Scriptures, and to engage in religious services. The choice of a wife for the family is the right of the elder brother, and the contract he makes involves marriage contracts with all the other brothers. The system is said to have existed in Tibet since prehistoric times, so that its origin is lost in antiquity. The notable end that it serves is that it restricts population in regions where emigration is difficult, and where the means of subsistence cannot be easily increased. Captain Turner says that "the influence of this custom on the manners of the people has not been unfavorable. * * * To the privileges of unbounded liberty the wife here adds the character of mistress of the family and companion of her husbands." On the other hand, it struck Mr. Wilson that so many husbands meant for the women only so many more masters, and so much more toil and trouble.—Exchange.

Rooms the Queen Locks up.

As is well known, the Queen is in the habit of keeping rooms which have been occupied by deceased relatives locked up. The apartments at Claremont, in which the Princess Charlotte died more than 70 years ago, are rigorously closed, and nobody is allowed to use them. Prince Albert's apartments at Windsor, Osborne and Balmoral are all kept precisely as they were when he was alive, and on the wall of the room in which he expired there is a tablet with an inscription recording the fact that "this apartment was the scene of his demise." The Duchess of Kent's rooms at Frogmore are also shut up—an arrangement which renders that abode absolutely useless, inasmuch as they are the best in the house. Frogmore, by the way, is officially a part of Windsor Castle, and any repairs that are done there go into the castle account. The Queen has also kept John Brown's rooms at Windsor entirely closed since the death of that domestic, and a large brass has been erected in the apartment in which he expired, with an inscription commemorating his virtues and deploring his loss.—London Truth.

Out of His Nose.

A good story is reported from India. There is a famous border freebooter known as Tantia Bheel, who is the cause of much trouble to the authorities. He has long been famous, but, like Scottish Rob Roy, Tantia does not seem to stand much in awe of the powers that be. A body of native police recently set out in pursuit of the robber, and halted at a spot near one of his favorite haunts. During the halt a "barber" joined the police, and his services were requisitioned by the officer in command. The "barber" was, after the manner of barbers, loquacious, and talked freely of the deceit and his doings. "Ah," he said at last, "there is only one way of catching Tantia." "And how is that?" eagerly asked the officer. "In this way," said the shaver, cutting off the tip of the jemadar's nose, "I am Tantia." Tantia bolted off into the jungle, leaving the unfortunate jemadar streaming with blood and frantically calling his men to follow the runaway. Pursuit was in vain. The "barber" made good his escape.

A Problem for the Honest Farmer.

The difference between a comfortable prosperity and a slowly grinding impoverishment for the farmer may be made by the simple fact that he necessarily sells his products in competition with all the world and at the lowest prices that competition can produce, while the cost of nearly everything that he must buy is enhanced by a system of indirect taxation, the greater part of which is intended to strangle competition and increase the profits of favored interests. When the farmer has worked out this simple problem he will find that the relief he most needs is in his own hands and that the taxation from which he suffers most is that which he has been blindly helping to fasten upon himself.—New York Times.

Took Enough to Kill.

A man by the name of George Graub, living in Jordan village, committed suicide Friday by taking Paris green. Before death he remarked that had he known it was going to give him so much pain he would not have taken it, and that he expected he would fall over just like a potato bug. About a year ago Graub endeavored to kill himself by getting on to the house top and rolling from the roof. That time he only succeeded in slightly hurting himself.

—The man who invented the locomotive cow-catcher never got a cent for it. And yet it has given many a man a lift.

VOICE AND STIMULANTS.

Tobacco, Alcohol and Fiery Condiments are Best Avoided.

Tobacco, alcohol and fiery condiments of all kinds are best avoided by those who have to speak much, or at least they should be used in strict moderation. I feel bound to warn speakers addicted to the herb nicotian against cigarettes. Like tippling the effect of cigarette smoking is cumulative, and the slight but constant absorbtion of tobacco juice and smoke makes the practice far more noxious in the long run than any other form of smoking. Our forefathers, who used regularly to end their evenings under the table, seem to have suffered little of the well known effects of alcohol on the nerves, while the modern tippler, who is never intoxicated, is a being whose nervous system may be said to be in a state of chronic inflammation. In like manner cigarette smokers, those at least who inhale the smoke, do not merely puff it "from the lips outward," as Carlyle would say, are often in a state of chronic narcotic poisoning. The old jest about the slowness of the poison may seem applicable here, but though the poison may be slow there can be little doubt that it is sure. Even if it does not kill the body, it too often kills or greatly impairs the victim's working efficiency and usefulness in life. The local effects of cigarettes in the mouth must also be taken into account by those whose work lies in the direction of public speech. The white spots on the tongue and on the inside of the cheeks, known as smoker's patches, are believed by some doctors with special experience to be more common in devotees of the cigarette than in other smokers; this unhealthy condition of the mouth may not only make speaking troublesome, or even painful, but it is now proved to be a predisposing cause of cancer. All fiery or pungent foods, condiments or drinks tend to cause congestion of the throat, and if this condition becomes chronic it may lead to impairment, if not complete loss of voice. The supposed miraculous virtues of the mysterious pastes and draughts on which some orators pin their faith exist mainly in the imagination of those who use them; at best they do nothing more than lubricate the joints of the vocal machine so as to work it more smoothly.—Sir Morell Mackenzie in the Contemporary Review.

THE SUICIDAL MANIA.

Its Extraordinary Daily Increase in Civilized Communities.

Whether man, who has no voice in entering this world, has the moral right to determine when he shall quit it is a question that anthropologists have disputed over for ages. The Chinese regard self-destruction as honorable and in a sense a rebuke to an enemy, and they occasionally approach the grotesque in carrying out their designs. The early inhabitants of Tartary compelled their old men and old women to destroy themselves so that they would no longer be a burden to the community, and the cannibals of the Fiji Islands, after having eaten the most succulent of the prisoners of war, caused those who were too tough to roast and too old to be of any use to cast themselves into the sea. Suicide in civilized countries has increased disproportionately with the increase in population, and the area of self-sought deaths has changed from one country to another without any apparent reason. Statistics show that Germany led the list for years, until the beginning of the present decade, and that France followed. Germans, it was said, killed themselves because the lager beer they drank clogged the liver and produced despondency. Frenchmen, on the other hand, made away with themselves from over-exhilaration—a precisely opposite cause. Spaniards and Englishmen, or the majority of them, prefer natural deaths, while Americans, from the very nature of their polyglot character, are gradually beginning to lead all other civilized countries in the number of suicides. The State of New York has attempted to stem this rising tide by enacting a law making it a crime to attempt self-destruction, and the unfortunate who is too slow or too unskilful to get out of the world without making a halt goes behind prison bars to wonder why a community should insist on saving something that did not belong to them. No other State in the Union and no State in Continental Europe prohibits attempts at self-murder. That the mania is increasing to an extraordinary extent in this country is shown by the daily record in the newspapers. No one section is exempt. In the cool mountains of Maine and in the tropical bayous of Louisiana men and women seek the grave of their own volition in almost equal proportions.—New York World.

Co-Operation in England.

Whatever one may think of co-operation, it is making headway. In fourteen years the co-operators in the south of England have increased fourfold; they do five times the number of sales they did in 1875, make six times the profits, and employ eight times the capital. Commercially speaking, this is good enough, but it would be worth more if, as yesterday's discussion shows, "profit sharing" was not still an open question with many co-operators. However, the principle of profit sharing is making its way, and if it be only systematically carried out by the productive societies co-operation may do more for the world than it has yet. We should like to see the industrial co-operative societies turning their attention more actively to co-operative land owning.—London Star.

Milk not a Beverage.

It is a a mistake to look upon milk as a beverage. It is a liquid food, and though it quenches thirst at the moment, it makes it more intense after it has been some time in the stomach, and its digestion has commenced. Healthy infants who receive a sufficiency of milk often cry for long periods, to the bewilderment and distress of mothers and nurses, simply because they are thirsty, and in many cases where indigestion is caused by weakness or insufficiency of the gastric juice, the child would be greatly benefited by a drink of water.—Hospital.

—"It really isn't fair," remarked Mr. St. Louis, indignantly, "for Chicago to annex all the Cronin murderers just before the census is taken. Why, really, unless we count in the flies our honest city will have no show at all."

SELECTING MEATS.

How to Choose a Good Piece for Broiling or Roasting.

We hear much said about our tough beef and the poor meat in general that comes to us from the market. It seems just possible that the meat would be much more palatable if the cooks understood thoroughly the best ways to cook the different pieces, so that they would come to the table in their tenderest, most appetizing shape. There is something to be learned, too, by the one who does the marketing. Meat for a certain purpose should be cut from a certain part. If a roast is wanted, it is better that it come from the loin. If an inferior roast be bought, cook it as a pot roast, and see how much more tender it is.

When steak is bought many people will broil or even fry anything the butcher gives them. A lady who knows a little about meat once asked in a shop for a beefsteak, and upon seeing the piece from which the butcher began to cut she said: "Why, that isn't steak, is it?" Whereupon he answered: "No; but I can make steak of it." Too many people know no difference if the meat be cut in slices. If they would realize that what makes a very poor piece of meat broiled would often be delicious if braised or simply baked in a closely-covered dish; or cut up and cooked, then made into a meat pie; or if, failing to get just the piece of meat wanted, they would take the one they could get and cook it the way it is best—not spoiling a good stew to make a poor roast—they would find more digestible as well as palatable meats.

It should be remembered, too, after the outside of the meat is seared over to prevent the escape of juices, that a slow fire does better work than a very hot one. Intense heat hardens fibrin, while slow heat softens it. All housekeepers should learn to know the parts of meat by the names given them by the butchers, be able to ask for what they want in the market, and to know that they are given what they order.

There are only a few choice cuts of beef, and everybody cannot have the best. It is the part of wisdom to be able to make "best" from "second best" by cooking in such a way as to make each piece of meat appear to the very best advantage. In this way, if housekeepers look out for their own tables, they will find that, in spite of poor meats, tough beef and scrawny chickens, savory dishes may be prepared, and the family enjoy good living.—Mrs. Rorer, in Industrialist.

$40 000 Lost.

"I lost forty thousand dollars by a periodical attack of nervous sick headache," said a Chicago capitalist to a correspondent, pointing across the street to a handsome corner lot. "That lot was sold for ten thousand dollars at a public auction five years ago, and I intended to buy it, but was too sick with headache to attend the sale, and it is now worth fifty thousand dollars." If he had known of Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Purgative Pellets they would have removed the cause of his headaches—biliousness—and he would have made the money. Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Purgative Pellets cure sick headache, bilious headache, dizziness, constipation, indigestion and bilious attacks. 25 cents a vial, by druggists.

A Woman's Sarcasm.

"You'll never die of consumption, John," said a wife to her husband when he came home at a late hour a little the worse for wear.

"I won't die of consumption. What makes you think so?"

"Because your lungs are sound."

"How do you know?"

"How do I know? Because your breath is so strong."—Boston Courier.

$500 Reward.

The former proprietor of Dr. Sage's Catarrh Remedy for years made a standing offer in all American newspapers of $500 reward for a case of catarrh that he could not cure. The present proprietors have renewed this offer. All the druggists sell this Remedy, together with the "Improved Blower," and all other appliances advised to be used in connection with it. No catarrh patient is longer able to say "I cannot be cured." You get $500 in case of failure.

A Man of Push.

Wife—Mr. Blower, you've always to be a man of push, haven't you?

Husband—That's what I claim to dearest, and I'm always ready to stand that assertion.

Wife—Then what's the matter with pushing this baby carriage a little, precious?—Time.

Terrible Slaughter.

Thousands of lives were needlessly sacrificed last year in this country, and other lives are being as wantonly sacrificed to-day. Disease is Grinding Many Down into the dust of the earth who might be well. Mark those initials, for thereby hangs a tale: "G. M. D." They stand for Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery, which is unequaled for imparting vigor and tone to the liver and kidneys, in purifying the blood, and through it cleansing and renewing the whole system. For scrofulous humors and consumption (or lung scrofula), in its early stages, it is a positive specific. It is sold under a positive guarantee of benefitting or curing in every case, on being given a fair trial, or money paid for it will be refunded.

A Fly Youth.

Fond parent (sternly)—More money? I tell you, sir, I did not dare ask my father for money when I was your age.

Fly youth—I know the reason of that.

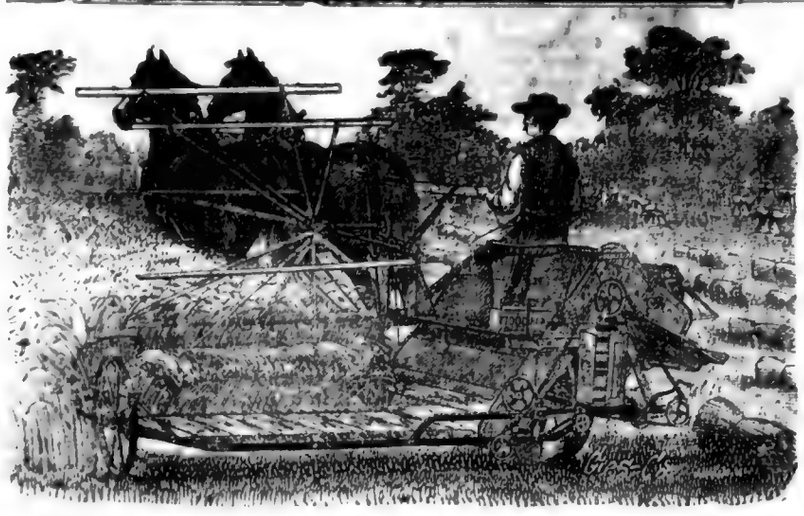
F. P.—You do? And what was the reason, pray?

F. Y.—Your father was not so kind and generous-hearted as mine is.

F. P.—Well, I suppose I must let you have a little, Jack; but go easy, my boy, go easy.—Boston Courier.

DOWL 29 89.

DUNN'S BAKING POWDER
THE COOK'S BEST FRIEND



THE BRANTFORD LIGHT STEEL BINDER!

Over Four Thousand Sold in Season 1888. Being More Than Half of all Other Binders made in Canada.

Before placing their orders for 1889, we respectfully request the farmers to :
1st. Carefully examine the "Brantford Machines" and faithfully compare with others.
2nd. Enquire of your neighbors who have used "Brantford Machines" and get their opinion o their working and lasting qualities.
If you will follow the above advice, you will be convinced of these two facts :
1st. "Brantford Machines" are possessed of more improvements and are better made than any other machines in Canada
2nd. "Brantford Machines" are more popular, give better satisfaction, and are more durable than ny other machines in Canada.
Therefore : 1st. Give your order EARLY for a Brantford Binder or Mower.
2nd. And you will be sure to be perfectly satisfied with the machine you get.

THOS. A. BLAKELY,
FLESHERTON

Heard's Carriage Works.

—:— MANUFACTURER OF —:—

Carriages, Buggies, Wagons, Sleighs, Cutters, &c., &c.

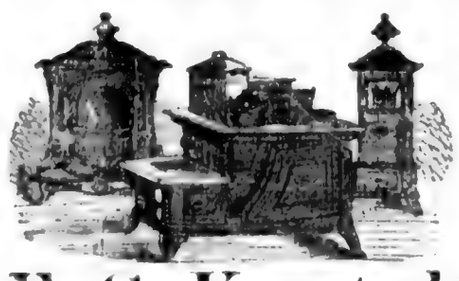
HEARD'S IMPROVED HARROWS AND GATES.

Special Attention given to PAINTING, TRIMMING, HORSE-SHOEING and al kinds of JOB WORK. Nothing but first-class material used throughout and satisfaction guaranteed. We have for sale

—Lumber, Lath and Shingles.—

Also Agent for Dick's Rollers, Mowers and Binders, Dick's Champion, Royal Rob Roy, Granger and Standard Plows. Two and Three-Furrow Gang Plows. Horse Powers for 4 Horses. Straw Cutters, Scufflers and Turnip Drills.

JOHN H. HEARD, Durham Street, Flesherton.



FLESHERTON STOVE EMPORIUM

A large assortment of STOVES, (a makes) STOVE FURNISHINGS, TIN WARE COPPERWARE LAMP GOODS etc ,constantly on hand.

EVETROUGHING A SPECI ALITY.

F. G. Karstedt, Strain's old Stand Flesherton.

NOW IS THE TIME —TO— Get Your Tailoring Done —AT— C. J. LEITCHE'S FLESHERTON.

REMOVAL

I desire to inform the public that I have re moved my well known tin shop to

MOORE'S Block, Durham St.

A complete stock of tinware will be found in my new premises.

REPAIRING EAVETROUGHING Etc.

done as heretofore.

arres I have said w secured the agency for The p celebrated Singer Sewing Machine.
tions.
ticket was hi g my old friends to come and see said it was not w shop, I remain, etc., Burke, and h JAS. SULLIVAN.
laney. The p
name of Coop

FLOUR, FLOUR, STONE FLOUR!

MR. P LOUCKS

is prepared to do your Gristing on short notice and grinds on the old terms of every twelfth bushel. Seven cents per bag of two bushels for Chopping, done every day. The Little Mi is big in the estimation of the public.

Satisfaction Guaranteed.

P. LOUCKS, Proprietor.

Good stabling for horses.

—It Pays To—

GO TO THE BEST

AND THAT IS THE

Northern Business College,

OF OWEN SOUND.

The best and most practical course of study
The best teaching talent.
The best accommodation for students.
The best methods of instruction.
The best results from that instruction after students graduate

For annual announcements giving particulars regarding the course of study, terms &c., address

C. A. FLEMING, PRINCIPAL.

Owen Sound, Nov 1st, 188

For Sale

Steam flour mill for sale at Flesherton Station 2 run stone, double reel bolt, smut mill, duster and purifier. Will be sold cheap and on easy terms. This is a bargain. Apply to

ROGER LEVER
Flesherton P.O

COUNTY & DISTRICT

About one o'clock Sunday morning, u citizens were aroused from their slumber by the sound of the fire alarm. The hundreds who hurried into the streets soon found that the Stovel block on the corner of Sykes and Collingwood street was on fire. The building was frame and in a short time was enveloped in flames. The exertions of the firemen were in vain. The south part of the building was occupied by Mr. Noble Brady, as a shop and dwelling, and the central part by Mr. R. Spike, boot and shoemaker. The shop to the north was vacant. In a short time the whole block was consumed to the ground. The devouring element was so rapid in its operations that Mr. Brady and family had barely time to escape. Furniture, bed clothes, wearing apparel, groceries, provisions, almost everything, were destroyed. Mr. Brady's loss will probably exceed $2,000, of which only about $500 is covered by insurance. Mr. Brady is a honest, industrious citizen and much sympathy is felt for himself and family. We are informed the building was insured for about $1000.—[Meaford Mirror.

RUN OVER BY AN ENGINE.—Mr. Alex. Watt, who had just reached home from the Miller's Convention at Toronto, was run over at Palmerston by an engine and died in two hours.—[Wiarton E

The Orangeville Advertiser says : "Macaulay's History of England, in five volumes, given by the Montreal Witness for the best original story, was awarded to Master Arthur Shain, a pupil attending the public school of this town."

The three-year-old daughter of George Leak, on Logan township, was runing around with a sharp stick in her mouth on Saturday, when she fell and the stick penetrated to the base of the brain with a fatal result.

ADVICE TO MOTHER.—Are you disturbed at night and broken of your rest by a sick child suffering and crying with pain of Cutting Teeth! If so send at once and get a bottle "Mrs. Winslow's Soothing Syrup" for Children Teething Its value is incalculable. It will relieve the poor little sufferer immediately. Depend upon it, mothers ; there no mistake about it. It cures Dysentery and Diarrhœa, regulates the Stomach and Bowels, cures Wind Colic, softens the Gums reduces Inflamation, and gives tone and energy to the whole system. "Mrs. Winslow's Soothing Syrup" for children teething is pleasant to the taste and is the prescription of one of the oldest and best female physicians and nurses in the United States, and is for sale by all druggists throughoutt the world. Price twenty-five cents a bottle. Be sure and ask for "MRS WINSLOW'S SYRUP," and take no other kind.

ROLLER FLOUR

best in the markets at

Blackburn's.

Ice Cream Parlors !

all kinds of cooling summer drinks.

Cured Meats, Lard, Bologna, etc.

ALL FRUITS IN THEIR SEASON

AT—

BLACKBURN'S

This Year's

MYRTLE

CUT and PLUG

SMOKING TOBACCO

FINER THAN EVER.

See

T & B

in bronze on EACH PLUG and PACKAGE

$66 Sewing-Machine FREE To at once establish trade in all parts, by placing our machines and goods where the people can see them, we will send free to one person in each locality, the very sewing-machine made in the world, with all the attachments We will also send free a complete line of our costly and valuable art samples In return we ask that you show what we send, to those who may call at your home, and after 3 months all shall become your own property. This grand machine is made after the Singer patents, which have run out : other patents run out it sold for $60. With the attachments, and now sells for $50. Best, strongest, most useful machine in the world. All is free No capital required. Plain, brief instructions given Those who write to us at once can secure free the best sewing-machine in the world, and the finest line of works of high art ever shown together in America. ADDRESS CO., Box 740, Augusta, Maine.

$66 Solid Gold Watch. Sold for $100, warranted Beat $65 watch in the world Perfect timekeeper. Warranted. Heavy Solid Gold Hunting Cases Both ladies' and gents' sizes, with works and cases of equal value. One Person in each locality can secure one free, together with our large valuable line of Home Sample. These samples, as well as the watch, we send Free, and after you have kept them in your home for 3 months and shown them to those who may have called, they become your own property. Those who write at once can be sure of receiving the Watch and Samples. We pay all express, freight, etc. Address Stinson & Co., Box 414, Portland, Maine

BOOTS & SHOES.

I have a very large supply on hand and

Selling very Cheap.

IN LADIES WEAR. Prunella, Kid, Polish calf and Buff Dongola, Lace and Button.

Misse's, Youth's and Children's

A large assortment, all sorts and sizes.

MENS WEAR

Fine Calf and Dongola, Balmorals and Gaiters, also Heavy Boots and Shoes. Prices and Material cannot be beat.

W. CLAYTON.

Photos, Photos, Photos.

We are now turning out work far superior in style and finish to any ever produced in Flesherton.

COPYING and ENLARGING at MODERATE RATES.

PICTURE FRAMING

done in all its branches. A good stock of FRAMES and MOULDINGS kept constantly on hand. Will also introduce the new BROMIDE PORTRAIT, a picture that is giving entire satisfaction wherever introduced. SAMPLES can be seen at my Gallery where all particulars as to Price, Style &c., can be ascertained.

MRS. BULMER,
FLESHERTON.

HEALTH FOR ALL.

HOLLOWAY'S PILLS & OINTMENT

THE PILLS

Purify the Blood, correct all Disorders of

Liver, Stomach, Kidn'ys, and Bowels.

They invigorate and restore to health Debilitated Constitutions, and are invaluable in all Complaints incidental to Females of all ages. For Children and the aged they are priceless.

THE OINTMENT

an infallible remedy for Bad Legs, Bad Breasts, Old Wounds, Sores and Ulcers. It is famous for Gout and Rheumatism. For disorders of the Chest it has no equa

For SORE THROAT, BRONCHITIS, COUGHS, COLDS

Glandular Swellings, and all Skin Diseases it has no rival ; and for contracted and stiff joints it acts like a charm.

Manufactured only at Professor HOLLOWAY'S Establishment,

78, New Oxford Street (late 533, Oxford Street), London.

and are sold at 1s. 1½d., 2s. 9d., 4s. 6d., 11s., 22s., and 33s. each Box or Pot, and may be had of all Medicine Vendors throughout the World.

Purchasers should look to the Label on the Pots and Boxes. If the address is not 533, Oxford Street, London, they are spurious.

PRICEVILLE BAKERY.

A. WATSON !

Desires to inform the public that he can furnish

CAKES AND PIES

To Order.

FIRST CLAS BREAD ALWAYS ON HAND.

will visit Flesherton twice a week—o TUESDAYS and FRIDAYS, with a full supply of goods.

DROP A CARD IF YOU DESIRE ME TO CALL.

WEDDING and FANCY cakes a specialty

A. WATSON,
Priceville.

Situation.

with steady employment and good pay all the year round, to reliable men furnishing satisfactory references. S.A. McCOMBER & Co., Nurserymen, Rochester, N. Y

FLESHERTON PLANING MILLS

Having purchased the Flesherton Planing Mills from R. J. Sproule, Esq., I now desire to inform the

PUBLIC

that I am in a position to do

ALL KINDS

—OF—

General planing mill work, such as

SASH, DOORS, DOOR FRAMES Planing and Matching, re sawing, etc.

Good Workmanship Guaranteed.

A large quantity of good dry pine lumber on hand.

W. J. HOWARD,
Flesherton.

LOOK !

HAVING done business in Canada for years our reputation is established We want three men in your vicinity to represent us, to whom exclusive territory will be given Handsome outfit free. Salary and expenses paid weekly. Previous experience not required Write at once for terms. Hardy stock for Canada a specialty. MAY BROTHERS, Nurserymen, Rochester, N.Y

FLESHERTON ADVANCE.

"TRUTH BEFORE FAVOR"—"PRINCIPLES, NOT MEN."

VOL. VIII., NO 422. FLESHERTON, ONT., THURSDAY, AUGUST 1, 1889. W. H. THURSTON, EDITOR & PROPRIETOR

WATCHES,

Clocks, & Jewelry.

STUDY

Your Own Interests

by buying your Watches, Clocks, Jewelry Spectacles and Silverware, at

Russell's Noted

JEWELRY STORE,

FLESHERTON.

In watches we have a very large stock of Elgin, Waltham Illinois Springfield, Columbus and Swiss Levers, in Ladies' and Gents' sizes. Gold, Silver and Silver ore cases. Brooches and Barpins, of the latest design. Fine Gold and Rolled Gold Earings, Cuff Buttons, Charms, Chains and a beautiful stock of Ladies' Gem Engagement Rings. A full supply of 18 K. Wedding Rings always on hand. Also a large and well-assorted stock of Silverware and Spectacles at very low prices, and remember the place to get your Watches, Clocks, Jewelry, etc., repaired is at

RUSSELL'S, FLESHERTON.

All work personally attended to by J. G. Russell

THE ONE PRICE

Cash Store.

STILL ON DECK!

Goods cheaper than ever

This is the time for all farmers to lay in a good stock of

Groceries

for haying and harvesting. We have put the prices down to meet the demands.

Dry Goods, Boots, Shoes, Etc.

—AT—

ROCK - BOTTOM - PRICES.

More Customers wanted

To Carry off the Bargains.

McDONALD & EVANS,

Wright's Old Stand.

Pumps! Pumps!

J. McCullough,

Markdale,

manufacturer of pumps, desires to inform the public that he is prepared to furnish pumps for

Deep wells, gravel wells, etc.

parties who have heretofore had difficulty with their wells are

Guaranteed Satisfaction

by using my articles. I learned my business with the late J. Fear, of Meaford, the superiority of whose pumps was a household word in Grey a few years ago.

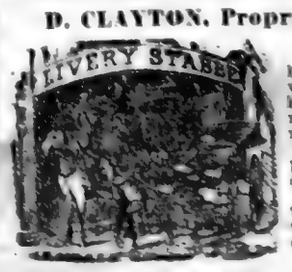
Inquire and call on me if you desire anything in the pump line

J. McCullough.

FARM FOR SALE CHEAP, AND ON EASY terms, lot 7, con. 2, township of Euphrasia containing 200 acres. This is a splendid valuable timber farm. Well timbered with mixed hardwood, hemlock and cedar. Splendid soil. 1½ miles from the beautiful village of Kimberley in Queen's Valley where there are mills, stores, post office and church, and 11 miles from Flesherton on the C. P. R., where there is a splendid market for all kinds of produce, stock, lumber and timber. Apply to R. J. Sproule, auctioneer and real estate agent, Flesherton.

Flesherton Livery Stables.

D. CLAYTON, Proprietor.



First class horses and vehicles for hire at reasonable rates

Stables opposite Munshaw's hotel.

Special attention paid to commercial business

THE ADVANCE.

Is published

Every Thursday,

FROM THE OFFICE,

Sydenham Street, - - Flesherton, Ont.

TERMS OF SUBSCRIPTION.

$1 per annum when paid strictly in advance
$1.50 per annum when not so paid.

ADVERTISING RATES.

One column, 1 year $50, half col., do., $27, quarter col. do., $15

Transient advertisements charged at the rate of 8cts per line for first insertion and 3cts. per line each subsequent insertion

W. H. THURSTON,

Editor and Proprietor.

A MUDDLE.

A clause is the Manhood Franchise Act of 1888 provides that opposite the name of every person entitled to vote, the leters M.F., meaning manhood franchise, must be placed. The township clerks in a large number of municipalities throughout the province have, through ignorance of this law, neglected the adding of the necessary letters in the voters' lists which have lately been published. The clerks cannot be blamed for this, as they are not required to go outside the assessment roll in making up the list, and not having received any instructions upon the matter have innocently created a difficulty which is not easy to arrange. According to the way matters stand every name which does not show the M.F. after it is disfranchised and cannot vote at the coming election for the Legislature should this years' voters' lists be used, as is the present intention There is no time to issue new lists and have them posted within the limits which the law allows. As might be expected, the astute and painstaking clerk of Artemesia has not fallen into the error just noted, having inconvenienced himself considerably to obtain information upon the matter, and so far as this township is concerned we are out of the squirm. Surrounding townships have not fared so well, and it is doubtful what the outcome will be in such cases. Of one thing we may be sure, there will be a mammoth kick if everybody is disfranchised in this manner in those municipalities where the error has been made.

LADIES AND GENTLEMEN:

It is just one year ago to-day since we took possession of this office. It has been a short year to us, as well as a pleasant one. Our anticipations have been fully realized, and we have found our patrons to be kind in overlooking shortcomings and appreciative of our efforts. The Advance has added a large number of new subscribers to its list, and ends the year with a considerably extended list of names. This is very encouraging to us, but we want still more encouragement in that line. We are a little hoggish on this point. Our job department has been a lively one during most of the past year, and at present is more so than at any other time during the twelve months. We have received much praise for our artistic work in the job line, and have lately added material which will place us in a position to do even finer work than heretofore. In short we have prospered fairly well, and would have absolutely no fault to find if the old delinquents would send in their arrearages for subscriptions. We have a few such on our list who appear to forget that we require dollars to pay the paper bills. They may be, and are no doubt, all true friends of the paper. If so there is no pleasanter way of showing it than by remitting what they owe. Please do it now and see us smile.

At Buckingham Palace Saturday, amid all the splendid pomp of Royal ceremonial, Princess Louise Victoria Alexandra Dagmar of Wales was married to Alexander William George Duff, Earl of Fife and Viscount MacDuff. That is the way the Globe copies it from the New York Cablegram. The proper titles are these: Princess Louise Alexander Dagmar, to Alexander William George Earl of Fife, K.T. The Globe believes in "laying on Macduff," as Mr. Shakespear remarked.

Lippincott says the first picnic was held on the bank of the Ganges. We were under the impression that the picnic luxury was instituted when the ark was bowling along towards Ararat. At any rate there were spiders, ants, and divers other creeping things present on that occasion, and what more is required to make up a picnic?

Bishop Walsh, of London, has been appointed to the archbishopric of Toronto, left vacant by the death of Archbishop of Lynch. The appointment gives very general satisfaction.

CORRESPONDENCE.

Kimberley.

From our own Correspondent.

On Tuesday last Rev. Mr. Madden, of Heathcote, addressed a few of the electors in this vicinity on the Jesuit Estate Act. On account of the meeting not being properly announced the audience was not as large as it would otherwise have been. Mr. Madden spoke for over an hour and gave a great deal of information on the subject, and also succeeded in getting a goodly number of signatures to a petition praying the Governor General to disallow the act.

On Thursday last an infant child of Mr. J. Thompson of this vicinity, passed away to its eternal rest after a brief illness of four days. The parents have our deepest sympathy in their sad bereavement.

On Sunday evening last Mr. J. M. Thurston conducted a reading and song service in the church here. He read the 21st chapter of Revelations, which refers to home. The subject was home and its associates. The choir sang quite a number of pieces in a very pleasing manner, and quite a number of brethern and sisters read corresponding passages of scripture during the meeting.

Harvesting is in full blast here now.

Berry picking is the order of the day.

Those rusticating from Flesherton in our vicinity got a little two much rain on Sunday night to make things pleasant for them.

Mrs. Brown, of Toronto, is the guest of Mrs. Thompson of this place.

Maxwell.

From our own Correspondent.

Mr. Fred Roome is home from Oregon, where he had been spending the winter and spring.

Mr. Adam Reid returned to Toronto Junction on Monday morning.

Rev. T. W. Leggott and family left for Seagrove, their new home, last week. Mr. Brown seems to be well liked by all.

Mr. Robert Meldrum moved to Feversham last week.

What the Chic-a-Dee Says.

Out in the woods where the choppers are Dwells a sociable little bird,
And his sweet voice trilling, now here now there
Makes the greenwood is ever heard—
Chic-a-dee, chic-a-dee-dee-dee.
I'm a sociable bird you see
And I sing all day
While I work or play.
Chic-a-dee, chic-a-dee-dee-dee

The seasons are all alike to me
And no changes can ever bring.
For my life in the woods is glad and free.
So listen and hear me sing—
Chic-a-dee, chic-a-dee-dee-dee.
I'm a sociable bird you see
And I sing all day
While I work or play.
Chic-a dee, chic-a-dee-dee-dee.

I know not trouble, I know not care
I have found that they do not pay
So I twit and sing to my lady there
And go sadness can with me stay—
[illegible]
I'm a sociable bird you see
And I sing all day
[illegible]

Here's a maxim good for the troubled heart
[illegible]
Let us sing through life and the better part
Will [illegible] better home—
Chic-a-dee chic-a-dee-dee-dee
I'm a [illegible]
And I sing all day
While I [illegible]
Chic-a-dee, chic-a-dee-dee-dee

Died.

MOORE.—In Artemesia, on Saturday July the wife of J. L. Moore aged [illegible] years.

PAUL.—At Eugenia, on Sunday, H. Samuel Paul in his 71st year.

THE MARKETS.

FLESHERTON.

Carefully Corrected Each Week.

Flour	$5 00 to 4 [illegible]
Fall Wheat	0 [illegible] to [illegible]
Spring Wheat	0 [illegible] [illegible]
Barley	0 [illegible] [illegible]
Oats	0 [illegible] [illegible]
Peas	0 [illegible] [illegible]
Butter	0 14 [illegible]
Eggs, fresh	0 11 [illegible]
Potatoes bush.	0 15 [illegible]
Pork	6 10 [illegible]
Hay per ton	9 00 [illegible]
Hides	7 50 [illegible]
Sheepskins	0 50 [illegible]
Geese	0 [illegible] [illegible]
Turkeys	0 [illegible] [illegible]
Chickens per pair	0 [illegible] [illegible]
Ducks per lb	0 [illegible] [illegible]
Wool	0 15 [illegible]

SIGN

"Big Spex"

Reliable watches in

Gold, filled gold and Coin-silver cases.

Ladies' and Gents' sizes.

Walnut and Nickle Clocks.

I am represented by A 1 watches and clocks backed up by reliable warrants, in more homes of Central Grey, than any jeweler doing biz. in this section

If prices are not shed rock every time.

QUALITY Considered.

I would not be able to hold such a large share of Grey Co. trade as I have at present

"CASH or CREDIT"

will positivily do better by you.

Goods, Work and Warrants Considered

than you can do elsewhere. Spex artistically fitted.

Work Carefully Done, Fair Charges.

Stock now complete in all lines.

Can save you $1 to $3.00 on watches.

Other lines will be held on live and let live margins.

W. A. BROWN,

Jeweler and Optician,

MARKDALE, Ont.

THE WHITECHAPEL MURDER.

Particulars of Jack the Ripper's Latest Crime.

A Last (Wednesday) night's London cable says: The body of the latest Whitechapel victim was taken to the mortuary. The examination developed an unusual feature—Jack has done his work with a dull knife. Heretofore the slashes were clean. Alice Mackenzie's body bore marks of Jack's terrible methods, but there was no execution. The clothes were drawn over the head after the knife had been driven into the neck. A cut of four inches long, running towards the groin, had not served the abdominal wall. On both sides of this cut and along the lateral line below the breast bone there were twenty scratches, which wouldhave been slashes had a keen knife been used. Every scratch was an attempt to rip the woman up. She was evidently taken unawares, as she was strongly built, and weighed 140 pounds. She could not have uttered a cry without being heard by the police. Jack adopted his old plan, except that in this case his right hand was placed over his victim's mouth, and the left hand drove the knife into the neck, instead of vice versa.

The murder threw Whitechapel into a condition of fearful excitement. Castle alley was crowded all day. People from all quarters flocked to the scene, and stories of the crime were on every tongue.

At 10 o'clock the woman was identified. John McCormack, a porter, said he lived with the woman for six years. She was 40 years of age. She was born at Peterborough, and her family lived there until a month ago, when they moved into furnished rooms in Whitechapel. The victim did charing work. She never got a living on the streets. Sometimes she drank too much. She left the house at 4 o'clock yesterday afternoon. They had had a tiff. He gave her a shilling and advised her not to spend it in drink. He was told that she returned to the house at 10 o'clock last night and took a blind boy, George Dixon, for a walk. McCormack knew no more. The woman and the boy went to the Cambridge Music Hall. There they met a man and she asked him to treat. She then went home to the lodging house, and left after saying she was going to meet a man at the Cambridge Hall. Whether or not she met him is not known, for the blind boy had no means to identify him except by his voice.

Nothing could more clearly indicate the cunning of the murderer than the selection of the locality. The alley is 100 yards long, dark, and encumbered by a mass of waggons and barrows, which formerly were stored in a yard in which excavations were going on a few feet above. At the bottom of the alley, is a network of streets, courts and alleys. Castle alley has no residents likely to go through it at night, the baths being the only tenanted house in the upper part of it. The others on the left side are small factories and workshops. On the right side is a high board fence, shutting off the back yards. A row of small houses, facing on New Castle street, runs parallel with Castle alley, and just below the scene of the murder they are connected by a narrow court. If he approached, therefore, from the Whitechapel road the murderer could escape down Castle alley into Old Castle street, through this to Wentworth street, and thence to Commercial street or the lane. If he approached from Old Castle street, he could escape through Castle alley court into Whitechapel road. This way he did escape. If hemmed in on both sides he could still escape through the connecting court to New castle street and thence to Whitechapel road or Wentworth street as he chose. There was further cunning and evidence of intimate knowledge of the locality in the fact that he was just on the boundary line of two police districts. Whitechapel road is patrolled by constables from Leman street station, and no street constable comes from the road down the alley, because that is in the district belonging to another division. He must have known that an officer could come toward him only from the bottom of the alley, and his intimate knowledge of the locality and police rules made his escape as easy as ever, when it is remembered that in all the eight murders committed he has never once been seen by anybody. The fear of him in Whitechapel can be understood, and the superstition in some of the slums that he is invisible does not seem surprising.

A Thursday's London cable says: The inquest was resumed this morning at 10 and lasted till 1, when it was adjourned until August 14. The only witness who gave any information that has not been published was Dr. Phillips, divisional surgeon. He said that as he was going to the scene of the murder it was raining hard, and he was struck with the fact of the unusual scarcity of the people on the streets. Several jurors smiled at this. He found the body in the position already described. Her clothes were raised well up on the chest. They were all bloody on the side next the wall. He made a complete post-mortem examination to-day at the mortuary. In his examination he found below the woman's left collar bone that there was a well-defined bruise about the size of a shilling, and on the other side was a larger well-defined recent bruise. Both bruises were the result of injury during life. Seven inches below the right nipple began an external wound. It was seven inches long and deepest at its middle part. It divided only the skin and tissue underneath, leaving the muscular structure undivided. Then there were seven smaller wounds, only dividing the skin, running from the inner side of the large wound towards the navel, and from the middle of the larger wound were several small wounds reaching only through the skin, and running downward. The top of the right thumb had been cut off, but that was apparently a former injury. It was clear that the woman had suffered from an old disease. He thought the throat was cut from behind. The first incision seemed to have been interrupted by the prominence of the woman's lower jaw. It was the second incision, joining the first at its deepest part, which was immediately over the carotid vessels. These were entirely severed. He had not the slightest doubt that the cause of death was syncope arising from the loss of blood consequent upon the division of these vessels, and such a death was probably almost instantaneous. The air passage was not divided. At Dr. Phillips' request, he was permitted to defer testifying further pending the investigations of the police.

THE NEXT POPE.

Bishop Kean's Views on the Papal Succession—No Chance for an American.

A Nashville despatch says: The American publishes an interview with Bishop Kean, rector of the Catholic University at Washington, who is here in attendance on the National Education Association. Speaking of the health of the Pope, Bishop Kean said: So far as the health of Leo XIII. is concerned there is little likelihood of his dying very soon. I saw him the day before I left Rome, March 19th, and he was then the picture of health, stout, robust and active. It is true he is a very old man, 82 years old, but he does not stand alone as the only man of advanced age performing the active duties of a high and responsible position. Bismarck, Gladstone, Manning as well an Leo. XIII. are far advanced in life, and yet these men are moving the world. Cardinal Newman is 92 years old, and he has only just retired from the active performance of his duties. When Leo XIII. became the chief bishop of the Church, some 12 years ago, he himself regarded his health so poor that he said it was useless to make him Pope, for he had scarcely six months to live. His health now, however, is very good, and I assure you he has no notion of dying to please anyone. In the event of the death of the Pope where will his successor probably come from? I should say Italy beyond a doubt. Then all this talk about an American Cardinal succeeding is without any foundation at all? Entirely so. There are many reasons why an American will not be elevated to the Papacy. To begin with, an American, no matter how learned he may be, how well posted on European affairs, is thoroughly unfitted to fill the Papal See. The Pope must be a thorough cosmopolitan. He must be au fait with European affairs, conversant with the political and spiritual conditions of France, Germany and Spain, in fact the whole world. No American can grasp the situation in all its details. His educational surroundings and life are totally different from that of the man who is fitted to fill the Papacy. Europe is becomming Americanized, the people are gradually taking up our theories and systems of life and government, but it will be a hundred years before the conditions are such that it would be possible for an American Cardinal to become the head of the Catholic Church.

A GREAT CLOUD BURST

Sweeps Away Many Lives and Destroys Much Property.

A last (Friday) night's Parkersburg, W Va., despatch says: The greatest disaster which ever befell Little Kanawha valley came last night in the shape of a cloud burst, which has completely flooded the county, destroying many lives, carrying off thousands of dollars' worth of property and ruining crops for many miles. Mrs. Isaac H. Tucker, Martin Lawless and an unknown man were drowned in the lower part. Above the destruction is still greater. At Chesterville, a small town about ten miles above, half the residences were carried off bodily and left in the cornfields. Big Tygart valley is completely ruined. In Clay district a fine church and three dwellings were wrecked. The steamer Oneida is reported wrecked and sunk at Enterprise, and the steamer C. C. Martin is sunk at Burning Springs. Little Tygart valley is also reported ruined, but no lives are reported lost there as yet. The worst story of all comes from Morristown, a small village near the head of Tucker Creek, where the cloud burst concentrated all its fury. It struck the village about midnight and completely destroyed it, with many people.

The first report gave the loss of life eleven, but later news seems to increase it. The houses are said to have been picked up and hurled against each other in such a short space of time that no chance to escape was given. It is impossible now to estimate the loss even in this city, as the river is still rising and tearing everything loose. A family boat containing three or four persons went out during the night and it is believed the occupants were drowned. A freight train went through a trestle which was washed out at Harris' ferry, wrecking the train and killing a man. It is reported that Lock No. 1, above the city, on the Little Kanawha, has given way before the flood.

A Fatal Runaway Accident.

An Adrian, Mich., despatch of Thursday says A heartrending accident occurred yesterday. While Mrs. Robert Moreland and Miss Louise Stephenson were being driven through the city in a landau, the horse became frightened and ran, and fearing it would not be controlled by the driver, Miss Stephenson jumped from the carriage and fell, striking her head upon a stone. Her head was bruised and death ensued in a few moments. She is the eldest daughter of Dr. Robert Stephenson, and a young lady universally esteemed for her high character. Her father was at the lake at the time, but Dr. Abe Stephenson, her brother, was present at her death. The city is in mourning over the sad event. Mrs. Moreland was not injured and the driver soon had the horse under control.

Married His First Wife Again.

A New York despatch says: Charles J. Turner, superintendent of the Cleveland Iron Works, Cleveland, O., ten years ago was divorced from his wife, whom he had married 20 years before in Danbury, Ct. His wife secured the divorce, and Mr. Turner married the woman who had won his affections from his wife. Two weeks ago last Saturday he was remarried to his first wife. For ten years Mrs. Turner heard nothing from her divorced husband. A month or so ago she received a newspaper containing a marked death notice. This was followed by a letter from Mr. Turner. The letter was answered and the marriage the other night was the sequel.

"Several first-class death notices were crowded out this week to make room for the circus ad.," says a Missouri paper of late date, "but they can be confidently looked for after the rush has passed."

A poultry trust has been organized, and thus the fowl business goes on.

HAD A SENSITIVE NATURE.

Morgan Graves Killed Himself Because He Was Charged With Stealing a Small Sum—The Pathetic Notes He Left Behind.

A Chicago despatch says: Out in the hearse-house of the undertaker's establishment at 628 North Wells street, on the cooling-board, lay the body of Morgan Graham Graves. He was only 28 years old when he shot himself. It is one of those tragedies which bubble to the surface of the river of life in Chicago. The bubble burst and the coroner's inquest this morning was the vanishing circle which told that it had been. Graves was his mother's support, his father having left the family. He was slightly deformed with that protruding chest known as a pigeon-breast. He worked for James Wilde & Co. Last Saturday, he told his mother when he came home so early yesterday afternoon, he had sent out a boy to collect $6 50 on a suit of clothes. Graves forgot to ask the boy for the money when the lad returned, and when Graves thought of it yesterday morning the messenger declared that the money had been paid to Graves. Mr. Reed, the manager, concluded, after hearing both sides, that the boy's story was true. Graves left the store, went home, told his mother about it, and said he was going out into the park for a walk. Then he wrote a letter to his mother and sent it to her by a neighbor. It is written in clerkly script and is pathetic in its simplicity. Here it is:

July 15, 1889.—Dearest mother, I have telegraphed Mark and Edith, so you will not have the trouble. I am now going to take my life, as I am in so much trouble that I cannot try any longer. I could not let you know of it, for it will break your heart. I did not send pa any word, for he doesn't care for me or else he would never have left me this great burden. So forgive me for this awful sin I have committed. Good-bye forever. Your son,

MORGAN GRAHAM GRAVES.

Then the suicide wrote another note to his friend Eddie Schupp. This he left in his coat pocket:

Dearest friend, it(reads), you will, no doubt be much surprised to hear that your best friend has left you. I am sorry, but can't help it. I am in much trouble. You know I said to you the other night that Mr. Reed had blamed Mr. Springer and I with taking the small amount of cash. I can't stand this charge, so will not try to any longer. My last promise is that I am innocent of the last charge. I want you to always encourage my mother, God knows that I loved her dearly, and she did me, too. I am so nervous now. You must remind me to all my many friends, so good-bye to all. I cannot be with you again, so good-bye.

Then he started off to the park. Meantime his mother had sent word to the captain of the park police, and he in turn had warned all the men to keep a sharp lookout. Officer Wickert saw Graves near the main entrance and started toward him. Graves fired one shot in the air and then bending his head shot again, the ball gashing the flesh and entering the skull right in the middle of the forehead just above the root of the nose. He toppled forward and when the officer reached him he was dying. In four minutes he was no longer Morgan Graves, but a thing which must be put away out of the sight of man. Graves had pinned his card, on which he had written his address, on the lapel of his coat. In his pocket was 45 cents in money, a pocket-book and a bunch of keys.

The coroner's verdict was that Graves had shot himself while despondent.

To-day a streamer of crape floated from the bell-handle of 751 North Wells street and a mother sat in darkness and mourned.

THAT MISERABLE WAR.

Hippolyte and Legitime Driving the People Delirious.—A Lively Time Expected.

A letter to the New York Times dated Port Au Prince, July 17, says the city is in a state bordering on frenzy. Hippolyte has assaulted the outer works. Legitime is impressing into the ranks every man capable of carrying a rifle. The people having been delirious with excitement, the Minister of War has executed some of the prisoners with his own hands. Hippolyte is burning farm houses and villages in sight of the city. All foreigners have been threatened with extermination, but the United States naval force on hand are prepared to take the city if necessary.

The Kearsarge and Ossipie are here. The British cruiser Forward has come in under a full head of steam. She left Jamaica on six hours' notice. The Spanish cruisers Comba and Sanchez have arrived. They report a French man-of-war on the way. The combined forces of the foreign warships are prepared to effect a landing at a moment's notice. A system of signals has been established with the American Consul, and the moment the danger flag is exhibited picked infantry companies from the Kearsarge and Ossipie will jump for the boats. The captain of the British cruiser declares if one Englishman is touched he will open every gun in his batteries. Hippolyte is within a mile of the city, and his force is reported to number 10,000 men. It is a question of but a few days before the end is at hand. Port au Prince knows it, and men, women and children are prepared to die with Legitime. The feeling against foreigners is one of bitter hatred, and it needs but a spark to turn the whole native population into a frenzied mob.

Suffocated by Sewer Gas.

A Lincoln, Neb., despatch of Wednesday says: This afternoon a watch was dropped in a cesspool here and several men endeavored to recover it. They dug a large hole at the side of the pool. This hole was filled with water by the rain. One man stood on a ladder above the water and made an opening into the cesspool. The foul air and gas rushed out and overcame him, and he fell into the water. A friend went to give aid and was likewise overcome. Others came to help, and one by one seven men fell into the water, which by this time was full of muck and slime from the vault. Three were rescued by the men who afterwards perished in attempting to save the others.

Dr. R. A. Gunn, M. D., Dean and Professor of Surgery of the United States Medical College, editor of Medical Tribune, author of "Gunn's New Improved Handbook of Hygiene and Domestic Medicine," in speaking of advanced kidney disease, and the effect of the use of Warner's Safe Cure, says: "I find that in Bright's Disease it seems to act as a solvent of albumen; to soothe and heal inflamed membranes, and wash out epithelial debris, which blocks up the tubuli uriniferi (urine-bearing tubes), and to prevent the destructive metamorphosis of tissue."

A NEW MESSIAH DOWN SOUTH.

A Man who has Turned the Negroes Wild with a Promise to Turn Them White.

A Savannah, Ga., despatch says: Liberty county is greatly excited over the proceedings of a man calling himself Dupont Bell, who claims to be the New Messiah. He hails from Circleville, O. He is tall and sallow, with long black hair. He has succeeded in working the negroes of that section up to such a point that the white people are afraid of serious trouble.

"This man Bell," Senator Bradwell said to-day, "appeared suddenly in Liberty county six weeks ago. He proclaimed himself to be the Son of God, and the negroes at once went mad over him. They deserted their fields to follow him and listen to his rantings, and now things are so bad that it is impossible to get hands on the plantations near Riceborough, and some of the crops are being ruined. The negroes kneel before him and struggle with each other for the privilege of kissing his feet. He has told them that the judgment day will be here August 16th. He says that the white people have enjoyed their paradise on earth for the last eighteen centuries, and now it will be the black man's turn. On the eagerly-looked-for 16th every white man will be turned black and every black man will become white.

"This prospect cannot be cheering to Bell, whose skin is white. He says his body was born thirty years ago in Ohio, but his soul has lived since the world began. On the 38th of June he was arrested on a charge of vagrancy, but it was impossible to hold him on such a charge, as he had a quantity of money in his possession. I think a good application of the whip would be the best thing for him, but the negroes far outnumber the whites, and there would be a fearful and bloody riot if anything were done to him. His schemes for raising money are varied and peculiar. The last effort of his genius was to declare that he had sent to his august Father for a consignment of wings which the negroes will need on and after the 16th of August. There was a corner on wings when his requisition reached heaven, and the Almighty was only able to send him 360 pairs. These, he claimed, would be delivered on the Judgment Day, and in the meantime he would sell them at $5 a pair. Every pair has been bought and paid for, and now the lucky ones are practicing the flying motions. He thinks his Father may be able to send him a few more pairs before the great day.

"There is a scheme on foot to get Bell away from his followers, arrest him quietly and have him sent on the fast train to Savannah to be locked up. That is, as far as I can see, the only way to get rid of the man. He may cause serious trouble any day."

THE MISSING AIR SHIP.

Hogan May be Safe Yet, but His Chances are Poor.

A New York despatch says: Prof. Hogan, the missing æronaut, may be alive after all. The pilot boat Robert Carll sighted the air ship yesterday at 2 p.m. out at sea, floating a short distance above the water. The Carll was about a mile distant from the air ship. The pilots intended to pick up the balloon and stood toward the air ship. Just as they were going to launch their yawl the man in the balloon threw ballast overboard, waved a white flag, as if to say he was all right, and ascended again very quickly. The balloon remained in sight about an hour and was sailing well. Two schooners within signalling distance were sailing east in the same direction as the air ship. When at 5.30 o'clock Capt. Phelan, of the pilot boat Caprice, saw the air ship dragging in the water there was no man in it. There were two large schooners in sight and it is thought Hogan may have been picked up by one of them.

Prof. Edward D. Hogan, the æronaut supposed to have been lost near New York, was born at Moorestown, Ont., a few miles below Sarnia. He was 37 years of age. Hogan was a man without fear and made more successful balloon ascensions than any living man. He made his first trip to the clouds in 1866, and since that time has devoted his whole life to the profession and has taken over 600 upward journeys. He was among the first to dispense with the basket and ascend to the heavens upon a frail trapeze bar. Two years ago he began jumping from his balloon with a closed parachute.

The Gladstone Golden Wedding.

Arrangements are now complete for the reception of Mr. and Mrs. Gladstone in the National Liberal Club on the evening of the 26th inst., in celebration of the golden wedding of Mr. and Mrs. Gladstone. The members of Mr. Gladstone's last administration and representatives of Liberalism from all parts of the country will be present. Mr. Marcus Stone, R. A., has designed the allegorical figure of "Freedom" prefacing the commemoration album which is to be presented to Mr. Gladstone. The presentation address is a short one, the work of Mr. Wemyss Reid, and is an eloquent tribute to Mr. Gladstone's great personal gifts. The body of the album consists of five pages, three of which are decorative in character and support the intermingled address. Of these, one, designed by Mr. Lewis F. Day, refers to the domestic life and political career generally of Mr. Gladstone; another, Mr. Henry Holiday's design, refers to Mr. Gladstone as a scholar and statesman, his debt to Greece and Italy, and their indebtedness to him in return. On the third page, Mr. Walter Crane refers more particularly to Mr. Gladstone's later career, and to Home Rule in particular. A page of water-color drawings by Alfred Parsons, R. I., represents country life at Hawarden, whilst J. MacWhirter, A. R. A., and Arthur Severn, R. I., portray Edinburgh and London respectively.

Babies in California.

"At one time a woman could hardly walk through the streets of San Francisco without having every one pause to gaze on her, and a child was so rare that once in a theatre in the same city where a woman had taken her infant, when it began to cry, just as the orchestra began to play, a man in the pit cried out, 'Stop those fiddles and let the baby cry. I haven't heard such a sound for ten years.' The audience applauded this sentiment, the orchestra stopped and the baby continued its performance amid unbounded enthusiasm."

NORTHWEST NOTES.

The Northern Pacific & Manitoba Portage branch will be open for business on the 1st of August.

Two brothers named Western made a serious assault upon Geo. W. Robinson at Portage la Prairie. The Westerns rented rooms from Robinson and the quarrel resulted over the rent.

The contract for the new Lansdowne College at Portage la Prairie has been let and permanent officers chosen.

Angus McNaughton, Calgary, livery stable keeper, was seriously injured by a horse falling on him, pinning him to the ground for several minutes.

A young French-Canadian, nephew of a Mr. Licotte, was drowned to-day at Rat River. The name of the deceased is unknown.

Blood Indians recently interfered with Mounted Police officers in seeking the arrest of Colt Robe and Prairie Chicken, two of their number, for horse-stealing. Early next morning several Indians arrived at the barracks and reported that the police were intoxicated and drew their arms, and to prevent their firing they interfered. Supt. Steel then sent out Inspector Wood to investigate and bring in the Indians. He found that there was not a particle of truth in the charge of intoxication; that their men had not drawn their arms, nothwithstanding provocation. After waiting a considerable time Red Crow handed over Prairie Chicken and Colt Robe to Inspector Wood, together with four others who had obstructed the police. Prairie Chicken received a lecture for running away and was released. Colt Robe was held on a charge of levelling a rifle at Constable Sinckmont. He had his preliminary examination and was committed for trial. Superintendent Steel and Inspector Wood held a preliminary investigation on the four Indians' who had obstructed the police, and they are to stand their trial. Indian Agent Pocklington and Red Crow went security for their appearance.

The Pope has sent his Apostolic benediction to the Catholic Council at St. Boniface.

In the notice published in regard to the sale of the anthracite coal mining property, only the names of the American stockholders who had received direct benefit from the sale are given. In addition to these a number of Canadians were heavy stockholders, and will receive equal benefit from the magnificent sale of the property for $1,500,000. Among the Canadians interested are Mr. McLeod Stewart, Major Jack Stewart, Mr. Sandford Fleming, Mr. James O'Connor, of the Queen's, and Mr. W. B. Scarth, M P. Mr. O'Connor will receive between $50,000 and $60,000 for his share, as he was a pretty heavy holder of stocks. Mr. Scarth will also get a good slice, as will also the others named. The old company was stocked for half a million, so that the stock sells for three times its face value. It is understood that Sir Charles Tupper assisted Mr. Stewart in England in making the sale.

A young man named Peters was drowned in Red River, near St. Pie yesterday. He was swimming, and challenging his companions as to who could swim across the river the greatest number of times, at last became thoroughly exhausted and was drowned.

The Board of Trade have passed a resolution calling upon the Council not to proceed with the proposed by-law for the city undertaking the water-power scheme, the belief being that it should be done by a company.

An Englishman, calling himself Dr. Lucas put up at one of the city hotels for a few weeks, but has not been seen since the 9th of the present month. All his effects were left in his room, including a bottle of laudanum. It is believed he has committed suicide.

The sensation of the day at St. Boniface is a land sink which occurred in that village the night before last. The slide is the largest any old resident has even seen. It occurred immediately opposite St. Boniface Convent and takes in a stretch of the river bank about two hundreds long and twenty-five feet wide. It took away about half the roadway in front of the convent. The land does not appear to have slid into the river; it seems just to have dropped straight down about fifteen feet as if to fill in a shrinkage in the bowels of the earth. The ground from which the fallen portion was severed presents a perpendicular wall, fifteen feet high, which looks as if the land had been sliced off with a knife. The phenomenon drew hundreds of curious people to examine the locality and speculate upon the cause.

James and Wm. Western, for assaulting Geo. W. Robinson, at Portage la Prairie, were heavily fined.

A young Englishman named Fred. Blair, at Morden, has been adjudged insane and taken to Selkirk.

There is a movement on foot among the friends, political and personal, of the late Hon. John Norquay to erect a monument over his grave.

The contract for the grading of the Winnipeg Transfer Railway along the banks of the Red River has been awarded to J. W. Buchan.

Intelligence has been received here that Rev. A. B. Winchester, who left Winnipeg for mission work in China some months ago, is returning broken in health.

No application has yet been made for a writ of habeas corpus in the Burke case, and only a week remains in which it can be made. The difficulty in the way seems to be that Burke's lawyers have not yet been supplied with money.

Locating engineers are preparing to go out over the Regina & Long Lake Railway. The company have an agent here who will ship an outfit to Regina next week for the engineers.

A grain dealer who has been over a large part of the Province says the harvest will be two weeks earlier than it has been for years. He estimates that by August 10th wheat cutting will be going on all over the Province. He also says there is very little to complain of in the crops in the Red River district.

A young Presbyterian minister has been driven from the town of Le Claire, Ia., because he declared in a sermon that there was not a virtuous woman between the ages of sixteen and twenty-five in the place.

Robert Browning has presented the Shah of Persia with a gorgeously bound set of his works.

Kiss Her and Tell Her So.

You've a neat little wife at home, John,
As sweet as you'd wish to see;
As faithful and gentle-hearted,
As fond as a wife can be;
A genuine, home-loving woman,
Not caring for fuss and show;
She's dearer to you than life, John;
Then kiss her and tell her so.

Your dinners are promptly served, John,
As, likewise, your breakfast and tea;
Your wardrobe is always in order,
With buttons where buttons should be,
Her house is a cosy home-nest, John,
A heaven of rest below;
You think she's a rare little treasure;
Then kiss her and tell her so.

She's a good wife and true to you, John,
Let fortune be foul or fair;
Of whatever comes to you, John,
She cheerfully bears her share.
You feel she's a brave, true helper,
And perhaps far more than you know,
Twill lighten her end of the load, John,
Just to kiss her and tell her so.

There's a cross-road somewhere in life, John,
Where a hand on a guiding stone
Will signal one "over the river,
And the other must go on alone,
Should she reach the last milestone first John,
Twill be comfort amid your woe
To know that while loving her here, John,
You kissed her and told her so.

—Lillie Sheldon.

The Girl in a Calico Dress.

Though Queens of Society try as they will
To dazzle and charm us by dressing to kill
They cannot look ever, we have to confess,
As sweet as the girl in a calico dress.

No framework of satin, silk, jewels and lace
Can set off her picture of beauty and grace
Like a calico dress of neat pattern and shade
That her own willing hands have so tastefully made

There's something so welcome, so homelike, so clean,
So honest and useful, so modest of mien
In a calico dress that its wearer we know,
Partakes of its virtues and in them will grow.

No tailor-made girl, be she ever so smart,
And decked in the fashion of dressmaking art,
Can hold up a candle with any success
To the sensible girl in the calico dress.

And none, when it comes to the duties of life,
Can make for a man such a helpmate and wife
And build him a home that he proudly will bless
Like the brave little girl in a calico dress.

All praise to the girl in a calico dress;
A marriage with her is a certain success.
A kitchen or parlor—each one in its place—
She, like Cinderella, will equally grace.

My Ships.

If all the ships I have at sea
Should come a sailing home to me—
Ah! well, the harbor could not hold
One-half the sails that there would be
If all my ships came home from sea.

If half the ships I have at sea
Should come a sailing home to me—
Ah! well, I should have wealth as great
As any king who sits in state,
So rich the treasures there would be
In half my ships now out at sea.

If just one ship I have at sea
Should come a sailing home to me—
Ah! well, the storm-cloud then might frown,
For if the others all went down,
So rich, so proud, so glad I'd be,
If that one ship came home to me.

If that one ship went down at sea
And all the others came to me,
Weighted with wealth untold,
The poorest soul on earth I'd be
If that one ship came not to me.

Oh, skies be calm, oh, winds blow free,
Blow all my ships safe home to me:
But if thou sendest home a wreck,
To never more come sailing back,
Send any, all that skim the sea,
But send my love ship home to me.

—Ella Wheeler Wilcox.

No Prayer To-Night.

No prayer to-night! No golden head
To lie in my lap with glittering light;
But a broken heart, and a sigh instead—
Ah me! ah me! no prayer to-night.

No lisping tongue, no dimpled hands,
To sing and strike in keen delight,
No hair to plait in glistening strands—
Ah me! ah me! no prayer to-night.

No prayer to-night—no bright eyes shine;
No cradled head to catch my sight,
No rosy lips pressed close to mine—
Ah me! ah me! no prayer to-night.

No trusting love, no pearly tears;
No smile; no laughter loud and bright;
No little voice to tell its fears—
Ah me! ah me! no prayer to-night.

No prayer to-night, an aching heart,
A life that is full of care and blight,
A life that has sorrow in every part—
Ah me! ah me! no prayer to-night.

—Chambers' Journal for July.

Content.

Happy the man that, when his day is done,
Lies down to sleep with nothing of regret;
The battle he has fought may not be won,
The fame he sought be just as fleeting yet.
Folding at last his hands upon his breast,
Happy is he, if hoary and forespent,
He sinks into the last, eternal rest,
Breathing these only words, "I am content."

But happier he, that, while his blood is warm,
Sees hopes and friendships dead about him lie,
Bares his brave breast to envy's bitter storm,
Nor shuns the poison barbs of calumny;
And 'mid it all, stands sturdy and elate,
Girt only in the armor God hath meant
For him who 'neath the buffetings of fate
Can say to God and man: "I am content."

—Eugene Field in Chicago News.

A Royal Epitaph.

Here is an epitaph composed for Frederick Louis, Prince of Wales, and Prince of Gamblers

"Here lies Fred,
Who was alive and is dead
Had it been his father,
I had much rather,
Had it been his brother,
Much better than another;
Had it been his sister,
No one would have missed her;
Had it been the whole generation,
Still better for the nation.
But since 'tis only Fred,
Who was alive and is dead,
There's no more to be said."

"Good-by."

We say it for an hour or for years;
We say it smiling, say it choked with tears;
We say it coldly, say it with a kiss;
And yet we have no other word than this—
"Good-by."

We have no dearer word for our heart's friend,
To him who journeys to the world's far end
And soars our soul, with going; thus we say,
As unto him who steps but o'er the way—
"Good-by."

Alike to those we love and those we hate,
We say no more in parting. At life's gate,
To him who passes out beyond earth's sight,
We cry, as to the wanderer for a night—
"Good-by."

—Grace Denio Litchfield.

A new French invention, the thermographic press, is made for printing on wood by means of hot type. As neat an impression is claimed as is obtained in lithography, and by the use of a specially prepared ink it is said that cold type may be used with equally good effect. Its speed is 400 impressions an hour on flat wood.

A customer may abuse his milk dealer in the most scandalous fashion for supposed unfair dealing, but in the end the milkman will make him take water.

WHAT A CLOUDBURST IS.

A Lake of Water Actually Suspended in Mid-Air.

The phenomena of a cloudburst, which can only occur in a tornado or whirlwind, are not generally understood, says the New York Herald. The whirl in which it forms is not a very broad and shallow disk, but a tall, columnar mass of rotating air, similar to that in which the Atlantic waterspout or the famous pillar-like dust storm of India is generated. While this travelling aerial pillar, perhaps a few hundred yards in diameter, is rapidly gyrating, the centrifugal force, as Prof. Ferrel has shown, acts as a barrier to prevent the flow of external air from all sides into its interior, except at and near the base of the pillar. Their friction with the earth retards the gyrations and allows the air to rush in below and escape upward through the flue-like interior as powerful ascending currents.

The phenomenon, however, will not be attended by terrific floods unless the atmosphere is densely stored with water vapor, as it was on Tuesday in the Cayadutta valley, and as it was on May 31st in the Conemaugh valley. When such is the case the violent ascending currents suddenly lift the vapor laden clouds several thousand feet above the level at which they were previously floating, and hurl them aloft into rarified and cold regions of the atmosphere, where their vapor is instantly condensed into many tons of water. Could the water fall as fast as condensed it would be comparatively harmless. But the continuous uprushing currents support this mass of water at the high level, and as their own vast volumes of vapor rising are condensed they add to the water already accumulated thousands of feet above the earth's surface—making, so to speak, a lake in high air.

As the whirlwind weakens or passes from beneath this vast body of water, which its ascending currents have generated and upheld in the upper story of the atmosphere, the aqueous mass, no longer supported, drops with ever increasing gravitational force to the earth. In severe cloud bursts the water does not fall as rain, but in sheets and streams, sometimes unbroken for many seconds. The cloud burst of 1838 at Hollidaysburg, Pa., excavated many holes in the ground, varying from 25 to 30 feet in diameter, and from 3 to 6 feet deep. In a similar but milder storm, which visited Boulogne last May, fissures were cut in the streets eight feet deep and openings made large enough to engulf a horse and cart.

Temperance Notes.

A STRANGE, SAD, TRUE TALE.

In his speech at the Presbyterian Synod, the Rev. John McNeil, of London, the "Scottish Spurgeon," created quite a sensation by telling the following tale: He was speaking of temperance, and said that last Sunday (when he preached a temperance sermon at the Tabernacle) he received a letter that had been written by a lady on the danger of the use at communion of fermented wine. The lady in her letter told a sad story of an inherited passion for drink. There were four or five of them, several brothers and two sisters, and the children of intemperate parents. The sister had, unfortunately, inherited the craving, and before she was fourteen had taken to drink. The others became converted, and did all in their power to cure their sister; but it was of no use. The sister at length married comfortably, and children were born. But the craving for drink grew greater and greater, and at length she was sent to a home for inebriates, where she stayed a year. She left apparently, said the sister, a changed woman. Soon after, however, her husband caught a severe cold, and before going out one morning drank a glass of hot whiskey—taking care, however, not to do so in the presence of his wife. Then, as was his custom, before leaving, he kissed his wife. At once the fumes of alcohol passed into her, and in an hour she was a drunk and roaring woman. She went from worse to worse, and at last left her husband and her children, one of them a cripple, through her drunkenness. The husband died two years ago, a white-haired and broken-hearted man, though only 45 years old. "Need I add," said the sister in her letter, "what became of her? Her story is that of Annie Chapman, one of the recent Whitechapel victims. That was my sister!"

"AFTER YOUR BOY."

During the Christian Endeavor Convention at Chicago, one of the delgates, a young business man, dressed in a natty rough-and-ready suit, every movement alert and eager and telling of bottled energy within, came suddenly upon a red faced citizen who evidently had been patronizing the hotel bar. Buttonholing the delegate a trifle unceremoniously, the latter said:

"What are you fellows trying to do down at the battery? You are hot on temperance, I see by the papers. Do you think you could make a temperance man of me?

"No," replied the delegate, looking him over from head to foot with a keen glance, slightly contemptuous, "we evidently couldn't do much with you, but we are after your boy."

At this unexpected retort the man dropped his jocular tone and said seriously, "Well, I guess you have got the right of it there. If somebody had been after me when I was a boy I should be a better man to-day."

The young man gave in a nutshell the sum and substance of the Christian Endeavor movement.

Mr. Simmons, Governor of Canterbury Prison, is authority for the following: 'The number of prisoners who have been committed to the prison with which I have been connected during the last ten years amounts to 32,000. Among them I have come in contact with ministers of the gospel, numbers of persons who were once members of Christian churches, as also children of pious parents; but, I never met with a prisoner who was a teetotaler.

Had Had Experience.

Merchant—"You want a place in my store you say?"

Applicant—"Yes, sir."

"Ever worked in a store before?"

"Yes, sir."

"Let me try you. Suppose a lady should come in with a piece of cloth, and want to get a number of yards to match it, what would you do?"

"I'd send her to the next counter."

"I guess you've had experience."

HE STICKS TO IT.

Dr. McGlynn Tells His Friends He Has Nothing to Recant.

The third annual excursion of the Anti-Poverty Society, like its predecessors, according to the New York Mail and Express, was a big success. Dr. McGlynn spoke to 3,000 of the faithful on his favorite theme. Among other things he said: "We have nothing to be ashamed of. We have nothing to apologize for. We have nothing to explain away; and, least of all have we anything to take back. If at this late day there is some benighted, belated person, some one who has never read the newspapers or forgets all he reads, or some one perhaps who cannot read at all, I care not who he be, who will ask the musty, the stale, the moth-eaten, the chestnutty old question, 'Why didn't Dr. McGlynn go to Rome?' a sufficiently adequate answer to that is in the fact that with the command to go to Rome was a command to condemn in writing the doctrines that I have maintained. So help me God, whom I venerate as present here, in this, one of His first temples, since the groves were God's first temples, whence men looked up to the clear sky beyond and said 'our Father'—so help me God, I would, this or any other moment, sooner be burned alive by slow fires than retract what I know to be the very truth of God. (Applause.) For me under such circumstances to retract or go to Rome were to be guilty of an infamy. To retract under such circumstances, to condemn the truth that was God's, would have been not merely a blasphemy and sacrilege and perjury, a monstrous crime against God, against my own soul, and against the precious rights of humanity, but, to speak merely from a worldly point of view, it were a blunder worse than a crime. If I had the rare good fortune to be led out amid thousands of jeering, mocking, insulting, cursing, howling enemies, alone unfriended and naked, to be burned at a stake for this truth, I should go smiling as to victory. I should mount the scaffold as if it were a royal throne. I should feel that from such a scaffold I saw the heavens open and that was the best ladder by which I could mount to God. And if I could permit, as I should not care to do, any mere worldly thought of personal glory to enter into my mind, I should feel that I was not so much making a prophecy as applying the teaching of all history, when I should say the very spot that you would make infamous by the ashes of a man whom you would burn to death for the truth shall be made memorable by this day's scene, and some after generation, better minded, shall come and consecrate the spot to liberty forever."

Statue of Wallace in Ballarat.

On May 24th a magnificent statue of Sir William Wallace, the great Scottish patriot, was unveiled in the Public Gardens, Ballarat, Australia. The statue was a gift to the city from the estate of the late Russell Thomson, a native of Scotland, who was long identified with the place. The sculptor was Mr. Percival Ball, of Melbourne. Wallace is represented as standing upon the Abbey Craig, watching for the precise moment when a blast upon the horn hanging at his side will give the signal for his forces to fall upon the English as they cross Stirling Bridge. The figure is of heroic size, standing over eight feet in height. His powerful frame is clad in a close-fitting suit of chain armor, which well displays the muscular development of the stalwart frame. The arms are bare to just above the elbow, and the large muscles stand out in cords through the armor. Both hands are grasping a representation of the immense sword that in Wallace's hands wrought such havoc among his foes. Over the figure is a light surcoat, with lion of Scotland emblazoned on the breast, and on the head is a simple morion, so that the features are not hidden by a visor. These are most expressive, representing a stern resolve to do or die, not unmixed by anxiety, and full of vigilance and observation. The pose is natural and effective and the tout ensemble is pleasing to the eye. As might be imagined, the unveiling ceremonies were attended by the Scottish residents for a great distance around Ballarat, and prolonged and enthusiastic cheers greeted the figure when it was unveiled by Hon. J. Nimmo.

Hot Milk a Substitute for Liquor.

Mrs. Hayes always declared that a perfectly adequate substitute for liquor when needed as a stimulant could be found in hot milk, and after any cold or wetting she gave them this in place of the wine or whiskey which others would have considered necessary. This is, by the way a custom of Mrs. Cleveland's also, who discovered after the fatigues of the many long and wearisome receptions she was obliged to go through, standing for hours on her feet and shaking hands with hundreds of people, that nothing would restore her so quickly as a cupful of boiling milk brought to her by her maid, and which she drank in little sips as hot as it possibly could be taken. The Washington girls caught the idea from her, and finding how quickly it helped them after a hard day of calls and social duties they began to substitute it for the various malt preparations they had been in the habit of taking, or the hot wine and water which their maids usually administered when they came in too tired out to dress for their next engagement.—New York World.

Apoplexy, pneumonia, rheumatism are prevented and removed by Warner's Safe Cure. Why? Dr. Geo. Johnson, of King's College, London, England, says: "There is wide-spread enlargement of the muscular walls of the small arteries in chronic Bright's Disease, not only in the arteries of the kidneys, but also in those of the pia mater (investing membrane of the brain), the skin, the intestines and the muscles, as a result of a morbidly changed condition of the blood due to kidney disease." If the kidney disease is not cured, apoplexy, pneumonia or rheumatism will result. Warner's Safe Cure does cure kidney disease, thus enabling them to take out of the blood the morbid or unhealthy matters

Before and After.

Evening Caller—"I have been wondering who those companion framed portraits are, one a beautiful young girl and the other a wrinkled, sad-faced old woman." Pretty Hostess—"Oh, that's ma, before and after marriage."—New York Weekly.

A DUTIFUL SENTRY.

Coolness and Bravery of a Private Soldier in the Crimea.

The true soldier esteems it a privilege to serve his country in word and deed. His resolve is to do his duty, come what may, and to do it even in the dark, where his self-devotion can meet with no recognition, much less with reward. How such a determination ennobles a man and lifts him out of the slough of selfishness is illustrated by a story told by Lord Wolseley in his "Fortnightly Review" article, "Is a Soldier's Life Worth Living?" The place was in the Crimea, the time during the dismal winter of 1854-5 and the hero a British private. One night the Russians forced their way into the English second parallel, drove out the men on guard and for a short time held the position. Then the English troops drove back the Russians to their own lines and reoccupied the parallel. On the extreme left of the parallel, where it dipped down into a ravine, an English sentry was found at his post, where he had remained during the Russian assault and occupation. They had not spread out so as to reach his post, though they had come very near it. His comrades had died in a panic and he knew that he was in danger of being surrounded and taken prisoner. But he stood there waiting to be attacked before he retreated. When discovered by his comrades he was coolly looking over the parapet toward the Redan, he having been ordered to watch that Russian work. On being asked why he had not run when the others did, he answered that he had been posted there by his officer and could not leave his post until relieved or driven away by the enemy.

His coolness and high sense of duty," writes Lord Wolseley, "made a deep impression upon my mind at the time. No marshal's baton was in his knapsack, he expected nothing, he got nothing. It was by accident only that his gallant conduct on that dark winter's night was ever known to any one; but he must have had the satisfactory consciousness in his heart that he had done his duty. How many are the heroic deeds which are never heard of.

A Ghost Story.

The late Dr. Fowler, Bishop of Gloucester, and Justice Powell had frequent altercations on the subject of ghosts. The bishop was a zealous defender of the reality of them; the justice was somewhat sceptical. The bishop one day met his friend, and the justice told him that since their last conference on the subject he had had ocular demonstrations which had convinced him of the existence of ghosts. "I rejoice at your conversion," replied the bishop; "give me the circumstances which produced it, with the particulars. Ocular demonstration, you say!" "Yes, my lord. As I lay last night in my bed, about the twelfth hour I was awakened by an uncommon noise, and heard something coming upstairs." "Go on, sir." "Fearfully alarmed at the noise, I drew my curtain ——." "Proceed." "And saw a faint glimmering light enter my chamber." "Of a blue color was it not?" interrogated the doctor. "Of a pale blue, and this pale blue light was followed by a tall meagre, stern figure who appeared as an old man of 70 years of age arrayed in a long light-colored rug gown bound with leather girdle; beard thick; hair scant and straight; face of a dark sable hue; upon his head a large fur cap, and in his hand a long staff. Terror seized my whole frame. I trembled till the bed verily shook, and cold drops hung upon every limb. The figure advanced with slow and solemn step." "Did you not speak to it? There was money hid or murder committed without a doubt," said the bishop. "My lord, I did speak to it; I adjured it by all that was holy to tell me whence, and for what purpose he thus appeared." "And in Heaven's name what was the reply?" "Before he deigned to reply he lifted up his staff three times, my lord, and smote the floor even so loudly that verily the stroke caused the room to reverberate the thundering sound. He then waved the pale blue light which he bore in what is called a lantern. He waved it even to my eyes; and he told me, my lord, he told me that he was—Yes, my lord, that he was no more nor less than—the watchman! who had come to give me notice that my street door was open, and that I might be robbed before morning." The justice had no sooner concluded than the bishop disappeared.

The Best Time to Bathe.

It is best to bathe just before going to bed, as any danger of catching cold is thus avoided, and the complexion is improved by keeping warm for several hours after leaving the bath. A couple of pounds of bran put into a thin bag and then into the bath-tub is excellent for softening the skin. It should be left to soak in a small quantity of water several hours before being used. The internal aids to a clear complexion are most of them well known, and the present season is the best for a thorough cleansing and purifying of the blood. The old-fashioned remedy of sulphur and molasses is considered among the best. Charcoal, powdered and taken with water, is said to be excellent, but it is most difficult to take. A strictly vegetable and fruit diet is followed by many for one or two weeks.—The London Lancet.

A Library Without a Novel.

One would scarcely believe it possible for a circulating library to exist without works of fiction on its shelves. Yet, the Friends' Library, Germantown, Philadelphia, contains no novels whatsoever and loans out fourteen thousand and some volumes yearly and about twenty-five thousand people annually use its reading room.—De Meml, St. Louis Magazine.

A Hard Man.

Job Comfort—If you're in such hard luck, Jack, why don't you go to your Uncle Nathaniel and tell him the whole story? He's rich enough to help you.

Jack N. Aighpe (gloomily)—It would be no use Job. He's one of those chaps who say "the Sabbath" when they mean Sunday.

Preparing for a Reception.

Young Coachman (to keeper of livery stable)—I'd like to get kicked by a mule if you've got one. Stable-keeper—What for? "I'm going to ask the boss if I can marry his daughter, and I want to see if I'm in condition to receive his reply."

WORLD'S TOBACCO YIELD.

It is Increasing More Rapidly Than That of Either Wheat or Corn.

The world's annual output of tobacco is increasing, perhaps more rapidly than that of either wheat or corn. Kentucky is the greatest factor in the tobacco market, and her product steadily grows. That of Virginia does likewise, and several of the Northern States are cultivating it successfully. Cuba has long been famous for her cigar wrappers, and in many parts of the island the planters are abandoning sugar and turning their attention to tobacco, finding the latter much more profitable. Even Germany is endeavoring to raise it. But the greatest efforts to extend cultivation of tobacco are being made in the East Indies. Both the soil and the climate of the great islands near the Asiatic coast are admirably adapted to the weed, and it has long been successfully grown there, but not until recently have attempts been made to produce it on such a large scale. Both the Dutch and the English are heavily interested, and the industry is not conducted by small farmers, as here in Kentucky, but by great companies on immense plantations, working a thousand or more coolies and Malays.

Sioux Eye Sighed.

Sioux is pronounced Soos, therefore Sioux would be "Soo." Eye is pronounced "I," and sighed is pronounced as though spelt "side." Yet Sioux-eye-sighed would be regarded as a most peculiar way of spelling suicide. It is an ugly thing however you spell it, yet thousands of women are practically guilty of it. Day after day, week after week, they endure that dull pain in the back, that terrible "dragging-down" sensation that tells of weakness and functional disorder, and do absolutely nothing to effect a cure. In a few years a broken-hearted husband and motherless children will follow her to the grave. False delicacy prevents consulting a physician, but even this is not necessary. Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription has cured thousands of such women. To suffer and to die when this would cure is plain, unmistakable Suicide. It is guaranteed to give satisfaction, or money paid for it refunded.

Electric Light on the Eyes.

Within the past ten years thirty people, suffering from a peculiar disease of the eyes, have come under the observation of a Cronstadt oculist. The symptoms were the same in each case, and all the patients had, owing to their employment, been accustomed to remain for hours at a time near electric light apparatus. The new disease is called photo-electric ophthalmia. The patient is apt to be awakened in the night by great pain about the orbits, accompanied with profuse lachrymation. Intense photophobia is another characteristic of the malady.—Journal American Medical Association.

Successful Business Men

Who are our most successful business men? Go out on the street and look them over. You won't find them men who have pale cheeks. They are not thin, emaciated men. They are not nervous, irritable men. They are men whose faces indicate robust health. Men with good blood, and plenty of it. That's the secret of their success. A man whose blood is thin and weak and poisoned with impurities, is never successful like his healthy neighbor. You cannot expect him to be, for without rich, strong, nourishing blood he will lack the "vim" and "push" which the man must have who would succeed. Such men should use Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery to restore their impoverished blood to its normal condition. By the use of this great blood purifier and builder-up of the system, they may put themselves in a condition which will enable them to win the success they are anxious to achieve.

Lord Wolseley on the German Army.

The German nation may be thankful to the German army for other reasons than simply the defense of the fatherland, according to Gen. Lord Wolseley. He writes: "I take the German army as the highest existing type of the military system and organization, which the changes effected in armies by the French revolution have led up to; and much as I admire that army as a soldier I admire it still more as a citizen. Great as it is for war, it is infinitely greater as a national school for the moral, mental and physical training of the people. Designed exclusively for war, it has become the most important of peace institutions. In it all Germans are trained to strength and taught the first principles of personal cleanliness and of health. There they learn to be honest and manly, and are taught the excellence of those virtues which serve to make men good subjects and law abiding citizens. It is the school of the nation, in which deep love of fatherland is fostered and cherished, and where all classes learn that there is honor in obedience and nobility in self sacrifice.

Are you bilious and dyspeptic?
Does your liver sluggish seem?
Is your slumber often broken
By a hideous, nightmare dream?
Friend, be wise. The Pleasant Pellets
Made by Dr. Pierce prevent.
And they'll bring you back the sunshine
Of good health, you may be sure.

Two Wardrobes.

Loving Wife—"My summer wardrobe is completed and I am now ready for Newport." Husband—"Well, I'll see if I can arrange my affairs so I can go." "Gracious! I can't take you along. You haven't a suit of clothes fit to be seen."—New York Weekly.

—Omaha Youth—"Are you in favor of annexation?" South Omaha belle—"Yes, if you can get papa's consent."—Omaha World.

—The language of a deaf-mute is a thing that goes without saying.

DOWL 31 89.

DUNN'S BAKING POWDER
THE COOK'S BEST FRIEND

GEO. MITCHELL,

BANKER,

FLESHERTON.

DRAFTS BOUGHT AND SOLD.

Special Attention paid to the collection Notes and Accounts, 2nd door North Richardson & Co's.

The Local News.

What is Happening in Our Own Vicinity.

Fountain Council, R. T. of T., picnic at Eugenia to-day.

Quarterly services will be held in the Methodist Church on Sunday next.

The Artemesia voters' list is in the hands of the clerk this week.

Several parties from Flesherton took in the Niagara excursion on Monday.

They have arrived, but as Josh Billings remarked: "Don't ete Q kumbers. Tha will W up."

Rev. Father Feeny will remove from his charge at Irish lake this fall to a new parish in Hamilton.

Read carefully M. Richardson & Co's big summer announcement on the opposite page.

Dr. T. Henderson will visit Flesherton on Thursday (to-day) and Friday, August 1 and 2.

The directors of Artemesia Agricultural Society met in Priceville on Tuesday for the purpose of revising the prize list, etc.

Mr. Ed. Richardson and the Misses Maud and Lizzie Richardson are camping with friends from Markdale at Bell's lake

The C.P.R. employes picnicked at Orangeville on Saturday last. It is said there were fully 7,000 strangers in the town on that day.

If you want good beef, veal and lamb that is butchered and dressed in style, go to Petch & Mitchell, as they are the only practical butchers in town.

Our "devil" forget to change the date and number of this paper last week. We feel quite justified in using his distinguished title in this instance.

The Campbell residence, which was to have been sold by auction last Thursday, is still awaiting a buyer, the bids not arriving at the reserve bid figure.

The family of J. E. Moore, Esq., have been camping at Kimberley in company with Rev. Mr. Watson during the past week. A number of Flesherto nians paid them a visit on Sunday last.

The East Grey Agricultural prize list is now in the hands of the secretary. It is a 26-page pamphlet and a daisy. Those desiring a copy may secure one by addressing the secretary, Mr. Damude.

There are several cases of diphtheria on the town line, Euphrasia and Artemesia, in the O'Brien neighborhood. No deaths have been reported. The disease does not appear to be of a virulent type.

Our old friend J.G. Anderson, now of Griswold, Man., surprised his acquaintances here by dropping in upon them on Monday last for a short visit. He will return to the Northwest in three or four weeks.

Rev. Mr. McLeod, of Priceville, preached his farewell sermon on Sunday last and will remove to Glengarry County. The pulpit in Priceville will be declared vacant on Sabbath next by Rev. Mr. McColl, of Proton Station.

We are indebted to Mr. Wm. Edgar, general passenger agent of the Grand Trunk railway, for a neat little book telling all about summer tours and camping grounds. Those anticipating a summer trip should send for one.

A magnificent ten-cent mouthorgan was found on the pic-nic ground last Wednesday. The owner may have it by proving property and paying for this advertisement. If not claimed within six months will be sold to defray costs

The raspberry crop in this immediate vicinity is away below par this summer. In fact fruit of all kinds will be a mighty scarce article One gentleman at Eugenia who owns a good orchard has been counting his apples, and has found that he will have exactly twelve.

Sleepless nights, made miserable by that terrible cough. Shiloh's Cure is the Remedy for you. For sale at the Medical Hall

We have decided not to publish the Centre Grey Farmers' Institute second prize essay, on the advantage of a college education, written by Mr. G. F. Marsh, of Clarksburg. Although the essay is very good in itself, yet it necessarily covers much the same ground with that of the first prize article, published last week, which was complete and convincing. Another reason for not publishing it is that a second class article following upon a first class unavoidably injures the good results obtained from the former.

The following officers of Prince Arthur Lodge, A.F. and A.M., were installed July 12, 1889: W. M., Bro. W. J. Bellamy; S.W., Bro. A.S. Vandusen; J.W. Bro. Dr. Carter; Sec. Treasr, W. Bro. R.J. Sproule; S.D., Bro. W.H. Flesher; J.D., Bro. W. Strain; I.G., Bro. J. Sullivan; Tyler, Bro. J.J. Field P.M., W. Bro. J. Blackburn.

There was to have been a baseball match in Flesherton yesterday between Markdale and Flesherton clubs, for which small bills were issued and other preparations made, but at almost the last moment word was received that Markdale could not come, owing to the death of some one. It is probable that Flesherton and Priceville will meet on the diamond here some day next week.

To Parry Sound.

A load of the Flesherton boys leave to-day for Thornbury, where they intend to take in an excursion which sails from that place for Parry Sound to-morrow.

Honey.

A gentleman left about 200 lbs. of honey at this office for sale last week. It is all disposed of execpting some honey in the comb which he desires to sell at 15 cents per lb.

Notice to the Public.

I am in a position to do all kinds of cotton weaving, such as tweeds, flannels, full cloth and blankets. Rag carpet done to order by J. B. Barkley, weaver, next house to the Presbyterian Church

The Examinations.

As usual our examiners for this county are away behind in their work. Surrounding counties published the results a week ago, but up to the present time of writing (Wednesday) no report has been received from the Grey examiners by any of the newspaper offices.

To Correspondents.

Will correspondents kindly write upon one side of the paper only, and also endeavor to write legibly. This week we have wrestled with manuscript closely written and written upon both sides. If there are errors in it the writers will please remember that we are very busy with job work and have not time to devote to the study of picture writing or hieroglyphics. Had the same manuscript, however, been written with lines and words more distinct, it would be considered as good. Please write plainly.

Bears.

Bears appear to be quite plentiful out east of Eugenia this summer. A little girl, daughter of Mr. H.W. Philips, aged 10 years, was driving the cows along the road near her father's house a few days ago, when a large black dog, as she thought at the time, walked out of the bush, stood upon its hind legs and grinned at her. The animals bawled and started to run, when the bear (for it was a bear) dropped down upon his feet again and ambled off into the bush. We might just add that this is the bear which Tommy Hollinger intends to bring home with him.

Two More Deaths.

Two more deaths of well-known residents of Artemesia have occurred during the past week. Mrs. J.L. Moore, who has been ill for some time, passed quietly away on Saturday last. Deceased's husband is a brother of the sheriff and deputy sheriff of the County, and the remains were taken to Owen Sound for interment on Monday last. The second death was that of Mr. Samuel Paul, who has been a well known personage in the vicinity of Eugenia for many years past. His demise took place on Sunday, 28th, inst.

"Jined" the Church.

The Burlington, Vt., Free Press, published the following: A vast congregation attended the 14th street Catholic Church of this city on Sunday morning last, it being the occasion of receiving into the Church three distinguished gentlemen, who formerly were Protestants, viz: Mr. Scathmore, of Bangor, Maine; Mr. Thomas Hantwell, Barrister, of Augusta, Maine, and Mr. E.E. Knott of this city, formerly Mayor of the city of Euphrasia, Ontario, Canada. Mr. E.E. Knott is undoubtly the ex-reeve of Euphrasia, well-known to many of our readers. The news will be most surprising to the gentleman's friends and relatives here.

Picnic.

The old-fashioned joint picnic between the Presbyterian and Methodist Sunday schools, held on the beaver meadow, near Flesherton, last Wednesday, was one of the most enjoyable affairs of the kind which we ever attended. The day was pleasant, the crowd was large, and every one, old and young, abandoned themselves to the festivities with an energy that denoted the complete putting away of business anxiety. Baseball, croquet, swinging, and other games were plentiful. It was beautiful to see elderly gentlemen return to the games of their childhood, such as "duck on the rock," "tag," and "command you red lion." It was also beautiful to see them limping along the street on the following day like old spavined, ringboned, foundered horses, with dejected, muscle-contracted looks in their faces. Anyway they had a good time, and judging by the crowds present the old annual Sunday school picnic has lost none of its charms.

Special Announcement.

We have made arrangements with Dr. B.J. Kendall Co., publishers of "A Treatise of the Horse and his Diseases" which will enable all our subscribers to obtain a copy of the valuable work free by sending their address enclosing a two-cent stamp for mailing same) to Dr. B.J. Kendall Co., Enosburgh Falls, Vt. This book is now recognized as standard authority upon all diseases of the horse, as its phenomenal sales attests, over four million copies having been sold in the past ten years, a sale never before reached by any publication in the same period of time. We feel confident that our patrons will appreciate the work, and be glad to avail themselves of this opportunity of obtaining a valuable book.

It is necessary that you mention this paper in sending for the "Treatise." This offer will remain open for only a short time.

A Wild Beast Show.

An itinerant showman pitched his tent on Trimble's corner last Friday. The show was not advertised nor heralded in in any way. What the show was, only the owner knew. It was his business. If any person wished to find out he could pay his dime for the information. An old colicky drum and an asthmatic hand organ furnished what was called music inside the tent. We waited around for a long time in the vain endeavor to find some one who had been inside, but had to give it up in disgust. We actually did not see one person enter the yawning canvas door. A shooting gallery on the outside drew considerable custom, but as Tommy Hollinger was away camping the shooting contest was not very spirited. The showman folded their tent on Sunday evening and cautiously stole away while the natives were at church, which makes us suspicious that they were not exactly Methodists, Presbyterians nor Baptists. In fact we don't believe they were very religious people, anyway.

He Was Balky.

If there is anything in this world more exasperating than a balky horse this paper would like to know what it is. One of our business men had occasion the other evening to drive from Flesherton to Bell's lake, which is about five miles north-west of Markdale. The horse furnished for the occasion did not belong to the aforesaid business man, and there is no immediate prospect of his purchasing the equine, which happened to be one of those animals upon which smiles, patience, anger, kicks, soothing words, coaxing, pushes and endearing epithets are thrown away when he takes the idea into his head that he has gone far enough. A dynamite cartridge placed on his tail and fired wouldn't budge the horse in question when he is under deep conviction. The procession got as far as Markdale at a late hour, but beyond that point the horse utterly refused to draw the light wagon, which was pretty well loaded with camping utensils, up any hill however small. He was unhitched and trotted up and down the road, hitched up again and persuaded in several languages, but he did not move perceptibly, and the gentlemen (for there were two of them) had to hoist the vehicle up all the hills while the horse walked behind and laughed at them. On one occasion the horse balked in a swamp after running the wagon into the mire, and in the fight which followed to get it out one of the gentlemen was upset and sank to his waist in water. When he emerged and turned down his pants, which had been rolled up, he found in their folds a fish three inches long. Fish are quite plentiful up there Well, the camping ground was reached sometime in the morning and the gentleman returned home the following evening.

Priceville.

From our own Correspondent.

The weather for the past two weeks has been very favorable for curing the hay crop, which is up to the average in this vicinity.

Heavy rain on Saturday night and Sunday night.

The turnips and other roots are coming on fine.

Some of the oat leaves in this neighborhood measure 1,3-16 inches in width.

Rev. D. McLeod preached to a very large congregation on Sunday, he will remove to his new field of labor in a few days.

An old bachelor "who lives by himself," was out fishing on Sunday, when some of the boys informed him that it was the Sabbath, he would not believe them, but protested that it was Friday. Bachelors take warning.

Mr. D. Lamont raised a large stable at the rear of the Crown hotel on Monday. "Big Hector" is the contractor, and he does his work well.

Mrs. Walker, of Toronto, is here visiting friends. Miss Mary, adopted daughter of the Curry family, after a lingering illness passed away on Monday. The whole neighborhood mourns her loss.

$90 Sewing-Machine FREE

To at once establish trade in all parts, by placing our machines and goods where the people can see them, we will send free to one person in each locality, the very best sewing-machine made in the world, with all the attachments. We will also send free a complete line of our costly and valuable art samples. In return we ask that you show what we send, to those who may call at your home, and after 3 months all shall become your own property. This grand machine is made after the Singer patents, which have run out: before patents run out it sold for $90, with the attachments, and now sells for $50. Best, cheapest, most useful machine in the world. All is free. No capital required. Plain, brief instructions given. Those who write to us at once can secure free the best sewing-machine in the world, and the finest line of works of high art ever shown together in America. TRUE & CO., Box 740, Augusta, Maine.

CATARRH AND COLD IN HEAD HOW CURED

NASAL BALM CURES COLD IN THE HEAD CATARRH

NASAL BALM.

A certain and speedy cure for Cold in the Head and Catarrh in all its stages.

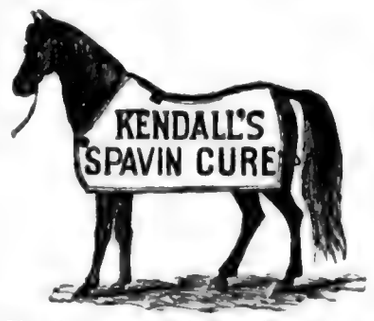
SOOTHING, CLEANSING, HEALING.

Instant Relief, Permanent Cure, Failure Impossible.

Many so-called diseases are simply symptoms of Catarrh, such as headache, partial deafness, losing sense of smell, foul breath, hawking and spitting, nausea, general feeling of debility, etc. If you are troubled with any of these or kindred symptoms, you have Catarrh, and should lose no time in procuring a bottle of NASAL BALM. Be warned in time, neglected cold in head results in Catarrh, followed by consumption and death. NASAL BALM is sold by all druggists, or will be sent, post paid, on receipt of price (50 cents and $1 00) by addressing

FULFORD & CO., BROCKVILLE, ONT.

Beware of imitations similar in name.



The Most Successful Remedy ever discovered, as it is certain in its effects and does not blister. Read proof below.

KENDALL'S SPAVIN CURE.

OFFICE OF CHARLES A. SNYDER, BREEDER OF CLEVELAND BAY AND TROTTING BRED HORSES. ELMWOOD, ILL., Nov. 20, 1888.

DR. B. J. KENDALL CO.

Dear Sirs: I have always purchased your Kendall's Spavin Cure by the half dozen bottles, I would like prices in larger quantity. I think it is one of the best liniments on earth. I have used it on my stables for three years.

Yours truly, CHAS. A. SNYDER.

KENDALL'S SPAVIN CURE.

BROOKLYN, N. Y., November 3, 1888.

DR. B. J. KENDALL CO.

Dear Sirs: I desire to give you testimonial of my good opinion of your Kendall's Spavin Cure. I have used it for Lameness, Stiff Joints and Spavins, and I have found it a sure cure, I cordially recommend it to all horsemen.

Yours truly, A. H. GILBERT, Manager Troy Laundry Stables.

KENDALL'S SPAVIN CURE.

SANT, WINTON COUNTY, OHIO, Dec. 19, 1888.

DR. B. J. KENDALL CO.

Gents: I feel it my duty to say what I have done with your Kendall's Spavin Cure. I have cured seventy-five horses that had Spavins, ten of Ring Bone, nine afflicted with Big Head and seven of Big Jaw. Since I have had one of your books and followed the directions, I have never lost a case of any kind.

Yours truly, ANDREW TURNER, Horse Doctor.

KENDALL'S SPAVIN CURE.

Price $1 per bottle, or six bottles for $5. All Druggists have it or can get it for you, or it will be sent to any address on receipt of price by the proprietors. DR. B. J. KENDALL CO., Enosburgh Falls, Vt.

SOLD BY ALL DRUGGISTS.

Medical.

DR. CARTER,
M.C.P. & S., ONT.
PHYSICIAN, SURGEON, &c.
FLESHERTON.
Office, Strain's block. Residence, J. G. Russel's

J. G. Hutton, M.D.C.M.
Member of the College of Physicians and Surgeons, Ontario.
Enquire at office, one door east of Grier's store or Atkinson's Hotel.
Priceville, Nov. 19, 1888.

ORS. SPOULE & EGO.
MARKDALE ONT.
Office:—Manley's Drug Store.
T.S. SPROULE, M.D., etc. ANGUS EGO, M.D., etc late of Tottenham, Ont
Dr. Ego will be found at Markdale House at night

J. P. OTTEWELL,
VETERINARY SURGEON.
Graduate of Ontario Vet. College.
RESIDENCE ON COLLINGWOOD STREET
Sixth Door East of Presbyterian Church.
FLESHERTON

Dentistry.

DENTISTRY.
Dr. Thomas Henderson.
SURGEON DENTIST
Gold Medalist and Honor Graduate of R.C.D.S.,
Will visit FLESHERTON, (Munshaw's Hotel) 1 and 2 of each month. Teeth extracted, inserted and filled in the highest styles of the art, at moderate rates.
HEAD OFFICE, 761 YONGE ST., TORONTO.

J. P. MARSHALL,
L. D. S., DENTIST.
Visits Markdale the 1st and 3rd Wednesday of each month.
Flesherton each trip on the day following.

Legal.

J. W. FROST,
Barrister, Solicitor, Conveyancer, Etc.
FLESHERTON OFFICE, NEXT POST OFFICE, SPROULE'S BUILDING, ON THURSDAYS.
OWEN SOUND OFFICE, FROST'S BUILDING

P. McCULLOUGH,
Barrister, Solicitor, &c.
Office, over McFarland's Store Markdale. Money to Loan.

Business Cards.

John W. Armstrong,
FLESHERTON, CO. GREY.
DIVISION COURT CLERK, COMMISSIONER B. R., Conveyancer, &c. Agent for purchased sale of lands. Appraiser for C. L. C. Com and F. P. B. & S. Society. Money to Loan on the most reasonable terms. ISSUER OF MARRIAGE LICENSES. NOTARY PUBLIC

MONEY TO LOAN.
AT LOWEST CURRENT RATES
on Town or Farm Property.
S. DAMUDE,
Flesherton

Mr. Wm. Karstedt,
Stone Mason, Bricklayer and Plasterer
MATERIAL FURNISHED
Estimates given free. Ornamental Plastering a Specialty.
Residence one door south of Advance Office

W. J. BELLAMY
TWP. CLERK ARTEMESIA.
CONVEYANCER, COMMISSIONER, INSURANCE AGT, &C
DEEDS, MORTGAGES, LEASES, &c., prepared and properly executed. Insurance effected in first-class companies. Money to lend at lowest rates.

R. J. Sproule,
POSTMASTER, Flesherton, Commissioner in B. R., Licensed Auctioneer, Conveyancer, Appraiser and Money Lender. Real Estate and Insurance Agent. Deeds, Mortgages, Leases and Wills drawn up and Valuations made on shortest notice. Auction Sales attended to in any pary of the County. Money to loan at lowest rates of interest. Collections attended to with promptness and despatch. Charges low Agent for the Dominion Steamship Company. Cheap tickets from Flesherton to Liverpool, Glasgow, London or any of the British Ports. Parties intending to visit England, Scotland or Ireland, will please ask rates before purchasing their tickets elsewhere.

House and Lot for Sale.

A good house and lot, opposite the Methodist Church, Flesherton, is now offered for sale. The house is large and roomy, fine lot, good stable and yard, splendid well on the premises, fruit trees, etc. This is a rare bargain. Apply S. VANDUSEN, Flesherton.

M. RICHARDSON & Co.

To Our Customers:

Sufficient advance having now been made in the seasons operations, and from numerous reports covering our business constituency, we are lead to feel that the results may now be forecast, and that the time has arrived to address the public upon the subject of "The Fall Trade." This always depends so largely upon the outcome of agricultural interests, that we endeavor to be guided by the season's prospects.

Contracts were made by us for all the lines of Canadian Manufactured Goods, at the low prices prevailing some months ago, we can assure those purchasing from us of Good value.

The above applies also to all importations from Britain. Our variety and quantity has been very considerably augmented this season, to meet the requirements of a constantly increasing business.

To our customers we need not enumerate the different lines dealt in by us.

To those who have not yet done business with us, we describe our stock as being suitable to supply the wants in every household.

PROMINENT LINES--STAPLE DEPARTMENT:

Gray Flannels,, Brown Hollands, Tablings, Gray and Broadcloth cottons.

CARPETS:

Tapestry and Hemp Carpets. Table and Floor Oil Cloths. Linoleums.

GENTS' FURNISHINGS:

Wool Shirts and Drawers. Wool Hose, and a large range of Fancy Shirts and Neck Wear.

HABERDASHERY:

Dress Trimmings and Buttons. Saxony Wools and fine Canadian Yarns.

MILLINERY,

Shawl and Mantle Department will be very complete.

DRESS GOODS:

New lines of all wool Dress Goods. Very Cheap.

TWEEDS & SHIRTINGS:

In Canadian and Imported Goods. Stock large and patterns new.

Ready Made Clothing. Boots & Shoes.

The Stock very complete in all new and attractive lines.

OUR CHINA HALL.

The Hardware, Crockery and Glassware Department as attractive as ever.

We make our prices to accord with keenest competition for business, and offer to the public our very best services and most liberal dealings. We solicit an inspection of our stock. Yours Respectfully.

M. RICHARDSON & Co., - Flesherton.

Mormonism Continued.

Joe and Oliver claimed to be inspired when translating the Book of Mormon, but they were not then baptised nor ordained. This flatly contradicts their own teaching, for they say that you must be baptised by one having authority before your sins can be remitted, and have their hands laid on you before you can receive the gift of the spirit, enabling any person to do such miracles as they did. They claim to be the Church of Christ but the Aaronic priesthood never was in the Church of Christ, it belonged to the dispensation of the law, which was changed; for the priestwood being changed, there is made of necessity a change also of the law. See Heb. 7, 12. Christ never was an Aaronic priest, and He has no such priests in His Church, for He sprang from the tribe of Juda, of which Moses spoke nothing concerning priesthood. Heb. 7, 14. There is not a word about the Aaronic priesthood in the Church of Christ. It is a Mormon fiction. They say the angel was John the Baptist, who held the keys of the Aaronic priesthood. John died early in our Lord's ministry. He died under the Law of Moses. He never ordained a priest in the Church. There was no Aaronic priests from John till Joe and Oliver. According to this, Christ had not properly organised, this Church, and John had to correct His omission by ordaining Joe and Oliver in 1829. If John had been a priest, death would have cut off his priesthood, because they were not suffered to continue by reason of death. Heb. 7. 23. John claiming to be sent by Peter, James and John, who not by Christ. Christ himself shed forth what laid the foundation of the Church on pentecost Joe says that Peter, James and John held the keys of the Melchisedek priesthood—an utter falsehood. The Melchisedek priesthood belongs to Christ alone, and He has no successor, Heb. 7, 15 17. There arises another priest after the order of of Melchisedek. Christ began his priesthood in heaven, For if He were on earth He should not be a priest. See Heb. 8, 4, Christ is a priest forever after the order of Melchisedek. He can have no successor. The priesthood under the gospel belongs to all Christians, see 1 Peter, 2, 5, 9. Also Revelations 1,6. These objections overturn the corner stone of Mormonism. The lie that Joe fabricated to have a divine commission for his pretense to hold the keys of the Aaronic and Melchisedek priesthoods, is as baseless as the other claim that he made of having the keys of the Kingdon that should never be taken from him while in this world or in the world to come. Book of Doctrine and Convenants, page 246, verse 2. Christ himself has the keys of the Kingdom for proof, see Revelation 3, 7. Mormons themselves claim that there is but one gift of the spirit, that is the miraculous power. Joe and Oliver had not received the priesthood nor the power it alone can confer. Yet Joe had received an inspiration to translate, so had Oliver, and they prophesied on this occasion, before the priesthood which could confer such power was in existence. But the most of their teaching is a flat contradiction of Scripture. In Book of D. and C., page 75, Joe and Oliver had a revelation, that the apostle John is still on earth and that the Lord said to John, verily I say unto thee, this thou shalt tairy until I came in my Glory, and shalt prophesy before nations, tongues, kindreds and people, see 21 chap. and 23 verse of John's Gospel for a contradiction of this. I will now give the readers of The Advance part of the Mormon revelations in their Book of Doctrine and Covenants. B. D. C. and P. will stand for book and page. Joe gives his authority on p. 68 B.D.C: Behold this is my authority, unto the book of my commandments which I have given them: to publish to you, oh inhabitants of the earth: fear and tremble oh ye people, for what I the Lord have decreed in them shall be fulfilled. On p. 94 B. D. C., we are told, 1 that Joe was inspired to translate the Book of Mormon. 2. The Book of Mormon contains the fullness of the Gospel of Christ to the Gentile and Jew. 3. That the Book of Mormon was given by inspiration, therefore binding on all who hear it. P. 100, B.D.C., endless punishment is God's punishment. I command you to return and keep the commandments you have received by the hand of my servant, Joe Smith, in my name. P. 101, B.D.C. Martin Harris is told not to covet his neighbor's wife, nor seek his neighbor's life, but to impart freely of his property for the printing of the Book of Mormon. P. 109, B.D.C., Joe is told, in temporal things thou shalt not have strength, for that was not his calling, but to magnify his office and go speedily to the church in Colesville and that they would support him and the Lord would bless them, but if they would not receive him they would be cursed instead of blessed. P. 110, Joe's wife is to write for him and Joe is going to support her in the church for she was going to be a blessing to Joseph and the church in preparing a hymn book for them for she was the Elect Lady. So poor Oliver had to go wherever Joe would like to send him. P. 113 B.D.C. when Oliver wished to have revellations Joe told him that he was the only one appointed to receive commandments and revellations in that church, for that I received them as Moses The Mormon god fixes all these matters always to suit Joe. On p. 120, B.D.C. Joe alone is to be councillor in the church. Page 140, B.D.C., it is meet that my servant, Joe Smith jr. should have a house built for him in which to live and translate. Page 142, B.D.C., the elders' priests of this church shall teach the principles of my gospel which are in the Bible and the Book of Mormon, in which is the fullness of the gospel. P. 148, b.d.c., and again I say to you, if you desire the mysteries of the kingdom provide for him Joe food and raiment and whatsoever thing he needeth. P. 176, b.d.c., yea a supper of the house of the Lord will be prepared unto which all nations are invited. First the rich and learned and the wise and the noble, and after that shall the poor, and the lame and the blind and the deaf come. The order of things here is reversed. The preference is given to the rich by the Mormons. P. 77, b.d.c., Martin Harris is approved for giving his money to the bishop of the church. P. 109, b.d.c., Mormon god sends out Joe and Sidney Rigdon to Missouri on a land speculation which was to be the land of their inheritance where a new Jerusalem was to be built. Sidney is to write a description of the land of promise Ezra Thayre gets a dressing from Joe because he won't give his property to the church to provide means for Joe. Now let the readers of The Advance stop and think of such stuff as this coming down from the infinite God. Tricks to cajole into fraud, to wheedle money out of them, to prevent any one rivaling Joe, to see that he has some one to write for him, and all such low, paltry, tricky stuff called revellations. The mormons will not touch these things when they go among the people to convert them to their faith. But this is not the worst. They have in their standard books some of the worst blasphemous stuff that I ever saw in print. - - ANTI-MORMON

OUR MUSKOKA LETTER.

Mr Editor,—Once again I pen you a few notes. This Muskoka country, I find, is a wonderful piece of country in many respects—wonderful for its [illegible] its rocks, and for its much water, also for its timber in the past. It is convenient to the metropolis, the capital city of Ontario, and other large towns, and the tired toilers can take advantage of the heated term, July and August, and lie away to the many islands and along the shores of the many lakes here in Muskoka, and bask in the shadows of the woodland, bathe in the limpid waters, and drink in the many romantic views to be had on every hand in this wild Muskoka. Now, representatives from the older settlements, cities, towns, villages, etc., of Ontario, are arriving here daily to spend their vacation. People of nearly all grades of society, from the humble, tired tradesman, to the plutocrat, are [illegible] Muskoka! most [illegible] themselves Mosquitoes. It is interesting [illegible] observation of the people and customs and costume when [illegible] the tourist trains arrive and the eager, excited anxious seekers after pleasure, quiet and lake and woodland, rockland solitude and breezes, exchange train for boat at the Muskoka wharf. Some gay [illegible] happy, others serious, careworn, sad what a cosmopolitan company, sure. And what an array of baggage, some have preparations for tents of luxury, others plain, primitive, romantic; and what a medley of sports, pastimes, are prepared for—football, baseball, cricket, Books, papers, fishing tackle, games, etc. One cannot half reflect how favored is this Canada of ours to have such a magnificent park, such a pleasure garden,—such a recuperating asylum for the care worn, such a life-invigorating gymnasium for the over-worked masses in our cities and towns. Truly the men and women of ease and plenty and leasure can find here, in verity a grand Canadian Adirondacks, a spot of historical interest in respect to the tribes of the people of the past age the aborigines—now almost extinct, and on the path of the great national highway across the continent, from ocean to ocean, with its proximity to the frigid breath of the Arctic shore. Who would believe it, and the mercury looking among the nineties [illegible] later. But then, strawberries and raspberries bloomed and ripened, and huckleberries turned blue and adorned our tables and tickled our palates. The hay is cut, the grain ripens apace, and we don't grumble

Election day draws on, and Muskoka anticipates it will squelch the Jesuits.

The sawmill business, which is extensive in this part of Muskoka, is being rushed ahead this season, and the season's cut is fast approaching the end, and your humble quill will fly away to home-land then.

F. T. C.

What Fetched Them.

(Dedicated to the 13th Band).

The toons wich the perfesser would perform with seoh eclaw
Would melt the toughest mountain gentleman I ever saw—
Seoh touchin' opry music es
the Trovytory sort.
The eollum "Miser Reery"
'nd the turillin' "Reely Mort";
Or sometimes from "Lee Grand Dooshess"
a trifle he would play,
Or morseze from a opry boof
to drive dull care away;
Or, feelin' kind uv serieus, he'd discourse somewhat in C,
The wich he called a opus—
whatever that may be;
But the toons that fetched the likker from the critics in the crowd
Wus not the high-toned ones, Perfesser
Vere de Blaw allowed.

'Twuz "Dearest May," 'nd "Bonnie Doon," 'nd the ballad uv "Ben Bolt,"
Ez wuz regarded by all odds es
Vere de Blaw's best holt;
Then there wuz "Darlin' Nellie Gray,"
'nd "Settin' on the Stile,"
And "Seein' Nellie Home," 'nd "Nancy Lee,"
'nd 'Annie Lisle,"
And "Silver Threads Among the Gold,"
'nd 'The Gal That Winked at Me," And "Gentle Annie," "Nancy Till,"
and "The Cot Beside the Sea";
Your opry airs is good enough for them ez likes to pay
Their money for the truck ez cant be got no other way;
But opry to a miner is a thin and holler thing—
The music that he pines for is the songs he used to sing.

FIDELITY AND LOVE.

"Oh," Maude cried. "Eight dollars a week and a home at the Cedars, instead of four dollars a week and boarding around. Of course I will go, though not until my present engagement expires. This will not be until sometime in March," and she began to wonder if she could endure it so long and, now that the pressure was lifting, how she had ever borne it at all.

But whatever may be the nature of our surroundings time passes quickly, and leaves behind a sense of nearly as much pleasure as pain, and when at last the closing days of school came, it was with genuine feelings of regret that Maude said good-bye to the pupils she had learned to love and the patrons who had been so kind to her.

CHAPTER VII.

AT THE CEDARS.

It had cost Grace a struggle before she decided to take Maude as her companion, and she had been driven past the little log house among the hills and through the Bush district, that she might judge for herself of the girl's surroundings. The day was raw and blustering and great banks of snow were piled against the fences and lay heaped up in the road unbroken save by a footpath made by children's feet.

"And it is through this she walks in the morning and then sits all day in that dingy room. I don't believe I should like it," Grace thought, and that night she wrote to Maude, offering her a situation with herself.

And now, on a lovely morning in April, when the crocuses and snowdrops were just beginning to blossom, she sat waiting for her, wondering if she had done well or ill for herself. She had seen Maude and talked with her, for the latter had called at the Cedars and spent an hour or more, and Grace had learned much from her of her former life and of Spring Farm, which she was going to buy back. Max's name, however, was not mentioned, although he was constantly in the minds of both, and Grace was wondering if he would come oftener to the Cedars if Maude were there. She could not be jealous of the girl, and yet the idea had taken possession of her that she was bringing her to the Cedars for Max rather than for herself, and this detracted a little from her pleasure when she began to fit up the room her companion was to occupy. Such a pretty room it was, just over her own, with a bow window looking across the valley where the lake lay sleeping, and on to the hills and the log schoolhouse, which, had it been higher, might have been discerned above the hills which surrounded it. A room all pink and white, with roses and lilies everywhere, and a bright fire in the grate before which a willow chair was standing and a Maltese kitten sleeping, when Maude was ushered into it by Jane, Miss Raynor's maid.

"Oh, it is so lovely," Maude thought, as she looked about her, wondering if it were not a dream from which she should presently awake.

But it was no dream and as the days went on it came to be real to her and she was conscious of a deep and growing affection for the woman who was so kind to her and who treated her like an equal rather than a hired companion. Together they read and talked of the books which Maude liked best, and gradually Grace learned of the dream-life Maude had led before coming to Richland and of the people who had deserted her among the hills, but who in this more congenial atmosphere came trooping back, legions of them, and crowding her brain until she had to tell of the them, and of the two lives she was living, the ideal and the real. She was sitting on a stool at Grace's feet, with her face flushed with excitement as she talked of the Kimbarks and Websters, and Angeline Mason, who were all with her now as they had been at home, and all as real to her as Miss Raynor was herself. Laying her hand upon the girl's brown curls, Grace said, half laughingly, "And so you are going to write a book. Well, I believe all girls have some such aspirations. I had it once but it was swallowed up by some stronger, deeper feeling, which absorbed my whole being."

Here, Grace's voice trembled a little as she leaned back in her chair and seemed to be thinking. Then rousing herself, she asked suddenly, "How old are you, Maude?"

"Nineteen this month," was Maude's reply, and Grace went on: "Just my age when the great sorrow came. That was 14 years ago next June. I am 33, and Max is 37."

She said this last more to herself than to Maude, who started slightly, for this was the first time his name had been mentioned since she came to the Cedars.

After a moment Grace continued: I have never spoken to you of Mr. Gordon although I know you have met him You were with him on the train from Albany to Canandaigua; he told me of you."

"He did!" Maude exclaimed with a ring in her voice which made Grace's heart beat a little faster, but she went calmly on:

"Yes he was greatly interested in you, although he did not then know who you were; but he knows now. He is coming here soon. We have been engaged ever since I was 17 and he was 21; 14 years ago the 20th of June we were to have been married. Everything was ready; my bridal dress and veil had been been brought home, and I tried them on one morning to see how I looked in them. I was beautiful, Max said, and I think he told the truth; for a woman may certainly know whether the face she sees in the mirror be pretty or not, and the picture I saw was very fair, while he, who stood beside me, was splendid in his young manhood. How I loved him; more, I fear, than I loved God, and for that I was punished,—oh, so dreadfully punished. We rode together that afternoon, Max and I, and I was wondering if there were ever a girl as happy as myself and pitying women I met because they had no Max beside them, when suddenly my horse reared, frightened by a dog, and I was thrown upon a sharp curb-stone. Of the months of agony which followed I cannot tell you, except that I prayed to die and so be rid of pain. The injury was in my spine, and I have never walked in all the 14 years since. But Max has been true to me and would have married me had I allowed it. But I cannot burden him with a cripple, and sometimes I wish, or think I do, that he would find someone younger, fairer than I am, on whom to lavish his love. He would make a wife so happy. And yet it would be hard for me, I love him so much. Oh, Max; I don't believe he knows how dear he is to me."

She was crying softly now, and Maude was crying, too; and as she smoothed the snow white hair and kissed the brow on which lines were beginning to show, she said, "He will never find a sweeter face than yours."

To her Max Gordon now was only the betrothed husband of her mistress; and still she found herself looking forward to his visit with a keen interest, wondering what he would say to her, and if his eyes would kindle at the sight of her as they had done when she saw him in the church at Laurel hill. He was to come the 20th, the anniversary of the day which was to have been his bridal day, and when the morning came Grace said to Maude, "I'd like to wear my wedding gown; do you think it would be too much like Dickens', Miss Havershaw?"

"Yes, yes," Maude answered quickly, feeling that faded satin and lace of 14 years standing would be sadly out of place. "You are lovely in those light gowns you wear so much," she said.

So Grace wore the dress which Maude selected for her; a soft woollen fabric of a creamy tint with a blue shawl, the color of her eyes, thrown around her and a bunch of June pinks, Max's favorite flowers at her belt. Then, when she was ready, Maude wheeled her out on to the piazza, where they waited for their visitor.

CHAPTER VIII.

MAX AT THE CEDARS.

The train was late that morning and lunch was nearly ready before they saw the open carriage turn into the grounds with Max standing up in it and waving his hat to them.

"Oh, Maude," Grace said, "I would give all I am worth to go and meet him. Isn't he handsome and grand, my Max," she continued, as if she would assert her right to him and hold it against the world.

But Maude did not hear her, for as Max lighted from the carriage and came eagerly forward, she stole away, feeling that it was not for her to witness the meeting of the lovers.

"Dear Max, you are not changed are you?" Grace cried, extending her arms toward him, with the effort to rise which she involuntarily made so often, and which was pitiful to see.

"Changed, darling? How could I change in less than a year?" Max answered, as he drew her face down to his bosom and stroked her snowy hair.

Grace was not thinking of a physical change. Indeed, she scarcely knew what she did mean, for she was not herself conscious how strong an idea had taken possession of her that she was losing Max. But with him there beside her morbid fears vanished, and letting her head rest upon his arm, she said, "I don't know, Max; only things come back to me to-day and I am thinking of 14 years ago and that I am 14 years older than I was then, and crippled and helpless and faded, while you are as young as ever. Oh, Max, stay by me till the last. It will not be for long. I am growing so tired and sad."

Grace hardly knew what she was saying, or why as she said it, Maude Graham's face, young and fair and fresh, seemed to come between herself and Max, any more than he could have told why he was so vaguely wondering what had become of the girl in black, whom he had seen in the distance quite as soon as he had seen the woman in the chair. During his journey Grace and Maude had been equally in his mind, and he was conscious of a feeling that the Cedars held an added attraction for him because the latter was there; and now, when he began to have a faint preception of Grace's meaning, though he did not associate it with Maude, he felt half guilty because he had for a moment thought any place where Grace was could be made pleasanter than she could make it. Taking her face between his hands he looked at it more closely, noticing with a pang that it had grown thinner and paler and that there were lines about the eyes and mouth, while the blue veins stood out full and distinct upon the forehead shaded by the silvery hair. Was she slowly fading? he asked himself, resolving that nothing should be lacking on his part to prove that she was just as dear to him as in the days when they were young and the future bright before them. He did not even speak of Maud until he saw her in the distance, trying to train a refactory honeysuckle over a tall frame. Then he said, "Is that Miss Graham, and do you like her as well as ever?"

"Yes, better and better every day," was Grace's reply. It was a little awkward at first to have a stranger with me continually, but I am accustomed to her now, and couldn't part with her. She is very dear to me," she continued, while Max listened and watched the girl, moving about so gracefully, and once showing her round white arms to the elbows as her wide sleeves fell back in her efforts to reach the top of the frame.

"She oughtn't to do that," Grace said. "She is not tall enough. Go and help her Max," and nothing loth Max went along the terrace to where Maude was standing, her face flushed with exercise and her eyes shining like stars as she gave him her hand, and said, "Good morning, Mr. Gordon. I am Maude Graham. Perhaps you remember me."

"How could I forget you," sprang to Max's lips, but he said instead, "Good morning Miss Graham. I have come to help you. Miss Raynor thinks it bad for your heart to reach so high."

Maude could have told him that her heart had not beaten one half as fast while reaching up as it was beating now, with him there beside her holding the vine while she tied it to its place, his hands touching hers and his arm once thrown out to keep her from falling as she stumbled backward. It took a long time to fix that honeysuckle, and Max had leisure to tell Maude of a call made upon her mother only a week before.

"Spring Farm is looking its loveliest, with the roses and lillies in bloom," he said. "and Angie, my sister, is enjoying it immensely. She has filled the house with her city friends, and has made some changes, of which I think you would approve. Your mother does, but when she wanted to cut down that apple tree in the corner I would not let her do it. You remember it, don't you?"

"Oh, Mr. Gordon," Maude exclaimed, "Don't let her touch that tree. My playhouse was under it, and there the people used to come to see me."

He did not know who the people were, for he had never heard of Maude's brain children—the Kimbricks and the Websters—and could hardly have understood, if he had; but Maude's voice was very pathetic and the eyes which looked at him were full of tears, moving him strangely and making him very earnest in his manner as he assured her that every tree and shrub should be kept intact for her.

"You know you are going to buy it back," he continued, laughingly, as they walked slowly toward the house where Grace was waiting to be taken in to lunch.

"Yes, and I shall do it, too. You will see; it may be many years, but I trust you to keep it for me," Maude said, and he replied, "You may trust me with anything, and I shall not disappoint you." The talk by the honeysuckle was one of the many which took place while Max was at the Cedars, for Grace was too unselfish to keep him chained to her side, and insisted that he should enjoy what there was to enjoy in the way of rides and drives in the neighborhood, and as she could not go with him she sent Maude in her stead, even though she knew the danger there was in it, for she was not insensible to Max's admiration for the girl, or Maude's interest in him.

"If Max is true to me to the last, and he will be, it is all I ask," she thought and gave no sign of the ache in her heart, when she saw him going from her with Maude and felt that it was in more senses than one. "If he is happy I am happy too," she would say to herself, as she sat alone hour after hour, while Max and Maude explored the country in every direction.

Sometimes they drove together, but oftner rode, for Maude was a fine horsewoman and never looked better than when on horseback, in the becoming habit which Grace had given her and which fitted her admirably. Together they went through the pleasant Richland woods, where the grass was like a mossy carpet beneath their horses hoofs, and the singing of the birds and the brook was the only sound which broke the summer stillness; then again they galloped over the hills and round the lake, and once through the Bush district, up to the little log house which Max expressed a wish to see. It was past the hour for for school. Teacher and scholars had gone home, and tying their horses to the fence they went into the dingy room and sat down side by side upon one of the wooden benches and just where a ray of sunlight fell upon Maude's face and hair, for she had removed her hat and was fanning herself with it. She was very beautiful, with that halo around her head, Max thought, as he sat watching and listening to her as in answer to his question, "How could you endure it here?" she told him of her terrible homesickness during the first weeks of her life as a school teacher.

"I longed so for mother and Johnnie," she said, "and was always thinking of them and the dear old home, and—and sometimes—of you, too, before I received your letter."

"Of me," Max said, moving a little nearer while she went on, "Yes I've wanted to tell you how angry I was because you bought our home. I wrote you something about it, you remember, but I did not tell you half how bitter I felt. I know now you were not to blame, but I did not think so then, and said some harsh things of you to Archie; perhaps he told you. I said he might. Did he?"

"No," Max answered, playing idly with the riding whip Maude held in her hand. "No, Archie has only told me pleasant things of you. I think he is very fond of you," and he looked straight into Maude's face, waiting for her reply.

It was surely nothing to him whether Archie were fond of Maude, or she were fond of Archie, and yet her answer was very reassuring, and lifted from his heart a little shadow resting there.

"Yes," Maude said, without the slightest change in voice or expression, "Archie and I are good friends. I have known him and played with him and quarrelled with him ever since I was a child, so that he seems more like a brother than anything else."

"Oh, ye-es," Max resumed, with a feeling of relief, as he let his arm rest on the high desk behind her, so that if she moved ever so little it would touch her.

There was in Max's mind no thought of love-making. Indeed, he did not know that he was thinking of anything except the lovely picture the young girl made, with the sunlight playing on her hair and the shy look in her eyes as, in a pretty apologetic way, she told how she had disliked him and credited him with all the trouble which had come upon them since her father's death.

"Why I thought I hated you," she said with energy.

"Hated me! Oh, Maude, you don't hate me now, I hope—I could not bear that," Max said, letting the whip fall and taking Maude's hand in his, as he said again, "You don't hate me now?"

"No, no; oh no. I—oh, Mr. Gordon," Maude began but stopped abruptly, startled by something in the eyes of the man who had never called her Maude before, and whose voice had never sounded as it did now, making every nerve thrill with a sudden joy, all the sweeter perhaps because she knew it must not be.

Wrenching her hand from his and springing to her feet she said, "It is growing late, and Miss Raynor is waiting for us. Have you forgotten her?"

He had forgotten her for one delirious moment, but she came back to him with a throb of pain and self-reproach that he had allowed himself to swerve in the slightest degree from his loyalty to her.

"I am not a man but a traitor," he said to himself, as he helped Maude into her saddle and then vaulted into his own.

The ride home was a comparatively silent one, for both knew that they had not been quite true to the woman who welcomed them so sweetly and asked so many questions about their ride and what they had seen. Poor Grace; she did not in the least understand why Maude lavished so much attention upon her that evening, or why Max lingered longer than usual at her side, or why his voice was so tender and loving, when he at last said good-night and went to his own room and the self-castigation which he knew awaited him there.

"I was a villan," he said, as he recalled that little episode in the school-house when to have put his around Maude Graham and hold her for a moment would have been like heaven to him.

"I was false to Grace, although I did not mean it, and God helping me I will never be so again."

Then, as he remembered the expression of the eyes which had looked up so shyly at him, he said aloud, "Could I win her, were I free? But that is impossible. May God forgive me for the thought. Oh, why has Grace thrown her so much in my way? She surely is to blame for that, while I—; well, I am a fool and a knave and a sneak ——."

He called himself a great many hard names that night, and registered a vow that so long as Grace lived, and he said he hoped she would live forever he would be true to her no matter how strong the temptation placed in his way. It was a fierce battle Max fought, but he came off conqueror, and the meeting between himself and Maude next morning was as natural as if to neither of them had ever come a moment when they had a glimpse of the happiness which, under other circumstances, might perhaps have been theirs. Maude, too, had had her hours of remorse and contrition and close questioning to as the cause of the strange joy which had thrilled every nerve when Max Gordon called her Maude, and asked her if she hated him.

"Hate him! Never!" she thought; "but I have been false to the truest, best woman that ever lived. She trusted her lover to me, and——."

She did not quite know what she had done, but whatever it was it should not be repeated. There were to be no more rides or drives, or talks alone with Max. And when next day Grace suggested that she go with him to an adjoining town where a fair was to be held, she took refuge in a headache and insisted that Grace should go herself, while Max, too, encouraged it, and tried to believe that he was just as happy with her beside him as he would have been with the young girl who brought a cushion for her mistress' back and adjusted her shawl about her shoulders and arranged her bonnet strings, and then, kissing her fondly, said, "I am so glad that you are going instead of myself."

This was for the benefit of Max, at whom she nodded a little defiantly, and who understood her meaning as well as if she had put it into words. Everything was over between them and he accepted the situation, and during the remainder of his stay at the Cedars devoted himself to Grace with an assiduity worthy of the most ardent lover. He even remained longer than he had intended doing, for Grace was loth to let him go, and the soft haze of early September was beginning to show on the Richland hills when he at last said good bye, promising to come at Christmas if it were possible to do so.

CHAPTER IX.

GOOD-BYE, MAX; GOOD-BYE.

It was a cold, stormy afternoon in March. The thermometer marked six below zero, and the snow which had fallen the day before was tossed by the wind in great white clouds, which sifted through every crevice of the house at the Cedars, and beat against the window from which Maude Graham was looking anxiously out into the storm for the carriage which had been sent to meet the train in which Max Gordon was expected. He had not kept his promise to be with Grace at Christmas. An important law-suit had detained him, and it as would be necessary for him to go to London immediately after its close; he could not tell just when he would be at the Cedars again.

All through the autumn Grace had been failing, while a cold taken in November, had left her with a cough, which clung to her persistently. Still she kept up, looking forward to the holidays when Max would be with her. But when she found he was not coming she lost all courage, and Maude was alarmed to see how rapidly she failed. Nearly all the day she lay upon the couch in her bedroom, while Grace read or sang to her or talked with her of the book which had actually been commenced, and in which Grace was almost as much interested as Maude herself. Grace was a careful and discriminating critic, and if Maude were a success she would owe much of it to the kind friend whose sympathy and advice were so invaluable. A portion of every day she wrote, and every evening read what she had written to Grace, who smiled as she recognized Max Gordon in the hero and knew that Maude was weaving the tale mostly from her own experience. Even the Bush district and its people furnished material for the plot, and more than one boy who had called Maud schoolma'am figured in its pages, while Grace was everywhere, permeating the whole with her sweetness and purity.

"I shall dedciate it to you," Maude said to her one day, and Grace replied: "That will be kind; but I shall not be here to see it, for before your book is published I shall be lying under the flowers in Mt. Auburn. I want you to take me there, if Max is not here to do it."

"Oh, Miss Raynor," Maud cried, dropping her MS. and sinking upon her knees beside the couch where Grace was lying, "you must not talk that way. I can't lose you, the dearest friend I ever had. What should I do without you, and what would Max Gordon do?"

At the mention of Max's name a faint smile played around Grace's white lips, and lifting her thin hand she laid it caressingly upon the girl's brown hair as she said: "Max will be sorry for a while, but after a time there will be a change, and I shall be only a memory. Tell him I was willing, and that although it was hard at first, it was easy at the last."

What did she mean? Maude asked herself, while her thoughts went back to that summer afternoon in the log school-house on the hill, when Max Gordon's eyes and voice had in them a tone and look born of more than mere friendship. Did Grace know? Had she guessed the truth? Maude wondered, as, conscience-stricken, she laid her burning cheek against the pale one upon the pillow. There was silence a moment, and when Grace spoke again she said: "It is nearly time for Max to be starting for Europe, or I should send for him to come, I wish so much to see him once more before I die."

(To be Continued).

Telegraphing to a Moving Train.

The idea of telegraphing to moving trains had its inception as early as 1853; but of the many forms suggested all were impracticable in that they involved a mechanical contact between the train and the stationary conductor. Obviously, it is not feasible to make a circuit, either through a sliding arm projecting from a car or by so modifying the track of a railroad that its rails may be utilized as electric conductors. But that this may be done by induction there can be no doubt, for its feasibility has been shown in daily practice upon the lines of the Lehigh Valley Railroad for the past two years. A moving train may now receive messages passing along a neighboring wire almost as readily as New York communicates with Philadelphia by ordinary methods. Nor does the great speed of the train interfere with successful communication. If it could attain the velocity of a meteor, signals upon the wire would fly across the intervening space, inductively impressing themselves upon the metal roofs of the cars with the same certainty as if the cars were motionless upon the side track; and it is not even essential that the train and the line be separated by a clear air space, for non-conducting or non-magnetic substances may be interposed without impeding transmission. During the memorable blizzard of March, 1888, the capacity of the system, in this particular, was subjected to an instructive test on the Lehigh road.—Charles L. Buckingham in Scribner.

Open Your Windows at Night.

An extraordinary fallacy is the dread of night air. What air can we breathe at night but night air? The choice is between pure night air from without and foul air from within. Most people prefer the latter—an unaccountable choice. What will they say if it is proved to be true that fully one-half of all the diseases we suffer from are occasioned by people sleeping with their windows shut? An open window most nights in the year can never hurt any one. In great cities night air is often the best and purest to be had in twenty-four hours. One could better understand shutting the windows in town during the day than during the night for the sake of the sick. The absence of smoke, the quiet, all tend to make the night the best time for airing the patient. One of our highest medical authorities on consumption and climate has told me that the air of London is never so good as after 10 o'clock at night. Always air your room, then, from the outside air, if possible. Windows are made to open, doors are made to shut—a truth which seems extremely difficult of apprehension. Every room must be aired from without, every passage from within. Sanitary World.

A Model Republic.

The smallest republic in the world is not San Marino, nor Andorra, nor Moresnet, but the tiny Republic of Goust, in the Pyrenees, which contains less than one hundred inhabitants, all of which are Romanists. The sole occupation of these people is the weaving of wool and silk. Their government consists of an assembly of old men, called the Council. They pay no taxes nor imposts of any kind, and therefore have need of no collectors. They have neither mayor, priest, nor physician. They baptize their children, bury their dead, and perform their marriage ceremonies all beyond the boundaries of the town or in the neighboring village of Laruns. If any one wishes to espouse a wife he must go away from home to find her. Among the peaceful residents of this microscopic republic are several centenarians. No one is really poor, and none is rich. The language which they speak is a mixture of French and Spanish, and their numbers, manners, and customs have remained unchanged for several centuries.

An Asylum Horror.

The United States will not be a civilized nation as long as such scenes occur as are said to be witnessed at the insane asylum at Rochester, Minn. The saddest phase of the affair is that this is not a private sanitarium, but the State Insane Hospital of Minnesota. Weak girls and women have been thrown to the floor and stamped upon and pounded with brutal fists. They have been shut up in a cell naked, with no bedding, and food refused to them till they were almost famished. Such ferocious brutality seems incredible. The insane require in their treatment the utmost patience and kindness that human nature is capable of. They oftentimes, it is true, seem so perverse and ugly that it is hard to realise that they are at no time responsible. But only those who can constantly realize this and act on it are fit to be trusted with the care of the insane.—Olean Herald.

Frederick T. Roberts, M.D., Professor in the University College, London, England, Examiner in the Royal College of Surgeons, calls attention to the fact that headache, dizziness, bronchitis, inflammation of the lungs, derangements of the digestive organs, are common symptoms of kidney disease. Warner's Safe Cure cures these symptoms by removing the cause and putting the kidneys in a healthy condition.

Wibble—"I wonder why ministers always wear long-tailed coats?" Wabble—"If you were a country minister with a $300 salary, and a large family, you wouldn't ask such a fool question as that."—Terre Haute Express.

JACK THE RIPPER.

Vivid Description of the Localities and People

WHERE MURDER REIGNS.

Whitechapel Described in All Its Squalor and Vice.

(New York Herald.)

How does the Whitechapel district appear to a stranger in London? That is what I went to see recently, says a reporter of the London edition of the Herald. In company with a member of the government and a special detective I took a "four wheeler" and drove down by St. Paul's, past the Bank of England and on through Cornhill, where, turning to the left, we followed up Bishopsgate to the famous underground drinking dive known in history as "Dirty Dick's." The detective thought it would be interesting to begin the evening with a visit to this celebrated place. It dates back nearly a century, and seventy years ago Dirty Dick was one of the characters of London. Charles Dickens' Household Words devoted a sketch and a poem to Dirty Dick's life and peculiarities. The rules that govern his establishment were that no person is to be served twice. No person to be served if intoxicated. No error admitted or money exchanged after leaving the counter. No improper language permitted. No gambling allowed.

AT DIRTY DICK'S.

Into this historical cellar we entered. Every foot of space was occupied. Men, women and children were packed together like fish, all drinking, smoking and swearing, at intervals telling "loud" stories, while in the corners, sitting on benches or staggering against the walls, were women, old and young, in various degrees of intoxication. One miserable creature, evidently in the last stages of vanity, grinned hideously as she leaned over the bar with a wee babe in her arms begging for another drink, as she had already spent her last penny. Along the walls above the bottles of the bar were the skeletons of rats and mice and other household vermin, including several cats and dogs. They were found in the hollow walls when the old building occupied by Dirty Dick was demolished several years ago to make room for the present structure. To a stranger the dive seemed a filthy den of vice and disease, but on our return from Whitechapel it seemed a very respectable place.

WHERE PRIZE FIGHTERS ARE TRAINED.

The next stop was made at the Blue Anchor tavern, further down toward Whitechapel. To sporting men it is one of the most celebrated places in England, for it is the headquarters of the professional prize ring. The landlord, Tom Symonds, was at home and showed us over the place. He is the treasurer of the London prize ring, is an ex-champion boxer, and for many years his house has been the training school for the most noted pugilists of the world. It was here that Jem Smith and dozens of other celebrities took their first lessons in the manly art of professional boxing. Jem Goode, another ex-champion, who once fought in the United States, dropped into the big billiard hall, which is used for boxing once or twice a week. The rooms are decorated with full length portraits of the principal prize fighters and sports of the world. A buxom young woman, with a motherly smile, stood behind the bar and served out drinks in the old fashioned English style of fifty years ago. It was an interesting place for any one to visit—a sort of an appetizer for a stranger about to explore the mysteries of Whitechapel.

A COLONY OF THIEVES.

From Tom Symonds' Blue Anchor tavern it is but a short ride into the slums of Whitechapel. It should be explained for the benefit of those unfamiliar with the geography of London that the Whitechapel district is a colony of thieves situated nearly north of the Tower of London on the Thames. A few blocks further down the river are the famous London Docks. Many of the lower classes of men employed along the river and the numerous water thieves of the wharves live up in Whitechapel. A hundred years ago, in the time of George III., Whitechapel Road was just outside the eastern walls of London—a sort of suburb for the poorer classes, who had little money to pay for rent. Now it is in the centre of a vast and populous district, with well paved streets and alleys (thanks to modern improvements) cutting the district in every direction, with horse railway and 'bus lines following the principal streets, which in olden times were the King's highways. Vast warehouses, private and bonded, and manufacturing establishments rise darkly and silently in the night on the borders of these slums. Then there are big breweries, hospitals, cemeteries, almshouses and other institutions not far away. A surprising feature of the neighborhood is that well lighted streets with tramways and bus lines are but a few squares away from where these murders were committed. The Whitechapel district may be likened to certain localities in the country where dark and gloomy swamps filled with pestilential vapors lie between the great highways. A visitor walking up Whitechapel road would little dream of the horrible dens within a stone's throw of the brilliantly lighted shops. Only the policemen on duty there recognize the flashily dressed men and women who hurry along the pavement as the worst types of London thieves and murderers. Their restless eyes and scarred faces long haunt one after he takes a second look into their villainous countenances.

PETTICOAT LANE.

It was but a few minutes after the detective turned off the Algate Road that we found ourselves in a dark crevice like lane, with the darkest and most forbidding buildings of the slums rising on every side of us. The streets are as well paved as Broadway in New York, but some of them are not more than five feet wide, and when we entered this Petticoat lane of history, celebrated among thieves from Cheyenne to Australia, all the world seemed cut off. A feeling of indescribable loathing and horror came over one as he got a sight of the scenes within the tenements. The lane is the headquarters of the most dangerous thieves in Europe. Every class and nation is represented. Low Jews, Gentiles, convicts and prison birds of every grade swarm the place like vermin. "As a Saturday night scene the region about Petticoat lane has no equal on the globe," said the detective. As every few steps were passageways leading out of the lane, like tunnels in a mine. No cave could be more gloomy or more forbidding. As we walked up the long, black alley called Petticoat lane one of the Government officials said, "You see Dickens did not exaggerate." People unfamiliar with these districts think that Dickens drew his characters from his imagination. The man was right, the Smikes and Oliver Twists, the Fagins and the Dick Swivellers were as thick as flies. An ordinary American child would live about three days in such a place, yet there were hundreds of children hardly able to toddle that darted in and out of the passageways like rats. They were the little thieves, soon to become the big thieves of London. The atmosphere was thick and fetid, the fog hung over the alleys like lead, and the few scattering jets of gas burning along the lane were hardly visible ten steps away. After walking through the neighborhood for five minutes it seemed as if we had been in the place a month. The world and its green fields and beautiful cities seem blotted from creation. As we walked along heads were poked out of the little holes leading into dark courts, and then they flitted back again; children vanished through the walls. Dark faced, scowling men always planted themselves in our way just ahead, but disappeared like shadows at a sign from the detectives. Behind us came beggars and thieves.

SOMEBODY'S CHILDREN.

Women with streaming hair and babies in their arms followed, with pitcous tales and cries for money. They, too, were thieves and beggars, and the detective said the worst of the lot. We made a quick turn round a corner, doubled on our course, and entered one of the thousands of lodging houses of the Whitechapel district. There sat the same women with somebody's babies, blaspheming and drinking spirits with the bullet headed infants hanging over their shoulders like bundles of rags. Others were singing ribald songs in hoarse, drunken voices, while the men laughed and joined them in the night's carousal. There is a little spot in New York called the Five Points, and a few streets leading away from it inhabited by Italians and Chinamen. It is said that those Sixth ward tenement houses are inhabited at the rate of 290,000 to the square mile. But this Whitechapel district is a vast city of vice and poverty compared with that small plague spot. London, with its three millions of inhabitants and its colonies of criminals, representing the most vicious classes of Europe, is a monstrous problem for any government to solve. As I walked down those gloomy lanes and crawled through the dark underground passageways among the depots of stolen goods, where fortunes disappear in a moment, where men's lives go out like a candle, I exclaimed aloud, "No wonder it requires 15,000 policemen in London."

The Government official said: "We have only half enough police. We ought to have twenty-five or thirty thousand."

In the presence of all the intricacies of the Whitechapel slums, the thousands of winding passage ways, the tiers of bedrooms no larger than cells in a prison, the scene gave one an idea why the Whitechapel assassins have not been discovered. One might as well look along the docks of London for the rat that stole his cheese as to hunt for a criminal in this place.

MURDER NO. 7.

Turning out of a lane through a dark passage way into a little area, and standing beside a small addition built back of the other houses, and pointing to the boarded windows the detective said, "In there is where murder number seven was committed." This is Miller's court. While we were looking at the place and wondering which way the assassin ran after he had killed the poor woman, little yellow haired children came dancing into the court and listened with a curious boldness, as if we were about to open a box of valuables and there would be a chance for them to steal.

In Osborne street, where the first of all the murders was committed, and the victim unknown, the Whitechapel which stands in the very middle of Whitechapel road is almost in sight. A walk of a few steps from the horrible place leads one to the open thoroughfare where the jingling bells of the horse cars are heard and the chimes of Whitechapel ring out on the night air as they do in Christian lands where thieves and murderers are not so near civilization.

At George's Yard, Commercial street (not Commercial road), the buildings are thick and heavy walled, entirely fireproof, with arched floors and iron joists. Yet they are but tenements for the lowest of humanity, and let as lodgings for men and women indiscriminately, it is said. In all these places there is no attempt to separate the children from the full grown thieves and abandoned women. As I stood in George's Yard, looking up at the balcony where the poor woman was found with strips of her remains tied around her neck, I turned and saw lights gleaming in a large building separated from the court by a high fence. On inquiry I found it was a large hall where a much talked about black and white art exhibition was being held. It seemed incredible that an institution reflecting the light and genius of the nineteenth century, could actually exist and be filled with cultivated men and women with its windows looking down into the very purlieus of London.

Whitechapel is made up of paradoxes. The innocence of youth is destroyed by robbers and professional beggars under the very eaves of Christian institutions on one side and breweries and almshouses on the other.

ANNIE CHAPMAN'S DEATH PLACE.

In Hanbury street, in a brick yard, with dry goods boxes piled up far above the fence, is where Annie Chapman was found with her throat cut and body mutilated on September 8th. A word from the detective secured permission to go through the house. The character of it may be imagined when it is said that the price for a single bed is but a penny or two, and that two persons of the lowest of all God's creation may drink, shout and blaspheme all night for only twopence. Little children with pale faces, scarcely old enough to lisp the name of mother, lay in dark corners on vermin-covered beds with withered hags, who drank beer and sang snatches of songs half awake and half drunken, apparently in a stupor; and as we passed through the long alleyways between the banks they stretched out their shaking hands and bawled piteously for a penny to help the poor darling. We looked into other chambers that were empty, where a dozen cots, covered with filthy rags, were awaiting the return of some assassin to lie down and drink and riot in the early Sabbath morning. The boys and girls of these loathsome dens were as bright as crickets, and the detective said they could pick a pocket more artistically than the old 'uns.

THEORIES OF THE MURDERS.

Many theories regarding the Whitechapel murders have been advanced by detectives, criminal philosophers, court experts, newspaper men and experts on insanity. The theory that most generally prevails is that the murderer is a religious crank who imagines he has a mission to perform, and like the fanatics of Mahommed's time, the more atrocious the butcheries he performs the greater the saint he thinks himself. It is a fact that all the Whitechapel murders have occurred about the 5th of the month or on the very last days of each month, and it is claimed that every fresh outbreak has occurred with the change of the moon. This, it is thought, indicates that the murderer is a maniac and has periodical fits of insanity.

"Who is he?" and "What is he?" is a problem to be answered. Many officials in the detective service hold to the theory that the murderer is a crazy butcher.

WHO IS HE?

The fact that the victims of this horrible fiend have been selected from the lowest class of women is considered proof by many that the murderer is a religious fanatic. Others are sure that the assassin is an escaped lunatic. At one time it was believed that he was the Russian maniac who had committed several murders in Paris and other parts of Europe. At still another time it was said that a certain American quack doctor was the culprit, and the detectives of England and America shadowed him for months. Early in the autumn it was believed that a Malay outlaw was the man who was running amuck in Whitechapel. A careful investigation of the district certainly leads a stranger to believe that no mere visitor or outside person ever committed these crimes. The murderer must not only have been well acquainted with the locality and its inhabitants, but he was without doubt an old settler in the slums of that region and as familiar with its dark cellars and underground passage ways as the rats of the sewers. A person who has spent weeks in that locality in studying its geography would not venture to lose himself in the intricacies of its gloomy and dangerous labyrinths, especially when on a mission of murder. The assassin is probably a man or woman perfectly familiar with Whitechapel, and his motive is revenge or an insane desire to commit wanton butchery.

Intelligent Cows.

The other morning, a very sultry one, two cows came to our gate, evidently on the lookout for something, and after being at first somewhat puzzled by their pleading looks, I bethought myself that they might be in want of water. No sooner had this idea occurred to me than I had some water brought in a large vessel, which they took with the greatest eagerness. The pair then sauntered contentedly away to a field near at hand. In about half an hour or so we were surprised and not a little amused, by seeing our two friends marching up to the gate, accompanied by three other cows. The water tap was again called into requisition, and the new comers were in like manner helped liberally. Then, with gratified and repeated "boo-oos"—a unanimous vote of thanks—our visitors slowly marched off to their pasturage. It was quite clear to us that the first two callers, pleased with the friendly reception, had strolled down to their sister gossips and dairy companions and had informed them—how, I can not say, can you?—of their liberal entertainment, and then had taken the pardonable liberty of inviting them up to our cottage.—Pall Mall Gazette.

Among the Icebergs.

Reports by all the ocean steamers agree as to the continued prevalence of icebergs in the Straits of Belle Isle, although the passage is getting gradually clearer and the bergs are being carried into the Atlantic. The Beaver liner Lake Huron, on her last outward trip from Montreal to Liverpool, appears to have fallen in with an immense field of icebergs, which were watched for two whole days with much interest by the passengers. No less than forty-two were counted at one time, all within a radius of ten miles. One of these, sighted 170 miles east of Belle Isle, was declared by the captain and officers to be the largest they had ever seen. Its length was estimated at 1,000 feet, and it stood some 250 feet out of water. It was about two miles distant from the ship.

The First Duty of a Girl Graduate.

"So your daughter joins the ranks of the sweet girl graduates this year, Mrs. De Johns?" said Fitzroy in a patronizing sort of way. "Yes, Arabella graduates this year, and will immediately begin her life work." "What profession is she to enter?" "Oh, I don't know, but I presume she will teach her mother society manners for a year or so. That's what all girls do after they come home from school.—Hartford Post.

Dr. Wm. Roberts, Professor of Medicine in the Owen's College, Manchester, Eng., in writing of Bright's Disease, says: "The blood becomes speedily deteriorated by the unnatural drain through the kidneys. It becomes more watery and poorer in albumen, while urea, uric acid and the extractives are unduly accumulated in it." Warner's Safe Cure will restore the kidneys to a healthy condition and purify the blood.

—Bride (in the Pullman car)—Do you think that every one knows we have just been married? Groom (coloring)—Oh, no, dear; they only think so.

—"Mary," said her mother severely, "if I am not mistaken I saw your head on George's shoulder. What sort of an attitude is that for a young lady?" Mary ecstatically)—Beatitude

SURGEONS CUT HIS THROAT.

The Operation of Œsophagotomy Successfully Performed by Dr. Deaver.

Thousands of instances are on record where a man's throat has been cut to kill him, but only three cases are known in the United States where that operation has been performed to save life. Indeed, there are but two instances which are authenticated. The first occurred in 1844 in this city and the other in Philadelphia yesterday. There came into the "drunk" ward of the Philadelphia Almshouse a much-befuddled and suicidally inclined individual, John Cavanaugh by name. There appeared to be some obstruction in his throat which prevented him from swallowing solid food, and the passage of liquids, such as milk or beef tea, gave him much pain. The pain distracted the man and he would tear at his throat, and the attendants feared he would succeed in destroying himself. Cavanaugh could not tell what obstacle had lodged in his gullet, or, in his daze from whiskey, would not. After he had become somewhat sobered, however, it was discovered that he had swallowed his false teeth, plate and all. Dr. Deaver, surgeon at the Philadelphia Hospital, was summoned. He endeavored to "extract" the teeth through the mouth, but failed. Then he tried to push them down into the stomach, but with no better results. There was but one course reserved to surgical science—the operation of œsophagotomy, or taking the teeth out through an incision from the outside of the throat. This operation has always been attended with a high percentage of mortality. The danger was set forth to Cavanaugh, but he decided to submit to it. He first thought he could stand the pain without ether, but the surgeon thought best to administer the anæsthetic. About six inches down the throat was fixed as the point for opening. It took the doctor an hour to get at the teeth, but he got there. The plate had a general circular shape about one and a half inches in diameter. It hung vertically in the œsophagus and so permitted the passage of milk, but no solid matter could pass. The plate was successfully removed and the wound stitched up. Cavanaugh is now in the hospital in good condition, and Dr. Deaver thinks he will survive, but two or three days will elapse before he will be pronounced out of danger.

THE FUSE WAS BURNING.

Bravery of Captain Peel in the Crimea Once More Recalled.

There occurred on this day—October 18th, 1854—one of those incidents of war which show how instantaneous in heroic natures is the process of both the thought and the resolve from which brave actions spring. The horses which were drawing an ammunition waggon for the Diamond battery having refused to face the fire some volunteers went to the waggon to clear it, and they succeeded in bringing in their loads; but before the powder could be stored away in the magazine a shell came into the midst of it, while the volunteers were still gathered close to the heap. A voice cried out, "The fuse is burning!" Then, instantly, and, as the narrator says, "with one spring," Captain Peel darted upon the live shell and threw it upon the parapet. The shell burst about four yards from his hand without hurting anyone. The official list, in commemorating the services for which Captain Peel obtains the cross, adds to this feat: "On November 5, 1854, at the Battle of Inkerman, for joining the officers of the Grenadier Guards, and assisting in defending the colors of that regiment, when hard pressed at the Sandbag Battery. On the 18th of June, 1855, for volunteering to lead the ladder party at the assault on the Redan and carrying the first ladder until wounded."—World of Adventure.

Ned's Big Contract.

A London cable of Thursday says: In the House of Commons this evening Hon. Edward Stanhope, Secretary of State for War, read a communication from Gen. Grenfell, who is with the troops in Egypt. The communication contained the reply of Nad el-Jumi, the leader of the dervishes, to the General's demands for his surrender. The reply says: "Your force is nothing to me. I am sent to conquer the world, and I cannot stop. Now I call upon you to surrender. If you will do so I will protect you. Remember Hicks Pasha and Gordon Pasha." Gen. Grenfell adds that Nad-el-Jumi's fighting men are well fed and in good condition.

Strictly First-Class.

The Judge—Where did you find the prisoner, officer?

The Policeman—Caught him getting out of a loaded freight-car that had just come in.

The Tramp—I desire to say in justice to myself, your Honor, that there was only strictly first class freight in the car. I may be poor, but I am not low down enough to travel as third or second-class freight.

One Thing Women Will Not Do.

"Shall women propose?" is a question lately held under discussion. No, brethren; not marriage, certainly. Woman will not propose. Metaphorically speaking, the pitcher's box is the one place that she does not aspire to fill. She will take her stand on the home plate as heretofore, and swat the ball when her turn comes until caught out.

Appearances are Deceptive.

Street Gamin—Hi, Jimmy, look at de country jake.

The Jake—I'm no 'countryman, young feller. I own one of the biggest farms in Chicago.

—"I saw a singular metamorphosis the other day," said Pippins. "Well, what was it?" asked Bulsby. "I saw a man urn into a saloon."

Gazzam—"So young Briggs has taken a partner for life, has he?" Fangle—"No; not—not exactly for life. He married a Chicago girl."

One of the most dangerous and demoralising of all drinks is this beverage that is known as "Same."

—Boston Heiress—I am afraid it is not for me, but for my money, that you come here so often. Ardent Wooer—You are cruel to say so. How can I get your money without getting you?

—Mr. T. J. Bell, recently of the Dundas Standard, and family have taken up their residence in Brampton.

A PICKED BATTALION.

Chosen Men from the Whole German Army.

The "Schrippenfest" is an annual treat given to the Lehr-Infanterie-Bataillon, quartered at Schloss Friedrichs-Koge, says a Berlin letter. This battalion, brought into being by Frederick William III., is composed of men chosen from every regiment in the German army—with the exception of the Bavarian—who remain together with the permanent company from April 15th till Oct. 15th in each year, in order that the whole army may be impregnated with the same ideas and modes of looking at things; for when they return to their several regiments they are supposed to instruct their comrades with what they have learned. The annual treat takes place on Whit Monday, in the presence of the King of Prussia and the whole royal family—for it was originally a "royal" ceremony. Its name is taken from the "schrippe," the commonest kind of roll of white bread that is baked in Prussia. This "schrippe" was given to the soldiers at the dinner served on this occasion, in place of the ordinary "commis brod," which is very black and coarse. On this day divine service is held for the battalion in the open air. It was originally intended that the Shah should witness this part of the ceremony from the windows of the Schloss—out of regard to his religion—but His Majesty preferred to be among the worshippers, and at the hour appointed he offered his arm to the Kaiserin, and, conducting her to her place, remained between Her Majesty and the Kaiser. It was a solemn sight to see these soldiers drawn up for divine service, as if they were on the field of battle, while the pacific surroundings drive away from the mind of the spectator all thought of war. Their Majesties were accompanied by the Duke of Edinburgh, Prince Alfred and a number of German princes, and were attended by a host of court officials. Of foreign diplomats, only Sir Edward Malet was present in attendance on the Duke of Edinburgh. After service the men sat down to dinner, the tables being covered with more sumptuous fare than usual, to wit, roast pork and stewed beef—the delight of the Prussian soldier, when he can get it—wine and beer and plenty of "schrippen." A royal procession proceeded up and down the tables, the food was tasted by the Kaiser and his imperial guest, who also took a sip from the moselle cup, and the Kaiser spoke a few appropriate words to the men.

LET THE GIRLS ROMP.

They Require It Even More Than do the Boys.

So many mothers lecture the girls daily on the proprieties, and exhort them to be little ladies. They like to see them very quiet and gentle and as prim as possible. The lot of such children is pitiable, for they are deprived of the fun and frolic which they are entitled to. Children—boys and girls—must have exercise to keep them healthy. Deprive them of it and they will fade away like flowers without sunshine. Running, racing, skipping, climbing—these are the things that strengthen the muscles, expand the chest and build up the nerves. The mild dose of exercise taken in the nursery with calisthenics or gymnastics will not invigorate the system like a good romp in the open air.

Better the laughing, rosy cheeked, romping girl than the pale, lily-faced one who is called every inch a lady. The latter rarely breaks things or tears her dresses or tires her mother's patience, as the former does; but after all, what does the tearing and breaking amount to? It is not a wise policy to put an old head on young shoulders. Childhood is the time for childish pranks and plays. The girls will grow into womanhood soon enough. Let them be children as long as they can. Give them plenty of fresh air and sunlight, and let them run and romp as much as they please. By all means give us hearty, healthy, romping girls rather than pale-faced little ladies, condemned from their very cradles to nervousness, headache and similar ailments.—New York Mail and Express.

Sure Signs.

Wife—"Cyrus, I am sure young Spoonemore is becoming serious in his attentions to our Susie."

Husband—"Nonsense! What makes you think so?"

"He wears a new necktie every time he comes."

"Do you think Susie cares anything for him?"

"Yes. She hasn't eaten an onion this spring."—Chicago Tribune.

A Railroad to Alaska.

Alaska now seems to be the ultima thule of our continent and the suggestion of reaching it by rail serves to excite ridicule. And yet it may not be very many years before the traveler can take a car of the Northern Pacific Company at Chicago and journey steadily over lines under the same control to the border of that remote and now almost unknown land.—Railway Age.

Horse Flies.

The horse fly is the most cruel and bloodthirsty of the entire family. He is armed with a most formidable weapon, which consists of four lancets, so sharp and strong they will penetrate leather. He makes his appearance in June. The female is armed with six lancets, with which she bleeds both cattle and horses, and even human beings.—Colman's Rural World.

At the Ball.

"Oh, what a chance, Lieutenant, to find you here."

"Pardon, dear madam, the chance is entirely on my side."—Fliegende Blatter.

—"I beg your pardon," said the convict to the governor.

—"I understand you are one of the fair graduates, Miss Pease?" More than fair, Mr. Fleecy. I stood 96 in all my examinations.

—Tramp—to lady of the house—I'm starving to death! Can I die out in the barnyard? Lady of the house—graciously—Yes, if you won't crawl under the barn.

—A Philadelphia clothing house is attracting customers by photographing every person buying a suit in his new clothes, free of charge. The scheme works well.

Heard's Carriage Works.

—:— MANUFACTURER OF —:—

Carriages, Buggies, Wagons, Sleighs, Cutters, &c., &c.

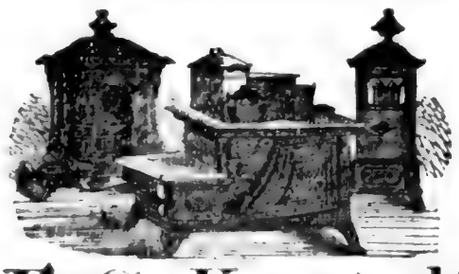
HEARD'S IMPROVED HARROWS AND GATES.

Special Attention given to PAINTING, TRIMMING, HORSE-SHOEING and al kinds of JOB WORK. Nothing but first-class material used throughout and satisfaction guaranteed. We have for sale

—Lumber, Lath and Shingles.—

Also Agent for Dick's Rollers, Mowers and Binders, Dick's Champion, Royal Rob Roy, Granger and Standard Plows. Two and Three-Furrow Gang Plows. Horse Powers for 4 Horses. Straw Cutters, Scufflers and Turnip Drills.

JOHN H. HEARD, Durham Street, Flesherton.



FLESHERTON STOVE EMPORIUM

A large assortment of STOVES, (a makes) STOVE FURNISHINGS, TIN WARE, COPPERWARE, LAMP GOODS etc, coustantly on hand.

EVETROUGHING A SPECIALITY.

F. G. Karstedt, Strain's old Stand Flesherton.

REMOVAL

I desire to inform the public that I have removed my well known tin shop to

MOORE'S Block, Durham St.

A complete stock of tinware will be found in my new premises.

REPAIRING, EAVETROUGHING Etc.

done as heretofore.

I have secured the agency for the Celebrated Singer Sewing Machine.

Requesting my old friends to come and see me in my new shop, I remain, etc.,

JAS. SULLIVAN.

ADVICE TO MOTHERS.—Are you disturbed at night and broken of your rest by a sick child suffering and crying with pain of Cutting Teeth! If so send at once and get a bottle "Mrs Winslow's Soothing Syrup" for Children Teething Its value is incalculable. It will relieve the poor little sufferer immediately. Depend upon it, mothers; there no mistake about it. It cures Dysentery and Diarrhœa, regulates the Stomach and Bowels, cures Wind Colic, softens the Gums reduces Inflamation, and gives tone and energy to the whole system "Mrs. Winslow's Soothing Syrup" for children teething is pleasant to the taste and is the prescription of one of the oldest and best female physicians and nurses in the United States, and is for sale by all druggists throughoutt the world Price twenty-five cents a bottle. Be sure and ask for "MRS WINSLOW'S SYRUP," and take no other kind.

Improved Farm for Sale.

Lots 148, 149 and 150, 3rd range east, T. and S. R., containing 100 acres, 80 cleared, good clay loam, well improved, good frame house and log barn, frame stable, good orchard, etc. This farm is well watered and improved, and is considered one of the best in this section. It is one mile and a half from the village of Flesherton. Will be sold on very easy terms. For further particulars apply to

JAS. BEECROFT,
Flesherton P O

D. McTavish,

HORSESHOER AND

GENERAL BLACKSMITH,

Collingwood Street,

FLESHERTON, - ONT.

Manufacturing of Wagons, Sleighs, Buggies Democrats, etc. Horseshoeing promptly attended to Special attention given to contract work or tender feet.

Logging and Plow Chains constantly on hand.

ROLLER FLOUR

best in the markets at

Blackburn's.

Ice Cream Parlors!

all kinds of cooling summer drinks.

Cured Meats,
Lard, Bologna,
etc.

ALL FRUITS IN THEIR SEASON

AT

BLACKBURN'S

FLOUR, FLOUR,

STONE FLOUR!

MR. P LOUCKS

Is prepared to do your Gristing on short notice and grinds on the old terms of every twelfth bushel. Seven cents per bag of two bushels for Chopping done every day. The Little Mi is big in the estimation of the public.

Satisfaction Guaranteed.

P. LOUCKS, Proprietor.

Good stabling for horses.

—It Pays To—

GO TO THE BEST

AND THAT IS THE

Northern Business College,

OF OWEN SOUND.

The best and most practical course of study
The best teaching talent.
The best accommodation for students.
The best methods of instruction
The best results from that instruction after students graduate.

For annual announcements giving particulars regarding the course of study, terms &c., address

C. A. FLEMING, PRINCIPAL.

Owen Sound, Nov 1st, 188

For Sale

Steam flour mill for sale at Flesherton Station 2 run stone, double reel bolt, smut mill, duster and purifier. Will be sold cheap and on easy terms. This is a bargain. Apply to

ROGER LEVES,
Flesherton P O

Monthly Fairs.

Orangeville—The second Thursday in each month
Dundalk—Tuesday before Orangeville.
Flesherton—Monday before Orangeville
Markdale—Saturday before Orangeville
Durham—Third Tuesday in each month.
Chatsworth—Monday before Durham
Holland Center—Saturday before Chatsworth
Glenville—Monday before Durham.
Hanover—Monday before Durham

This Year's

MYRTLE

CUT and PLUG

SMOKING TOBACCO

FINER THAN EVER.

See

T & B

in bronze on EACH PLUG and PACKAGE

For lame back, side or chest, use Shiloh's Porous Plaster. Price 25 cents For sale at the Medical Hall.

Croup, whooping cough and Bronchitis immediately relieved by Shiloh's Cure For sale at the Medical Hall.

COUNTY & DISTRICT.

A new hotel, costing $28,000, has just been completed in Owen Sound.

Southampton is the fashionable camping grounds for Walkerton nabobs.

The Wiraton Echo and Chatsworth News will not issue papers next week.

To-day is Owen Sound's civic holiday. The town goes to Brampton by train.

A fiend in human form cut a teat from a valuable cow belonging to W. McMaster, of the 1st line, Mono.

The Creemore Star says there is a boy in Collingwood 17 years old, who weighs only forty-three pounds. He is certainly a curosity in his weigh.

The Warden of Simcoe when presiding at the county council sessions wears a gorgeous cocked hat and silk gown, purchased at a cost $110.

The following touching obituary notice appeared in our most esteemed exchange last week: "Mr. R. Marchment's faithful old gray horse died on Wendesday."

The Canadian city with the shortest name is 02a.—M.F. Rep.—And the county with the most abbreviated appelation is Sx. Beeton World. The town with the shortest name is kuga, and the newspaper with the shortest headline that we know of is the Creem.

About 10 o'clock Monday morning Joseph Young, a boy about 15 years old, son of Mr. Alex. Young, of Keppel, started with a load of wood to town, and when about a mile from home while going down a hill the wood fell forward bringing the boy, with it and the wagon passed over his neck, killing him instantly. The funeral took place Tuesday afternoon.—[O.S. Adveatiser.

They are energetic, hard-working people in the vicinity of Wiarton. The Echo says: "One day last week a farmer who resides in the township of Albemarle left his house at noon for his work, leaving his wife attending to her domestic duties as usual. On his return in the evening he found that in his absence one had been added to the family circle, a fine bouncing boy, which was lying in the cradle, and the mother was out milking the cows.

HIS LEGS CUT OFF.—Brakeman Simmons met with a terrible accident at the C.P.R. station late on Saturday night. He was engaged in making a coupling when his foot was caught in some obstruction and before he could extricate himself a number of cars passed over him, nearly amputating both legs. The poor fellow was picked up and carried to the Royal Hotel, where his wounds were attended to. The injured limbs were amputated early Sunday morning. Simmons, who has been only six weeks out from England, is a fine looking young man of about 22, and hopes are entertained that a strong constitution will enable him to pull through his terrible accident.—[Dufferin Advertiser.

General News.

John Hopper, a farmer, was killed by a train near Newmarket on Saturday.

Princess Louise of Wales and the Duke of Fife were married at Buckingham Palace on Saturday

Lillie Kelly, a prisioner at the Agnes Street Police Station, Toronto, committed suicide by hanging early Sunday morning.

The British sealing schooner Black Diamond has been seized by the United States revenue cutter, Rush, for sealing in Behring sea.

Mr. T.T. World and his 16 year-old daughter, Lily, were drowned in the bay, Toronto, Saturday evening. A lad named William Wood was drowned ealier in the day.

Two hundred people in Wilson county, Tenn., haved banded together to drive the Mormon elders and converts from the county.

Prof. J.W. Howell, a well-known educator of Rutledge, Tenn., is dying of hydrophobia. He was bitten thirteen years ago by a black-and-tan terrior.

Catarrh cured, health and sweet breath secured, by Shiloh's Catarrh Remedy Price 50 cents. Nasal Injector free. For sale at the Medical Hall

Shiloh's cough and Consumption Cure is sold by us on a guarantee. It cures Consumption. For sale at the Medical Hall

Will you suffer with Dyspepsia and Liver Complaint? Shiloh's Vitalizer is guaranteed to cure you. For sale at the Medical Hall.

The Rev. Geo. H. Thayer, of Harbone Ind., says: "Both myself and my wife owe our lives to Shiloh's Consumption Cure. For sale at the Medical Hall.

BOOTS & SHOES.

I have a very large supply on hand and

Selling very Cheap.

IN LADIES WEAR. Prunlela, Kid, Polish calf and Buff Dongola, Lace and Button.

Misse's, Youth's and Children's

A large assortment, all sorts and sizes.

MENS WEAR

Fine Calf and Dongola, Balmorals and Gaiters, also Heavy Boots and Shoes. Prices and Material cannot be beat.

W. CLAYTON.

Photos, Photos, Photos.

We are now turning out work far superior in style and finish to any ever produced in Flesherton.

COPYING and ENLARGING at MODERATE RATES.

PICTURE FRAMING

done in all its branches. A good stock of FRAMES and MOULDINGS kept constantly on hand. Will also introduce the new BROMIDE PORTRAIT, a picture that is giving entire satisfaction wherever introduced. SAMPLES can be seen at my Gallery where all particulars as to Price, Style &c., can be ascertained.

MRS. BULMER,
FLESHERTON.

HEALTH FOR ALL.

HOLLOWAY'S PILLS & OINTMENT

THE PILLS

Purify the Blood, correct all Disorders of

Liver, Stomach, Kidn'ys, and Bowels.

They invigorate and restore to health Debilitated Constitutions, and are invaluable in all Complaints incidental to Females of all ages. For Children and the aged they are priceless

THE OINTMENT

an infallible remedy for Bad Legs, Bad Breasts, Old Wounds, Sores and Ulcers. It is famous for Gout and Rheumatism. For disorders of the Chest it has no equa.

For SORE THROAT, BRONCHITIS, COUGHS, COLDS

Glandular Swellings, and all Skin Diseases it has no rival; and for contracted and stiff joints it acts like a charm.

Manufactured only at Professor HOLLOWAY'S Establishment,

78, New Oxford Street (late 533, Oxford Street), London,

and are sold at 1s. 1½d., 2s. 9d., 4s. 6d., 11s., 22s., and 33s. each Box or Pot, and may be had of all Medicine Vendors throughout the World.

Purchasers should look to the Label on the Pots and Boxes. If the address is not 533, Oxford Street, London, they are spurious.

PRICEVILLE BAKERY.

A. WATSON!

Desires to inform the public that he can furnish

CAKES AND PIES

To Order.

FIRST CLAS BREAD ALWAYS ON HAND.

will visit Flesherton twice a week: on TUESDAYS and FRIDAYS, with a full supply of goods.

DROP A CARD IF YOU DESIRE ME TO CALL.

WEDDING and FANCY cakes a specialty

A. WATSON,
Priceville.

Situation.

with steady employment and good pay all the year round, to reliable men furnishing satisfactory references. S.A. McOMBER & Co., Nurserymen, Rochester, N. Y

FLESHERTON
PLANING MILLS

Having purchased the Flesherton Planing Mills from R. J. Sproule, Esq., I now desire to inform the

PUBLIC

that I am in a position to do

ALL KINDS

—OF—

General planing mill work,

such as

SASH, DOORS, DOOR FRAMES

Planing and Matching, re sawing, etc.

Good Workmanship Guaranteed.

A large quantity of good dry pine lumber on hand.

W. J. HOWARD,
Flesherton.

LOOK!

HAVING done business in Canada for years our reputation is established. We want three men in your vicinity to represent us, to whom exclusive territory will be given Handsome outfit free Salary and expenses paid weekly. Previous experience not required. Write at once for terms. Hardy stock for Canada a specialty. MAY BROTHERS, Nurserymen, Rochester, N.Y

FLESHERTON ADVANCE.

"TRUTH BEFORE FAVOR"—"PRINCIPLES, NOT MEN."

VOL. VIII., NO 423. FLESHERTON, ONT., THURSDAY, AUGUST 8, 1889. W. H. THURSTON, WATCHES,

Clocks, & Jewelry.

STUDY

Your Own Interests

by buying your Watches, Clocks, Jewelry, Silverware, etc.

Russell's Noted

JEWELRY STORE.

FLESHERTON.

RUSSELL'S, FLESHERTON

THE ADVANCE.

Every Thursday,

FROM THE OFFICE,

TERMS OF SUBSCRIPTION

ADVERTISING RATES

W. H. THURSTON.

THE ONE PRICE

Cash Store.

STILL ON DECK!

Goods cheaper than ever

This is the time for all farmers to lay in a good stock

Groceries

for haying and harvesting. We have put the prices down to meet the demands.

Dry Goods, Boots, Shoes, Etc.

—AT—

ROCK - BOTTOM - PRICES.

More Customers wanted

To Carry off the Bargains.

McDONALD & EVANS,

Wright's Old Stand.

Pumps! Pumps!

J. McCullough.

Manufacturer of pumps, desires to inform the [illegible] that he is prepared to furnish pumps for parties who have heretofore had difficulty with their wells.

Deep wells, gravel wells, etc.

Guaranteed Satisfaction

be using my articles. I learned my business with the late J. Bear, of Meaford, the superiority of whose pumps was a household word in Grey a few years ago.

Be sure and call on me if you desire anything in the pump line.

J. McCullough.

FARM FOR SALE CHEAP, AND ON EASY terms, lot 1, con. 2, township of Egremont, containing 50 acres, about 30 of which are valuable timber land. Well fenced with [illegible] in Queen's Valley, where there are mills, stores, post office, 2 churches, and 11 miles from Flesherton on the C. P. R., where there is a splendid market for all kinds of produce, stock, lumber and timber. Apply to R. J. Sproule, auctioneer and real estate agent, Flesherton.

Flesherton Livery Stables.

D. CLAYTON, Proprietor.

First class [illegible] always on hand. Horses to hire at reasonable rates. Stables opposite Munshaw's hotel. Special attention paid to commercial [illegible]

A large and influential deputation waited upon the Governor-General at Ottawa on Friday last with petitions praying that he would disallow the Jesuit Bill passed at last session of Parliament. This deputation was headed by such men as Rev. Principal Caven, of Toronto, E. D. Armour, of Toronto, Dr. Davidson, of Montreal, and nearly fifty more well-known gentlemen of Ontario and Quebec. The petitions held the signatures of nearly 58,000 persons, representing the provinces of Ontario and Quebec. As was very generally expected the big guns met with no success whatever in their interview, the Governor-General stating distinctly that he would not disallow the bill, and hoping out no hope that the matter would be brought before the Supreme Court. He also refused to dissolve Parliament. The [illegible] advised the deputation to [illegible] to the people during the [illegible] session of the Advance [illegible] publish the reply [illegible] following before [illegible] the exact wording of the refusal to disallow the obnoxious bill, so that they may judge the more justly of the [illegible] of the said refusal.

The pertinent question with all is, What next? We reply, with a promise, nothing. The evil has become law. The provisos which we refer to remain with the people. Providing that they are strenuously carried as to place as [illegible] party considerations [illegible] may prevent a [illegible] and success, [illegible] which is manifested [illegible] at times, when [illegible] for [illegible], as any party [illegible] public [illegible] of that can be done now. What can be done? In many cases, at least, it will be a sufficient number to show that protestants are awakening to the malodorous state of Denmark, we hope.

That was a funny seizure which was made in Behring sea the other day. An American vessel seized a Canadian sealing vessel which had been catching seals in waters which the United States claims to be her own feeding grounds. After the seizure the American captain placed an able bodied seaman on the Canadian craft and told him to take her to an American port. This, of course was objected to by the Canadian captain, and after the captor's departure he steered for Vancouver, where he arrested all and any [illegible] in charge the able-bodied American seaman. The American captain must have had a strange idea of the native prowess or of British temerity, if he thought a crew of British seamen would submit to being towed around the broad Pacific at the word of command from one sickly American in a coersive mood. John Bull is not a lamb of that kind.

What is going to be done about election matters in this riding, anyway? Things are very calm on the surface, but we imagine we hear a perhaps [illegible] undercurrent bubbling up. A meeting of Conservative [illegible] was held in Markdale last week, at which the question of representation was, I believe, the main topic of discussion. What the result was is not known. It is quite probable, however, that Mr. Rorke will again be the Conservative standard bearer for East Grey in the local house, but who his opponent will be it is hard to surmise.

Kaiser Wilhem must have been impressed with the welcome he received in Old England yesterday. No other country on the face of the earth could have made such a naval display. Line after line of sea monsters greeted him with the roar of cannon. But he must have been considerably reassured when his grandma kissed him and told him it was only in fun.—Hamil

A new [illegible] paper has been started in Hamilton, with Wallace McLean [illegible] Word is the plat [illegible] looks [illegible] We [illegible] what Hamilton [illegible]

Wales, Princess Victoria, has eloped [illegible] the Viscount Chelsea.

General News.

Quebec farmers are complaining of the cold wet weather.

The trial of the Crown suspects has been set down for August 26.

The Panama Canal lottery tickets have been [illegible] a syndicate

[illegible] Hayes, who sued Miss F[illegible] for [illegible] has won Gaulp's [illegible] verdict. Back Downs!

[illegible] of the Behring Sea [illegible] is [illegible] received at Victoria [illegible]

Prof. [illegible] P. Carlyle has been [illegible]

[illegible] ation at Sarnia [illegible]

This time it was Capt. W. F. Smith of the Empire Navigation, who saw the monster in Panama waters.

Mr. McCarthy will deliver only one address on the Jesuit question in Manitoba, which will be at Portage la Prairie on August 5.

Judgment has been given in favor of the plaintiffs in the suit of Conmee C. P. P.

The Hamilton Herald, a new independent one-cent paper, made its appearance Thursday.

Fire on Sunday night destroyed nearly all the business portion of Spokane Falls, Washington Territory. Several lives were lost. The loss of property is estimated at $14,000,000.

The Governor-General's reply to the Ontario and Quebec deputations Friday was a decided refusal to disallow the Jesuits Estates Bill, with a defence of the Dominion Ministers. He also stated definitely that there was no chance of a reference to the courts.

The administrators of the estate of Rudolph S. Edeal, killed in the Grand Trunk accident at Hamilton, have entered [illegible] against the company.

The late President Garfield's son James is soon to marry Miss Helen Newell, [illegible] President Jay Newell of the Lake Shore road. He is [illegible] political. He is a fine scholar, a fair writer, and is making a reputation as a lawyer.

Mrs. E. Sheppard, of William Nevis City, is the writer of a pen which made its nest in the woods near its home, and had several [illegible] to desert them. [illegible] A party [illegible] then appeared to inspect the claim, and after laying a few more eggs settled down for the usual three weeks' stay. [illegible] chickens first appeared [illegible] but these were removed to Mr. Sheppard's [illegible]

[illegible] For Sale at the Mail Office.

THE MARKETS.

FLESHERTON.

Carefully Corrected Each Week.

[illegible] Wheat

[illegible]

SIGN

"Big Spex"

Gold, filled gold and Coin-silver cases.

Walnut and Nickle Clocks.

[illegible] represented [illegible]

QUALITY Considered.

[illegible] won't [illegible]

"CASH or C[illegible] OUT"

Goods [illegible] and Warranted [illegible]

Work Carefully [illegible]

Fair C[illegible]ges.

Stock [illegible]

Can save [illegible] to $3.0[illegible] on watch

W. A. BR[illegible]N,

Jeweler [illegible]

FLESHERTON.

The London Leper.

Good gracious me!" cried Smith and Jones,
"Good gracious me!" cried Brown;
"A London leper in our midst! For God's sake, hunt him down!
Our Prince, whom no one would deceive, declares this leper stands
In that great mart whence comes our meat.
That meat goes through his hands!"

The awful rumor ran the round, like wildfire fast
it spread;
Men gazed upon their steaks and chops in doubt, dismay and dread
With fear they eyed the tender joint; the thought perhaps it might Have come from where the leper worked destroyed their appetite.

In panic London salesmen met, the retail dealer cried,
"O find this leper butcher out—search, search on every side!
The hue and cry rang clear and shrill from east,
west, south and north,
And every day the London press in leading type held forth.

They ran the man to earth at last, and found—
O, thank the fates—
He only vended odds and ends outside the market gates;
The leper's hands were never laid on Dives' A 1
meat,
He only touched the common stuff that Lazarus must eat.

Then died the sudden panic down, the nine days
waxed and waned,
And with them ceased the sudden fame "our only leper" gained;
Society was satisfied, as soon as it felt sure
The only meat the leper touched was eaten by the poor.

—By George R.Sims.

Lizzie.

I wonder of all wimmin air
Like Lizzie is when we go out
To theatres an' concerts where
Is things the papers talk about.
Do other wimmin fret an' stew
Like they wuz bein' crucified—
Frettin' a show or concert through,
With wonderin' of the baby cried?

Now Lizzie knows that gran'ma's there
To see that everything is right,
Yet Lizzie thinks that gran'ma's care
Ain't good enuff f'r baby, quite;
Yet what am I to answer when
She kind uv fidgets at my side,
An' asks me every now and then:
"I wonder if the baby cried?"

Seems like she seen two little eyes
A-pinin' f'r their mother's smile—
Seems like she heern the pleadin' cries
Uv one she thinks uv all the while;
An' so she's sorry that she come,
An' though she allus tries to hide
The truth, she'd ruther stay to hum
Than wonder of the baby cried

Yes, wimmin folks is all alike—
By Lizzie you kin jedge the rest;
There never wuz a little tyke
But that his mother loved him best,
And nex' to bein' what I be
The husband uv my gentle bride—
I'd wisht I wuz that croodlin' wee,
With Lizzie wonderin' ef I cried.

Chicago News.

The Temple of Fame.

Three riders set out for the Temple of Fame,
Each booted and spurred and equipped the same.
The first rode forth at a rattling pace,
Like a jockey who wins an exciting race.
The second set out with caution, slow,
That, when need was, he might faster go.
The third rode steadily, quietly on,
At a quick jog-trot he could reckon upon.

And which do you think the winner be;
The hare, the tortoise—or number three?

The first one soon broke down, of course;
He saved his saddle, but lost his horse!
The second met the regular fate—
Dallied too long, and was just too late
The third, I grieve and regret to say,
Did not get there—for he lost his way.
He thought so much of his regular trot,
To look at signboards he quite forgot.

See how strangely things befall!
Another—not thinking of Fame at all
Who was on his way to the breadfruit tree,
To provide for a wife and children three,
Went straightway into the Temple of Fame,
And innocently asked its name!
They answered him. With a quizzical face,
He remarked, "It's a most uncomfortable place!"
Then on he went to the breadfruit tree,
And home to his wife and children three

The moral?—Well, if you can't find it,
Write it out for I shan't mind it!

Bargains.

He pressed a ruby on her lips, whose burning blood shone through,
Twin sapphires bound above her eyes, to match their fiery blue,
And, where her hair was parted back, an opal gem he set—
Type of her changing countenance, where all delights were met.

"Will you surrender now," he said, "the ancient grudge you keep Untiring and unuttered, like murder in the deep?"
"I thank you for the word," she said; your gems are fair of form,
But when did jewels bind the depths, or splendors still the storm?"

"There is no diamond in the mine, nor pearl
beneath the wave,
There is no fretted coronet that soothes a princely grave,
There is no fate nor empire in the wide infinity,
Can stand in grace and virtue with the gift you had from me."

Julia Ward Howe.

The Old House.

In through the porch and up the silent stair;
Little is changed, I know so well the ways—
Here, the dead came to meet me; it was there
The dream was dreamed in unforgotten days.

But who is this who hurries on before,
A flitting shade the brooding shades among?
She turned—I saw her face—O, God! it wore
The face I used to wear when I was young!

I thought my spirit and my heart were tamed
To deadness, dead the pangs that agonize,
The old grief springs to choke me—I am ashamed
Before that little ghost with eager eyes,

O, turn away, let her not see, not know!
How should she bear it, how should understand?
O, hasten down the stairway, hasten and go,
And leave her dreaming in the silent land.

The Boy in Love With His Mother.

He went up the pathway singing
I saw the woman's eyes
Grow bright with a wordless welcome,
As sunshine warms the skies.
"Back again, sweet-heart mother,"
He cried, and bent to kiss
The loving face that was uplifted
For what some mothers miss.

That boy will do to depend on;
I hold that this is true.
From lads in love with their mothers
Our bravest heroes grew.
Earth's grandest hearts have been loving hearts
Since time and earth began;
And the boy who kisses his mother
Is every inch a man.

Laws of Health.

Tramp—"Thankee kindly, mum; I'd no hope of gettin' sich a fine supper to-day, mum. May Heaven bless ye!"

Housekeeper—"As you've had a good supper, I think you might chop some wood."

"Yes, mum; but you know the old adage' 'After dinner rest a while; after supper walk a mile.' I'll walk the mile first, mum.'

FIDELITY AND LOVE.

"Do you think a hundred trips to Europe would keep him from you if he knew you wanted him?" Maude asked, and Grace replied: "Perhaps not. I don't know. I only wish he were here."

This was the last of February, and after that Grace failed so fast that with the hope that it might reach him before he sailed, Maude wrote to Max, telling him to come at once, if he would see Grace before she died. She knew about how long it would take the letter to reach him and how long for him to come, allowing for no delays, and on the morning of the first day she could by any chance expect him she sent the carriage to the Canandaigua station, and then all through the hours of the long, dreary day she sat by Grace's bedside, watching with a sinking heart the pallor on her lips and brow and the look she could not mistake deepening on her face.

"What if she should die before he gets here, or what if he should not come at all?" she thought as the hours went by.

She was more afraid of the latter, and when she saw the carriage coming up the avenue she strained her eyes through the blinding snow to see if he were in it. When he came before, he had stood up and waved his hat to them, but there was no token now to tell if he were there, and she waited breathlessly until the carriage stopped before the side entrance, knowing then for sure that he had come."

"Thank God!" she cried as she went out to meet him, bursting into tears as she said to him, "I am so glad, and so will Miss Raynor be. She does not know that I wrote you. I didn't tell her for fear you wouldn't come.

She had given him her hand and he was holding it fast as she led him into the hall. She did not ask him when or where he received her letter. She only helped him off with his coat, and made him sit down by the fire while she told how rapidly Grace had failed and how little hope there was that she would recover.

"You will help her if anything can. I am going to prepare her now," she said, and, going out, she left him there alone.

He had been very sorry that he could not keep his promise at Christmas, and tried to find a few days in which to visit the Cedars between the close of the suit and his departure for England. But he could not, and his passage was taken and his luggage on the ship, which was to sail early in the morning, when about 6 o'clock in the evening Maude's letter was brought to him, changing his plans at once. Grace was dying—the woman he had loved so long, and although thousands of dollars depended upon his keeping his appointment in London, he must lose it all, and go to her. Sending for his luggage, and writing a few letters of explanation, the next morning found him on his way to the Cedars, which he reached on the day when Maude expected him.

She had left Grace asleep when she went to meet Max, but on re-entering her room found her awake and leaning on her elbow in the attitude of intense listening.

"Oh, Maude," she said, "was it a dream, or did I hear Max speaking to you in the hall? Tell me, is he here?"

"Yes, he is here. I sent for him and he came," Maude replied, while Grace fell back upon her pillow, whispering faintly: "Bring him at once."

"Come," Maud said to Max, who followed her to the sick room, where she left him alone with Grace.

He stayed by her all that night and the day following, in order to give Maude the rest she needed, but when the second night came they kept the watch together, he on one side of the bed, and she upon the other, with their eyes fixed upon the white, pinched face where the shadow of death was settling. For several hours Grace slept quietly. Then, just as the gray-daylight was beginning to show itself in the corners of the room she awoke and asked, "Where is Max?"

"Here, darling!" was his response, as he bent over her and kissed her pallid lips.

"I think it has grown cold and dark, for I can't see you," she said, groping for his hand, which she held tightly between her own as she went on: "I have been dreaming, Max—such a pleasant dream, for I was young again—young as Maude, and wore my bridal dress, just as I did that day when you said I was so pretty. Do you remember it? That was years ago—oh! so many—and I am getting old; we both are growing old. You said so in your letter. But Maude is young, and in my dream she wore the bridal dress at the last, and I saw my own grave, with you beside it and Maude, and both so sorry because I was dead. But it is better so, and I am glad to die and be at rest. If I could be what I once was, oh! how I should cling to life! For I love you so much! Oh, Max, do you know, can you guess how I have loved you all these years, and what it has cost me to give you up?"

Max's only answer was the hot tears he dropped upon her face as she went on: "You will not forget me; that I know; but sometime—yes sometime—and when it comes, remember—I was willing. I told Maude so. Where is she?"

"Here!" and Maude knelt, sobbing, by the dying woman, who went on: "She has been everything to me, Max, and I love her next to you. God bless you both! And if, in the heaven I am going to, I can watch over you, I will do it, and be often, often with you, when you think I am far away. Who was it said that? I read it long ago. But things are going from me, and Heaven is very near, and the Saviour is with me—closer, nearer than you are, Max; and the other world is just in sight, where I soon shall be, free from pain, with my poor, crippled feet all strong and well, like Maude's. Dear Maude! tell her how I loved her; tell her —."

Here her voice grew indistinct, and for a few moments she seemed to be sleeping; then suddenly opening her eyes wide, she exclaimed, as an expression of joy broke over her face: "It is here—the glory which shineth as the noonday. In another moment I shall be walking the golden streets. Good-bye, Max; good-bye."

Grace was dead, and Maude made her ready for the coffin, her tears falling like rain upon the shrivelled feet and on the waxen hands which she folded over the pulseless bosom, placing in them the flowers her mistress had loved best in life. She was to be buried in Mt. Auburn, and Maude went with the remains to Boston, as Grace had requested her to do, caring nothing because Mrs. Marshall-More hinted broadly at the impropriety of the act, wondering how she could have done it.

"She did it at Grace's request, and to please me," Max said; and that silenced the lady, who was afraid of her brother, and a little afraid of Maude, who did not seem quite the girl she had last seen in Merrivale.

"What will you do now? Go back to your teaching?" she asked, after the funeral was over.

"I shall go home to mother," Maude replied, and that afternoon she took the train for Merrivale, accompanied by Max, who was going on to New York, and thence to keep his appointment in London.

Few where the words spoken between them during the journey, and those mostly of the dead woman lying under the snow at Mt. Auburn; but when Merrivale was reached Max took the girl's hands in his own and pressed them hard as he called her a second time by her name.

"God bless you, Maude, for all you were to Grace. When I can I will write to you. Good-bye.

Only for a moment the train stopped at the station, and then it moved swiftly on, leaving Maude standing upon the platform with her mother and John, while Max resumed his seat, and, pulling his hat over his eyes, never spoke again until New York was reached. A week later and a ship of the Cunard line was plowing the ocean to the eastward, and Max Gordon was among the passengers, silent and abstracted, with a bitter sense of loneliness and pain in his heart as he thought of the living and the dead he was leaving behind—Grace, who was to have been his bride, dead in all her sweetness and beauty, and Maude, who was nothing to him but a delicious memory, alive in all her freshness and youthful bloom. He could hardly tell of which he thought the more, Grace or Maude. Both seemed ever present with him, and it was many a day before he could rid himself of the fancy that two faces were close against his own, one cold and dead, as he had seen it last, with the snowy hair about the brow and a smile of perfect peace upon the lips love to him—the other glowing with life and which had never said aught but words of girlish beauty, as it had looked at him in the gathering darkness when he stood upon the car step and waved it his good-bye.

CHAPTER X.

AT LAST.

Five years had passed since Grace was laid in her grave in Mt. Auburn, and Max was still abroad, leading that kind of Bohemian life which many Americans lead in Europe, when there is nothing to call them home. And to himself Max often said there was nothing to call him home, but as often as he said it a throb of pain belied his words, for he knew that across the sea was a face and voice he was longing to hear and and see again, a face which now visited him in his dreams quite as often as that of his dead love, and which he always saw as it had looked at him that summer afternoon in the log house among the Richland hills, with the sunlight falling upon the rings of hair and lending a warmer tint to the glowing cheeks. Delicious as was the memory of that afternoon, it had been the means of keeping Max abroad during all these years, for, in the morbid state of mind into which he had fallen after Grace's death he felt he must do penance for having allowed himself for a moment to forget her who had believed in him so fully.

"Grace trusted me, and I was false to her and will punish myself for it, even if by that means I lose all that makes life desireable," he thought; and so he stayed on and on, year after year, knowing always just where Maude was and what she was doing, for Archie kept him informed. Occasionally he wrote to her himself—pleasant, chatty letters, which had in them a great deal of Grace—his lost darling, he called her—and a little of the places he was visiting. Occasionally, too, Maude wrote to him, her letters full of Grace, with a little of her life in Merrivale, for she was with her mother now, and had been since Miss Raynor's death. A codicil to Grace's will, bequeathing her a few thousand dollars, made it unnecessary for her to earn her own livelihood. Indeed, she might have bought Spring Farm, if she had liked; but this she would not do. The money given for that must be earned by herself, paid by the book she was writing, and which, after it was finished and published, and after a few savage criticisms by some dyspeptic critics, who saw no good in it, began to be read, then to be talked about, then to sell—until finally it became the rage and was found in every bookstore and railway car and on almost every parlor table in New England, while the young authoress was spoken of "as a star which at one flight had soared to the zenith of literary fame," and this from the very pens which had at first denounced "Sunny Bank," as a milk-and-watery effort, not worth the paper on which it was written. All Mrs. Marshall-More's guests at Spring Farm read it, and Mrs. Marshall-More and Archie read it, too, and both went down to congratulate the author upon her success, the latter saying to her, as he beat his boot with his cane, and looked admiringly at her through the glasses he now wore, "I say, Maude, your prophecy came true. You told me you'd write a book which everyone would read, and which would make mother proud to say she knew you, and, by Jove, you have done it. You ought to hear her talk to some Boston people about Miss Graham, the authoress. You'd suppose you'd been her dearest friend. I wonder what Uncle Max will say. I told you you would make him your hero, and you have. I recognized him at once; but the heroine is more like Grace than you. I am going to send it to him."

And the next steamer which sailed from New York for Europe carried with it Maude's book directed to Max Gordon, who read it at one sitting in a sunny nook of the Colosseum, where he spent a great part of his time. Grace was in it, and he was in it, too, he was sure, and, reading between the lines what a stranger could not read, he felt when he had finished it that in the passionate love of the heroine for the hero he heard Maude calling to him to come back to the happiness there was still for him.

"And I will go," he said. "Five years of penance have atoned for five minutes of forgetfulness, and Grace would bid me go, if she could, for she foresaw what would be, and told me she was willing."

With Max to will was to do, and among the list of passengers who sailed from Liverpool, March 20th, 18——, was the name of Maxwell Gordon, Boston, Mass.

* * * * *

It was the 2nd of April, and a lovely morning, with skies as blue and air as soft and warm as in the later days of May. And Spring Farm, for the season, was looking its loveliest, for Mrs. Marshall-More had lavished fabulous sums of money upon it, until she had very nearly transformed it into what she meant it should be, an English Park. She knew that Maude had once expressed her intention to buy it back some day, but this she was sure she could never do, and if she could, Max would never sell it, and if he would she would never let him. So, with all these nevers to reassure her, she went on year after year improving and beautifying the place until it was worth far more than when it came into her hands, and she was contemplating still greater improvements during the coming summer when Max suddenly walked in upon her, and announced his intention of going to Merrivale the next day.

"But where will you stay? Both houses are closed—only the one at Spring Farm has in it an old couple—Mr. and Mrs. Martin—who look after it in the winter," she said, and Max replied, "I will stay at Spring Farm with the Martins. I want to see the place." And the next day found him there, occupying the room which, by a little skilful questioning of Mrs. Martin, he learned had been Maude's when her father owned the farm.

Miss Graham was home, she said, and at once launched out into praises of the young authoress of whom Merrivale was so proud.

"And to think," she said, "that she was born here in this very house! It seems so queer."

"And is the house more honored now than went she was simple Maude Graham?" Max asked; and the old lady replied, "To be sure it is. Any house can have a baby born in it, but not every one an authoress!" and with that she bustled off to see about supper for her guest.

Max was up early the next morning, wondering how soon it would be proper for him to call upon Maude. He had no thought that she would come to him, and was somewhat surprised when just after breakfast her card was brought by Mrs. Martin, who said she was in the parlor. Maude had heard of his arrival from Mr. Martin, who had stopped at the cottage the previous night on his way to the village.

"Mr. Gordon in town! I supposed he was in Europe!" she exclaimed, feeling herself grow hot and cold and faint as she thought of Max Gordon being so near to her.

That very afternoon she had received the first check from her publisher, and been delighted with the amount, so much more than she had expected. There was enough to buy Spring Farm, if Max did not ask too much, and she resolved to write to him at once and ask his price. But that was not necessary now, for he was here and she should see him face to face, and the next morning she started for Spring Farm immediately after their breakfast, which was never served very early.

"Will he find me greatly changed, I wonder," she thought, as she sat waiting for him, her heart beating so rapidly that she could scarcely speak when at last he came and stood before her, the same man she had parted from five years before save that he seemed a little older, with a look of weariness in his eyes.

But that lifted the moment they rested upon her.

"Oh, Maude," was all he could say as he held her hands in his and looked into the face he had seen so often in his dreams, though never as beautiful as it was now. "Maude," he began at last, "I cannot tell you how glad I am to see you again, or how glad I am for your success. I read the book in Rome. Archie sent it to me, and I have come to congratulate you."

He was talking so fast and pressing her hands so hard that he almost took her breath away. But she released herself from him, determining to have the business off her mind as soon as possible, and began abruptly:

"I was surprised to hear of your arrival, and glad, too, as it saves me the trouble of writing you. I can buy Spring Farm now. You know you promised to keep it for me. What is your price?"

"How much can you give?" Max asked; and without stopping to consider the strangeness of the question, Maude told him frankly the size of the check she had received, and asked if it were enough.

"No, Maude," Max said, and over the face looking so anxiously at him there fell a cloud of disappointment as Maude replied, "Is it much more you ask?"

"Yes, a great deal more," and Max seated himself beside her upon the sofa, for she was now sitting down; "but I think you can arrange it. Don't look so sorry. It is you I want, not your money. Will you give me yourself in return for Spring Farm?"

He had her hands again, but she drew them from him, and, covering her face with them, began to cry, while he went on: "Five years is a long time to wait for one we love, and I have waited that length of time, with thoughts of you in my heart, almost as much as thoughts of Grace, whom I loved dearly while she lived. But she is dead, and could she speak she would bid you grant me the happiness I have been denied so many years. I think she knew it would come some day. I am sure she did, and she told me she was willing. I did not mean to ask you quite so soon, but the sight of you, so beautiful and sweet, and the belief that you care for me as I care for you, has made me forget all the proprieties, and I cannot recall my words, so I ask you again to be my wife, to give yourself as the price of Spring Farm, which shall be your home as long as you choose to make it so. Will you Maude? I have come thousands of miles for your answer, which must not be no."

What else he said, or what she said, it is unnecessary for the reader to know; only this, that when the two walked back to the cottage, Maude said to her mother, "I am to marry Mr. Gordon in June, and you will spend the summer in our old home, and John will go to college in the fall."

It was very bad taste in Max to select the 20th of June for his wedding-day, and she should suppose he would remember 20 years ago when Grace Raynor was to have been his bride, Mrs. Marshall-More said to Archie, when commenting upon her brother's approaching marriage, which did not altogether please her. She would far rather that he should remain single, for Archie's sake and her own. And still it was some comfort that she was to have for her sister one so famous as Maude was getting to be. So she went up to Merrivale early in June and opened her own house, and patronized Maude and Mrs. Graham, and made many suggestions with regard to the wedding, which she would have had very fine and elaborate had they allowed it. But Maude's perference was for a quiet affair with only a few of her more intimate friends present. And she had her way. Archie was there, of course, and made himself master of ceremonies. He had received the news of Maude's engagement with a keener pang of regret than he had thought it possible for him to feel, and suddenly woke up to a consciousness that he had always had a greater liking for Maude than he supposed. But it was too late now, and casting his regrets to the winds he made the best of it, and was apparently the gayest of all the guests who, on the morning of the 20th of June assembled in Mrs. Graham's parlor, where Max and Maude were made one.

Aunt Maude, Archie called her, as he kissed her two or three times and asked if she remembered the time she cried on the neck of the brown ox, and declared her hatred of Max and all relations.

"But I did not know him then; did I, Maux?" Maude said; and the bright face lifted to her husband told that she was far from hating him now.

There was a short trip to the west, and a flying visit to Richland and the Cedars, so fraught with memories of the past and of Grace, whose grave on the wedding-day had been one mass of flowers which Max had ordered put there. "Her wedding-garment," he said to Maude, to whom he told what he had done. "She seems very near to me now, and I am sure she is glad."

* * * * *

It was a lovely July day, when Max and Maude returned from their bridal journey and took possession of the old home at Spring Farm, where Mrs. Graham met them with a very different expression upon her face from what it wore when we first saw her there years ago. The place was hers again, to enjoy as long as she lived; and if it had been beautiful when she left it, she found it far more so now, for Mrs. Marshall-More's improvements, for which Max's money had paid, were mostly in good taste, and never had the grounds looked better than when Max and Maude drove into them on this July afternoon. Although a little past their prime there were roses everywhere, and the grassy walks, which Mrs. Marshall-More had substituted in place of gravel, where freshly cut, and smooth and soft as velvet, while the old-fashioned flowers Maude loved so well were filling the air with their perfume and the birds in the maple tree seemed carolling a welcome to the bride, so full were they of song.

And here we shall leave her, happy in her old home and in her husband's love, which is more to her than all the world beside. Whether she will ever write another book we do not know. Probably she will, for where the brain seeds have taken root it is hard to dislodge them, and Maude often hears around her the voices of new ideal friends, to whom she may sometime be compelled to give shape and name, as she did to the friends of her childhood.

THE END.

How to Change the Color of Canary Birds

The following is from the proceedings of the Berlin Physiological Society: Starting with the observed fact that canaries fed with Cayenne pepper acquire a ruddy plumage, Dr. Sauermann has based upon it a scientific investigation of canaries, fowls, pigeons, and other birds. From these he has obtained the following results. Feeding with pepper only produces an effect when given to young birds before they moult; the color of the feathers of older birds cannot be affected. Moisture facilitates the change of color to a ruddy hue, which is again discharged under the influence of sunlight and cold. A portion of the constituents of Cayenne pepper is quite inactive as, for instance, piperin and several extractives, similarly the red coloring matter alone of the pepper has no effect on the color of the feathers. It is rather the triolein, which occurs in the pepper in large quantities, together with the characteristic pigment, which brings about the change of color by holding the red pigment of the pepper in solution. Glycerine may be used instead of triolein to bring about the same result. The same statement holds good with regard to the feeding of birds with aniline colors. The red pigment of the pepper is also stored in the egg yolk as well as in the feathers. The first appearance of the pigment in the yolk may be observed as a colored ring four days after the commencement of feeding with the pigment dissolved in fat; after a further two days' feeding the whole yolk is colored. Dr. Sauermann is still engaged in carrying on his researches.

On the Hotel Porch.

"Mamma, dear, do you know you've got 29 pins in the back of your dress?"

"Good gracious, child, how do you know?"

"Why, I've just pulled them out."

What We Are Coming To.

Justice (a few years hence)—What is this lady arrested for?

Park policeman—Vandalism. Her skirts knocked over a blade of grass.

Justice—Madam, have you anything to say before sentence of death is passed?—New York Weekly.

A Gloomy Outlook.

Old Friend—"Got a star for next season?"

Theatrical Manager (gloomily)—"No; all the babies are engaged, and the woman who killed that Chicago broker won't go on the stage."

HEADACHE, fickle appetite, failure of eyesight, tube casts in urine, frequent desire to urinate, especially at night, cramps in calf of legs, gradual loss of flesh and dropsical swelling—any one or more of the above disorders are symptoms of advanced kidney disease or Bright's Disease, and Warner's Safe Cure should be freely used according to directions. Dr. Wm. H. Thompson, of the city of New York, says: "More adults are carried off in this country by chronic kidney disease than by any other one malady except consumption." The late Dr. Dio Lewis says, over his own signature, in speaking of Warner's Safe Cure: "If I found myself the victim of a serious kidney trouble, I should use your preparation."

CHOLERA INFANTUM.

The Dread Disease May be Prevented and Cured by Proper Treatment.

IMPROPER FOOD ITS PRIME CAUSE.

The "Mechanical Process" Practised by One of New York's Leading Physicians.

"With proper treatment and care taken in time, there is no reason why the most severe case of cholera infantum or summer complaint in young children should not be speedily and effectively cured."

This statement was made by a prominent physician of this city, who is at the head of the department of children's diseases in one of New York's largest medical institutions, to a reporter of the Evening World.

For ten years in charge of the children's department of the largest dispensary in town, and later as an instructor and professor, he has made the subject a profound study, and an account of some of the results of his wide experience and research, which he gave to the reporter, are as full of interest to the public as to the medical profession, in which he is regarded as an authority in his specialty.

As every one knows, cholera infantum is the source of great mortality among children, greater even than from all other causes combined, especially in the large cities. Unless the disease can be arrested by medicinal treatment before it has reached a certain stage, children attacked by it were generally given up as hopeless cases. Nothing could save them, it was said.

This is the result of failing to treat the disease in the right manner, and of erroneous views that have prevailed as to its immediate cause. It has commonly been supposed that because the greatest mortality from the disease occurred during the hot months of July and August the prostrating effect of the heat upon the feeble infants was the direct cause. For that reason they have been wrapped in red flannel bandages and dosed with medicines until it is a wonder that any of them ever got well. This theory, however, has been pretty thoroughly exploded by the authority which has been quoted.

By a series of elaborate charts, showing the variations in temperature for the summer months for a period of ten years from 1878 to 1888 compared with the death rate from cholera infantum compiled by himself from the records of the Bureau of Vital Statistics for the same period, he proves that while the death rate follows the temperature to a large extent it has frequently been much larger than the average in very cool seasons, and, vice versa, in the hottest weather a lower death rate is found.

The heat is, therefore, only an indirect cause of the disease. The real cause is the decomposition in the child's stomach of the food which it is given, the great majority of the victims being brought up on the bottle.

Scientists know that milk will absorb germs and bacteria floating in the air much more readily than water, and that by the time milk reaches the city and is given to the babies it is filled with these destructive germs of disease.

That is what causes all the trouble. The entire digestive apparatus gets out of order. Food remains in the stomach sometimes for days without being digested, and whatever is given to the child to nourish it only aggravates the trouble. Drugs are given to kill these germs, but it takes more medicine to destroy them than it does to kill the child, and as for chalk mixtures bacteria enjoy no better diet. They grow and flourish on it.

What, then, is the remedy for what has formerly, in nine cases out of ten, proved a fatal disease?

It is what the professor calls the mechanical treatment. He simply washes out the children's stomachs with lukewarm water, which at once gets rid of the cause of the illness by removing the decomposed and indigestible matter.

It is a sort of laundrying process that is simple but effective, as the result of a single year's experience at the clinic will show. Of nearly five hundred cases treated during the last year and a half by this method only three deaths occurred, and since the beginning of the hot season this year in not a single case has it been unsuccessful.

Children have been brought to the clinic in the very last stages of the disease, where the eyes were fixed and glassy, the nose pinched, the face drawn, and every indication of the near approach of coma. After the brain is affected and coma is complete there is no way of saving life.

The most remarkable thing about the treatment is that as soon as the washing begins the child at once revives, and when it is over in falls into a natural sleep, and then it is only a question of proper care when it will completely recover.

The process is applied on the syphon principle. The apparatus consists of a metal receptacle for the warm water, with a graduated glass tube in front, showing how much water it contains, and a long rubber tube attached to the lower side. In the end of the rubber tube is inserted a short glass tube, with a stop-cock that works by pressure of the thumb in one end. To the other end is attached a soft, velvet-eye rubber catheter, which forms the termination of the tube.

The catheter is passed easily down the throat of the child to the stomach, when the stop-cock is pressed and the warm water from the receptable above flows through until the stomach is full. Then the tube is detached and the outer end held down, when the water will flow in the opposite direction.

The operation has been performed for many years as a remedy for dyspepsia, but not until a comparatively recent date for cholera infantum, especially in this country. Prof. Epstein, of Prague, Austria, was the first to recommend it, in 1880.

For the past few years the disinfection of the stomach and intestines and their contents has been attempted by means of drugs. Naphtholin, benzoate and salicylate of soda have been tried and recommended. All of these remedies may be well enough, but they often fail, if they are retained, which generally does not occur as long as nausea is present.

These drugs do not check the vomiting. They can only destroy a very small portion of the germs of decomposition, as they are hardly strong enough and as they only reach the lower pyloric end of the stomach; while the germs and the tyrotoxicon may adhere in safety to the upper and lateral walls of the organ without ever coming in contact with the antiseptics sent after them.

It is very different with stomach washing. The whole stomach is filled with warm water; the latter is churned and splashed all over its walls by the movements of the child (if necessary brought about by shaking the baby), and every particle of obnoxious material, whether solid or fluid, whether microbe or chemical poison, is immediately drowned in the fluid and within a few seconds carried out of the body, where it can do no more harm. Vomiting and nausea have ceased once and for all.

The Professor, however, is a firm believer in preventive measures, and thinks that the real way to diminish the terrible mortality among the children from this cause is by the spread of information among the parents as to the hygienic treatment of the children and the preparation of their food.

Cleanliness, of course, comes first. Bottle-fed babies should never be given cow's milk without previously preparing it. The germs that it contains are the chief cause of the disease. There is a process called sterilizing milk, which is nothing more nor less than boiling it and then keeping it air-tight. Boiling will destroy all the germs.

Among ignorant people not even the boiling of the milk is thought of by the mother, but the child is permitted to drink the milk just as it comes from the can.

Children are also given all sorts of things which are not good for them by ignorant parents, which will contribute to bring on summer complaint, but the milk difficulty is the chief one.

A curious fact has been brought out by the charts and tables, already mentioned, prepared by the professor, which he used in his demonstrations in the clinic. It is that warm weather (not hot), either dry or moist, showing a minimum daily temperature of not less than 60 degrees F., brings on the epidemic appearance of cholera infantum invariably in every year, irrespective of the height of the maximum temperature, as in the latter part of June of nearly every year.

Again, summer complaint loses its epidemic character as soon as the maximum daily temperature remains below 60 degrees F., as in the latter half of October of nearly every year.

It has been ascertained by chemists and analysts that it requires a continuous temperature of at least 60 degrees F. to produce germs and bacteria in cow's milk and to develop organisms of decomposition.

Here is the real explanation of the apparent effect of hot weather upon children in developing summer complaint. The heat is really responsible for the disease, but only indirectly, in affecting the only food which very young children and infants can take. Nothing could be plainer or simpler than this.

Another very curious fact is that in the mortality tables prepared the death rate from cholera infantum in New York city has for every year been shown to be just twice as great in July as in August.

Not long ago when this fact was placed before a large body of medical men, it excited a great deal of surprise, for every one supposed that the disease was more prevalent in August than in July, as the weather then was usually more oppressive.

Even Dr. John T. Nagle, Register of Vital Statistics, was under the impression that this was the case until he was shown the figures which had been compiled from the records of his own office. No one could explain why this should be so, though several very profound opinions were advanced by members of the profession present.

When it was suggested by the compiler of the figures that so many children died in July that there were not enough left to keep up the same death rate in August, several of the scientists present recalled the time-honored chestnut about Columbus and the egg.—N.Y. World.

"Lady-Bug, Lady-Bug."

Those people in this vicinity who are in any way interested in the cultivation of flowers or fruit, and who, to protect the same, are in the habit of destroying that little member of the entomological family known as the lady-bug, vedolia cardinalis, make a serious mistake. This gaily decorated little insect is one of man's best friends in that its sole mission is to destroy a destroyer. The little green lice that have been such a pest to vegetation this year that have prevented thousands of bushels of wheat from ripening, that have infested the rose bush and the apple tree, the tender house plant and the sturdy oak, is the lady-bug's special prey. This little insect has become so valuable to the horticulturists of California in consuming the cottony cushion scale that they have gone to cultivating them. One man in Los Angeles covered five of his orange trees suffering from the scale with tents, and turned in among them some 7,000 lady-bugs that he had obtained from the lady-bug breeding grounds. The effect was almost magical. The scales disappeared like frost under a warm spring sun. Horticulturists in the Ohio Valley have not hitherto appreciated the services of the little summer visitor.—Cincinnati Times-Star.

A Stumbling Block.

Rev. Primrose—Your mother doesn't seem as fond of you as she might be.

Little Johnnie—No, sir; she says if it hadn't been for me, she'd have had sister married years ago.

The "Reference Handbook of the Medical Science," speaking of kidney diseases, says: "Often symptoms on the part of other organs, palpitation, dyspepsia, difficult breathing, headaches, or weak vision first impel the patient to seek advice." The symptoms mislead both the physician and patient. The only safe method of treatment is a faithful use of Warner's Safe Cure. It not only secures healthy action of the kidneys, but cures the symptoms of disease.

—Over $250,000,000 in cash, raised on securities of a face value of about $400,000,000, have thus far been expended on the Panama Canal.

LADY DOCTORS IN INDIA.

Their Great Value Now Fully Appreciated by Natives.

In India lady doctors are now familiar to us, and although at first they may have been somewhat ridiculed by those who could not appreciate their value, they are fast making their presence felt for good in almost every corner of the land. So far as the native women of the country are concerned it is gratifying to note that their success in all branches of college education is progressing to the entire satisfaction of their professors. Not only have they proved themselves to be generally well fitted for the arduous duties attendant on medical studies, but they have in some cases succeeded beyond all ordinary expectation. Bombay, Madras, the Northwest Provinces and the Punjaub all return flattering reports on the subject, and when we say that a class of female students can average over 700 marks out of 1,000 in a surgical examination, as we hear has recently been the case, little can be said against their power or skill or aptitude for gaining knowledge in one of the most important branches in the medical profession. Indeed, it appears not unlikely that women in India may prove themselves by no means inferior to men in most branches of the practice of medicine, if the progress made by native females in hospital work may be taken as a criterion. In many cases they have proven themselves superior to the male students in college examinations, and in no way behind them in application, power of reasoning and resource. The fact that much of their success is due to the great interest taken in their studies by their lecturers and professors is not without a certain special significance.—Englishman's Overland Mail.

The Canal of Joseph.

How many of the engineering works of the nineteenth century, remarks Engineering, will there be in existence in the year 6000? Very few, we fear, and still less those that will continue in the far-off age to serve a useful purpose. Yet there is at least one great undertaking conceived and executed by an engineer which during the space of four thousand years has never ceased its office, on which the life of a fertile province absolutely depends to-day. We refer to the Bahr Jousuf—the canal of Joseph—built, according to tradition, by the son of Jacob, and which constitutes not the least of the many blessings he conferred on Egypt during the years of his prosperous rule. This canal took its rise from the Nile at Asiut, and ran nearly parallel with it for nearly 250 miles, creeping along under the western cliffs of the Nile valley, with many a bend and winding, until at length it gained an eminence, as compared with the river bed, which enabled it to turn westward through a narrow pass and enter a district which was otherwise shut off from the fertilising floods on which all vegetation in Egypt depends.

Notes from Scotland.

The Greenland seal and whale fishing has this season been very successful, and most of the Dundee and Peterhead vessels have got remunerative cargoes.

Professor Struthers, who has occupied the Chair of Anatomy in Aberdeen University since 1863, has intimated his intention of retiring in consequence of failing health.

The Scotch Disestablishment Council has issued a circular calling attention to Mr. Gladstone's recent utterances in regard to Scotch Disestablishment, and urging that the time has come when the subject must be firmly pressed by the friends of Disestablishment.

The death is announced of Mr. Edward Fiddes, of Aberdeen, and manager of the North of Scotland Bank, in which institution Mr. Fiddes had been employed since its establishment in 1836.

Negotiations are in progress for the amalgamation of the Glasgow & Southwestern Railway Company and the North British Railway Company in Scotland, on the basis of a 4 per cent. perpetual preferential dividend to the shareholders of the former company.

Novelties in Parisian Sunshades.

Some of the Paris parasols are startling in the novelty of their styles. One is of white feathers with plumes half a yard long. Another is made of buttercups, the flowers appearing to climb upward from the edge toward the ferule. A thick hedge of blossoms fringes the parasol, which has been made to match a buttercup bonnet, to be worn with a white silk dress scarfed with yellow silk sashes. The designs upon some of them are of the eccentric order, consisting of what looks like forked lightning, or Catharine wheels, or the trees in Dore's illustrations of Dante's poems.

Society in the West.

Mrs. Gotham—"So you live in Kansas City? I suppose you know Mrs. Van Astor who moved there from New York?"

Mrs. DeBoom—"Not intimately. The fact is she is not in my set. She associates with very respectable people, of course—lawyers, preachers, bankers, manufacturers and such folks—but she has not been admitted into the real estate circle."—New York Weekly.

A Trifling Affair.

Mr. Shawmut—I understand, Miss Kaktus, that there was something in the nature of a personal altercation between your escort and young Mr. Outfit at the Red Fork ball last evening.

Miss Kaktus—Nothing more than a passing scrap, Mr. Shawmut. Neither gentleman had his gun.

—He—And you are sure that I am the first and only man who ever kissed you? She—Of course I am sure. You do not doubt my word, do you? He—Of course I do not doubt you, my darling. I love you too madly, too devotedly for that. But why, oh, why did you reach for the reins the very instant I ventured to put one arm around you if you had never been there before?

She—Uncle Chawles, which is the best to have, in your opinion, muscle or brains? Uncle Charles—I don't know. Of course, a collegiate education is a good thing for a young fellow, but when a man gets out into the world, I tell you he needs brains.

—The man who has the most fun in life is most instrumental in making others have a good time. There is no virtue in melancholy piety.

THE NEW ARCHBISHOP.

Something About Archbishop Lynch's Successor.

The Right Rev. John Walsh, Bishop of London, who has been elected Archbishop of Toronto in place of the late Archbishop Lynch, was born in the parish of Mooncoin, county Kilkenny, on the 24th of May, 1830. From an early age he felt a great desire to enter the ministry. Accordingly, after having completed an extensive preliminary course of science and classics, he entered St. John's College, Waterford, where he studied philosophy and a portion of his theology with success and distinction. In the fall of 1853 Bishop Walsh carried out his intention of serving God on a foreign mission and left home and friends and native land. Arriving in Canada he entered the Seminary of St. Sulpice, Montreal, and, together with the late Father Synnott, Father Hobin, of Toronto, and several other ecclesiastics of Irish birth, finished his divinity course with credit to himself and satisfaction to his superiors.

He received tonsure at the hands of Archbishop Baillargeon, who also consecrated him bishop. On the first of November, 1854, he was ordained priest by Bishop de Charbonnel. Brock was his first mission, in which he spent nearly two years. In 1857 he was appointed to the pastoral charge of St. Mary's parish. For a short time he discharged the same duty at St. Paul's. After the consecration of Bishop Lynch he was appointed rector of the cathedral, and was again reinstated as pastor of St. Mary's, where he remained until November, 1867, when he surrendered up his charge to enter upon his retreat for consecration.

Father Walsh enjoyed the reputation among the clergy of being a sound and deeply-read theologian, well versed in the sacred Scriptures and canon law, and an eloquent speaker. He was consecrated Bishop of Sandwich in St. Michael's Cathedral on the 10th of November, 1867, and was installed in the cathedral of Sandwich four days later. In January, 1868, Bishop Walsh, by consent of the Holy See, removed the Episcopal residence to London, and since the following year has maintained the title of Bishop of London. Bishop Walsh visited Rome in 1875, and since that time has quietly superintended his charge.

HICCOUGHS AND SPASMS.

Means by Which Two Unpleasant Things Can be Stopped.

As a cure for hiccoughs a correspondent of the New York Medical Record writes: "Drinking water, as slowly as it can be possibly swallowed, for ten or fifteen minutes continuously, seldom fails to relieve the paroxysms in the otherwise healthy person. In a recent severe case of pneumonia in an adult alarming symptoms of prostration, with a feeble irregular pulse and almost constant hiccough, on the seventh day yielded to two subcutaneous injections of one fourth grain of morphine and one one hundred and fiftieth grain of atropine, at an interval of 12 hours, after ammonia, whiskey and digitalis had been faithfully given for 48 hours without avail.

Dr. Amos Sawyer of Hillsborough, Illinois, writes: "In two cases where every other remedy has been tried, including the continuous electrical current, without avail, the administration of a fresh infusion of pæonia root—I presume that the fluid extract would answer the same purpose—given every two hours, afforded relief in eight and twelve hours respectively. That this remedy possesses anti-spasmodic properties the above-named cases seem to indicate, but from one or two instances we cannot safely infer the whole, and further trial will be necessary before its value in this complication can be established."

Whetting the Divorce Shears.

A Wednesday's Chicago despatch says: It has been the practice of the courts here to hold that an applicant for divorce must be a resident of this State and must appear in person. Both these requirements were waived to day in the case of Mary Gottschalk, a resident of Pennsylvania. She was never in Chicago, and on her affidavit that her husband had deserted her for two years, during which time he had lived in Chicago. She was granted a divorce. Her attorney secured this result by fishing up a former forgotten decision by the State Superior court rendered twenty years ago, in which the court held that in the contemplation of the law the residence of the wife follows that of the husband, and desertion for the period of two years by the husband residing in the State, although commenced in a foreign jurisdiction will enable a wife to obtain a divorce.

Speed of Thought.

It takes about two-fifths of a second to call to mind a country in which a well-known town is situated, or the language in which a familiar author wrote, says the New York Commercial. We can think of the name of the next month in half the time we need to think of the name of the last month. It takes on the average one-third of a second to add numbers consisting of one digit, and half a second to multiply them. A letter can be seen more quickly than a word, but we are so used to reading aloud that the process has become automatic, and a word can be read with greater ease and in less time than a letter can be named. Mental processes, however, take place more slowly in children, in the aged and in the uneducated.

The Young Know Everything.

Husband—Well, I believe I'll have to go to the public library. I can't find in my encyclopædia what I want.

Wife—Is it very important?

H.—Yes, dear, it is very important. I cannot finish my article without it. But in the public library I think I will be able to find the authorities that I want.

W.—Hadn't you better wait, dear, till John comes home from the grammar school? He might be able to give you the information you want.

Husband faints dead away.—Boston Courier.

"I must say," said the young man who had sat down on a bent pin, "that I don't see the point of a practical joke like that." "Perhaps," replied the lady on whom he was calling, "it wasn't intended that you should."

—Edison is just now trying to perfect a plan for taking your picture by wire.

COMMON SENSE IN DIET.

You May Survive Youthful Gorging, but Beware in Your Old Age.

There is in human nature infinite diversity of power and endurance in the general and nervous energy, and in digestion and assimilation; and a man of high-strung nervous temperament, hearing a temperance orator describing the effects of alcohol, might cap it all by similar effects of tea, "the cup that cheers and not inebriates." Even the faculty seldom appear to recognize the injurious results of this refreshing beverage. The poet Cowper seems to have been its slave and victim. Coleridge abused its use and took to laudanum. The "English Opium-eater," well describes its bad result. The Chinese as a nation are tea-drinkers and addicted to the other subtle drug. The alternation of excitement and depression in the votaries of tea is evidence of its unsuitability for many people as a stimulant. Melancholia and religious mania are often to be traced to its habitual use. The question of the use of any kind of food, stimulating or otherwise, is entirely personal. To say that because one man is injured by excess another man should perfectly abstain, is most absurd. Probably more men are injured by excessive eating than by excess in alcohol, and are we therefore bound, for the encouragement and aid of those who need conversion from excess, to cease to eat at all of things well flavored? To say that those who are not injured should abstain is but to make a law without the due preamble. Men vary, not from one another only, but they differ from themselves in different circumstances and at various periods of life. There is no absolute rule, respecting any food or drink, for all men; one man is not to be controlled by other men in his entirely and strictly personal affairs, but each man is to be "fully persuaded in his own mind." Each mind, however, should be open to persuasion; and persuasion in the question of habitual food should be distinctly of an experimental sort. Each man is provided with intelligence for his own preservation; but the pity is that men neglect this precious gift of individual mind in their peculiar concerns. They do as others do. They eat and drink with freedom, while they are so young and active that the system overcomes the injurious attack, but as men advance a little further into life, and are not quite so agile, then begin the troubles that tea, coffee, alcohol and many kinds of even simple food and stimulants and condiments inflict upon the careless and the inconsiderate as well as on the intemperate and immoderate consumer. Each man should discover for himself what, and how much, and when to eat and drink, at several periods, and in the varied conditions of his life his organism must be recognized by its possessor as a healthy, life-long study and a happy care. —Quarterly Review.

Her Choice.

Amy—I have two suitors I love equally well, what can I do

Lulu—Who are they

Amy—Edward, an artist, and Arthur, a reporter.

Lulu—Take Arthur.

Amy—Why?

Lulu—You goose, he can describe your trousseau and the wedding in his paper.

Amy—So he can, dear Arthur.

He Knew a Beau by Sight.

Tommy—You want to see my sister, don't you Mr. Featherly Featherly—You are a smart little boy, Tommy. How do you know that?

Tommy—'Cause when you came you asked if pa was in, just like sister's other beau.

Honors Easy With Her.

First Lady—I sympathize with you in the loss of your husband. I am afraid you will find it hard work to win your way alone in this cold world

Second Lady—Thanks, but I guess I'll get on all right. I have belonged to a church choir for five years.

She Was Qualified.

Manager—You want to go on the stage, you say Mrs. Terwilliger. Have you any dramatic ability?

Mrs. Terwilliger—Dramatic ability! I should say? I have $80,000 worth of diamonds, a husband who abuses me, and I'm going to get a divorce.

Manager—I'll take you, at a salary of $1,000 a week.

An Old Brute.

Miss Prynne—I wonder why they always call ships "she?"

Mr. Flynne—Because they are all crafts.

Taste Not: Smell Not.

He—Young Algernon Browne smelt of gin yesterday.

She—The dear boy! so long as he didn't taste of it!

—Ye editor was married yesterday to Miss Mary Sellet, one of the most charming ladies we have ever met. Those owing us on subscriptions and job work will greatly facilitate the purchase of rag carpets, cord wood, baby carriages, etc., by settling at once.—Dexter Sentinel.

BY THE SALT SEA WAVES.

She fell in love with her harbor buoy;
She couldn't have loved him more
Yet one day jealousy spoilt their joy—
He caught her hugging the shore!

They fixed it up in the good old way,
As you can determine with ease,
For her captain wrote me the other day,
"She's enjoying a smacking breeze."

The largest ship in the British Navy, the Trafalgar, launched two years ago, has at last tried her engines, with success. She is 345 feet long, 73 feet beam, and 12,818 horse power drove her 17 28 knots.

—Women who elope with coachmen probably think that class of men will make stable husbands.

—"Your uncle is quite close in money matters," remarked Fangle to his wife. "Yes, he's a regular money maniac," she replied.

—A Pennsylvania editor has discovered that everything in nature is playful. He says: "The lightning plays, the wind whistles, the thunder rolls, the snow flies, the waves leap and the fields smile. Even the trees shoot and the rivers and streams run."

GEO. MITCHELL,

BANKER,

FLESHERTON.

DRAFTS BOUGHT AND SOLD.

Special Attention paid to the collection Notes and Accounts, 2nd door North Richardson & Co's.

The Local News.

What is Happening in Our Own Vicinity.

The Creemore Star will not twinkle next week.

Osprey Council meets at Badgeros on Saturday next.

Mrs. W. J. Bellamy is visiting in the vicinity of Nottawa.

The Collingwood Bulletin commenced its 20th volumu last week.

Mr. and Mrs. Cowling, of Woodbridge, are the guests of Mr. Beecroft.

Mrs. C. W. Chadwick, of Stratford, Ont., is visiting relatives in this vicinity.

Division Court will meet in Flesherton on the 20th of the present month.

Read the advertisement of properties which Mr. Hogg offers for sale in another column.

A few good animals were offered at the fair on Monday, but buyers were more plentiful than cattle.

It is expected that Priceville will play Flesherton baseball club on Friday next on the agricultural grounds here.

The neatest show prize list which has been received at this office comes from the establishment of the Streetsville Review.

In M. Richardson & Co's large advertisement last week "gray and broadcloth cottons" should have read "gray and bleached cottons."

A game of baseball was played in Markdale on Tuesday between the Markdale and Glantyre clubs. The score was 23 to 39 in favor of Markdale.

Three Flesherton pupils, out of six who wrote at the recent entrance examinations, passed with flying colors, which speaks well for our principal, Mr. Irwin.

Annual injector free with each bottle of Shiloh's catarrh remedy. Price 50 cts. For sale at the Medical Hall.

Store for sale,—a general business in County Grey in fine farming section, stock strictly first class and staple, good opening. Terms easy, address office of this paper.

Rev. Mr. McLeod, of Priceville, left for his new charge in Glengarry County on Monday evening last. A large number of friends and well-wishers accompanied him to the station.

The Artemesia voters' list is now in the hands of the clerk, as will be seen by advertisement elsewhere. Electors should examine said list, and if any errors or omissions have been made, take proper measures to have the same corrected.

Why will you cough when Shiloh's cure will give immediate relief. Price 10 cts., 50 cts., and $1. For sale at the Medical Hall.

Mr. Miles Thistlethwaite, near the station, raised a fine barn on Wednesday of last week, 50 x 60 feet. Mr. Angus McLeod was the framer, and his work does him credit. We learn from Mr. McLeod that this was the thirteenth building which he has framed this summer.

Mr. R. Cook, at the station, has just returned from a visit to Manitoulin Island. He reports the crops on the island to be extraordinarily fine. Mr. Cook says the island is nice in summer, but he would not care to be cooped up there during the winter.

Shiloh's catarrh remedy—a positive cure for catarrh, diptheria and canker-mouth. For sale at the Medical Hall.

From a few maxims published in an exchange for the benefit of business men we glean the following paragraph: If you are a merchant don't advertise in the home papers, but buy a rubber stamp and use that—it may save a few dimes and make the paper look as if it was published by amateurs in a one horse town.

The R.N. of T. picnic to Eugenia on Thursday last was most enthusiastically enjoyed by the fifty people who took part in it. The only disappointment was that suffered by the non-arrival of the Markdale livery rig, which had been engaged for the occasion, and as usual with a great many things Markdalian, did not fulfil their promise. The Advance took his little fish pole along and fished the beautiful afternoon away among the rocks, returning with 31 nice speckled. The day could not have been pleasanter for picnic purposes.

Harvest Home.

The Methodist Church officials intend holding a harvest home in the near future.

Garden Party.

Best of the season, to be held on the spacious grounds of Mrs. George Dinwoody, Wednesday, August 14th, given by the young ladies of the Methodist Church. Admission 15c.

Notice to the Public.

I am in a position to do all kinds of cotton weaving, such as tweeds, flannels, full cloth and blankets. Rag carpet done to order by J. B. Barkley, weaver, next house to the Presbyterian Church

Judge Macpherson Dead.

Judge Macpherson, senior Judge of the County of Grey, died at his residence at two o'clock Sunday morning. He has held the position of Judge for a number of years and was a member of the Masons. The funeral took place Tuesday afternoon at three o'clock.

The Bold Campers.

The campers have nearly all returned. The very cold weather of the last few days made them wend their steps homeward. Tommy Hollinger and Fred Armstrong did not succeed in bringing home the bear which they were after, but through superhuman exertions they managed to capture a fierce wild baby rabbit, just able to stand alone, and a kitten that had its eyes about half open. The latter they found near a sawmill in a wild cat's nest. It was newly hatched, and they left 3 other eggs in the nest which were just "pipping."

Newspaper Duns.

We suppose many people think newspaper men are presistent dunners. By way of comparison let us suppose that a farmer raises 1000 bushels of wheat a year, and he sells this out to 1000 persons in all parts of the country, a great portion of them saying, "I will hand you the dollar in a short time." The farmer don't want to be small, and says all right. Soon his thousand bushels of grain are gone, but he has little to show for it, and he than realizes that he has frittered away his whole wheat crop and that its value to him is due in a thousand little driblets, consequently he is seriously embarrassed in his business because his debtors each owing only $1, treat it as a small matter, and think it would not help much. Continue this kind business year in and year out, as the publishers does and how long would he or could he stand it? A moment's thought will convince any one that a publisher has cause for persistent dunning.

A Markdale Industry.

Last Friday while in Markdale The Advance took occasion to visit the stove foundry of T. L. Moffatt & Sons. The foundry has been in existence some eight years, but it is only lately that Mr. Moffatt has confined himself almost exclusively to the manufacture of stoves. The premises have gradually been enlarged, until at present they occupy a large surface of ground, and are fitted up with complete arrangements for manufacturing the special lines in which they are engaged. The Messrs. Moffatt manufacture eight or ten different styles of the "Pearl" line of stoves. Their foundry has a capacity of about five stoves per day. We had the pleasure of being shown through the show rooms, and were very agreeably surprised at the beauty and excellence of the manufactured articles. Markdale has great reason to be proud of its expanding stove industry and of the energy and pluck displayed by the Messrs. Moffatt in founding a business of such proportions in that place.

A Presentation.

The Presbyterian congregation of Priceville met in the new church Friday, the 2nd inst., and after singing a few appropriate pieces, Mr. John McArthur read the following address:

BELOVED PASTOR: It is with much regret that we are now called upon, in the providence of God, to seperate our connection as minister and people. On the 21st day of this month you shall have been 11 years with us. During this number of years you have approved yourself a "workman that needeth not to be ashamed." You have faithfully watched and warned us of the danger of neglecting the "one thing needful" and have always striven to point us to the Saviour, who alone can give life and peace. In this your removal, we shall lose a friend and faithful minister of the Gospel, whose name will not easly be forgotten.

We shall miss you from our homes, to which you have been always welcome, and we pray that your faithful labor among us will redound to the glory of God, and that when time shall be no more we shall meet in yon fair land where the friends of Christ shall part no more. We shall also miss you as a loyal citizen who has taken an active part in our social and educational prosperity. It is therefore with much sorrow that we now bid you farewell, and in so doing we beg to show you, our most esteemed friend, our appreciation to yourself and your esteemed partner, by presenting you with a purse containing $67.50. Accept this token of our warmest attachment to yourself and family, and may the Lord go with you to your future field of labor and crown your efforts with much success.

Mr. McLeod then made a suitable reply to the above address, in which he thanked the people for their kindness to himself and family and after referring touchingly to his labor among them for the last 11 years, he bid them farewell, expressing a hope that the "Lord of the Harvest" would soon send them a faithful laborer who would carry on the work of Christ with more success than he did.

For dyspepsia and liver complaint you have a printed guarantee on every bottle of Shiloh's vitalizer. It never fails to cure For sale at the Medical Hall.

Grand Union Excursion.

The Forester and A. O. U. W. Lodges of Shelburne and Dundalk intend running a grand excursion to Owen Sound and Wiarton on the civic holiday of both towns, Monday August 19th, 1889. The trip will be made by special train leaving Orangeville at 6:20 a. m., calling at all intermediate stations between there and Owen Sound. Train will leave Shelburne at 7:00 o'clock, Dundalk 7:32, Flesherton 8:00, Markdale 8:15, Chatsworth 8:36, arriving in Owen Sound at 9:45. The trip from Owen Sound to Wiarton will be made by the Steamer Carmona, leaving the Sound at 9:45, arriving in Wiarton at 12:30 p. m., and leaving again at 4:00 o'clock, arriving at the Sound at 6:45. Special train leaves Owen Sound at 8 p. m., for home, reaching Orangeville at 11:10. Tickets from Orangeville, Orangeville Junction, Laurel, Crombies, Shelburne, Melancthon, Corbetton, Dundalk, and Proton at the extremely low rate of $1.25 for adults and 65c. for children. From Flesherton and Markdale $1.00, and 50c. for children. From Berkeley and all other stations north 75c. for adults, children 40c. A concert will be given on board the Steamer by the children of the various Sunday Schools, assisted by the Shelburne Glee Club. Dinner will be served on the Steamer at 25c. each. Tickets good to return next day on paying 25c. extra. The Citizens' Band, of Shelburne, will accompany the party. Baseball and other amusements at Wiarton. Many attractions are being arranged for, to be announced later. A good time is assured, and don't you miss it.!

That hacking cough can be so quickly cured by Shiloh's Cure. We guarantee it. For sale at the Medical Hall.

Shiloh's Cure will immediately relieve Croup, Whooping Cough and Bronchitis. For sale at the Medical Hall.

The Entrance Exams.

Below will be found a complete list of the names of those who passed the late entrance examinations at Dundalk and Markdale, with the total number of marks obtained. The number of marks required to pass was 367.

AT MARKDALE.

	No. of marks obtained
Bigger, Mary M	450.
Brown, Nellie	369.
Henderson, Annie	393.
Keefer, Gertie	435.
Kay, Alexie	377.
Kells, Clara	480.
Mercer, Mary E	448.
Quirk, Mary A	460.
Stafford, Hannah	432.
Strain, Lizzie	377.
Walker, Martha	431.
Wiley, Ellie	465.
Carruthers, Benjamine A	429.
Douglas, Wesley	382.
Dundas, Fred	370.
Mathewson, David	471.
McCoy, Norman	397.
Rutledge, Arthur W	429.
Wright, L. E.	463.

AT DUNDALK.

Hanbury, Maud E	373.
Hunter, Maggie	401.
MacMillan, Nellie	441.
Moorhead, Ella L	531.
Noble, Alla	493.
Bridgewater, Thomas	370.
Douglas, Fred	371.
Hazard, Robert G.	498.

Fall Shows.

Following is a list of the dates of fall fairs in this vicinity.

Name.	Place.	Date.
East Grey	Flesherton	Sept. 23 and 24.
South Grey	Durham	Sept. 24 and 25.
Great Northern	Collingwood	Sept. 25 to 27

Written for the Advance.

In Memory of Brock.

Breath not a dirge where the hero lies sleeping,
Murmur no sigh, ye light winds o'er the glade,
May but the brightest of flowers be keeping
Their watch o'er the spot where Brock's ashes are laid.

Murmur in praises Niagara's dark waters.
Murmur in praises, ye night winds so free.
Never there fell in the midst of the slaughter,
One who was truer or nobler than he.

His was the voice that but victory sounded.
His was the sword that to victory would fly.
His was the heart that unsullied, unbounded.
For country would live and for country would die.

Then breath not a dirge where the hero lies sleeping.
Then murmur no sigh, ye light winds o'er the glade.
Ah let but the brightest of flowers be keeping.
Their watch o'er the spot where his ashes are laid.

VOTERS' LIST.

1889.

Municipality of the Township of Artemesia, County of Grey.

NOTICE is hereby given that I have transmitted or delivered to the persons mentioned in the third and fourth sections of "THE VOTERS' LIST ACT," the copies required by said sections to be so transmitted or delivered of the list made pursuant to said Act of all persons appearing by the last revised Assessment Roll of the said Municipality to be entitled to vote in the said Municipality at Elections for members of the Legislative Assembly and at Municipal Elections; and that said list was first posted up at my office at Flesherton, on the 5th day of August, 1889, and remains there for inspection.

Electors are called upon to examine the said list and if any omissions or any errors are found therein, to take immediate proceedings to have the said errors corrected according to law.

WM. J. BELLAMY,
Clerk of the said Municipality.

Dated this 5th day of August, A. D., 1889.

Friends to the Farmer.

It may be an advantage to point out some of the friends to the farmer, which, consequently, no farmer should destroy or allow to be destroyed. Among those are toads, which are, under all circumstances, the farmer's friend; moles and field mice, probably do a vast deal more of good than harm; all birds, especially robins, wrens, thrushes, orioles, cuckoos, phebes, blue birds, woodpeckers, swallows and cat birds. The destruction of all these and many others, except for scientific purposes, should be made, under very heavy penalties, illegal everywhere. The house sparrow, known better as the English sparrow, is to be rated an exception. This bird is now universally regarded as a nuisance, first, because of its grain and vegetable destroying propensities; secondly, because it drives away insect-destroying birds.

Among insects, many wasps are friends, especially those with a more or less protruding horn or sting at the end of the abdomen. Lady-bugs and lace-wing flies live entirely upon destructive insects, especially plant lice and scale insects, and should never be destroyed. Dragon flies, or devil's darning-needles, are also useful as well as harmless.—Bulletin 16, New Jersey A.C.E.S.

Sleepless nights, made miserable by that terrible cough. Shiloh's Cure is the Remedy for you. For sale at the Medical Hall.

A LITERARY WONDER.—Master Gerald Leslie Marston Pogue, son of W.H Pogue Esq., Merchant of Little Britain, Ont., has suddenly sprung into world wide fame as an author and literateur. He is not yet sixteen years old, having been born on November 6th 1873. When a lad he received a slight sunstroke which partly paralyzed his right hand, so he writes with his left. Being delicate, he studies at home, having a room to himself. His father gratified his taste by purchasing all kinds of books fancied by the lad. Early in June he went to New York and is now engaged on the staff of the Herald at $5000 a year and all expenses paid, to go on a tour around South America and thence to Australia. The father was surprised a few days after his departure to learn the news, and also that his fifteen year old boy was author of two of the most popular novels of the time. His mother often joked him as a dreamer. His first novel published is "A Dreamer of Dreams." The second is "Troth." Both are highly praised by the best London and New York critics. When his father for the first time examined his son's library, he found box on box full of manuscript, a novel here, poetry there. Many of his poems, it seems, have appeared in standard magazines, and articles bearing the name 'Leslie Pogue' are found in the Cornhill Magazine, Harpers, The Century, and others. All this was unknown to the father or mother. He has now a novel in print for which he is to receive $5000 and a royalty. His first newspaper venture was the Johnstown accident. We congratulate the parents and also the youth on their exceeding great fortune. —Lindsay Warder.

Medical.

DR. CARTER.

M.C.P. & S., ONT.

PHYSICIAN, SURGEON, &c.

FLESHERTON.

Office, Strain's block. Residence, [illegible]

J. G. Hutton, M.D.C.M.

Member of the College of Physicians & Surgeons, Ontario.

Enquire at office, one door east of Coker's store or Atkinson's Hotel.

Priceville, Nov. 19, 1888.

DRS. SPROULE & EGO.

MARKDALE ONT.

Office:—Manley's Drug Store.

T.S. SPROULE, M.D., etc. ANGUS EGO, M.D., etc. late of Tottenham, Ont.

Dr. Ego will be found at Markdale House at night

J. P. OTTEWELL,

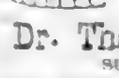
VETERINARY SURGEON.

Graduate of Ontario Vet. College,

RESIDENCE ON COLLINGWOOD STREET Sixth Door East of Presbyterian Church.

FLESHERTON.

Dentistry.



DENTISTRY.

Dr. Thomas Henderson.

SURGEON DENTIST

Gold Medalist and Honor Graduate of R.C.D.S.,

Will visit FLESHERTON, (Marshaw's Hotel) 1 and 2 of each month. Teeth extracted, inserted and filled in the highest styles of the art, at moderate rates.

HEAD OFFICE, 761 YONGE ST., TORONTO.

J. P. MARSHALL,

L. D. S., DENTIST.

Visits Markdale the 1st and 3rd Wednesday of each month.

Flesherton each trip on the day following.

Legal.

J. W. FROST,

Barrister, Solicitor, Conveyancer, &c.

FLESHERTON OFFICE, NEXT POST OFFICE, SPROULE'S BUILDING, ON THURSDAYS.

OWEN SOUND OFFICE, FROST'S BUILDING

P McCULLOUGH,

Barrister, Solicitor, &c.

Office, over McFarland's Store Markdale. Money to Loan.

Business Cards.

John W. Armstrong,

FLESHERTON, CO. GREY.

DIVISION COURT CLERK, COMMISSIONER R. R., Conveyancer, &c. Agent for purchased sale of lands. Appraiser for C. L. C. Com and F. P. B. & S. Society. Money to Loan on the most reasonable terms. ISSUER OF MARRIAGE LICENSES. NOTARY PUBLIC.

MONEY TO LOAN.

AT LOWEST CURRENT RATES

on Town or Farm Property.

[illegible]MUDE,
Flesherton.

Mr. Wm. Karstedt,

Stone Mason, Bricklayer and Plasterer.

MATERIAL FURNISHED

Estimates given free. Ornamental Plastering a [illegible]

[illegible] one door south of Advance Office.

W. J. BELLAMY

TWP. CL[illegible] ARTEMESIA.

CONVEYANCER, [illegible] COMMISSIONER, INSURANCE AGT. &C

DEEDS, MORTGAGES, [illegible]S, &c., prepared and properly executed in first-class style. Insurance effected at lowest rates. Money to lend at lowest rates.

R. J. Sproule.

POSTMASTER, Flesherton, Commissioner in B. R., Conveyancer, Auctioneer, Conveyancer, Appraiser and Money Lender. Real Estate and Insurance Agent. Deeds, Mortgages [illegible] Wills drawn up and Valuations [illegible] most notice. Auction Sales attended [illegible] any part of the County. Money to lend at lowest rates of interest. [illegible] attended to with promptness [illegible]. Charges low. Agent for the [illegible] Steamship Company. Cheap [illegible] Flesherton to Liverpool, Glasgow [illegible] by of the British Ports. [illegible] to visit England, Scotland or Ireland please ask rates before purchasing [illegible] tickets elsewhere.

House and Lot for Sale.

A good [illegible] Markham [illegible] erected [illegible] and lot [illegible] yard, apple trees, fruit trees, etc. This [illegible] S. VANDUSEN, Flesherton. and lot, opposite the B. Flesherton, is now The house is large lot, good stable and all on the premises. rare bargain. Apply

Competition Defied!

PRICES CHALLENGED

THE PEOPLE

Wonder!

How we can sell so cheap and at the same time keep up the standard quality.

OUR MOTTO IS

SMALL PROFITS

—AND—

QUICK RETURNS.

And the large trade we are doing proves that our efforts to please and give satisfaction are appreciated by the public.

To speak of our cheap or leading lines would mean to enumerate our whole stock which in

PARLOR FURNITURE!

CONSISTS OF

Plush & Hair Cloth Suites,
Sofas,
Lounges,
Centre Tables
Sideboards,
Cupboards,
Chairs,
Etc.

—IN—

Bedroom Furnishings

We have still better values than ever. Whole bedroom suites of beautiful finish and design at remarkable low prices. Spring Mattresses and Mixed Wool Mattresses lower than ever.

J. E. MOORE

Furniture Dealer and Funeral Director.

1 & 2,
Durham St.,
FLESHERTON.

SNUBBED.

The Governor General of Canada Decides

That he Will not Disallow the Jesuit Bill, he will not Dissolve Parliament, he will not Bring the Matter Before the Privy Council.

Following is a full report of the reply to the long list of petitions presented to Governor Stanley by the deputations which waited upon him at Quebec on Friday last:

His Excellency the Governor-General replied as follows: "It is not usual to receive such a deputation as this, but in view of the importance of the subject I am willing to create a precedent. At the same time I do not think it should be too often followed. The difficulty in receiving deputations is that one may lay oneself open to the charge of arguing for or against the measures in which the deputations are interested. But with the sanction of my advisers I am disposed to let the deputation know what has been the aspect of the case as it presented itself to me. There is no disrespect to those who have so ably stated their views if I express neither concurrence nor dissent, lest I should drift into what might be construed as argument, however unintentionally. Previously to my arrival in the country, or about that date, the Legislature of Quebec had passed the Act in question. The history of the Jesuites estates is so well known that I need not refer to it in detail. Large amounts of property had lain virtually idle because, when the Provincial Government had endeavored to sell, protests had been made by the claimants, and in fact no one would except so doubtful a title. I cannot agree with the view expressed in your second paragraph. There were two sets of claimants, at least, to the Jesuits' estates. It was necessary to arrange to whom compensation should be paid, and to ensure a division which would be accepted by all. It is true that the Pope has an authority, recognised by both sets of claimants, was to be called upon to approve or disapprove the proposed division so far as Roman Catholic claimants was concerned, but this appears to me to relate not to the action of the Legislature of the province, but to the division of the funds after they had been paid over. It is arguable that as a matter of fact there is no reference to the Pope's authority at all in the executive portion of the Act. It is undobtedly the case that the preamable to the Act (an unusually long one by the way) contains a recital of events which led to the introduction of the Bill, and that in the correspondence so set out authority had been claimed on behalf of the Holy See, to which, however, the First Minister did not assent. The introduction of the name of the Pope may be unusual, and very likely unpalatable to some as Protestants, but as it appears in course of a recital of facts which had previously occurred (and which of course legislation could not obliterate or annul), and there being moreover (as I have before stated) no such reference in the body of the Act, I did not consider that Her Majesty's authority was in any way weakened or assailed, nor that I was compelled, in the exercise of my duty as her representative to disallow the Act on that account.

As to the question of policy that is not one on which I feel at liberty to pronounce an opinion. I believe, and am confirmed in my belief that, by the best authorities whom I can consult, that the Act was intra vires. There my power of interference is limited, for the Act does not appear to do more than to seek to restore to a certain society not in kind, but in money, a portion of the property of which that society was in years gone by deprived without compensation, and it professes to give a compensation therefore in the money of the province that had become possessed of the property and was profiting by it.

As to the recognition (spoken of in paragraph 4) of the rights of the Jesuite Society to make further demands, it seems to me that this Act leaves so-called "rights" exactly where they were. It is by no means uncommon for the Crown to recognize such a moral claim, and I can speak from my personal experience when secretary of the treasury (ten or twelve years ago) and when it constantly happened that in cases of intestacy, escheats and other forfeitures to the Crown, the moral claims of other persons were admitted and remissions were made, not as a matter of legal right, for the right of the Crown was undisputed, but as a matter of grace. There was also many parliamentary precedents to the same effect. Such cases, it seems to me, must in each instance be decided on their own merits.

As to paragraphs five and six, you will pardon my saying that I am not concerned either to admit or deny your statement. But, as a matter of fact, I do not find any evidence that in this Dominion and in this 19th century the Society of Jesus have been less law abiding or less loyal citizens than others.

As to paragraph 6, it appears to me that the legal status of the society was settled by the Act of 1887 (to which little or no objection was taken). I cannot see anything unconstitutional in that respect in the payment of the money in question to a society duly incorporated by law.

The Governor-General, both by the written law and by the spirit of the constitution, is to be guided by the advice of his responsible Ministers. If he disagrees with them on questions of high policy as being contrary to the interest of her Majesty's Empire, or if he believes that they do not represent the feeling of parliament it is constitutionally his duty to summon other advisers if he is satisfied that those so summoned can carry on the Queen's Government and the affairs of the Dominion. As to the first, I cannot say that I disagree with the course which, under the circumstances, ministers have recommended, believing it from the best authorities to which I have access to be constitutional. The Parliament of the Dominion, by 188 to 18, has expressed the same view. I decline to go behind recorded votes. Members of Parliament are elected, not as the delegates, but as the representatives of the people, and it is their duty to guide themselves according to that which they believe to be the best interests of the high functions which they have to discharge.

Again, I would ask, do the dissentients represent the majority? I find that the 188 represent 916,717 voters, whereas the thirteen members represent 77,297; and moreover the body of the constitutional opposition appears to have voted for the approval of the allowance of the bill. I have been asked, though not by you, to disallow the Act, though otherwise advised by ministers, and though contrary to the sense of Parliament. Would it be constitutional for a moment that I should do so if it were a question of commerce, or of finance, or of reform, or of constitution? There would be some risk of the Governor-General being held up as a court of appeal on questions of constitutional government and against the Parliament with which it is his duty to work in concert. Then it has been said, Why not facilitate a reference to the Privy council? I believe that my advisers have a perfectly good answer, that having no doubt of the correctness of their view they have a good reason for not doing so.

I have been asked to dissolve the House of Commons in one of the petitions to which I am replying. A dissolution of Parliament in the first instance, except under the gravest circumstances and with great reservation, even then should not be pronounced except upon the advice of the responsible ministers. It causes the disturbance of the various businesses of the country and considerable expense to the country and to all concerned. It is a remedy which should be exercised only as a last resort, and I must say, though I do so with great deference to those present, that excepting in the provinces of Ontario and Quebec, there does not appear to have been any general feeling in the matter such as would warrant the Governor-General to use this remedy. I recognize the influence of the two provinces, but I cannot leave the rest of the Dominion out of sight, and I may express the personal hope that this parliament may exercise for some time to come a wise constitutional influence over the affairs of this country.

I think my answer has been made substantially to the other petitions which have been presented to me. For the reason which I have given I am unable to hold out to you any hope that I shall disallow the Act. You cannot suppose that the course taken by my advisers and approved by me was taken without due consideration. Nothing has taken place to alter the views then entertained, nor could the Government recommend the reversal of an allowance already intimated.

Gentlemen, I cannot conceal from you the personal regret with which I fo l my self addressing a deputation and returning such an answer as it has been my duty to do to the petitions which have been presented to me, but I have endeavored to make my statement colorless, I have endeavored to avoid argument, and I have only to hope that I have done something to warde dissipating alarm. I will close by making an earnest appeal which by anticipation has already, I am certain, found weight with you, and that is that in this question we should as far as possible act up to that which we find to be for the welfare of the Dominion. During late years we have hoped that animosities, which unfortunately prevailed in former years, had disappeared, and that the Dominion as a united country was on the path of prosperity and peace. I earnestly call upon all the best friends of the Dominion as far as possible, while holding their own opinions, to be tolerant of those of others, and like our great neighbor, to live and let live, that we may in time to come feel that we have the one object of promoting the prosperity and welfare of the Dominion and the maintenance of loyalty and [illegible]

THE BRANTFORD LIGHT STEEL BINDER!

Over Four Thousand Sold in Season 1888. Being More Than Half of all Other Binders made in Canada.

Before placing your order for 1889 we request you to [illegible] with others.

2nd. Enquire of your neighbors who have used "Brantford Machines" and get their opinion as to their working and lasting qualities.

If you will follow the above advice, you will be convinced of these two facts.

1st. "Brantford Machines" are possessed of more improvements and are better made than any other machines in Canada.

2nd. "Brantford Machines" are more popular give better satisfaction, and are more [illegible] than any other machine in Canada.

Therefore: 1st. Give your order EARLY for a Brantford Binder and Mower.

2nd. And you will be sure to be perfectly satisfied with the machine you get.

THOS. A. BLAKELY,
FLESHERTON.

FOR SALE

In Quantities to Suit Purchasers.

LOTS 141, 142 AND [illegible] IN BANGE N. E. T. S. R. 10 [illegible]

Lot 22, in 4 Con., 50 acres, and lot 23 in 5 Con., 144 acres, and [illegible] township of Artemesia. Several good water power mill sites on above

WM. HOGG,
Flesherton Station, Ont.

Maxwell.

From our own Correspondent.

Mr. J. Carr and family, left for Cheboygan on Saturday morning last.

Messrs. L. and M. McIlroy and Esme Barber, of Toronto, are spending the summer with friends in Maxwell.

The marriage of Mrs. Small and Thos. Pallister on Wednesday of last week, caused quite a commotion. The boys showed their pleasure by serenading them on their return from Flesherton.

The members of St. Mary's Church will [illegible] on Thursday. A [illegible] to St. John's [illegible]

After harvest the members of [illegible] Church will hold a [illegible] four day's meeting.

Artemesia Council.

Artemesia Council met in the Town Hall on Monday, all the members present. Minutes of last meeting read and confirmed. The following communications were received: From the County Treasurer, list of arrears of taxes for the year 1889; from County Clerk, county rates; John Nichol, appealing against award of assessors re Union S.S. 12 Artemesia & Glenelg; Peter Hehn, with reference to gravel having been taken from in front of his lot to the detriment of his fence; from school sections 1,2,3,5,6,8,9,11, [illegible] and separate school, trustees requisitions.

The following accounts were presented and ordered to be paid: W. H. Thurston, printing [illegible]; R. J. Sproule, postage, [illegible]; Hayes, repairing scraper, 75 [illegible]; George Pritchard, repairing [illegible], $1.50; John Hargrave, [illegible] 37; Wm. Davis, gravel, $1 [illegible]

By-laws 458 to [illegible] school trustees' rates; 458, to levy county and township rates, and 460, appointing collectors, were introduced. Collectors, ward 1 John Hargrave, ward 2 Wm. Blair, ward 3 John Wright, ward 4 J. P. Sloan [illegible]

It was moved by Messrs. Sharp and Cairns that John [illegible] be and is hereby instructed to [illegible] in conjunction with the councillor [illegible] township to expend, [illegible] from each township. Carried.

Boland—McArthur—That the following be paid [illegible] repairs on Longshoe hill, P. [illegible] Fifteen barrels water [illegible]; drawing stone, and [illegible], $14 62; freight on plaster [illegible]; total, $9.-38. Carried.

McArthur—Sharp—That the usual grant of twenty [illegible] be made to the Township [illegible] Agricultural society.

McArthur—Sharp—That the Reeve issue his order [illegible] day's session of council and [illegible] monthly allowance, Neil Kennedy [illegible] be given or withheld or divided [illegible] Katy McArthur and E. [illegible] Councillor McArthur does [illegible] Carried.

The Council [illegible] journed.

$60 Sewing Machine FREE

PAULA CO., Box 780, Augusta, Maine.

The Most Successful Remedy ever discovered, as it is certain in its effects and does not blister. Read proof below.

KENDALL'S SPAVIN CURE.

OFFICE OF CHARLES A. SNYDER,
BREEDER OF
CLEVELAND BAY AND TROTTING BRED HORSES.
ELMWOOD, ILL., Nov. 21, 1888.

DR. B. J. KENDALL CO.

Dear Sirs: I have always purchased your Kendall's Spavin Cure by the half dozen bottles, I would like prices in larger quantity. I think it is one of the best liniments on earth. I have used it on my stables for three years.

Yours truly, CHAS. A. SNYDER.

KENDALL'S SPAVIN CURE.

BROCKTON, N. Y., November 5, 1888.

DR. B. J. KENDALL CO.

Dear Sirs: I desire to give you testimonial of my good opinion of your Kendall's Spavin Cure. I have used it for Lameness, Stiff Joints and Spavins, and I have found it a sure cure. I cordially recommend it to all horsemen.

Yours truly, A. H. GILBERT,
Manager Troy Laundry Stables.

KENDALL'S SPAVIN CURE.

SAINT WESTON COURET, OHIO, Dec. 19, 1888.

DR. B. J. KENDALL CO.

Gents: I feel it my duty to say what I have done with your Kendall's Spavin Cure. I have cured seventy-five horses that had Spavins, ten of Ring Bone, nine afflicted with Big Head and seven of Big Jaw. Since I have had one of your books and followed the directions, I have never lost a case of any kind.

Yours truly, ANDREW TURNER,
Horse Doctor.

KENDALL'S SPAVIN CURE.

Price $1 per bottle, or six bottles for $5. All Druggists have it or can get it for you, or it will be sent to any address on receipt of price by the proprietors. DR. B. J. KENDALL CO., Enosburgh Falls, Vt.

SOLD BY ALL DRUGGISTS.

SLAIN AS A SACRIFICE.

Fanatical Followers of a Negro "Messiah" Kill a Child as an Offering.

BEATING DEVILS OUT OF A WOMAN

A Savanna, Ga., despatch says: A lamentable state of affairs exists in that section of Liberty county where the lunatic Orth, or Bell, preached for a month. He is in the insane asylum at Milledgeville, but the effect of his ravings is still felt. Hundreds of negroes are totally demoralized through religious frenzy. Orth has a successor in a negro named Edward James, who claims that the spirit of the Messiah has passed into his body. Some of his actions and words are amusing. Other acts and language are revolting. He tells his listeners to throw their money away. Near his rude pulpit is a box into which the silver coins are thrown. Yesterday David James, a brother of the preacher, and Carter, a friend, went to the camp ground to try to persuade Edward James to give up his calling. The negroes who were there denied that their acting Lord was about. However, the two men lingered and at length discovered Edward James asleep in a waggon. They woke him up and began arguing with him. He got mad and threatened to strike them dead. That did not frighten them. Carter put his hand on James' shoulder and the pretended Messiah struck him in the face. Carter grabbed the false Lord by the throat and choked him until his tongue stuck out. At that the other negroes mobbed Carter and beat him terribly with their fists and clubs. Carter is likely to die. Dr. Henry is attending him. His skull is crushed and his thigh is badly cut. James is a Justice of the Peace. On Thursday last he announced his divine mission. He urges his followers to make financial sacrifices to the Lord. On Sunday as much as $400 was offered as a sacrifice. James tore up the paper money and scattered the silver broadcast through the woods. Whether he secreted some of the coin and paper on his person does not appear in the evidence, but it is thought extremely likely that he did. The crowds that follow James increase daily and their violence is becoming a terror to the law-abiding element of both races. The idea of sacrifice has spread to a horrible extent. The offer of money no longer satisfies these violent and misguided persons. Human blood is demanded. The story of Abraham offering up Isaac is told with awful effect. On Sunday a boy, 4 years old, was left with his aunt, Laura Roberts, at home several miles from Walthamville plantation by his parents. On the return of the wretched father and mother the child was missing. On Monday the body was found floating in a railroad ditch. On the forehead a cross had been cut, and on the breast the same symbol was stabbed deeply. The throat was cut and the ears split. The woman was arrested, but refused to divulge what she had done with her other child. A vigilant search has been instituted, but without avail. The Coroner's jury returned a verdict finding Laura Roberts guilty of murder. The woman was out of her mind at one time, but had recovered and was apparently perfectly sound until Bell began his meetings. She was one of his most devoted followers and, after his removal, transferred her attachment to James. Like many of the others, she accepted all of his words as of divine origin, and, acting upon them, killed the child. James, while a Justice of the Peace, had in his office Tony Lecount, a negro constable. Tony had developed the mania to as great an extent as the ex-magistrate, and is posing as the Holy Ghost. "We are three in one," he announced at the meeting in the swamp on the Baker plantation yesterday to a crowd of several hundred, and then went on to explain that Bell was God, who has gone back to heaven to make arrangements for their reception. James is the Son and he is the Spirit. His theory is swallowed with as much gullibility as all the other statements made to the ignorant rabble. Both men yesterday appeared together, naked.

At the meeting on Saturday afternoon the wife of Charles Baker was badly injured. She is a large woman and was in the crowd near James, who was preaching. Stopping suddenly he pointed to her and exclaimed, "She has devils in her; pound them out! pound them out!" A dozen men seized her, threw her on a rough table, and began to beat her with clubs. Her jaw was broken and her body was badly bruised before the evil demons were persuaded to leave her.

On Monday James saw devils moving in Eugene Richards, a sober, industrious colored man, who had gone to the meeting from curiosity. He resisted, when the disciples set upon him and he was beaten almost into insensibility. He received internal injuries, and will probably die.

Sheriff Smith has arrested seven ringleaders of the mob that put Carter's life in jeopardy. As the 16th of August approaches, the date prophesied for the world's ending, fears of increased violence are entertained. A band of several hundred is expected to march out of the county towards the north and at the same time to beat back all but the chosen seed. The farming interests of Liberty are partially prostrated, and the serious state of affairs taxes the wisdom and ingenuity of the conservative citizens of the county. The people are becoming more and more excited and the whites are dreading that James will influence his followers to attack them. This afternoon Sheriff Smith, of Liberty county, with a posse of fifteen well-armed and determined men, went to make an effort to put a stop to the scandalous proceedings that have disgraced that section for some time past, and relieve the peaceable citizens of the fear they now entertain of violent proceedings on the part of the followers of James. Yesterday a number of the leaders of the new sect were arrested, making fifteen in all that have been taken into custody. If to-day's movement does not succeed a vigilance committee will be organized at once and hemp brought into requisition to rid the county of the nuisance.

—A good deal of billing and cooing is being done at the summer resorts just now. Lovers do the cooing and hotel proprietors the billing.

—The difference between a young wife and her husband is that her first biscuit is apt to be his last.

CATTLE KATE.

The Famous Female Cowboy Hanged to a Limb for Cattle Stealing—Makes a Speech With a Rope Around Her Neck—"Game" to the Last.

A Cheyenne despatch gives the following fuller particulars of the lynching: James Averill and the notorious cattle queen, Kate Maxwell, were lynched by cowboys Sunday night. The bodies of the "rustler" and "range queen" dangled from the same limb of a big cottonwood yesterday morning. The scene of the lawless but justifiable deed of the midnight riders was Castle Rock, on the Sweetwater River, in Carbon county, near Independence. Castle Rock is a place which became historical during the rush overland to the California gold fields. Averill was postmaster at Sweetwater. Kate Maxwell was the heroine of a sensational story which appeared in the newspapers throughout the country three months ago, when she raided a gambling house and recovered a large sum of money won from her employees. Stockmen of the Sweetwater region have been the victims of cattle thieves for years. On account of prejudice against the large outfits it has been impossible to convict for these offences, and the rustlers have become very bold. Averill and his remarkable partner have been very active in thieving. The woman could hold her own on the range, riding like a demon, shooting on the slightest pretext, and handling the lariat and branding iron with the skill of the most expert vaquero.

Fifty freshly branded yearling steers were counted in the Averill and Maxwell herds Saturday morning. A stock detective whose suspicions were aroused was driven from the place when he was noticed viewing the stolen property. This circumstance was reported to the ranchemen, who determined to rid the country of the desperate pair. Averill and the woman have several times been ordered to emigrate or cease appropriating mavericks, but had disregarded all warnings. After her celebrated gambling house escapade, Mrs. Maxwell degenerated from a picturesque character into a reckless prairie virago of loose morals, and lost most of her following, but continued partnership with the postmaster. Word was passed along the river, and fifteen to twenty men gathered at a designated place and galloped to the cabin of Averill and Cattle Kate without unnecessary noise. The rustlers were at home, and a peep through the window disclosed the thieves and a boy in their employ, sitting beside a rude fire place smoking cigarettes.

As half a dozen men rushed into the room, a Winchester was poked through each window and a command to throw up their hands was given with unmistakable earnestness. The trio sprang for their weapons but were quickly overpowered. Averill begged and whined, protesting his innocence. Kate cursed. Her execration of the lynchers was something terrible in its way. She cursed everything and everybody, challenging the Deity to harm her if He had the power. An attempt was made to gag her, but her struggling was so violent that this was abandoned. She called for her own horse to ride to the tree selected for a scaffold, and vaulted astride the animal's back from the ground. Averill did not resist, and the boy, who had been told that he would not be harmed, followed. Either end of the same rope was fastened about the necks of the rustlers as they sat in their saddles. The boy made a pass with a knife at the man who was preparing Kate for hanging. He was knocked insensible by a blow with the butt of a revolver. The lad was a nephew of the bandit queen.

When preparations for the execution had been completed, Averill and the woman were asked to speak. The man spoke only of his office, saying that he did not wish a certain man to be his successor. He was promised the influence of the party for another candidate. Kate made quite an address. She wished the affair kept as quiet as possible, desiring that her mother be kept in ignorance of her disgrace and tragic death. It was useless to deny that their herd had been stolen from the ranchmen of that section, but if they did not wish to divide it among themselves she would like to have it sold and the money g ven to a home for homeless girls. Kate bade her nephew good bye, and commenced to deliver a blasphemous harangue. The horses were led from under the pair, while Kate was still cursing. Both kicked in lively style for ten or fifteen minutes. A few bullets were fired into Averill's body, and the lynchers rode away.

It is doubtless if an inquest will be held, and the executioners have no fear of being punished. The cattlemen have been forced to this, and more hangings will follow unless there is less thieving.

European War Rumors.

A Thursday's London cable says: An undercurrent of uneasiness continues to pervade the continent, notwithstanding strenuous efforts to smooth matters over. Servia still remains the object on which all eyes are fixedly gazing. The powers that be never know what Servia will do next. To-day agents of the Sultan in Belgrade report to the Turkish government that Russia, as well as France, has prepared to furnish war material to the Servians on long credit. Neither Carnot's Government nor the Czar will make demand for payment, according to the Turkish agents, and Servia can purchase weapons, ammunition, etc., without fearing any pressure whatever.

Von Vollmar, the German Socialist leader, in a recent interview, expressed a decided opinion that the triumph of Boulanger would mean a new disturbing feature to Europe. The general's name, Von Vollmar thought, would be an excellent platform cry for another military vote, and although no war might follow, the ill-feeling between France and Germany could only be increased by the success of Boulangism.

—Next month the Connecticut law against the sale of cigarettes to boys under 16 will go into effect.

—Tennyson and Dr. Holmes will both be 80 years of age in August—the English laureate on the 6th and the American poet on the 29th.

—It is estimated that the population of New York and Brooklyn and the surburban towns near by is over 3,000,000. The estimate gives New York 1,600,000 and Brooklyn 800,000.

THE GRANTS TO ROYALTY.

Mr. Bradlaugh and Lord Churchill Deliver Speeches For and Against.

A last Friday night's London cable says: When the debate was resumed in the House of Commons to-day, Mr. Bradlaugh said he found difficulty in discussing the question calmly when Mr. Balfour outside of the House denounced the objections as disgusting and sordid. The opponents of the grants meant nothing personally discourteous to the members of the royal family, but were simply acting within their rights when they met the demands of the Crown on a question of finance with a direct negative. Much of the argument in favor of the grants was based on the erroneous idea that the Crown, under the Civil List Acts from George I. onwards, surrendered its private property in exchange for a civil list. Neither George I. nor his successors, Mr. Bradlaugh declared, surrendered anything. The present royal family never surrendered anything of a farthing's value to the country. The Committee of Inquiry had elicited the fact that during the present reign the savings upon certain classes under the Civil List Act, instead of being applied to defray the charges of other classes, had been handed to the Queen without the authority of Parliament, and in breach of the statute. (Cries of Hear, hear.) Mr. W. H. Smith, the Government leader, had denied that the alleged savings of the Queen were over three millions of pounds, but he declined to show how much money had either been saved by the Queen or drawn by the other members of the Royal family from all sources. Mr. Bradlaugh said there ought to be nothing to conceal. The fact of the concealing had led to exaggerated ideas. The refusal of the Government to disclose the wealth amassed by royalties justified the aversion of the country to Royal grants. (Cheers.)

Lord Randolph Churchill argued that the original demands of the Government were just, besides being in conformity with precedent. If burdens were thrown upon the Crown, not intended under the Civil List, it would impair the credit of the nation and of Parliament. Mr. Bradlaugh had questioned the title of the Crown to its estates, but successive Parliaments had recognized it, and none of the greatest lawyers had ever yet challenged the Crown's title. He reminded the House that Sir Henry F. Ponsonby, Her Majesty's Private Secretary, a few years ago denied the reports that the Queen was making immense investments in ground rents and stated that she had not £1,000,000 to invest in anything. Lord Randolph saw that the Radicals' over-estimate of the Queen's wealth was designed to excite popular feeling against Royalty. He objected to the adoption of methods whose purpose was to foment a clamor against the throne, which in spite of them would remain steadfast in the affections of the people.

THREW THEM IN THE CANAL.

A Montclair Father's Heroic Act to Save His Boys.

A Montclair (N.J.) despatch says: The residents of this town are pretty thoroughly frightened over an epidemic of madness which seems to possess all the dogs in town. Several people have had narrow escapes from being bitten by infuriated animals, and every one now puts the greatest possible distance between himself and any stray dog that may come along. A thrilling incident in connection with a mad dog happened here on Monday afternoon. Capt. Michaels, of the Morris Canal, was the owner of a pet dog which he valued highly. During the morning he noticed that the dog was acting queerly, but he thought nothing of it. Shortly after noon, however, the dog, which had been lying apparently asleep on the deck of the boat, suddenly jumped up and with hoarse, yelping cries began whirling around madly. Capt. Michaels realized instantly that the animal was mad. His two little sons were playing together only a short distance away. With a bound the captain reached them and at the same time the dog ceased his whirling about and his bloodshot eyes rested on the captain and his children. Then, with wide open, foam-flecked mouth, he dashed at the captain. The latter dodged and made for the shore, but the dog headed him off. Again the captain dodged the infuriated animal, and running to the side of the canal dropped both his children in. Then he sprang in himself just as the dog made a snap at his legs. The captain rescued both his boys, and the dog crept under a box, where he was despatched with a revolver later. The next afternoon a small yellow dog came dashing along one of the streets snapping and biting at everything within his reach. He attacked two ladies on Bloomfield avenue, but they bravely beat him off with their umbrellas. Then he ran down the avenue, biting two other dogs on the way. All three animals were finally killed by officer Duncan after a long chase. No one cares to fondle a dog just at present, and every one is on the lookout for suspicious symptoms.

The Naphtha Supply Failing.

A Berlin cable to the Herald says: Intelligence has been received here from Baku to the effect that a permanent decrease is showing itself in the production of napatha in that region, and that there is a probability of a very serious crisis shortly coming on. The naphtha basins of the Apsteron Peninsula and Bibiebat are no doubt still very productive, but the yield is no longer to be relied on. Almost all the factories at Baku are suffering for want of raw product. The price has risen from under two kopecks to five or six per pound. Messrs. Rothschilds' representative, manager of the Caspian & Black Sea Naphtha Company, has received orders to proceed to Paris after a thorough investigation has been made of the state of affairs by the company's engineer at Balachona.

—Bjones (reading the paper)—That' queer—a North Dakota clergyman caugh stealing a horse from one of his parishioners. Bjenkins (languidly)—Ah! Did they suspend him from his pastorate? Bjones—No, they suspended him from a tree.

—Mr. Cholly (showing a lady guest about billiards)—I beg pardon; I don't think I quite understood. Miss Jolie—Teach me how to make a double kiss." Mr. Cholly (taking out his engagement book)—With pleasure. What evening will you have me call?

DARING AERONAUT HOGAN,

The Hero of the Campbell Air-Ship Adventure.

Long List of Successful Balloon Ascensions—Perilous Feats With the Parachute—A Number of Very Narrow Escapes.

The hero of the recent air-ship adventure, Prof. Edward D. Hogan, lives at Jackson, Mich., when he has been at home, which hasn't been very often. He has had a fondness for atmospheric exploration that has kept him most of the time at various points several hundred feet above the earth. When Prof. Hogan made his memorable leap from a balloon to a parachute when 9,000 feet from earth, last April, the newspapers of the city of Jackson chronicled the startling feat with proper prominence, but one paper remarked sadly: "We fully expect to be called upon to chronicle his death while making a descent with the parachute." Nevertheless, the man of the clouds doesn't seem to have been deterred by the solicitude of his friends and neighbors.

It was in 1866 that Prof. Hogan made his first trip to the region above the earth. He was then a young man, or rather a boy, of 14, having been born at Moretown, Canada, in 1852. On September 4th he ascended from Michigan, and the taste for adventure which the success of this ascension developed has manifested itself in a longer list of successful balloon ascensions than can be credited to any living man. Since 1866 he has devoted his winters quite exclusively to the construction of new air ships and to the arrangement of details for new experiments. He has resided all this time at Jackson, Mich., and he has come to be well-known to the residents of that city and adjacent towns. Prof. Hogan labored assiduously to improve the facilities for aeronautic exploration, and the efficiency of his methods in any one of his experiments after the first initial ascension has shown a decided advance over that of his methods in previous trials. In 1866, when he made his debut as an aeronaut, the art was in rather a primitive stage of development. The balloon of that time differed in many important respects from the balloon of to-day. It was a cumberous machine, and it carried a boat, life-preservers, food, axes, saws, etc. It was not made of silk and linen, as the modern balloon is made of, and it was altogether a rougher, coarser and less manageable ship. Prof. Hogan was not only an aeronaut, but an acrobat of rare skill, and in his first ascensions he added to the attractions of the occasions by performing on a trapeze bar in mid-air. He acquired a reputation as much for feats of strength and agility as for the courage and dexterity with which he handled a balloon. He was the first to introduce the acrobatic feature into aerial exhibitions of this kind, and his remarkable performances on the trapeze bar, hundreds of feet above the earth, excited the curiosity and admiration of thousands.

Prof. Hogan was constantly devising new and startling expressions of the art to which he was so devoted, and his recent trip in the air ship—a trip that seems just now to have had a fatal character—is the culmination of his ingenuity, skill and daring. In 1888, when he introduced the perilous parachute descent in a trip that was attended with many hazardous incidents, his exploit was chronicled as a genuine sensation by the local press. He had long meditated such an undertaking, but there were many obstacles that had to be removed by patience and industry. He was 36 years old when he finally made the dangerous experiment, and his great familiarity with everything connected with balloon ascensions inspired him with a confidence that the dumbfounded reporters and spectators could only consider daredevilry of the most pronounced type. The details of this remarkable feat were telegraphed all over the country and published broadcast. It served to assure the permanent reputation of Prof. Hogan as an aeronaut. In August, 1887, Prof. Baldwin had ascended by means of an open parachute and a balloon held to the earth by a 5,000-foot rope. A large basket was attached to this balloon, but when Prof. Hogan, fired with new zeal by the feat of Prof. Baldwin, undertook to emulate his predecessor, he discarded the large basket and made his ascension with a horizontal bar beneath the gas bag.

On the morning of April 4th, 1888, Prof. Hogan had completed preparations for his experiment with the parachute. The first trial was unsuccessful, the balloon landing on a farm outside the city limits. But the second trial, which was made immediately afterward, was entirely successful, except that the aeronaut was badly shaken up. The success of this experiment led him to repeat it with additional details, and during the season of 1888 he made 29 parachute drops, each drop being performed with greater ease and attended with less hazard and inconvenience. Since 1866 he had made more than 500 ascensions, when his famous feat of dropping with the parachute was performed. Immediately after his successful experiment with the parachute he received several offers of $1,000 to drop for exhibition purposes.

Hogan was an extremely modest man, and he always took particular pains to maintain as much privacy about his aeronautic adventures and plans as was consistent with pleasant feeling. His air ship trip he intended to be very secret, and the plan of his first parachute drop was known only to about 50 persons. At the same time he was very energetic and sometimes impulsive, and he went up in the air ship this time because a previously advertised and arranged trip had proved a fizzle, through no fault of his, and he was anxious to sustain his reputation. He was married, and his wife lives in a cozy home at Jackson. Hogan had an elder brother named William, who was widely known as an aeronaut throughout the West. It was William who taught young Edward how to handle a balloon, and it was William to whom young Edward looked for inspiration and confidence when he made his initial trip at Jackson. On this trip he was lost for three days, and then he was finally discovered by his friends asleep in a barn. He had many narrow escapes in his after career, and several times his rescue from death seemed simply miraculous. He always had the faculty of landing on his feet, and though he fell into the ocean once with no life preserver on, and was precipitated once from his balloon at the height of 100 feet, and on another occasion dropped 2,500 feet before his parachute opened, just as he was nearing the roof of a house, yet he always escaped with slight injuries. When he fell into the ocean he was rescued by an expert swimmer who happened to be in the water at the time; when he fell from the balloon he landed in soft mud on a meadow, and when he had fallen 2,500 feet with an unmanageable parachute, the parachute opened in the nick of time to save his life; so that, altogether, fortune seemed to favor the bold young aeronaut. He had an indomitable will and no end of courage. In appearance he was a man of medium height, and he had dark hair and brown eyes. His weight was 171 pounds, and he was strong and agile.

The "Musa Cavendishi."

In these days when the banana has become so favorite an article of diet, it may not be uninteresting to the general reader to peruse the following extract from the High Peak News of 13th inst., a North Derbyshire newspaper. The writer is Rev. George Turner, LL.D., one of the most eminent missionaries of the London Missionary Society, who was the immediate successor of the martyr missionary of Eromanga, the lamented John Williams, and for over forty years labored with great success in Samoa. He is now residing in Birkenhead:

Before leaving England in 1838, John Williams, the martyr of Eromanga, received many expressions of kindly interest in his mission work from His Grace the Duke of Devonshire, and among these were some cases of plants, carefully selected and packed at Chatsworth, to be taken in the missionary ship to the islands of the Pacific. It is not generally known the large extent to which missionaries have introduced new plants, and additions to the food of native tribes in the Pacific and elsewhere. Before leaving the Samoan Islands, a week or two before he was killed on Eromanga, in 1839, Mr. Williams put on shore at the harbor of Apia one of the cases from Chatsworth, the contents of which were apparently dead from long exposure on board ship. When I reached Samoa in 1841 I saw that case, and close by it a fine banana plant growing. This was from a bulb which was found at the bottom of the box, still containing the germ of life. This plant was watched in the garden of Mr. Mills, the missionary, with no small interest by the natives, and soon their curiosity rose to amazement, when they saw that it commenced to bear while yet only about five feet high, and that the very first bunch weighed close upon 100 lbs. The Samoans had already upwards of thirty species of banana, but this new one far excelled them all. The neighboring chiefs begged Mr. Mills for some of the young shoots, and soon they spread from village to village.

On my second voyage to our out stations in Western Polynesia in 1845, and in our missionary barque, "John Williams," I got a number of plants of this rare banana packed in a large iron pot, and fastened up on the crosstrees away from the waves and spray. At each of the larger islands visited on our cruise, I sent on shore one or more of the plants. When I visited these places again in 1848 the new banana was greatly prized, and fast spreading; and again, when I was there in 1859, '63 and '82, there was hardly any other banana brought on board ship, or to be seen on shore. When I was last in Sydney, I saw a cart passing along laden with great bunches of this very banana from a Fiji steamer just arrived. They are now spread over Eastern, Central and Western Polynesia, and all have come from that one bulb which went out from Chatsworth in 1838. It is called the Chinese banana, and is known in botany as the "Musa Cavendishi," having been introduced to Chatsworth from China by His Grace the Duke of Devonshire in 1829, and can be seen in the conservatory there, as I had the pleasure of doing yesterday, by the kind courtesy of Mr. Chester.

The great value and rapid spread of this banana in the Pacific has become quite proverbial. I have heard native orators, for instance, in speaking of the rapid spread of Christianity, comparing it to that wonderful plant, and well they may do so. In the early part of the century the Gospel first took root on Tahiti, and now it covers and gladdens Eastern, Central, and, to a large extent Western Polynesia as well, with an aggregate of 600,000 converts from heathenism, and of these 60,000 at least in full communion with the mission churches. It is destined still to spread through the Papuan and Malayian Archipelago, until, in the not far distant future, the missionaries of Polynesia shall unite stations and shake hands with their brethren in India, China and Japan.

Is Hogan Playing 'Possum?

A despatch of Wednesday from Jackson, Mich., says: Joseph Flowers, a reputable man of this city, who has known E. D. Hogan, the aeronaut, since boyhood, says Hogan certainly did not lose his life in the New York air ship affair, for he saw him in this city last Thursday and spoke with him. He is sure of this, and says, furthermore, that Hogan told him to "keep his mouth shut for a while yet," and he has kept still about it until now. Two other men, one of them the expressman who took the ballon that was used at St. Thomas, Ont., to the station, says it was E. D. Hogan himself who made the St. Thomas ascension and that he has been lying low since he hurt himself there. These reports greatly mystify Hogan's friends.

R. A. Gunn, M. D., Dean and Professor of Surgery of the United States Medical College, Editor of "Medical Tribune," Author of "Gunn's New Improved Hand-book of Hygiene and Domestic Medicine," says over his own signature, in speaking of a severe case of kidney disease: "A chemical and microscopical examination of the patient's urine revealed quantities of albumen and granular tube casts, confirming Bright's disease. After trying all of the other remedies in vain, I directed him to use Warner's Safe Cure. I was greatly surprised to observe a decided improvement within a month. Within four months no tube casts could be found, and only a trace of albumen, and as he expressed it, he felt perfectly well."

A Bad Prospect.

Smith—Is your friend Jones contracting any bad habits?

Brown—No, he is still expanding them.

A NEW NAVAL TERROR.

England's Latest Supply Ship—A Quick Fighter and a Fast Sailor.

A new acquisition to England's navy was launched recently and christened the Vulcan. She is designed as a twin-screw torpedo-boat ship, but is a fast protected cruiser and a formidable fighting craft as well and represents an entirely novel type. The construction of the Vulcan was begun on June 16th, 1888. She is of 6,200 tons displacement—larger, in short, than any of the large Indian troop-ships and three times as large as many a cruiser. She is built of steel, her hull alone weighing 3,170 tons, and her principal measurements are as follows: Length, 350 feet; beam, 68 feet; mean draught, 22 feet. The vertical keel is of an unusually heavy and substantial character and is 3 feet 6 inches high. The cast-steel U-shaped sternpost is extra strong, weighing five tons. The vessel is divided into numerous water-tight compartments, and is protected by a continuous steel deck six inches deep in the slope and 2½ inches elsewhere. The engines are of the triple expansion type, and will give a collective indicated horse power under forced draught of 12,000. They will drive the ship at a speed of 30 knots (23 miles) and 18 knots (20.7 miles) at sea. There will be storage for 1,000 tons of coal, an amount sufficient for 3,000 miles steaming at 18 knots an hour. She will have a balance rudder that will enable the new war ship to turn a complete circle of not more than 400 yards in diameter in little over three minutes. As a torpedo depot ship she will be admirably adapted for the work. She will be a floating factory, full of forges and workshops for the repair of torpedo boats and torpedoes, submarine mines and all the necessary gear for submarine work on a large scale, and she will also have upon her decks a small flotilla, probably eight in number of second-class torpedo boats of the largest size. These she will be able to hoist overboard and dispatch in all directions at a few minutes' notice. The vulcan will also have a torpedo armament of her own, consisting of six launching tubes, some of which are to be under water. Regarded more particularly as a cruiser, she will possess qualities which will entitle her to rank among the most formidable unarmored cruisers in the world. She will have weapons which at close range will be capable of penetrating armor up to nearly sixteen inches thick. The quick firing arrangement will be the most powerful of any ship in the world. It will enable her to discharge on each broadside a storm of from eighty to one hundred and fifty projectiles a minute; and should she ever be attacked by unarmored cruisers or topedo boats, she would be able to give them a warm reception.—New York World.

The Death Roll of the Forth Bridge.

In an article under the above heading a writer in the Pall Mall Gazette says he has learned from Dr. Hunter, of South Queensferry, that, including five drowning cases, the fatal accidents from all causes in connection with the Forth Bridge amount to fifth-three. As regards those killed in the actual construction of the bridge there have been forty-four lives lost, death taking place either at the time of the accident or soon after. One man trusted himself to work at a height of 120 feet over the waters of the Firth, simply grasping a rope. His hands got numbed with cold, his grasp relaxed, he fell backwards down and down into the water, and he was fished up alive. In another instance a spanner fell 300 feet, knocked off a man's cap and fell on the wooden stage at his feet, and went clean through a four inch plank. In another case somewhat similar, a spanner which fell from a great height actually tore a man's clothes from his waistcoat to his ankle, and left him uninjured. One of the most thrilling incidents was that in which the "staging," or scaffolding on which the men work high up in mid-air, gave way, carrying a number of poor fellows in its fall. Two of these men, striking some portion of the work in their descent, were killed before they reached the water; one or two others who fell clear of the girders were rescued from the Firth little the worse for their fall and immersion. Two others, however, managed as they fell to grasp at one of the struts high up above the water, and there they clung for dear life; to effect their rescue was itself an undertaking of no slight danger. But efforts were promptly made, and before long the man who happened to be nearest the rescuers was reached. And this brave fellow, hanging there to the ironwork, actually dissuaded the rescuers from delaying to take him off before they saved his companion. "Never mind me," he said, "I can hold on a bit longer; go and see to my mate, for he's getting dazed, and he'll drop." Happily this hero and his mate, too, were saved.

Willie Was Quite Right.

Mrs. Dumpsey—"For shame, Willie! You've been fighting again. Your clothes are torn and your face is scratched. Dear me, what a trial you are! I wish you were a girl—girl's don't fight." Willie Dumpsey—"Yes, ma, but don't you think it's better to have a good square fight and get all the mad out of you, than to carry it around, the way girls do, for months?"—Lawrence American.

Would Like to Commute.

Police Magistrate—William Rounder, drunk and disorderly—fifth time since New Year's, William—I'll have to make it $10 this time.

Mr. Bill Rounder—Please, Your Honor, wouldn't it come cheaper if I could make some arrangement to pay by the year

Gently Corrected: Miss Chatty Lafite (of Chicago, at the seaside)—There goes a crab. What a strange creature it is! Don't you think so, Miss Somerset? Miss Minerva Somerset (of Boston)—It is passing strange, yes. Miss Chatty Lafite—You mean it is passing strangely, no doubt. That's one on you, Miss Somerset.

"Maria," said the Chicago husband, "I beg of you to listen to me." "No, sir; I am resolved, and you can say nothing to change me. I will have a divorce." "But, Maria, one word." "Well." "Even your best friend would tell you that you haven't ghost of a show on the stage."

—The Cincinnati Enquirer remarks that, 'whatever may be its faults, ice-water never made a man kill his mother-in-law, but beer and whiskey have often been so responsible."

THE VALUABLE MECHANIC.

Some Good Advice to the Young Man Learning His Trade.

When a young man starts out to learn his trade, says the Stationary Engineer, and goes into a shop totally unschooled in the manual performance of his duties in the new field of life on which he is entering, it is important that he should bear in mind this fact, viz.: That his position, so far as it relates to himself, is intrinsically an educational one, as much so as in the school or college from which he may have recently graduated. The simple performance of so many hours' work per day, while it has a certain financial measure of value to the employer, has a value to himself when properly considered that is greater than can be measured in currency. As his progress and standing in the school depended on the thorough mental understanding of each progressive step he took, so, only in a more material sense, his advance in mechanical skill and knowledge is dependent on his thoroughly understanding not only the routine details of his work, but the why and wherefore of each operation. There always has been, and probably always will be, two classes of mechanics—those who stand at their bench and go through the manual motions of their work like automatic machines, with little more conception of why the results are as they are, and the other that class of men who make no moves without knowing why and how results are obtained and the relative importance of each step. This is the mechanical education that counts, the education that schools the mind to a clear comprehension of the principles equally with details, and leads unfailingly to that higher field where skill, diligence and marked ability find their natural level. The young man who, on beginning his mechanical education, realizes and acts upon these truths, will develop that ability which is not gauged by mere manual dexterity, but rather that which, when in later years he may be called to design, lay out and superintend the work of others, will enable him to creditably fill the position. Such positions come to those who bring thought and brains, as well as manual dexterity, to assist them in their work. To such men we owe the improvements of the age in every branch of mechanics. It is a fact that too many mechanics work along day after day accomplishing their work by "main strength and foolishness," which is the direct and legitimate result of a lack of proper and thorough application in their earlier mechanical life. The point emphasized is that the mind that is able, through careful training and application to bring to bear a knowledge of the principles involved, as well as execution of detail in the work, is one that approaches that standard of ability which should be the aim of every young man who is beginning his mechanical education—his work in the shop. When he has attained this no question of wages will ever trouble him. Such men are always wanted. The supply is not equal to the demand.

The Favorite Times for Suicide.

Statistics show that the months in which the fewest suicides occur are October and November, while the greatest number occur in April, May and June. July and September also have a goodly share, the latter possessing a peculiar fascination for women. This refutes the old idea that suicides occur more frequently in damp and gloomy weather, for the months just mentioned as being the most prolific are certainly those in which the skies look brightest and the earth is fairest. Another remarkable fact in this connection is that the progressive increase and decrease in the number of suicides coincide with the lengthening and shortening of the days, and, as M. Guerry has shown, not only the seasons of the year, but the days of the month and the week, and even the hours of the day, exert an influence, the constancy of which cannot be mistaken. As a result of his elaborate research he found that the greatest number of suicides among men occurred during the first ten days of the month, and from Monday to Thursday of the week. This is accounted for by remembering that the majority of workingmen receive their wages either on the 1st of the month or the last of the week, and that "pay day" is often followed by dissipation, debauchery and remorse. Oettingen completed this interesting observation by showing that the larger number of suicides among women take place during the last half of the week, when they are most apt to feel the effects of man's prodigality and wrong-doing. In regard to the hours of the day, we know, from Brierre de Boismont's examination of 1,993 cases of suicide in Paris, that the maximum number occurred between 6 a.m. and noon, and thereafter regularly declined, reaching the minimum at the hour before sunrise.—Popular Science Monthly.

The First American Shoemaker.

Among the Pilgrim Fathers who came to Salem, Mass., in the second cargo brought by the Mayflower, in 1629, was Thomas Beard, "The Shoemaker." Boston was not settled, or known even as St. Botolph's Town. Beard brought a letter to Governor Endicott, stating that he was sent by the Massachusetts Bay Company in London, and was to be maintained by them, and commending him to the care and helpful favor of the Governor. From their knowledge of the few cattle here, and the needs of the people, the company wisely shipped some "hides" in the Mayflower's cargo; these probably being tanned sides of leather. The little colony of Naumkeag gave a warm welcome to their new fellow-citizen, and his address and credentials moved them to present him wity fifty acres of land. After this pleasant event he seems to have lived so peacefully that he had no further history; but he is the first one of whom our records tell as being an American shoemaker.

A Neighbor Sent Him.

He—I'm the piano tuner, mum.

She—I haven't sent for any piano tuner.

He—Yes mum, I know mum; it were the gentleman next door sent me here, mum.

A New Definition.

Teacher—Now, my young friend, can you tell me what memory is?

Master Tommy (after a moment's hesitation)—Please, sir, memory is what you forget with.

SPEED OF INSECTS.

Many of Them Able to Outstrip Birds of Great Swiftness.

High speed is attained by insects in their flight, many of them being able to outstrip swift birds. It has been computed that the common house fly, in ordinary flight, makes 600 strokes per second and advances 25 feet, but that rate of speed, if the insect be alarmed, may be increased six or seven fold, so that under certain circumstances it can outstrip the fleetest racehorse. It is no uncommon thing to see a bee or a wasp endeavoring to get in at the window of a railway train in full speed, and it is calculated that if a small insect can fly faster than a racehorse can run, an insect as large as a horse would be able to travel as fast as a cannon ball. Leunwenhoik relates an exciting chase, which he beheld in a menagerie, about one hundred feet long, between a swallow and a dragon-fly—among the swiftest of insects. The insect flew with incredible speed and wheeled with such address that the swallow, in spite of its utmost efforts, completely failed to overtake and capture it. A pigeon fancier of Hamme, in Westphalia, recently made a wager that a dozen bees liberated three miles from their hive would reach it in better time than a dozen pigeons would reach their cote from the same distance. The competitors were given wing at Rhybern, a village nearly a league from Hamme, and the first bee reached home a quarter of a minute in advance of the first pigeon. Three other bees reached the goal before the second pigeon, the main body of both detachments finishing almost simultaneously an instant or two later. The bees, it may be mentioned, had been handicapped in the race, having been rolled in flour before starting for purposes of identification. According to Chabrier the male of the silkworm moth travels upward of 100 miles in one day, and there are many British moths, as entomologists well know, which can cover long distances in an incredibly short space of time.—Chicago Mail.

The Governor's Chase.

The Governor sat in his easy chair, a spy-glass at his eye—"Has any one seen three thousand men and a train of cars go by? A pilot train with the bad men on, one more, and another one still; with rattle of wheels and clank of bell, and shriek of the whistle shrill? They travel not as the flying ship, in silence and in fear; they whoop and holler and howl and yell for all the world to hear. They have advertised the place of the fight, for six long weeks or more, and I fear that I cannot find the place, 'till the brutal fight is o'er. Oh, rally and squander, my men-at-arms, and look if you can see where three railway trains and three thousand men have hidden away from me."

They rallied and squandered, those men at arms, they searched the country through; and another Governor came along, and joined the searchers, too. They looked in the clock and under the stairs, and under the bed they peered, and out in the kitchen and everywhere, but the trains had disappeared. They felt in their pockets and looked in their hats, and lowered a man down the well, but where all those sluggers had disappeared to, there wasn't nobody could tell. They asked a boy at Lowery's store, and the blind man down by the hall, and the woman who keeps the candy shop, but they hadn't seen nothin' at all. They dragged the pond at Sawyer's mill, and they questioned the toll-gate man, and all through the lot at the back of his house, the Governor raced and ran. But all in vain, for wherever he looked, the people he sought were gone, and the only place he didn't look was where the fight was on. And he never knew there had been a fight until a week and a day, then he sent a constable after the men, four thousand miles away.

Long live the State of Massasip! The Governor, long live he! If ever the moon should run away may he there to see! Should hostile powers invade his land at some far distant day, may he find the foe that wastes his State before it goes away. And great good medicine had it been, for the land of the sunny South, had the Governor closed his smooth-bore eyes and looked with his long-range mouth.—Burdette in the Brooklyn Eagle.

Noise and Nerves.

The most sensitive, delicate and easily injured parts of the human system are the nerves. These can never become so accustomed to incessant strain as to escape injury. That which is unpleasant to the senses is always—and, so far as the sense of hearing is concerned, discordant noises always are—injurious to the nerves. The yelling of steam whistles, the hiss of steam pipes, the rattle and clash of wheels on stone-covered streets, the rumble of street cars, the clangor of bells, the howling of hucksters, keep up a condition in which a healthful nervous system of natural strength and sensitiveness is impossible. And there is not one of these agencies that is not suppressed more or less completely in most of the great cities of the world. In Berlin heavy wagons cannot run on certain streets. In Paris any carload of rattling material must be fastened until it cannot rattle. Munich allows no bells on street cars. In Philadelphia, church bells have been held a nuisance in certain neighborhoods by judicial ruling. Steam whistles are forbidden in nearly all of the larger cities of this country, and most of these noises in our advanced stage of civilization are utterly unnecessary. Clocks and watches are now so cheap and plentiful that steam whistles and bells to denote the time are useless. Why should not all useless noises, and nearly all are useless, be suppressed?—American Analyst.

T. Grainger Stewart, M.D., F.R.S.E., ordinary physician to H. M. the Queen in Scotland; Professor of Practice of Physic in the University of Edinburgh, writes of Bright's Disease as follows: "Catarrh of the intestine also occasionally occurs, sometimes producing an exhausting diarrhœa." Warner's Safe Cure cures the Diarrhœa by first removing the cause.

Couldn't Stand Any Worse.

Mr. Curtis—I tell you what 'tis, you could have a far worse husband than I am Eunice (his wife)—I don't want one.

—He is a fool that praises himself and he a madman that speaks ill of himself.

BRITISH SERVING PEOPLE.

Retainers of the Old Nobility and Their Peculiarities.

The best domestic servants in the world are undoubtedly to be found in England, writes a New York Sun correspondent. Nowhere else can such thorough, trustworthy and willing service be had. The servants of the aristocracy in the middle ages were a class apart, and they have remained so ever since. To-day a servant in Great Britain considers himself of a lower order of mankind than his master, and brings up his children in the same belief. Humility is the creed. The master—perhaps a drunken, sottish and poverty-stricken gambler, graced by neither birth nor position—curses his servant like mad and flings his boot-jack at him. The servant, who is as likely as not an intelligent, honest, frugal and temperate man, dodges the boot-jack, bows respectfully and murmurs the perennial "Thank you, sir." The domestic servants of England are creatures of remarkable foibles and conceits. Thackeray immortalized the flunkey's speech and manner, but it is doubtful whether the ridicule he poured upon them has had any effect toward correcting their extravagance, as it would upon that of any other class. These servants still speak atrocious English, but with an unmistakably aristocratic accent, and although their pay is seldom high, they look down with lofty contempt upon workingmen, or, indeed, upon any one not holding the social rank which entitles him to treat them with insolence. In England the law assigns to every one, from the ranks of "gentleman" or "esquire" upward, a distinct rank or precedence on the social ladder. The servants, of course, are not included in this, but among themselves they give every man or woman his or her place in the strictest manner according to the rank of the master. A duke's servant takes precedence over that of a marquis' and the servant of either of these nobilities looks down upon a man who is the servant of merely a "gentleman." A thing which helps them greatly in maintaining these distinctions is that under no circumstances do they ever do work outside that appertaining to their particular offices. A butler, for instance, would be much less likely to put a hand to work which should be done by a footman than a duke himself. The upper men servants have usually acquired, as a result frequently of hereditary transmissions, an air of aristocratic vacuity or supercilliousness. They are not allowed to grow mustaches, but that only serves to make more prominent the aquiline nose and half scornful lip. It also makes one think that they must be relatives or friends of the great men of the earlier Victorian period, such as Sir Robert Peel, Lord Palmerston, or the Duke of Wellington, and that they are survivals of that period. They are almost incomprehensible to the majority of Americans in their intense arrogance.

"One breaks the glass and cuts his fingers
But they whom Truth and Wisdom lead
Can gather honey from a weed.

Those who are wise, and who love the truth, will believe what we say when we tell them that Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription has done more to relieve the sufferings of women, than all other medicines now known to science. It cures all irregularities, internal inflammation and ulceration, displacements and kindred troubles. It is the only medicine for women, sold by druggists, under a positive guarantee from the manufacturers, that it will give satisfaction in every case, or money will be refunded. This guarantee has been printed on the bottle-wrapper, and faithfully carried out for many years.

A Sad Case.

Two children belonging to Duncan Hartelle, of Cornwall Centre, died this week from diphtheria. The mother has been suffering from the same disease, and the case is made all the more sad by the fact that poor Hartelle himself does not know anything about the hand of death cutting down two of his bright little children, he being an inmate of the Rockwood Asylum. He was sent to that institution only a few months ago. The deeply afflicted mother has the sympathy of all in her bereavement.—Cornwall Freeholder.

She Could Talk About Something Else.

Irate Husband—O dear, can't you talk about something besides dresses?

Wife—Certainly, my dear. You ought to see the bonnets they are making nowadays at Smith's. I stepped in to-day and saw a beautiful thing in pink for only $37, and others were of course a good deal more expensive. A $50 gem just took my eye, but I thought I wouldn't get one that cost as much as that before I saw you. Of course I can talk about something besides dresses, you dear old hubby.

Alma Ladies' College.

ST. THOMAS, ONTARIO.

Nearly 200 students in 1888. 16 graduates and certified teachers in the Faculty. Total expenses from $40 to $60 per term or from $150 to $250 per year in advance including Musica nd Fine Arts.

McLachlin Hall, costing $30,000, erected last year to meet demand for rooms, now open. Address, Principal Austin, A. M.

A Happy Family.

There is no cheerfulness in the world comparable to that afforded by the daily life of a large family. There may be a depth of bliss where only two are together of which the life lived by ten or a dozen could afford no idea; but for the cheer of varied interests, of lively voices, of going and coming, of song and laughter, what can be desired better than a large family?—Wilson Star.

A Vocal Impediment.

Mrs. Bloodgood—I understand that Mrs. Chataway, who has just moved into our block, has an impediment in her speech. What is it? Do you know?

Mrs. Parvenu—Her teeth drop out while she is talking.—Burlington Free Press.

—Here is Senator Wm. M. Evarts' definition of a contingent fee: "It is a very simple thing. I can explain to you what a contingent fee means in a few words. In short, if I lose your suit I get nothing; if I win your suit you get nothing."

—When a man affirms that "there's lots of money in leather," don't dispute with him—purses are made of leather.

RAILWAY RACING TO SCOTLAND.

Five Hundred and Forty Miles in Twelve Hours and Fifty Minutes.

This season the railway companies have again begun to "race" each other, with this difference, as compared with last year, that the fastest speed is attained by trains running between Aberdeen and London, instead of by trains from London to Edinburgh. It is now possible for passengers from the "Granite City" of Aberdeen to make the journey to London by the G. N. W. Railway in the course of the same day, for the traveller who leaves that city at 6 15 in the morning will reach London at 7 o'clock in the evening. This is a marvellously quick run for a distance of nearly 600 miles, the quickest, indeed, that has ever been attempted between Scotland and England. This train is declared to be the quickest in the Kingdom. Besides being a great boon to travellers from Aberdeen, the new train will enable letters that leave that place in the morning to be delivered the same evening by the last post in London. On the return trip you may travel the 540 miles to Aberdeen in 12 hours 50 minutes leaving at 10.30 a. m. and arriving 11.20 p.m. By the Great Northern the time taken is 13 hours, or slightly more than by the rival route—10 a.m. to 11 p.m.

Greek Boxing in Classic Times.

The boxing to-day is almost as much more humane and presentable than the Grecian sort as a bout at modern Græco-Roman wrestling than the Roman gladiatorial shows. The Greek boxers wore a fearfully hurtful contrivance called a cestus, which consisted of bands of bull's hide fastened around the knuckles, and studded with knobs of lead and iron. These were very like the brass knuckles or "knuckle dusters" that are now used by burglars and criminals only. They must have made the old-time boxing matches both gory and horrible to an extent that would have shocked even the toughest of the tough citizens that attend the modern contests. The old fellows used often to wear a protecting cover over their ears, in order to keep them unmutilated, just as the German students guard their eyes against thrusts with the schläger. Boxing, moreover, was one of the most important features of the Olympian games, the great athletic meetings of Greece's hey-day, wherein the historically perfect runners and wrestlers and archers and charioteers, and all the young men lived and studied to excel. All had to box and go through a bloody and brutal performance that wouldn't be practised by any modern pugilist and wouldn't be tolerated now by anybody. The only thing comparable for beastliness to Greek boxing in these days is a form of contest called purring, in which a man heavily shod tries to disable his antagonist by kicking his shins, but that never excited any popular interest, and it is almost never heard of more. As regards the science in boxing we imagine that the improvement in that respect has been equal to its mollification. The Greeks, we believe, were right-handed fighters, using the left chiefly as a guard, while the accepted theory now is that if but one hand is used for offensive purposes it should be the left. If the Athenian Pet should venture within the ropes to-day without his abominable cestus, and face a first-class man it would be a talent to an obolos that his sponge would eventually be the one to go up. Johannes Sullivanus could probably whip Castor and Pollux in the same ring.—New York Sun.

Logic is Logic.

Now there was the case of our friend McKay:
He said to himself in his resolute way
That a cough which was growing from bad to worse
Must be cured, in spite of a slender purse.
An ocean voyage was out of the question,
A Florida trip a needless suggestion
Yet do he wouldn't! His money he paid
For the "Golden Medical Discovery" by Dr. Pierce made
And as sound as a nut is his health to-day—
Logic is logic, that's all I say

"Golden Medical Discovery" is the only medicine for the diseases it is recommended to cure, sold by druggists, under a positive guarantee from the manufacturers, that if it don't either benefit or cure in every case, the money paid for it will be promptly refunded.

The Mexican Wasp.

The Mexican wasp is built entirely for business. He is over two inches long when he is of age and is about the color of a bay horse. His plunger is fully an inch long and as fine as a spider's web. Unlike the stinger of the common bee, the stinger of the Mexican wasp is non-forfeitable. He doesn't give it up after one lunge, but has it always in readiness for an all-day job if necessary. The mission of the Mexican wasp seems to be merely to hunt up people and run that stinger of his into them. The natives say he will go ten miles out of his way to get a whack at a person. The natives seem to get fat on snake bites, centipede bites and scorpion stings, but if they discover one of these wasps in the neighborhood they hunt for cover without delay.—Tombstone Epitaph.

Will You Read This for $500?

For many years the manufacturers of Dr. Sage's Catarrh Remedy, who are abundantly responsible financially, as any one can easily ascertain by enquiry, have offered, in good faith, a standing reward of $500 for a case of nasal catarrh, no matter how bad or of how long standing, which they cannot cure. The Remedy is sold by druggists at 50 cents.

Played For All It Is Worth.

Seedy Tragedian (on the Rialto)—Got any engagement yet?

Seedy Comedian—Yes, I'm playing a small part at the Fashion Theatre.

"What salary?"

"No salary; but the part calls for a meal on the stage, and I get something to eat."

DOML 32 89.

DUNN'S BAKING POWDER
THE COOK'S BEST FRIEND

Heard's Carriage Works.

MANUFACTURER OF

Carriages, Buggies, Wagons, Sleighs, Cutters, &c., &c.

HEARD'S IMPROVED HARROWS AND GATES.

Special Attention given to PAINTING, TRIMMING, HORSE-SHOEING and al kinds of JOB WORK. Nothing but first-class material used throughout and satisfaction guaranteed. We have for sale

——Lumber, Lath and Shingles.——

Also Agent for Dick's Rollers, Mowers and Binders, Dick's Champion, Royal Rob Roy, Granger and Standard Plows. Two and Three-Furrow Gang Plows. Horse Powers for 4 Horses. Straw Cutters, Scufflers and Turnip Drills.

JOHN H. HEARD, Durham Street, Flesherton.

FLESHERTON STOVE EMPORIUM

A large assortment of STOVES, of makes. STOVE FURNISHINGS, TIN WARE, COPPERWARE, LAMP GOODS etc. always on hand

EVETROUGHING A SPECIALITY.

F. G. Karstedt, Strain's old Stand Flesherton.

REMOVAL

I desire to inform the public that I have removed my well known tin shop to

MOORE'S Block, Durham St.

A complete stock of tinware will be found in my new premises.

REPAIRING EAVETROUGHING Etc.

done as heretofore.

I have secured the agency for the Celebrated Singer Sewing Machine.

Respecting myself friends to come and see me in my new shop. I remain, etc

JAS. SULLIVAN.

FLOUR, FLOUR,

STONE FLOUR!

MR. P LOUCK'S

Is prepared to do your Gristing on short notice and grinds on the old terms of every twelfth bushel. Seventy cents per bag of two bushels for Chopping done every day. The Little Mill is in the estimation of the public.

It Pays To

GO TO THE BEST

AND THAT IS THE

Northern Business College,

OF OWEN SOUND.

The best and most practical course of study
The best teaching talent.
The best accommodation for student
The best methods of instruction
The best results from that instruction after students graduate

For annual announcements giving particulars regarding the courses of study, terms &c., address

C. A. FLEMING, Principal.

Improved Farm for Sale.

Lots 14 & 15 in the 4th Con. of Proton, and S E ½ of lot 12 in the 5th Con. of Proton, containing 200 acres, 80 cleared, good clay loam, well improved, good frame house and log barn, frame stable, good orchard, etc. This farm is well watered and fenced, and is considered one of the best in this section. It is one mile and a half from the Village of Flesherton. Will be sold on easy terms. For further particulars apply to

JAS. BELCROFT
Flesherton P.O.

D. McTavish,

HORSESHOER AND GENERAL BLACKSMITH,

Collingwood Street,

FLESHERTON, - ONT.

Manufacturing of Wagons, Sloughs, Buggies Democrats, etc. Horseshoeing promptly attended to. Special attention given to contract and to short feet.

Logging and Plow Chains constantly on hand.

ROLLER FLOUR

best in the markets at

Blackburn's.

Ice Cream Parlors!

all kinds of cooling summer drinks.

Cured Meats,

Lard, Bologna,

etc.

ALL FRUITS IN THEIR SEASON

—AT—

BLACKBURN'S

For Sale

A dwelling will for sale at Flesherton Station with stone double roof bolt scant mill, dester and planer. Will be sold cheap and on easy terms. This is a bargain. Apply to

ROGER LEVER
Flesherton P.O.

Monthly Fairs.

Orangeville—The second Thursday in each month.

Durham—Tuesday before Orangeville.
Flesherton—Monday before Orangeville.
Markdale—Saturday before Orangeville.
Dundalk—First Tuesday in each month.
Chatsworth—Monday before Dundalk.
Hanover—Saturday before Chatsworth.
Meaford—Monday before Durham.
Harriston—Monday before Durham.

This Year's

MYRTLE

CUT and PLUG

SMOKING TOBACCO

FINER THAN EVER.

See

T & B

in bronze on EACH PLUG and PACKAGE

For lame back, side or chest, use Shiloh's Porous Plaster. Price 25 cent. For sale at the Medical Hall.

Croup, whooping cough and Bronchitis immediately relieved by Shiloh's Cure. For sale at the Medical Hall.

COUNTY & DISTRICT.

To-day is Meaford's civic holiday.

Mr. Beattie, of Shelburne, had two valuable pups poisoned.

A little boy, son of Mr. C.L. Grant, Durham, fell of the fence and broke his arm.

A little Shelburne boy fell into a cistern but was fished out before life had become extinct.

W. Young's shoe store at Allison was burned last week. Loss $1500, insured for $600.

The Meaford harbor improvements, for which $6,500 was placed in the estimates, will soon be commenced.

Fire burned down Wm. Orr's grist mill, at Mt. Forest, Sunday morning, together with the large bridge which spans the Saugeen.

A young man named Nicholas Keating aged 19, who was working for Mr. Wm. McCarter, on the 12th con. Brant, was found dead in the harvest field on Monday last.

Owing to the death of J.D. Crabtree it was necessary to appoint another treasurer for the township of Euphrasia, which was done last week in the person of Mr. Wm. McConnell

A monster toad, weighing seven pound, and a half, found in the cellar of a Sts Catherines brewery, has been sent to school of Technology, Toronto. It is almost as big as a loaf of bread.

A foolish little boy in Dundalk found a bottle of gunpowder and dropped a match into it to see it fiz. His phiz is not so handsome now as it used to was before he tried the experiment, and it is feared that he will be obliged to quit looking through one of his eyes.

While out camping at Bell's Lake, Mr. David McKenzie has been distinguishing himself as a rifle shot. One day last week he shot with a 45 bore Winchester rifle a very fine loon while the bird was sailing on the lake. We understand he has since succeeded in hitting another of these wary birds. Grey Review.

This is a time for strange occurences and Oshawa is able to add one to the variable accumulation. It is this—some time in January last, a certain man's wife presented him with an addition to the family, the child being healthy and in every way worthy of the hearty reception which was accorded it. A few days ago this same man's wife was clever enough to repeat the presentation. Two children in six months is quick work. Both children are alive and well

A Collingwood despatch, of date August 2, says: The body of William Caven Ewing, eldest son of Rev. Robert Ewing, of this town, arrived here to-day from Sturgeon Falls, where he was drowned while bathing on Wednesday last. He was employed in mission work at that place, and was a young man of superior ability and scholarly attainment, admired and beloved by all that knew him. His sad death has caused a gloom over Collingwood, and his parents have the heartfelt sympathy of his many friends in this town. The funeral will take place at Cheltenham on Saturday where his father was formerly pastor of the Presbyterian Church.

A despatch dated Collingwood, Aug. 4, says: A very destructive fire occurred here at an early hour this morning. It was discovered that flames were issuing from the south west corner of the Dominion hotel stables. The building being frame, and a strong south-east wind blowing, the flames spread with fearful rapidity to the driving sheds and the hotel, which were all consumed. The next building to take fire was John Ough's marble factory and dwelling. The contents of both places were saved, but the building was completely demolished. The adjoining roughcast dwelling, occupied by Mrs. Blue, was with great difficulty saved. The following buildings were burned: The Dominion hotel and contents, stables and driving sheds, owned by Mrs. H. Cameron; insured for $2,500; loss estimated at $5,000. Ough's marble works and dwelling, insured for $600; Ough's stable and contents; P. W. Bell's stable and contents; Mrs. Blue's stable and contents; Mrs. Blue's dwelling, part destroyed, insurance for $600. Mrs. Cameron lost a valuable driving horse and thirteen pigs. Mr. Ough was badly burned about the neck in rescuing his horse. W. P. Hill's bakery had a narrow escape, also Blue's hotel and Wilson's sash and door factory. The fire is supposed to have been caused by lightning.

BOOTS & SHOES.

I have a very large supply on hand and am

Selling Very Cheap.

IN LADIES WEAR. Prunella, Kid, Polish calf and Buff Congola, Lace and Button.

Misse's, Youth's and Children's

A large assortment, all sorts and sizes.

MENS WEAR

Fine Calf and Congola, Balmorals and Gaiters, also Heavy Boots and Shoes. Prices and Material cannot be beat.

W. CLAYTON.

Photos, Photos, Photos.

We are now turning out work far superior in style and finish to any ever produced in Flesherton.

COPYING and ENLARGING at MODERATE RATES.

PICTURE FRAMING

done in all its branches. A good stock of FRAMES and MOULDINGS kept constantly on hand. Will also introduce the new BROMIDE PORTRAIT, a picture that is giving entire satisfaction wherever introduced. SAMPLES can be seen at my Gallery where all particulars as to Price, Style &c., can be ascertained.

MRS. BILMER,
FLESHERTON

HEALTH FOR ALL.

HOLLOWAY'S PILLS & OINTMENT

THE PILLS

Purify the Blood, correct all Disorders of

Liver, Stomach, Kidneys, and Bowels.

They invigorate and restore to health Debilitated Constitutions, and are invaluable in all Complaints incidental to Females of all ages. For Children and the aged they are priceless

THE OINTMENT

an infallible remedy for Bad Legs, Bad Breasts, Old Wounds, Sores and Ulcers. It is famous for Gout and Rheumatism. For disorders of the Chest it has no equal

For SORE THROAT, BRONCHITIS, COUGHS, COLDS

Glandular Swellings, and all Skin Diseases it has no rival, and for contracted and stiff joints it acts like a charm.

Manufactured only at Professor Holloway's Establishment, and are sold at 1s 1½d, 2s 9d, 4s 6d, 11s, 22s and 33s each Pot or Box, and may be had of all Medicine Vendors throughout the World.

78, New Oxford Street (late 533, Oxford Street), London.

Purchasers should look to the Label on the Pots and Boxes. If the address is not 533, Oxford Street, London, they are spurious.

PRICEVILLE BAKERY.

A. WATSON!

Desires to inform the public that he can furnish

CAKES AND PIES

To Order.

FIRST CLAS BREAD ALWAYS ON HAND.

will visit Flesherton twice a week on TUESDAYS and FRIDAYS, with a full supply of goods.

DROP A CARD IF YOU DESIRE ME TO CALL.

WEDDING and FANCY cakes a specialty

A. WATSON,
Priceville.

Situation.

with steady employment and good pay all the year round, to reliable men furnishing satisfactory references. S.A. McOMBER & Co., Nurserymen, Rochester, N. Y

FLESHERTON PLANING MILLS

Having purchased the Flesherton Planing Mills from R. J. Sproule, Esq., I now desire to inform the

PUBLIC

that I am in a position to do

ALL KINDS

—OF—

General planing mill work,

such as

SASH, DOORS, DOOR FRAMES

Planing and Matching, re sawing, etc.

Good Workmanship Guaranteed.

A large quantity of good dry pine lumber on hand.

W. J. HOWARD,
Flesherton.

LOOK!

HAVING done business in Canada for years our reputation is established. We want three men in your vicinity to represent us, to whom exclusive territory will be given. Handsome outfit free. Salary and expenses paid weekly. Previous experience not required. Write at once for terms. Hardy stock for Canada a specialty. MAY BROTHERS Nurserymen, Rochester, N Y

FLESHERTON ADVANCE.

"TRUTH BEFORE FAVOR"—"PRINCIPLES, NOT MEN."

VOL. VIII., NO 424. FLESHERTON, ONT., THURSDAY, AUGUST 15, 1889. W. H. THURSTON.

WATCHES,
Clocks, Jewelry.

STUDY
Your Own Interests

By buying your Watches [illegible] and Silverware at

Russell's Noted
JEWELRY STORE,

FLESHERTON.

In watches we have a very large stock of Elgin, Waltham, [illegible] Swiss Levers, in Ladies and Gents sizes Gold, Silver and Silver ore cases. Brooches and Pendants, of the latest design Fine Gold and Rolled Gold Earrings, Cuff Buttons, Charms, Chains and a beautiful [illegible] Rings. A full supply of 18 K. Wedding Rings always on hand Also a large and well-selected stock of Silverware and Spectacles at very low [illegible]

RUSSELL'S, FLESHERTON.

All work personally attended to [illegible]

THE ONE PRICE
Cash Store.

STILL ON DECK!

Goods cheaper than ever

This is the time for all farmers to lay in a good stock of

Groceries

for haying and harvesting. We have put the prices down to meet the demands.

Dry Goods, Boots, Shoes, Etc.

—AT—

ROCK - BOTTOM - PRICES.

More Customers wanted

To Carry off the Bargains.

McDONALD & EVANS,

Wright's Old Stand.

Pumps! Pumps!

J. McCullough,

Markdale,

manufacturer of pumps, desires to inform the public that he is prepared to furnish pumps for

Deep wells, gravel wells, etc.

to those who have heretofore had difficulty with [illegible] wells etc

Guaranteed Satisfaction

[illegible] articles I learned my business with the late J. Fear, of Meaford, the superiority of [illegible] pumps was a household word in Grey a [illegible] ago [illegible] and call on me if you desire anything in my line.

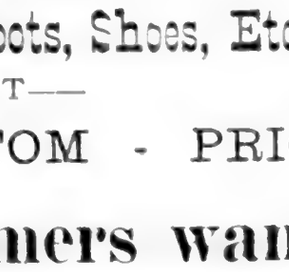
J. McCullough.

FARM FOR SALE [illegible]

in Queen's Valley, where there are mills, store, post office and church, and 11 miles from Flesherton [illegible] and timber. Apply to R. J. Scroggie, Auctioneer, [illegible]

Flesherton Livery Stables.

D. CLAYTON, Proprietor.



[illegible] horses and vehicles for hire at reasonable rates.

Stables opposite Munshaw's hotel.

Special attention paid to commercial business

THE ADVANCE.

Is published

Every Thursday,

FROM THE OFFICE,

Sydenham Street, - - Flesherton, Ont.

TERMS OF SUBSCRIPTION:

$1 per annum when paid strictly in advance [illegible] per annum if not paid in advance.

ADVERTISING RATES.

One column 1 year $[illegible] half do. $[illegible] quarter do. $[illegible]

Transient advertisements [illegible] of matter, 10 cents per line each subsequent insertion.

W. H. THURSTON
Editor and Proprietor.

THE ELIXIR OF LIFE.

Medea daughter of the King of Colchis, is said to have possessed the art of restoring people from decrepitude to the bloom of early youth by draining off the blood from their veins and filling their veins with the juices of certain herbs. Her secret, however, was not generally known, as the daughters of Pelias found when they made amusement of their present and boiled him in hopes of restoring him to youth. The experiment was [illegible]

Ponce de Leon thought he had discovered the fountain of youth when he found that beautiful, limpid, sparkling spring of Florida, bubbling up from the earth like effervescing champagne, but he was mistaken. It was said of Cleopatra, the beautiful Egyptian queen, that age could not wither nor custom stale her infinite variety. Did she know the secret? If so it perished with her when the fatal draught was taken. For centuries "the elixir of life" has been a mythical preparation which all have heard of but none [illegible]

[illegible] Medea [illegible] he can take an [illegible] man young, with as much ease as a careful market gardener can restore the appearance of freshness to a wilted cabbage, and [illegible] he can take a veteran [illegible] and ten ship-loads [illegible] He says that he can [illegible] thirty years [illegible] man's life with the least difficulty, and that a man could be [illegible] thirty years of age [illegible] he chooses to be

Dr. W. B. Hammond, the well-known New York physician, has been experimenting with the new preparation, and has come to the conclusion that there is something in it. However, he claims that the miraculous properties claimed for it are exaggerated. The formula is this. He takes a certain carefully selected portion of young animals newly killed, macerates them with water, filters the mixture carefully, and the elixir of life is complete. When taking into consideration the fact that the same mixture made from an animal which had begun to putrify would act as a deadly poison the good effects of that from a healthy carcase should follow as a natural sequence. It is not probable that the formula of Medea or Cleopatra has been preserved, but there appears to be no reasonable doubt that an extremely valuable addition has been made to materia medica.

The Toronto Week, in its remarks upon the Governor-General's refusal to disallow the Jesuit Bill, has the following to say:

Were it quite respectful to suspect the Governor-General of being a humorist in disguise, and of giving way on so serious an occasion to his propensity, we could easily fancy His Excellency smiling in his sleeve as he reminded the deputation at the commencement of his reply that he must guard against drifting into "what might be construed as argument, and assured them at the close that he had endeavored to avoid argument. We can imagine the members of the deputation at the after-meeting wondering what Lord Stanley regards as argument. Most persons would, we think, but for his caveat, have been liable to mistake his reply for an admirably clear and concise presentation of the whole argument against disallowance. It is not his fault that the simple statement constitutes the most forcible argument. That statement, brief as it is, sums up the chief points which have always seemed to us to make the position of the Government and Commons in the matter absolutely impregnable. The property lying idle, the inability of the Government to sell it, the two sets of claimants, the Pope as the only arbiter acceptable to both, the fact that his approval, of which so much has been made, related not to the action of the Legislature, but to the division of the funds, the usage of Governments in the recognition of moral claims, the lack of evidence to show that in this Dominion and in this nineteenth century the Jesuits are [illegible] less law-abiding or less loyal citizens than others, the legal status of the Society in Quebec as settled by the Act of Incorporation—these seemed to make up a chain of argument which would [illegible] Lord Stanley to [illegible] imposed upon him by [illegible] made. It may be easy for [illegible] men composing the deputation to persuade themselves that these arguments have already been refuted, but the fact that, after so energetic and systematic an effort, the petition received the signatures of so small a percentage of the electors shows pretty conclusively that the great body of the people do not share their opinion.

It is very refreshing indeed to read some of the American editorial wisdom upon matters which refer to Canada. [illegible] seizure of the Black Diamond [illegible] was given occasion for many of the [illegible] sound homilies [illegible] was marked the [illegible] in papers since the [illegible] was opened. The San Francisco Chronicle of a late date clears [illegible] beautiful piece of sentiment:

The Ottawa Citizen is showing [illegible] warm and lively state and deprecates the seizure of the sealer engaged in killing seals in Behring sea as an act of piracy. Our esteemed Canadian contemporary should imitate the coolness of the climate it writes from, be calm and keep cool. It should also bear in mind that what is sauce for the goose is likewise sauce for the gander. If it is piracy to seize a Canadian vessel for taking seals in Behring sea, it is an equally piratical proceeding to seize an American schooner for fishing in the practically open ocean on the Atlantic side. Our Canadian neighbors might as well, once for all, understand that the United States is going to force the abandonment of the headland to headland theory set up by them on the other side. This is the aim of our Government, and if necessary to achieve it we will shut up the whole Pacific ocean, as well as Behring sea to Canadian vessels.

To such fine strung fellows as these Americans it must be exceedingly galling to note the progress of Canada in the concomitants of empire, when one considers that this whole continent should be the prey of Uncle Jonathan's eagle. Mark the egotist we will shut out the whole Pacific ocean, as well as Behring sea, to Canadian vessels!

It is stated that the estate of the late Judge Macpherson is estimated at about $10,000. No will has been found, except one made some years before the death of his wife, in which the bulk of his property was left to her. He leaves a daughter 12 years of age. The position of county judge is worth about $3,000 per year. Two prominent C[illegible] are spoken of for the [illegible] Mr. Masson, M.P., and Judge [illegible] It is understood that Mr. Masson [illegible] the position and [illegible] his influence will [illegible] for Mr. [illegible] Judge Lane, the present judge, is also spoken of for the position.

It is about decided that there will be a great exposition of the "Three Americas," to be held in some large city on this continent in 1892. New York, Chicago and Toronto are competitors for the big show, but it is probable that New York will get there if anybody. An engineer has already prepared plans for an American Eiffel tower which will be 1500 feet high, or 500 feet higher than the Paris one, to be built upon the grounds of the big show if it materializes.

Will you suffer with Dyspepsia and Liver Complaint? Shiloh's Vitalizer is guaranteed to cure you. For sale at the Medical Hall.

Shiloh's cough and Consumption Cure is sold by us on a guarantee. It cures Consumption. For sale at the Medical Hall

THE MARKETS.

FLESHERTON

Carefully Corrected [illegible]

[illegible] per pair

SIGN

"Big Spex"

Reliable watches

Gold, filled gold and Coin-silver cases.

Ladies and Gents sizes

Walnut and Nickle Clocks.

I am represented by A 1 watches and [illegible] stocked up by reliable warrants to more homes of Central Grey, than any [illegible] in it's sort.

If prices are not [illegible] mock every time.

QUALITY Considered.

I would not be able to hold such a [illegible] share of Grey Co. trade as I have at present

"CASH or CREDIT

will positively do better [illegible]

Goods, Work and

Warrants Considered

[illegible] an you could [illegible] fully fitted

Work Carefully Done.

Fair Charges.

Stock now complete in all lines

Can save you $1 to $3.00 on watches.

Other lines will be held on live and [illegible] live margins

W. A. BROWN,

Jeweler and Optician,

MARKDALE, Ont

THE MAYBRICK TRIAL

Plenty of Arsenic Discovered in the Wife's Room.

WHAT THE AUTOPSY SHOWED.

Arsenic in the Liver and Kidneys—Bottles Full of it—Handkerchiefs Soaked with it.

A London cable says: The trial of Mrs. Florence Maybrick began at Liverpool to-day. The case attracts considerable attention here. The first witness was Michael Maybrick, brother of the deceased. His testimony was of little account against the prisoner. Edwin Maybrick, another brother, said his brother had never taken arsenic as a medicine. Mrs. Brigge, a friend of the Maybrick family, testified to finding several bottles in Maybrick's room. These she gave to the police. Two chemists said they sold arsenic fly paper to Mrs. Maybrick. The general impression is that Mrs. Maybrick has an even chance of acquittal. Her lawyer is Sir Charles Russell.

A Liverpool cable of Friday night says Two days of fixed attention through long hours of intense anxiety and scorching atmospheric heat have not been without their effect upon all concerned in the Maybrick trial. Generally a jaded air was apparent when the court sat again at the usual hour this morning. The experiences of the last few days have told heavily upon the prisoner, who as she wearily ascended the steps of the dock this morning was observed to be extremely pale and thin. The female warder, who hitherto had sat at some distance at the side of the dock, this morning drew her chair nearer to the prisoner, as though to be in readiness should her assistance be required by the unhappy woman. The court-room was crowded, and many fashionably dressed women were present. It was noticeable that the opera glasses, which on the first two days of the trial were somewhat disagreeably prominent, were conspicuously absent.

The first incident to excite animated interest was a rather startling admission of Dr. Richard Humphrey, the family medical man, who attended the deceased throughout his last illness, and with whose cross-examination by Sir Charles Russell the day's proceedings began, that had the deceased died on Wednesday, May 8th, he would have been prepared to give a certificate to the effect that death had been caused by acute congestion of the stomach, either gastritis or gastromenteritis.

The testimony given by Dr. Carter was also important. Dr. Carter is a physician of high standing in Liverpool. He declared without hesitation that the cause of death was arsenical poison, and no effort of Sir Charles Russell could induce him to admit that the death and subsequent appearance could be due to anything else.

Soon after noon the prisoner showed signs that the severe trial she was undergoing was producing symptoms of exhaustion. A glass of water, however, served to revive her, and she subsequently appeared to take more interest in the proceedings. Dr. Carter's emphatic assurance that the cause of death was arsenical poisoning and nothing else evidently produced a great impression upon all in the court, and it was noticeable that Sir Charles Russell treated this witness with more than ordinary consideration, and did not attempt to challenge his dictum otherwise than by suggesting that acute inflammation might have been caused by impure food.

What may be termed the sensation of the day was reserved for the analyst, Mr. Edward Davies, to contribute. Mr. Davies produced a lady's dressing gown and apron, said to belong to Mrs. Maybrick, and to have been found in her dressing-room. Upon it were stains, which Mr. Davies unhesitatingly pronounced to be arsenic. and he stated that the pockets were similarly stained. This piece of evidence, which was completely new, served to directly connect the prisoner in a personal manner with the use of arsenic in some form. This created intense excitement in the court. It was noticed that beyond a slight twitching of the hands the prisoner betrayed no perceptible emotion at the revelation. Amongst the various articles in which Mr. Davies stated that he discovered arsenic were the meat juice handed to him by Dr. Carter, the lady's handkerchief, three bottles, one almost full of arsenic, found in a chocolate box; a glass containing a handkerchief soaked in milk, in which was altogether upwards of 450 grains of arsenic; a sealed packet labelled poison for cats, which contained arsenic; a jug which had contained food taken to the office, and a bottle containing glycerine found in the lavatory. He had also found arsenic in some deposits from the lavatory, drain and sinks. Mr. Davies said he found arsenic in the liver and intestines of the deceased, but not in stomach or spleen. Passing to some fly papers which had been supplied to him, and which were of the same kind as those already referred to as being found in the washstand, he said they contained between two and three grains of arsenic each in the form of arsenite of potassium and arsenious acid. In the kidney he found about a hundredth part of a grain of arsenic; in the liver the equivalent of one-eighth of a grain at least, probably more. He could detect no arsenic in the pelvis nor in the lungs and heart. In cross-examination Sir Charles Russell took the witness carefully through the results of his various analyses, and in the course of the proceedings Mr. Davies produced the test tubes containing the preparations from the viscera, in which the arsenic was visible in the form of microscopic crystals adhering like film to the sides of the tubes. The case looks black for Mrs. Maybrick.

Art of Smiling.

Lessons in the art of smiling have been recorded of ancient times, and as an elegant accomplishment the art of smiling gracefully in just the right degree deserves consideration. Many persons open the mouth too widely, and the process recommended by a writer on beauty is "a sweet and gentle smile, where the mouth hardly opens, the cheek dimples slightly and the lower lip just conceals the ends of the upper teeth."

—The man who ought to listen and learn usually does most of the talking.

A GRIM RECEPTION.

Britain's Naval Display in Honor of Emperor William.

HE MEETS HER MAJESTY.

A last Friday night's Portsmouth cable gives the following graphic account of the reception of Emperor William in England that day:

Out in the channel lay thirty of England's warships, in three long parallel lines, streaching down the reach. Seaward were ranged 112 vessels of war, carrying 23,000 men. They were a most imposing sight collectively, a most impressive sight individually. For hours before the big ships of Germany arrived to greet and pass them they were the objects of great interest to all kinds of craft approaching as near to them as the black-lipped scowls of heavy cannon made them feel inclined. They were perfectly harmless, of course, and not the safest things in the world to go to sea in, some of them. But they had to-day a surly, don't-come-too-near-me-look that kept the cheapest excursion steamers at a distance. Inspected closely these great castles of floating metal, with black hulls and yellow upper works, really looked all the millions they have cost. They were in all the styles of naval architecture which have resulted from constant changes of the last thirty years. They were shapeless and shapely, symmetrical and the reverse. Some of them were decked in and others displayed an amount of complex hamper in the upper works that would disappear into shoe strings early in an engagement. There were iron hulls and steel hulls, simple, compound and triple expansion engines, single screws and twin screws, steel faced armour and compound armour broadside and central battery ships, barbettes and monitors. Every vessel represented a lot of new facts in plating, propulsion and armament that required a liberal education to comprehend, and a close study of several sciences to grasp. But they all looked excessively injurious to a foreign power, and had a capacity to do harm that was intelligible to the worst info med amateur at sea. Long, lean, black cannons peeped from the portholes, stuck out of grey iron sponsons, projected from turrets, or lay prone upon the barbettes. Lines of marines in red coats stood with their rifles perpendicular on the decks; solitary sentries in red coats paced the sides and walked the bridges. Brilliantly dressed officers in gold-laced caps, dark blue coats, gold braid, white trousers and patent leather shoes were on every deck. With them were lady guests in dresses of white, pink and pale blue, perched among the cannon like canaries in a gun shop, lending to the picture a touch of feminine frivolity in strong contrast with the deadly portent of their surroundings.

THE GERMAN SQUADRON.

At a quarter to 4 the little German band of ironclads were descried, hull down on the horizon, but rapidly came into complete view under a full head of steam. As they came nearer and nearer it was seen that the Hohenzollern, a black screw yacht seemingly about the size of the Osborne, but looking like a pigmy in front of the big black warships behind it, was flying the German royal standard at the main and the white English ensign at the fore. The German royal standard is a beautiful flag, with a black iron cross in the centre and four black eagles on gold ground.

As the Hohenzollern passed the lightship the German ensign of blue bars on white ground broke out at the fore of the Osborne, and the English ensign came fluttering down. Instantly the same thing took place all along the line of the fleet, the red and white of England giving place to the blue and white of Prussia. On the bridge of the Hohenzollern stood Emperor William in a cocked hat and the uniform of an admiral of the German navy. Beside him were Count Herbert Bismarck and Prince Henry of Prussia, also in cocked hats and dark blue uniforms, all three being heavily ornamented with gold braid and bullion fringe. The Hohenzollern came up abreast of the Osborne, the bridge of the latter being occupied by the Royal party. There was much fluttering of hands and nodding of heads between the Royal reception party and the Royal guest, and then the German fleet thundered out a salute of 21 guns, their salute to the Royal English standard. The effect, though small in comparison with the noise that followed, was a very striking one. Flashes of light and columns of smoke broke from the sides of the big floating batteries, and the smoke rose in clouds to envelop them, big white wreaths of it curling away up into the sky. The German fleet included the Baden, Sachsen, Oldenburg, Irene, Wacht, Kaiser, Deutschland, Friedrich der Grosse, the Preussen Zeiten, and the despatch boat Grief. They were joined at Cowes by the German training ship Niobe. By the Emperor's order each of the big black iron-clads, as it came up to enter the long waterway of ships, had its sides dressed with sailors in white, a human decoration of the neatest and most ship-shape character. As the two royal yachts came abreast of the Anson and Rodney, the former flying the flag of Rear-Admiral D'Arcy Irvine, C.B., and the latter the flag of Rear-Admiral Tracy, the fleet saluted There was such a roar of powder, such a thunder of noise, such clouds of smoke and such flashes of fire, that it is no wonder that the peaceful Shah of Persia grew ill over the experience. Bang mingled with bang, and salvo toppled over sonorously upon salvo, until it seemed as if the whole channel was being blown up with seventy ships firing 21 guns each as fast as the regulations permitted. The spectacle was one that no real battle could match. The ships were half concealed in clouds of smoke, and there was one mass of blue wreaths and rings. The smoke cleared and the manning of the ships became visible. Every ironclad that had no yards to man manned the sides. Those with yards presented a solid human rigging of blue jackets in the shrouds, on the yards and at the mast heads. It was a beautiful sight. On ship after ship, down the long line, on either side, the blue jackets were as immobile as if they felt to the full the importance of the occasion and the whole responsibility of the welcome was upon them.

THE ROYAL MEETING.

Almost immediately a launch put out from the Osborne, bearing the Prince of Wales and his suite. They were received on the quarter deck of the Hohenzollern by the German Emperor, and the Prince of Wales and the Emperor shook hands. Just as the Emperor landed the German squadron, at anchor between Ryde Bank and Mother Bank, saluted the Royal Standard floating from the palace at Osborne. The thunder of twenty-one guns from each announced to Her Majesty that her guest had arrived—rather a royal way of knocking at the door. Carriages awaited the party. The Emperor and Prince and Princess of Wales took the first. As night was falling over the waters and the lights were coming out on the warships, the Emperor of Germany and King of Prussia was received and greeted in the doorway of the palace by his royal grandmother, Her Majesty the Queen.

VANITY OF VANITIES.

Suicide of a Brooklyn Belle at a Summer Resort.

A Syracuse, N.Y., despatch says: Miss Lillian Dumont, of No. 284 St. James place, Brooklyn, committed suicide Tuesday night by hanging herself with her corset laces in a toilet-room of the hotel at Glenhaven, a summer resort on Skaneateles lake. She had attended a ball at the Glen that night and seemed in the best of spirits. Leaving the ball room about midnight, she went to the place where she was found dead some hours later. No cause is assigned for the deed, but it is hinted that she had been disappointed in love.

Miss Dumont was between 20 and 21 years of age, a girl of loveliness of person and of charming manners. Her father and mother are said to be people of prominence in Brooklyn, where Mr. Dumont at one time was rated a very wealthy man. At present the family occupy one of the handsomest residences in that city. Charles Dumont, a brother of the suicide, has been a well-known visitor to Glenhaven, and a leader in its summer festivities. Miss Dumont, has always been especially gay, was exceedingly popular with the young people there, and was seemingly extracting all the pleasure possible out of her life when she elected to end it.

Notes from Scotland.

The Duke of Portland has been appointed Lord-Lieutenant of Caithness, in room of the late Earl of Caithness.

The First Lord of the Treasury has declined to place the widow of Mr. James Grant, the Scotch novelist and historical writer, on the civil list. She is 62 years of age and totally unprovided for.

The library of the Writers to the Signet in Edinburgh is about to undergo internal alterations so as to make room for about 20,000 additional volumes. There are at present about 82,000 volumes in the library.

The Queen has appointed Rev. Henry Cowan, D.D., minister of New Greyfriars, Edinburgh, to be Professor of Divinity and Church History in the University of Aberdeen, in room of the late Professor Christie.

Mr. John Hutchison, sculptor, Edinburgh, has completed the memorial ordered by the Queen to commemorate the Royal Stewarts who lie buried in the grounds of Paisley Abbey. The memorial is in the form of a recumbent sculptured cross, in style similar to those which are to be met with in the Western Isles. It will have a base 8 feet by 4 feet, of polished Peterhead granite.

The British Government, while the Local Government Bills for Scotland were in committee, practically conceded free education to Scotland, as it agreed to increase the grant to about a quarter of a million sterling, which will be nearly, if not quite, sufficient to meet the school fees for education in all the five standards. It has therefore been resolved that after October 1st no School Board in Scotland will charge school fees.

THE LATE DR. J. G. HOLLAND, he eminent writer and physician, wrote and published in Scribner's Magazine: "It is a fact that many of the best proprietary medicines of the day are more successful than many physicians, and most of them are first discovered, and used in actual medical practice. When, however, any shrewd person knowing their virtue, forseeing their popularity, secures and advertises them, then, in the opinion of the bigoted, all virtue went out of them." The late Dr. Dio Lewis, in speaking of Warner's Safe Cure, says: "If I found myself the victim of a serious kidney trouble, I would use your preparation." Dr. R. A. Gunn, M.D., author of "Gunn's New Improved Handbook of Hygiene and Domestic Medicine," says: "I am willing to acknowledge and commend thus frankly the value of Warner's Safe Cure." The celebrated Dr. Thompson of the University of the city of New York, says: "More adults are carried off by chronic kidney disease than by any other one malady except consumption."

Accommodating on Both Sides.

Voice from up-stairs—Tell the burglar to go away, Mr. Jenkins, there's nothing for him to get in this house.

Mr. Jenkins (with a revolver at his head)—Yes, my dear. I did tell him so, and he says he is going in a minute.

The Old, Old Story.

"Did you know that McLysander had become a resurrectionist?"

"What for, some medical college?"

"No; he is compiling jokes for an almanac."

Editor Stead, of Pall Mall Gazette fame, will soon set sail for the United States in order to get a few ideas on the American style of journalism. On his return he is to take charge of a new Radical halfpenny morning paper for London. The money for the enterprise was all raised last week.

NOT A FAIR CRITERION.

Is marriage, then, I said to her,
A failure, do you think?
A warm, sweet smile was in her eyes,
Which flashed a cunning wink.
She answered as she gave my arm
A delicate caress:
"If it's like courtship, don't you think,
'Twould be a grand success?"

—"False won!" cried the young man who bet that his girl's teeth were her own and lost.

There is a good deal of difference between the scum and the upper crust, though both are at the top.

TERROR AT CHICAGO.

A Mad Horse Runs Amuck Through the Crowded Streets.

A Chicago despatch says: A horse with all the symptoms of hydrophobia ran amuck on Robie street yesterday afternoon and was finally killed beneath the shadow of the Moody tent at Milwaukee avenue. No tiger of the jungle could have created more of a sensation or shown a more serious desire to exterminate man and beast. Two men were bitten and eight horses torn by the teeth of the maddened animal. A thousand people joined in the hunt to destroy the brute. For two hours they chased up and down the streets and alleys, pursuing and pursued. Four policemen with Lieut. Penzen joined the crowd. Shortly after noon Mr. Erickson attempted to hitch his horse to his meatmarket waggon in front of his store. The animal was of gentle disposition, small, and without a trick or vicious habit. When the horse was led from the barn he showed signs of anger. Suddenly, throwing back his ears, he sunk his teeth in Erickson's arm, and, rearing, struck at his master with his fore feet. Erickson dropped the halter and the horse chased his master into the shop. The beast put men, women and children to flight. He charged at everyone he chanced to meet or overtake. In rushing after three women and several children he ran over two little girls, knocking them down, but only slightly bruising them. The others escaped, one of the women climbing a fence, and the others with the screaming children, ran up the steps and into the door of a house. When nearing North avenue, Conductor Duffy, of the North avenue line, stepped off his car and caught hold of the animal's halter. He supposed he was simply a runaway horse. The animal made a vicious snap at him, catching his right hand with his teeth and taking out skin and flesh. The conductor left go of the halter and jumped on the car, the horse biting and striking at him. As the horse went down Milwaukee avenue he ran at everything he saw, and took a fancy for attacking his own kind. Every horse he passed, and there were eight of them, he nipped in the sides, and tore large pieces of hide from the ribs of some. Others he caught where he could, but always left the mark of his teeth. The animals thus injured in turn became demoralized and added to the excitement. The police finally drove the horse from the street into a vacant lot where he was lassoed and shot. Conductor Duffy's hand, which was terribly torn, was immediately cauterized. He and his family are in an agony of fright as to the results that may follow. He is in great pain. Mr. Erickson called in a physician and had his wound dressed. He thinks the horse was bitten by a mad dog two weeks ago.

List of Fall Fairs.

Following is a list of the dates of fall fairs so far as at present obtainable:

NAME.	PLACE.	DATE.
Industrial	Toronto	Sept. 9 to 21
Midland Central	Kingston	Aug. 28 to Sept. 7
Eastern Tps. A.	Sherbrooke, Que	Sept. 3 to 5
Port Hope Ex	Port Hope	" 3 to 5
Central Canada	Ottawa	" 9 to 14
Southern	Brantford	" 10 to 12
South Renfrew	Renfrew	" 17 and 18
Northwestern	Goderich	" 17 to 19
Peninsular	Chatham	" 17 to 20
Lincoln County	St. Catharines	" 23 to 25
Great Central	Hamilton	" 23 to 27
Wellesley and East Lope	Wellesley	" 24 and 25
South Grey	Durham	" 24 and 25
Woodstock	Woodstock	" 24 and 25
North Lanark	Almonte	" 24 to 26
Lindsay Central	Lindsay	" 24 to 26
Ontario and Durham	Whitby	" 24 to 26
Centre Bruce	Paisley	" 24 to 26
Southern Counties	St. Thomas	" 24 to 27
Central	Peterboro	" 24 to 27
Great Northern	Collingwood	" 25 to 27
Central Agricul.	Walters Falls	" 26 and 27
Central Exhib'n	Cannington	" 27 and 28
North Braut	Paris	Oct. 1 and 2
County of Haldimand	Cayega	" 1 and 2
Arthur Union	Arthur	" 1 and 2
Great South-western	Essex Centre	" 1 to 3
Brampton	Brampton	" 1 to 3
The Northern	Walkerton	" 1 to 4
C. Saskatchewan	Saskatoon	" 2
East York	Markham	" 2 to 4
Ontario Central	Port Perry	" 2 to 4
North Perth	Stratford	" 3 and 4
North Renfrew	Beachburg	" 3 and 4
South Oxford	Otterville	" 4 and 5
Howard Branch	Ridgetown	" 8 to 10
West York and Vaughan	Woodbrige	" 9 and 10
C. Wellington	Fergus	" 10 and 11
Scarboro'	Danforth	" 10
Norfolk Union	Simcoe	" 15 and 16

Threatened Trouble in Zanzibar.

A London cable of Thursday says: Bushiri has sent a threatening message to the inhabitants of Bagamoyo and the neighborhood, forbidding them to supply the Germans with provisions. He is believed to be coming down with one quick firing gun, which is supposed to have been captured from the German station at Opwapwa, and he announces his intention to attack Bagamoyo. Fever is prevalent there, and among the fleet. The English are apparently suffering the most. On the Agamemnon alone 80 are sick, including 7 officers, out of a total complement of 400. The deck has been transformed into a hospital, and hammocks have been slung everywhere.

—A Jersey City policeman having offered his hand to a young lady, which was refused, he arrested her. "What is the charge?" asked the sergeant at the station house. "Resisting an offer, sir," was the reply.

A sign-post in the Highlands of Scotland reads: "Persons wishing to use this road will give notice to the gamekeeper in case they may be shot."

She raised her eyes; his cause was won—
A maid of sterling sense was she.
He clasped her to his manly breast,
And now a married man is he.

"What's the matter, driver?" said a passenger in a herdic, "why doesn't this coach go?" "'Cause you ain't put a nickel in the slot, that's why." And all the other passengers tittered.

ALE OF THE GAS.

How sweet to roam by the sad sea waves,
While no cares your mind harass,
And what joy to think, as you watch the stars
That you're paying no bill for gas!

But, oh, what grief when you travel home
And the meter your sad eyes meet!
You find that the cook has been holding "soirees"
And has burned ten million feet!

—The Shah, on meeting the Chief Secretary the other day, asked plumply: "Are you going to give Ireland Home Rule?" and Mr. Balfour, every whit as plumply, replied: "Certainly not!"

MANITOBA MATTERS.

Improving Crop Prospects—A Northwest Jack-the-Ripper—A Mock Marriage.

The body of an unknown man has been found, murdered after Jack-the-Ripper fashion, in the Louise River.

Frank Moritz, a farmer, living a few miles from Gretna, spent Monday in town and imbited freely. When he returned home in the evening he turned his hired men, four in number—Germans lately from the old country—out of doors. Later on the men returned to the house, Moritz promising to allow them peaceful admittance. The last man was coming in when Moritz drew a revolver and fired. The man saw his intention, but not soon enough to prevent his shooting. He put his hand forward to catch the revolver, and received the bullet in his hand, which probably saved his life. Moritz is under arrest. The wound is a bad one.

Martin McDonald, ex-Registrar of Brandon, has been arrested, charged with falsifying the books of the office.

A young man named Tutman is charged with seducing a young lady from Salt Coats by means of a mock marriage. Tutman has fled the country.

James Thompson, Liberal M.P.P. for Emerson, was married to-day to Miss Ritchie, daughter of a well-known Winnipeger.

The 6-year-old child of Jerry Robinson, of St. Peter's, was fatally burned by her clothes catching fire.

The Sun says it is understood that a measure will be introduced at the next session of the Legislature to abolish the jury system in civil cases in Manitoba, also that the Government will submit a measure abolishing the dual language system, that is, the use of the French language in Manitoba, Government documents to be printed only in one language. The Board of Education will be wiped out and a portfolio of Minister of Education created.

A young girl living at Beulah, Man., hanged herself from a tree last Tuesday, and was quite dead when discovered. The cause of the act was that her mother, against the girl's wishes, had married an Indian living at Brandon.

A despatch from Moosomin to-day says: Intelligence has been received from Carnduff Point, in Assiniboia, 70 miles south of here, that the body of a man horribly mutilated has been discovered on the banks of the Souris River. It was apparent that the man had been dead for some time, as his features were discolored. The entrails of the victim had been torn out and scattered about on the ground. There is great excitement over the event. No clue seems to have been discovered as to the perpetrator.

The Winnipeg physicians have formed a committee to entertain and banquet the eastern physicians on their arrival here on the 9th.

At a Liberal picnic at Clearwater to-day Hon. Mr. Smart announced that the Government would wipe out the Separate School system. It was the intention of the Government to overhaul the whole educational machine. The double-barrelled system, with two superintendents, two Boards and two sets of inspectors must go and a Minister of Education appointed, one of the present Ministers taking the portfolio. The Government would administer the Education Department and be responsible to the people.

Work on the Winnipeg Transfer Railway on the banks of the Red River is progressing satisfactorily.

Burke leaves for Chicago on Sunday morning.

Fresh Fruit Syrups.

Fresh syrups of the grape, cherry, pine-apple, strawberry, tamarind, or of any of the home fruits, make refreshing and healthful beverages. The fruit is best crushed by hand in a wooden squeezer, metal being liable to impair the flavor of the juice. Skins and pulps are then mixed with the juice and plenty of sugar, and are covered with pounced ice. By the time the ice has melted the full strength of the juice is extracted, and the mass should then be strained through cheese-cloth and the syrup kept on ice till wanted. The juice of pressed fruit is a most grateful and beneficial drink at this season, refreshing and stimulating one, while it assists in renewing the wasted tissues of the body.

Discussing Dr. Tanner's Sentence.

A Thursday's London cable says: In the House of Commons this evening Mr. Sexton moved an adjournment in order to consider the sentence passed upon Dr. Tanner under the Crimes Act. He argued that the charge against Dr. Tanner was not assault with violence, that it did not come under the Crimes Act, and therefore the sentence was illegal. Mr. Madden, Solicitor-General for Ireland, replied that there was a method of testing the legality of the sentence without adjourning the House. After a lengthy debate Mr. Sexton's motion was rejected by 174 to 118.

Killing His Pride.

Ethel—Do you think he loves you, Nellie?

Nellie—Oh, I'm certain of it. Why, he wants to marry me so much that he has borrowed money of papa for us to get married on—a thing his proud, sensitive soul could not brook if he did not love me.

—It is rather remarkable that at seasons when throat diseases are prevalent doctors so often look down in the mouth.

—Mrs. De Splaye—I think you are too stingy, John. I have worn this bathing suit two seasons already, and I am positively ashamed to wear it any longer. Mr. De Splaye—I should think you would be superlatively ashamed to wear it any shorter.

I asked a bachelor why he
In singleness had tarried.
He answered thus: "Because, you see,
I've friends who've long been married."

Araminta—You put your arm around my waist so gracefully, George. George—I have had lots of practice, I was a street car conductor five years.

—If you want to find out all about women and their ways ask some young man who has never been married.

Emma—So you're engaged to young George Halby Sadie—Yes; George and I came to an understanding some weeks ago. You remember the wheat corner in Chicago? Emma—To be sure I do. Sadie—Well, that's the time I got caught on the squeeze.

THREE OLD MAIDS.

Joseph Howard Speaks of Misses Beecher, Dix and Anthony.

I have in my mind three old maids, and the moment I mention their names they will be recognized the world around as the names of three great women. They are Catharine Beecher, Dorothy Dix, Susan B. Anthony. There are others who have attained notoriety, such as Kate Field, the wine agent, Anna Dickinson, the stump speaker. But I am not speaking of notoriety. I am dealing with forces, vital, effective. Dorothy Dix will never be forgotten so long as the word hospital endures, or so long as cold type preserves the records of humanitarian effort on the battlefield and in the sick wards during our late civil war. She was a nervous sisterly left hand to the great war secretary, her brother, John A. Dix. Catharine Beecher will have her memory perpetuated so long as life endures and children are to be taught, while Susan B Anthony, who has survived taunts and outlived slander, might well die to-day content with the record she has made in an endeavor to uplift the women of the world from the slough of dependence, upon the solid substantiality of self-support.

Catharine Beecher was not a pretty thing to look at, but mentally she was the peer of any of her family.

Dorothy Dix, for reasons of her own, preferred the life of spinster, a sweet-faced, happy-hearted old lady when she died.

Miss Anthony, filled with a bitter gall of prejudice, is not in every way to be commended nor in every leading to be followed, but the man who derides her honest intention and seeks to despoil her of the crown of glory and of honor that fits her brow as a pioneer along the very choicest lines of thought in the best interests of her fellow women is a coward and a dastard.

How to Keep Milk.

A summer bulletin has just been issued by the Ontario Board of Health, to spread information regarding contagious diseases, and especially diphtheria—"that slayer of its thousands in Ontario" and elsewhere. The care of food and the best modes of disinfection are dwelt upon. The following advice is given as to the care of milk, "that most important of all articles of food:"

The cows should be healthy, and should not be fed upon swill, or the refuse of breweries or glucose factories, or upon any other fermented food. The pasture must be free from noxious weeds, and the barn and yard must be kept clean. Cows must not be allowed to drink stagnant water, but only pure, fresh water, and they must not be heated or worried before being milked. The udders should be washed, and then wiped dry before each milking. The milk must be at once thoroughly cooled. After the milk has been received by the consumer, it should be kept in a perfectly clean place, free from dust, and at a temperature not exceeding 60° F. Milk should not be allowed to stand uncovered, even for a short time, in the living or sleeping rooms. In many of the better houses in the country and villages, and occasionally in the cities, the drain from the refrigerator leads into a cesspool or kitchen drain. This is highly dangerous; there should be no connection whatever between the refrigerator and any receptacle of filth. The only vessels in which milk should be kept are tin, glass or porcelain. After using the vessel, it should be scalded, and then, if possible, exposed to the air.

Instances are given of febrile diseases and outbreaks of sickness caused by bacteria and a great quantity of hygienic instruction may be found in the twelve pages. Disinfection is spoken of thus:

It is a great pity that in the matter of disinfection of rooms we should in this region still be going through with the inefficient mummery of burning sulphur with closed doors under the impression that it will destroy contagion. Sulphurous acid, as it is usually applied in house disinfection, has been shown to be very inefficient and unreliable. It may be better than nothing, but in disinfectants—which are often our sole weapons in fighting epidemics—the best is none too good. The efficiency of sulphurous acid may be increased by securing the thorough wetting of every article to be disinfected, but even then it is not great. The disinfection of the room and its contents at the close of the illness will be more easy and efficient, if care has been exercised in removing all unnecessary articles of furniture, hangings, pictures, etc., from it at the commencement of the disease. All clothing which cannot be washed, bedding, mattresses, pillows, etc., carpets, cushions and all such furniture as has not exposed wooden frames, should be tied up in sheets saturated with 2 per cent. carbolic solution, and sent away to be steamed at the public disinfecting station. All valueless articles should be burned at the disinfecting station. If this is impossible they may be disposed of in the house furnace or range at such times as cooking is not going on. Polished and metallic articles should be firmly rubbed off on all their surfaces with cloths wet with five per cent carbolic acid. The clothes used should be immediately burned. Walls, doors, windows and woodwork should be thoroughly washed, as should, finally, the floor, with five per cent. carbolic solution. If walls are papered or frescoed, the floors should be thoroughly flushed with five per cent. carbolic solution and then all the walls should be thoroughly and firmly rubbed down in every part with lumps of bread, the crumbs being allowed to fall on the carbolized floor. Then the woodwork should be washed with carbolic solution, the crumbs gathered up and burned and the floors washed with water.

The room should be finally exposed as fully as possible to the air for at least twenty-four hours, and longer if it is practicable.

This pamphlet should be widely circulated and be kept for reference.

—"Forty Thieves" was recently billed for a Montreal theatre, but it was a failure. The insignificant number of thieves was only jeered at by the American colony of defaulters and cashiers.—Texas Siftings.

J. K. Emmet's season begins early next month, and his energetic, young, business-managing son is hard at work. Emmet intends to make a feature of a "string quartet," which he will carry in his company, and which has been selected with great care.

FOUR ONES.

Used to Designate the Hour on Watch Faces—How It Originated.

"Mark down the figures on the face of a watch," said a Summit street jeweller.

"1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 6"—began the reporter, as he put pencil to paper.

"No, I mean the Roman numerals."

Then this was produced:

"I., II., III., IV., V., VI., VII., VII., IX., X., XI., XII."

"You are wrong," said the jeweller.

"I guess not," said the reporter.

"Try again," said the jeweller.

"Perhaps I don't know how to count in Roman figures," said the reporter.

"You know that well enough, but the watchmakers use different ones. Look at your watch."

"Haven't got one."

"Well, look at mine. See the figure which stands for 4 o'clock."

The reporter looked and was surprised. It was IIII. and not IV.

"Are all the clocks and watches that way?" he asked.

"Every one which has Roman figures on its dial."

"Why?"

"Well, I'll tell you the story. It is nothing but a tradition among watchmakers, but the custom has always been preserved. You may or you may not know that the first clock that in any way resembled those now in use was make by Henri Vick in 1370. He made it for Charles V. of France, who has been called 'the wise.'

"Now Charles was wise in a good many ways. He was wise enough to recover from England most of the land which Edward III. had conquered, and he did a good many other things which benefited France; but his early education had been somewhat neglected and he probably would have had trouble in passing a civil service examination in these enlightened ages. Still he had a reputation for wisdom and thought it was necessary, in order to keep it up, that he should also be supposed to possess book learning. The latter was a subject he was extremely touchy about.

"So the story runs in this fashion, although I will not vouch for the language, but put it in that of the present day:

"'Yes, the clock works well,' said Charles, 'but,' being anxious to find some fault with a thing he did not understand, 'you have got the figures on the dial wrong.'

"'Wherein, your majesty,' asked Vick.

"'That four should be four ones,' said the king.

"'You are wrong, your majesty,' said Vick.

"'I am never wrong,' thundered the king. 'Take it away and correct the mistake.' And corrected it was; and from that day to this 4 o'clock on a watch or clock dial has been IIII. instead of IV. The tradition has been faithfully followed."—Toledo Blade.

United States Ammunition.

At the Schuylkill United States arsenal, near Philadelphia, there is manufactured each year 8,000,000 rounds of ammunition and 15,000,000 of rifle balls. Three millions are used for target practice by the rank and file of the army. The other is kept for reserve or used in testing arms. So much each day is used to test the character of the work produced. The pressure, carrying power and the quality of the arms used are tested every day. New guns are being sent out to be tested and thousands of rounds of ammunition are used in these experiments for war. The arsenal at Philadelphia is the only one where ammunition is made in large quantities for the government. Its operations are peculiar and its machinery a study. The different processes represent the triumph of mechanical ingenuity. In these hours of peace few people can comprehend how much is being done in the way of testing the implements of defense.—New York Times

Blind Fish.

Professor Ray Lankester, in a recent lecture at the Royal institution, thus attempted to account for the absence of eyes in the fishes in the famous underground Kentucky caves in the following way: A great flood carries to the bottom of the Kentucky caves, some 30 miles below the surface, a number of fish among whose very numerous offspring will be some defective in sight, as some babies are born blind, or without any eyes at all. The fish who can see some faint glimmerings of light will swim away toward that light, while those will remain that cannot perceive the gleams. This with every succeeding generation would occur, the stronger in sight swimming away and the weaker remaining, and as the breeding would therefore occur between those of the worst sight, fish would be born with weaker eyes and weaker until born blind.

The Minister Gets Accurate Information.

"What pretty children you have!" said the new minister to the proud mother of three little ones. "Tell me, my dear"—taking a little girl of 5 upon his lap—"are you the oldest of the family?"

"No, sir," responded the little miss, with the usual accuracy of childhood; "my pa's older'n me."

An Unsatisfactory Apology.

Mr. Jay Hawke (of Secaucus).—I thought you advytised a Congress of Beauty Show here.

Mr. Coney Fake (proprietor of museum). Well, ain't yer seen it?

Mr. Hawke.—This place is a fraud!

Mr. Fake.—Dat's what all d' papers say. Why don't ye read 'em?

Temptation Solicited.

Willie (who has eaten his apple)—"Mabel, let's play Adam and Eve, and I'll be Adam."

Mabel—"All right. Well?"

Willie—"Now you tempt me to eat your apple and I'll succumb."

They are telling a very good story of Toole just now. Once, in Dundee, he offered to give a short sketch as a side show at a charity bazaar, and crowds paid their shilling to get into the room. When Toole came up, and assured the doorkeeper that he was the showman, the canny Scot stuck to his orders, and said, "May be ye are, and may be no, but ye canna get in here till ye pay a shilling." Toole paid.

WHEN PEOPLE MARRY.

Curious Things Shown by Records of Pennsylvania.

Thirteen per cent. of all the men married in Pennsylvania last year married women older than themselves. Seven per cent. took wives of their own age, and the remaining 80 per cent. married women younger than themselves. The average age of the men was 27 years and of the women 23 years. These interesting facts are found in the annual report for 1888 of Secretary of Internal Affairs Thomas J. Stewart, which contains much other curious information about the matrimonial propensities of Pennsylvanians. Thus it appears that more men are married at the age of 23 than at any other, and that among women 21 is the favorite age. The youngest wife of 1888 was only 13 years old, and the oldest was aged 71. Two boys of 16 were married, and two old graybeards of 86 ventured into matrimony, probably not for the first time. Of 14,726 women married, and whose ages were given, 4,065, or 27.5 per cent. were less than 20 years old. Among the men there were only 493 who were so young. There were 23 girls of 14 years married. 105 of 15, 353 of 16, 816 of 17, 1,333 of 18, 1,434 of 19, 1,322 of 20, 2,041 of 21, 1,517 of 22, and 1,140 of 23. After the latter age the number of those who found husbands rapidly decline. These figures show that if a Pennsylvania girl is not married by the time she is 23 years old the chances are that she will become an old maid. Men proceed more leisurely about matrimony. Besides the two 16-year-old husbands in 1888 there were 38 aged 17, 128 18 years old, and 325 19 years old. The figures then take a jump to 637 at 20, and reach the maximum in 1,565 at 23. They decrease slowly after that. There were 437 men married after they were 50 years old, but only 171 women. There was a remarkable disparity in the ages of some of the couples. A woman of 59 years married a man of 31, and an old man of 74 wedded a maiden of 24. The youngest couple were a 17-year-old husband and a 15-year-old wife. The girl of 13 wedded a man 19 years older than herself. A man of 54 married a girl of 18, his age being just three times hers, and a man of 48 did nearly as well, taking a 17-year-old wife.

In the marriages where the women were older than the men the differences in ages rarely exceeded five years. There were 83 marriages where one of the parties had previously been divorced.

It is estimated that there were 6,000 marriages of couples from this State in Camden alone, and, of course, there must have been very many more in cities and towns in other States bordering on Pennsylvania.—Philadelphia Record.

Very Fauntleroy.

First Omaha Boy—So you ain't goin' to run away from home and go swimmin' with us to-day? Did your mother say she'd whip you?

Second Boy—No, I wouldn't mind a licsin'.

First Boy—Would she lock you in the cellar?

Second Boy—No, I don't mind any of them common things, but she said if I ain't good she'll make me wear my Fauntleroy clothes, so you kin bet yer life I'm goin' to be good.—Omaha World.

A Doubtful Compliment.

Weeping Widow—You are sure, Mr. Boneplanter, that you will conduct everything in a satisfactory manner?

Eminent Undertaker—Have no fears on that score. I beg of you, Mrs. Billhope. Of all the people I have buried in my long and successful career I am proud to say that not one ever raised the slightest objection to my work.

Convenient.

"This is a mighty convenient railroad," said a traveling man to the conductor.

"Glad you like it."

"Yes, it's great. You can get out wherever you want to without waiting for the car to stop."

[illegible]
Cooing [illegible]
King's street walk.
Moonlight clear—
Pleasant talk

Melon [illegible]
Lonely lay
On the [illegible]ave,
In Love's ray

Bliss entranced
Love is blind
Never saw
That melon rind.

[illegible] pants—
[illegible] yell—
Short [illegible] earnest,
Sound [illegible] like—well

. . . .

Fractured pants.
Busted collar—
Tailor sued.
About a dollar.

—London's policemen number 14,247; hackmen, 14,267.

—The style of some writers is graphic, of others, merely paragraphic.

—The import duty on the "Angelus," rating it at the value paid for it, will be $37,000.

—"Break the news gently," said a train robber to his pal, as they pulled down the telegraph wires.

—A wonderful young Russian giantess has just reached Paris. Her name is Elizabeth Liska. She is only 11 years of age, and is already 6 feet 6 inches in height.

—"Father," said Willie, who had just been corrected, "that strap is hereditary, isn't it?" "I don't know that it is." "But it descends from father to son, doesn't it?"

—At Canterbury, England, the other day, Archbishop Smith defined gambling as "the risking of sums larger than a man could afford to lose on ventures over which he could exercise little or no control."

PRECEDENT.

The wise man seldom gives advice
Else he would lose his fame,
But when he must he shows his sense
In doing it by reference;
If things go wrong—that's evidence
That he is not to blame.

Edward Michael, J. W. Pigott's manager, has returned from London. He says that Nat Goodwin positively signed a contract yesterday, by which he will produce "The Bookmaker," which Pigott will come to America to rehearse.

LAND TENURE IN CHINA.

The Laws all Favor the Tenant, who Pays no Taxes.

In a paper lately read before the Shanghai Asiatic Society by Mr. Jamieson it was stated that, although the Emperor theoretically owns everything under the sun, the private owner of land in China has as absolute a property in it as he can have under any Government. Waste or abandoned lands, as well as those for which there are not heirs, revert to the Crown, which can also annex private land for public purposes. Land tax is in all cases paid direct to the Government, and there are no zemindars and no "farmers-general" in China. There are two main tenures, military and common, the former applying only to certain military colonies and to grants made to his followers by the Manchu conqueror of the country in 1644.

Ninety-nine hundredths of the land is held under common tenure, which has three conditions attached to it, viz: The payment of the land tax, the supply on demand of statute labor to the authorities and the payment of a fine in alienation. For the land tax the hsien, or district, is the unit, and is assessed at a fixed sum by the Government, which the district magistrate has to pay whether he receives it or not. But as a rule he has a surplus. In the event of some great calamity, such as a dearth or inundation, he may get a remission, the benefit of which reaches the people. The supplying of statute labor has almost fallen into disuse, which perhaps accounts for the bad state of public works in China. The fees are payable on the transfer of land by sale or mortgage, succession or inheritance. Probably half the soil of China is owned by the peasants who till it. Large tracts are owned by retired officials and their families, usually called the "literati and gentry," who lease it to small farmers on a kind of customary tenancy at will, the rent, which is paid in kind, amounting to half the crop in the best soil and diminishing as the land is poorer. The rent is paid as soon as the crop is harvested, so that rents are seldom in arrears and evictions are very rare. The laws are all in favor of the tenant, who pays no taxes or rates of any kind, and when he leaves takes everything with him, including his house. The soil is so rich that the farms are generally very small, and indeed it is estimated that a square mile is capable of supporting a population of 3,840 persons. Within these broad lines there is every variety of arrangement respecting the ownership of land; there are absolute sales and sales in which the vendor has a right to claim something more if the land rises in value; some sales are revocable, some irrevocable, the former being apparently in the nature of mortgages, the limitation period being 30 years.

Again, there is a dual ownership in land, one man owning the surface, the other being regarded as the owner of the soil and liable for all the taxes; and there seems to be a good deal of Chinese law in the respective rights of the two owners as to house-building and laying coffins in the common ground. The ownership is established in the usual way by title deeds, registered in the district offices.—Philadelphia North American.

Are competent authorities say Bright's Disease has no symptoms of its own, but is presents the symptoms of other affections. Warner's Safe Cure is universally recognized as a specific for Bright's Disease. That is why it cures so many other diseases, which are caused by the kidney affection. It restores the kidneys to healthy action.

Try the Ice-Chest Treatment.

Just notice how nicely Mr. Gladstone and his wife have gotten along all these years and learn a lesson from it. "Whenever my wife insists I submit," says the great liberal; "whenever I insist she submits. We never discuss family affairs at the table, and if anything unpleasant occurs during the evening we never refer to it till next day." That is a good scheme. Family difficulties should never be discussed until they have lain in the ice-chest over night

ALMA LADIES' COLLEGE,

ST. THOMAS, ONTARIO.

Graduates of Alma Commercial College are now in lucrative positions in the leading cities of Canada and the United States. Full courses in Book-keeping, Phonography, Penmanship, Type-writing. Certificates and Diplomas granted.

Young ladies pursuing either of the above courses can also enter for Music, Fine Arts, or Elocution and enjoy all the advantages of residence. Rates low. 80pp. Announcement free. Address Principal Austin, A. M.

A Loss to Literature.

Mrs. Culture—"I don't see what is the matter with the magazines. They used to be full of intensely interesting articles, but now they are dreadfully stupid."

Mr. Culture (an omniverous newspaper reader)—"I think it likely, my dear, that all the intensely interesting writers have been engaged by the patent medicine proprietors."

"What's In a Name?"

Shakspeare said there was nothing, but there is. Would Caesar have had such notoriety if his name had been Caleb W. Pickerskill? Think of Patti drawing $7,000 a night if the bill-boards announced her as Jane Brown! The idea is absurd. Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Purgative Pellets is a name that has made a record. These tiny, sugar-coated pills cure sick and bilious headache, bowel complaints, internal fever and costiveness.

America, as the land of big things, will never be able to submit without an effort of rivalry to the record achieved in Paris the other Sunday in the way of a big concert. We think an orchestra of two or three hundred performers large, but in the gardens of the Tuileries there was a concert given by a band of 28,000 performers, "representing the musical element of 72 departments of France." The simultaneous playing of the "Marseillaise" was most impressive.

—Los Angeles has a modest girl who learns church songs from her sister and not from the book, because it is a hymn book.

—Marriage is not always a failure. The wedding presents at yesterday's royal ceremony at Buckingham Palace are worth $1,000,000.—New York World.

MUSIC ON THE FIELD.

It Is Seldom Heard, but the Players Are Often There.

The majority of people imagine that every band accompanies its regiment wherever it goes for the purpose of keeping up the good spirits of the soldiers, of supplying tolerable harmony for the better digesting of the officers' dinners, and in the case of actual conflict to inspire the men with enthusiasm and incite them to acts of heroism compared with which Tyrtæus—with his flutes and verses inflaming the ardor of the Spartans, so that they cut in pieces the whole army of the hitherto unconquerable Messinians—is quite outrivaled. Nothing of the sort, says a writer in the National Review. Our fine regimental bands are not taken to the battlefield, and to suppose that Tommy Atkins expires to the strains of "Men of Harlech," or "Bonnie Dundee," is to perpetuate a fallacy which many an old widow with a scapegrace son could dispel.

What real fighting would be to orchestral accompaniment I cannot judge, but it would certainly be no inglorious end to blare a tuba in the face of the enemy until an abstruent ball choked its funnel or created a vacuum in the neighboring bass drum! It is the trumpeters and buglers of the cavalry and the buglers, drummers and fifers of the infantry only who go on active service in a musical capacity, and then the bandsmen and band sergeant are deputed to the ranks, their instruments being returned into stores for safe custody until the piping times of peace. The trumpet major and trumpeters of the cavalry, and the drummers, buglers and fifers of the infantry join their respective troops, retaining their instrumental duties in the field, but the other bandsmen are trained as stretcher bearers and to assist the medical staff generally in the care of the wounded. If circumstances warrant it, both cavalry and infantry musicians are liable to be called upon for ordinary soldiers' duties, and they are so trained when at home.

Occasionally even the bandmaster goes on active service, though more often he has to remain at home instructing backward men and boys unable to bear arms, and the case of the bandmaster of the Twenty-fourth South Wales Borderers, who was killed at Isandula, as well as the promotion of the bandmaster of the Sixty-fifth York and Lancaster Regiment, are recent instances of this. The latter, F. H. Mahony, was appointed quartermaster in this regiment, and was mentioned in the despatches and promoted honorary captain for his distinguished conduct at the battles of El Teb and Tamai. The bands of the Guards and other stationary regiments are never ordered away for active service, either in the ranks or as bandsmen, which may, or may not, be a reason why men are so anxious to get into these particular bands.

A feeling of dullness and languor,
Which is not akin to pain,
And resembles suffering only
As the dusk resembles rain, is often the first indication of incipient disease. In such cases the famous "ounce of prevention" is the highest wisdom, and may be found in its most potent form in Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery, which, by its wonderful blood-purifying and invigorating tonic properties, will quickly restore the ebbing vitality, repair and strengthen the system, and thus ward off threatening sickness. Its saving influence reaches every organ of the body. The Discovery is guaranteed to cure in all cases of diseases for which it is recommended, or money refunded.

Entertaining for Swells.

In many of the smoking or coffee rooms of the English hotels, especially in the large cities, there is on the mantel a box for contributions to some charity. On the top is a card on which is inscribed: "Please give a penny and it will thank you." Drop a penny in the slot and up comes another card on which "Thank you, sir," is printed. It pleases the half-befuddled cheap swells immensely.—Daily Hotel Register.

They "Mean Business."

If any one has ever given Dr. Sage's Catarrh Remedy a fair trial and has not been cured thereby, the manufacturers of that unfailing Remedy would like to hear from that individual, for when they offer, as they do, in good faith, $500 reward for a case of nasal catarrh which they cannot cure, they mean just exactly what they say. They are financially responsible, and abundantly able, to make good their guarantee if they fail, as any one can learn by making proper enquiry. Remedy sold by all druggists, at 50 cents.

Ladies' Bars.

The New York Sun in a recent issue gave an appalling account of women's drinking places in New York city. How many Christian women would be utterly shocked to read of the "ladies' bar" at Maillard's, of six tables full of women ordering drinks, "absinthe cocktail," a "pony of brandy," champagne and sherry; or to hear of the women's bric-a-brac store, where young girls and matrons indulge in all sorts of liquor from beer and milk punch to whiskey and brandy. Sir.

Malicious.

Mrs. Youngwife—I am so happy! My dear husband never goes out. He always stays at home with me in the evenings.

Female Friend—Yes, I have heard that he never cared for pleasure of any kind.

—"Yes," said the literary man, with a sigh, "style is a fine thing for a writer to have, but when his wife's got it, too, it takes all the profit away."

D W L 33 89

AGENTS MAKE $100 A MONTH [illegible] Write for terms. A colored [illegible] W. & F. BUSH, St. Thomas, [illegible].

DUNN'S BAKING POWDER
THE COOK'S BEST FRIEND

GEO. MITCHELL,

BANKER,

FLESHERTON.

DRAFTS BOUGHT AND SOLD.

Special Attention paid to the collection Notes and Accounts, 2nd door North Exchange Bank.

The Local News.

What is Happening in Our Own Vicinity.

Division Court next Tuesday.

Rev. Mr. Shilton and Mr. Crisp were visiting at Mt. Forest on Sunday.

W. Irwin, Esq., has been spending his holidays in Collingwood township.

For the latest novelties in dress goods see M. Richardson & Co's fall stock.

We are indebted to a lady friend for copies of the San Francisco Chronicle.

Read G. Blackburn's change of ad. and learn where to get your nice things.

Mr A. Munshaw has lately added a new roof to his stables and re-painted them.

The noise of the reaper once more drowns the chirp of the noisy grasshopper

Those desiring to purchase bees should correspond with Mr. Plewes. See advertisement.

The all important question—are you going to take in the Wiarton excursion on Monday next? If not, Wiaryounot?

Mr Geo Parks has purchased the stable livery from Mr. McInnis, the exchange having taken place on Tuesday.

NEW TWEEDS and worsted suitings. New patterns for fall, a large stock to choose from now, at M. Richardson & Co's.

A full stock of Grey flannels, all wool, from the best mills in Canada at very low prices. Examine them at M. Richardson & Co's.

Mr Nicholson occupied the Methodist pulpit here on Sunday morning last and Dr Christoe in the evening. Both gentlemen did well and gave very interesting discourses.

St. Leon Mineral Waters, for Constipation, Rheumatism, Indigestion and Liver Complaints. 3cts per Glass or 50cts. per Gallon at the Medical Hall, Flesherton.

Mr. Guy Orr, of Artemesia, Grey Co., has been visiting his brother, Mr. D. Orr, town line, Trafalgar, during the past week Streetsville Review.

M. Richardson & Co. are now receiving fall dry goods, and offer balance of summer stock at clearing prices. Bargains in every department this week.

The Canadian Horticulturist for August is brim full of good things for the gardener, florist and fruit raiser. One dollar per annum. Published at Grimsby, Ont.

STORE FOR SALE,—a general business in County Grey in fine farming section, stock strictly first class and staple, good opening. Terms easy, address office of this paper.

Those who enjoy reading a good story will find the one which we publish on the opposite page to be of the very best, and not calling for any apology for the space occupied. It is clipped from Collier's Once a Week.

The finest stock of china and glassware just opened at M. Richardson & Co's China Hall. See their cheap tea and dinner sets.

Tommy Acheson, of the Priceville baseball club, is only about sixteen years old, yet he stood behind the bat and picked up the ball like a professional on Friday last Master Tommy is a phenomenon and will command a good salary in the near future if he is so disposed.

New goods just received at W. Richardson's: A large consignment of school books, and school requirements. Beautiful fresh sponges of all qualities. Chloride of lime for disinfecting purposes, and a large lot of novelties suitable for the season. Call early and get the choicest.

Rev Mr. Emes was called away to the sick bed of his father some days ago. There was consequently no regular service in the Presbyterian church last Sabbath. Arrangements had been made to have the pulpit supplied, but for some reason the minister assigned did not come.

Croup, whooping cough and Bronchitis immediately relieved by Shiloh's Cure. For sale at the Medical Hall.

Good Fish.

Mr. A. Munshaw came home on Tuesday from somewhere with a magnificent lot of trout which he had caught, one of which weighed 2 lbs. 5½ oz. The Advance man went fishing last Thursday and also brought home a fine basket, one fifteen inches long and weighing within a fraction of 1¼ lbs. Nine others of the lot were 11½ inches in length. How are the above for good fish.

Personal.

Mrs. C. Lettau and son, of Toronto, are guests of the editor.

Mr. and Mrs. Crisp and sons, and Mr Watkins, of Hamilton, are the guests of Mr. Shilton at the Methodist parsonage.

Miss Minnie Connell and Miss Jennie Stewart of Toronto, visited with Miss Stewart's parents, Mr. Alexander Stewart, during the past week.

A. R. Fawcett, of the Streetsville Review, is spending a few days in Flesherton.

Priceville v. Flesherton.

Flesherton and Priceville baseball clubs met in immortal combat on the fair grounds here last Friday. There was quite a large number of spectators on the ground, including a very nice sprinkling of the fair sex. The game was a very spirited one, but the playing was ragged and the score high. By innings it was thus, and tells its own story:

Flesherton—2 3 0 0 2 4 5 5 8—29
Priceville—4 0 3 2 0 3 0 0 3—24

Mr. John McArthur, of Priceville, made an impartial and satisfactory umpire. After the game was over supper was partaken of at Munshaw's hotel by the two

We have just received from the Rev. Principal Austin of Alma College, St Thomas, a copy of his 40 pp. pamphlet just issued on the above subject. It has chapters on the Origin and History of the Jesuits, Principles and Aims of the Order, Condemnations of the Society by R.C. Authorities, Expulsions of the Order The Jesuits Estates Act, Treaty of Paris, etc., and given verbatim. The Bull of Pope Clement, abolishing the Society, giving his reasons therefore, etc. Price, 15 cents. Address, Principal Austin, St. Thomas, Ont.

The "Flying Dutchman."

On Friday morning last a traveller engaged a livery rig from Mr. A. McInnis, at the station, to drive over to Flesherton. Shortly after starting the horse decided that the driver did'nt know much about driving, anyway, and decided to travel as fast as he chose, regardless of rein, and accordingly started off at a breakneck pace. The driver could not stop the horse, and the more pulling done upon the reins the faster was the pace attained. It is said by those who saw the entry that they came bearing down upon the village of Flesherton like a Dakota cyclone, with the poor tired traveller grasping the bottom of the buggy with both hands and feet, while his face was as white as the beautiful snow. The horse made a beeline for Munshaw's shed and the stoppage was so sudden that the shafts were shivered into 415½ various-sized pieces. The traveller says he was not acquainted with the fact that we had an express train running between here and the station until he boarded her.

Entertainment.

Flesherton Division of the sons of Temperance held a public entertainment on Wednesday, the 7th inst. The evening was beautiful and a large turnout was the result. The program was entered upon after the singing of the opening ode and the introduction by the D.G. W.P. Miss Leitch sang a solo in a very pleasing way after which came Miss Jennie Peters, of Michigan. Her rendition of selections was excellent and throughout the program she distinguished herself as a practised elocutionist. She appeared a number of times throughout the evening and won the admiration of her hearers. On account of Mrs. Irwin's absence from town, the audience did not have the pleasure of hearing her recite. Dr. Christoe gave a brief history of the standing of the order, which was both instructive and interesting. Miss Christoe, Miss Ada Sproule, Mr. Evans and others rendered a number of suitable pieces for the occasion in their usual charming style. Miss Annie Richardson read a selection from Mark Twain's "Innocents Abroad," and fully merited the hearty applause she received. Miss Lena Large again distinguished herself as a soloist as on former occasions. Miss Armstrong and Mrs. Blackburn also sang a couple of solos. The meeting then closed after the singing of the doxology. Flesherton Division of the Sons of Temperance is prospering well, and deserves much credit for the entertainment which they provided for the people of Flesherton, on Wednesday evening last.

To the Editor of The Advance.

It has been reported that the Flesherton woollen factory is closed, which is not the true case, but on the other hand it has been doing an increasing business especially in custom work, and having made arrangements to continue the business for a time, you may depend on good work, as I will spare no pains in giving my customers the very best satisfaction and solicit a continuance of your patronage. W.H. FLESHER.

Flesherton, Aug. 13th, 1889.

Fall Shows.

Following is a list of the dates of fall fairs in this vicinity:

NAME.	PLACE.	DATE
East Grey	Flesherton	Sept. 23 and 24
South Grey	Durham	Sept. 24 and 25
Great Northern	Collingwood	Sept. 25 to 27
Central Ag'l Socty.	Walters Falls	Sept. 24 and 26
Industrial	Toronto	Sept. 9 to 21

Osprey Items.

Gleaned by our own Reporter.

Osprey seems to be in a thriving condition just now. The haying is a thing of the past, with a well saved and abundant crop. The fall wheat is nearly all cut. Spring wheat and barley are showing their golden colors.

The youth of our land are inclined to wed One wedding on the tenth line, one at Maxwell and one at Wareham all within a few days, all go to show that Cupid, like vegetation in the soil, has been busily engaged the last few months. Success to each and all.

Mr. S. Ottewell, V. S., Proton., Osprey, raised a fine barn, 42x60. Mr. M. David was the contractor. Messrs. Cooper and Inlster were captains by a good deal of noise. Cooper and his chosen ones secured a large majority of men but were most sadly defeated by a few able lads from the south of their line.

Rev. John McNeil is away on a visit to his parents. The Endish church, Maxwell, S.S. picnic, on Friday was well attended considering the threatening clouds which, however, did not prevent those who had assembled from enjoying themselves.

Mr. E. Hamilton is now a full fledged citizen of Maxwell.

Mr. John Blakely was the proudest man in town last week. Usual cause.

Mr. Jas. Carr sold out his bag of tricks and removed himself and family to Michigan last week. He has a few mourners.

Mr. Mitchell, an old shoemaker living alone in Feversham, died last Saturday, of cholera morbus, and was buried at Badgeroo's on Monday.

Mrs. T. Heron, daughter of Mr. R. Y. Burk, returned to her home in Buffalo on Tuesday, accompanied by Miss Nellie Goselling, who intends to spend the summer there.

Good bye Mr, Editor; the cows are in the corn, so Bridget tells me. That won't make it prosper any.

Bright and Gladstone.

When Holl, the painter, was painting the portrait of Mr. Bright, he incidentally mentioned that he was about to perform the same operation for Mr. Gladstone. "It must be a very painful thing for you, Mr. Bright" he hazarded, "that after all these years you should have found cause to sever your connection." "Indeed it is," responded Mr. Bright, with a sigh; "to think that after we had trodden the same path together, shoulder to shoulder, and hand in hand, we should be forced apart in the evening of our lives! And by what? By a bogey that has risen up within him and is beckoning him away from duty and sense—by a Frankenstein. Do you know, Mr, Holl, I seriously fear that my dear old friend's mind has really become radically undermined?" When he was at Hawarden painting Mr. Gladstone, the subject of the artist's portrait of Mr. Bright cropped up. "Ah!" said Mr. Gladstone, with much interest, "and how did you find him?" "Fairly well, and he spoke very affectionately of you, Mr. Gladstone." "Did he indeed?" replied the sitter, sorrowfully; "did he indeed? That was a cruel blow. That after a lifetime of mutual esteem and of good work undertaken and carried through together we should be divided on so clear a question. Tell me, Mr. Holl"—here his mouth twitched—"tell me, did you notice anything in the manner of my old friend when you saw him which would lead you to believe that his reason was in any way unhinged?"

General News.

A Grand Forks, Dak., despatch says that a syndicate of capitalists has been organized to develop a new canal scheme that will reclaim upwards of 5,000,000 acres of arid and now useless land in north Dakota.

An explosion at the gas house of the woollen mills in Hespeler Thursday, severely injured W. H. Weaver and Fred Huckler, and badly damaged the premises.

Wm. Rate, an Adelaide farmer, was so badly gored by a bull a week ago that he died Thursday.

Lord Tennyson, the British poet laureate, was 80 years of age on Aug. 6

Two sons of Mr. Robert E. Little were drowned Friday at Teeswater.

Stanley and Emin Pasha are reported to be on their way to the coast, with 9,000 men and a great quantity of ivory.

A man supposed to be Tascott, the murderer of millionaire Snell in Chicago, has been arrested at Laredo, Texas.

Mrs. Maybrick is to be hanged on Monday, August 26th, if the Home Secretary does not interfere with her sentence.

The steamer Alberta on her downward trip had a slight collision with the steambarge Oregon at the Neebish rapids. She was only slightly damaged.

A by law bounding the Oshawa Railway and Navigation Company to the extent of $15,000 was carried in Oshawa on Saturday.

The First Presbyterian church of Erie, Pa., sent a call to Rev. H.C. Ross, of Ingersoll, Ont. The Alien Labor Law has been called in to keep Mr Ross out.

Charles R. Pope, of Missouri, has been appointed U.S. Consul at Toronto, and Richard G. Lay, of the District of Columbia, Consul General at Ottawa.

Mr. and Mrs. Carlton have identified Martin Burke as "Frank Williams," who rented the cottage from them.

Catarrh cured, health and sweet breath secured, by Shiloh's Catarrh Remedy Price 50 cents Nasal Injector free For sale at the Medical Hall

Why will you cough when Shiloh's Cure will give immediate relief. Price 10 cts., 50 cts., and $1 For sale at the Medical Hall.

Shiloh's catarrh remedy—a positive cure for catarrh, diphtheria and canker-mouth. For sale at the Medical Hall.

Mother Mc Are you disturbed at night and broken of your rest by a sick child suffering and crying with pain of Cutting Teeth? If so, go at once and get a bottle "Mrs. Winslow's Soothing Syrup" for Children Teething. It will relieve the poor little sufferer immediately. Depend upon it, mothers, there is no mistake about it. It cures Dysentery and Diarrhœa, regulates the Stomach and Bowels, cures Wind Colic, softens the Gums, reduces Inflammation, and gives tone and energy to the whole system. "Mrs. Winslow's Soothing Syrup" for children teething is pleasant to the taste and is the prescription of one of the oldest and best female physicians and nurses in the United States, and is for sale by all druggists throughout the world. Price twenty five cents a bottle. Be sure and ask for "Mrs. Winslow's Syrup," and take no other kind.

NEW ADVERTISEMENTS

VOTERS' LIST.

1889.

Municipality of the Township of Artemesia, County of Grey.

NOTICE is hereby given that I have transmitted or delivered to the persons mentioned in the third and fourth sections of "The Voters' List Act," the copies required by said sections to be so transmitted or delivered of the list made pursuant to said Act of all persons appearing by the last revised Assessment Roll of the said Municipality to be entitled to vote in the said Municipality at Elections for members of the Legislative Assembly and at Municipal Elections; and that said list was first posted up at my office at Flesherton, on the 5th day of August, 1889, and remains there for inspection.

Electors are called upon to examine the said list and if any omissions or any errors are found therein, to take immediate proceedings to have the said errors corrected according to law.

WM. J. BELLAMY,
Clerk of the said Municipality.
Dated this 5th day of August, A. D., 1889.

Hub Thill Spring,

MANUFACTURED BY
Butts & Ordway,
147, Pearl St., Boston

Pat'd Dec. 1, 1885.

Of Interest to every man who uses a Wagon or Carriage.

THIS ANTI-RATTLER IS the BEST,

Because it is effective, simple, easily adjusted, durable, inexpensive. There are no projecting ends to tear the sponge or wash cloth. It fits any size coupling

FOR SALE AT

Heard's Carriage Shop

BEES FOR SALE.

I HAVE TWENTY-FIVE SKEPS OF BEES, ALL in first-class condition, of which I am desirous of disposing of fifteen. Parties desiring bees would do well to communicate with me.

JOHN PLEWES
Kimberley Ont.

Medical.

DR. CARTER
M.C.P. & S., Ont.
PHYSICIAN, SURGEON &c
FLESHERTON.
Office, Strain's block. Residence, J. G. Hutton's.

J. G. Hutton, M.D.C.M.
Member of the College of Physicians and Surgeons, Ontario.
Enquire at office, one door east of Grier's store or Atkinson's Hotel.
Priceville Nov 18 1888.

DRS. SPROULE & EGO.
MARKDALE ONT.
Office:—Manley's Drug Store.
T.S. SPROULE M.D. etc. ANGUS EGO M.D. late of Tottenham, Ont.
Dr. Ego will be found at Markdale House at night.

J. P. OTTEWELL,
VETERINARY SURGEON.
Graduate of Ontario Vet. College,
RESIDENCE ON COLLINGWOOD STREET Sixth Door East of Presbyterian Church.
FLESHERTON.

Dentistry.

DENTISTRY.
Dr. Thomas Henderson.
SURGEON DENTIST
Gold Medalist and Honor Graduate of R.C.D.S.,
Will visit FLESHERTON, (Meyers's) the 1st and 2nd of each month. Teeth extracted, restored and filled in the highest styles of the art, at moderate rates.
H. AD OFFICE 761 YONGE ST., TORONTO.

J. P. MARSHALL,
L. D. S., DENTIST.
Visits Markdale the 1st and 3rd Wednesday of each month.
Flesherton each trip on the day

Legal.

J. W. FROST,
Barrister, Solicitor, Conveyancer, &c.
FLESHERTON OFFICE, NEXT POST OFFICE SPROULE'S BUILDING, ON THURSDAYS.
OWEN SOUND OFFICE, FROST'S BUILDING

P. McCULLOUGH,
Barrister, Solicitor, &c.
Office, over McFarland's Store Markdale. Money to Loan.

Business Cards.

John W. Armstrong,
FLESHERTON, Co. GREY
DIVISION COURT CLERK, COMMISSIONER, B. R., Conveyancer, &c. Agent for purchase and sale of lands. Appraiser for C. L. C. Co. and F. P. B. & S. Society. Money to Loan on the most reasonable terms. ISSUER OF MARRIAGE LICENSES. NOTARY PUBLIC

MONEY TO LOAN.
AT LOWEST CURRENT RATES
on Town or Farm Property,
S. DAMUDE,
Flesherton.

Mr. Wm. Karstedt,
Stone Mason, Bricklayer and Plasterer
MATERIAL FURNISHED
Estimates given free. Ornamental Plastering a Specialty.
Residence one door south of Advance Office

W. J. BELLAMY
TWP. CLERK ARTEMESIA.
CONVEYANCER, COMMISSIONER, INSURANCE AGT, &c
DEEDS, MORTGAGES, LEASES, &c., prepared and properly executed. Insurance effected in first-class companies. Money to lend at lowest rates

R. J. Sproule,
POSTMASTER, Flesherton, Commissioner in B. R., Licensed Auctioneer, Conveyancer, Appraiser and Money Lender Real Estate and Insurance Agent. Deeds, Mortgages, Leases and Wills drawn up and Valuations made on shortest notice. Auction Sales attended to in any part of the County. Money to loan at lowest rates of interest. Collections attended to with promptness and despatch. Charges low Agent for the Dominion Steamship Company Cheap tickets from Flesherton to Liverpool, Glasgow, London or any of the British Ports. Parties intending to visit England, Scotland or Ireland, will please ask us before purchasing their tickets elsewhere.

House and Lot for Sale

A good house and lot, opposite Methodist Church, Flesherton, offered for sale. The house and room my fine lot, and yard, splendid well, fruit trees, etc. This is a rare chance.
S. VANDUSEN, Flesherton

REMOVAL

I desire to inform the public that I have removed my well known tin shop to

MOORE'S Block, Durham St.

A complete stock of tinware will be found in my new premises.

REPAIRING
EAVETROUGHING
Etc. done as heretofore.
I have
secured the agency for
the Celebrated Singer Sewing Machine.

Requesting my old friends to come and see me in my new shop, I remain, etc

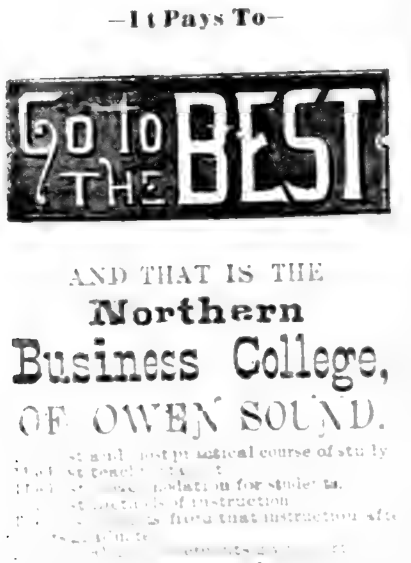
JAS. SULLIVAN.

—It Pays To—

Go to THE BEST

AND THAT IS THE
Northern Business College,
OF OWEN SOUND.

[illegible]
C. A. FLEMING, Principal.



D. McTavish,
HORSESHOER AND
GENERAL BLACKSMITH
[illegible]
FLESHERTON, - ONT.
[illegible] Horseshoeing [illegible] attention [illegible]

Logging and Plow Chains constantly on hand.

The Most Successful Remedy ever discovered, as it is certain in its effects and does not blister. Read proof below.

KENDALL'S SPAVIN CURE.

OFFICE OF CHARLES A. SNYDER,
BREEDER OF
CLEVELAND BAY AND TROTTING BRED HORSES.
ELMWOOD, ILL., Nov. 20, 1888.
DR. B. J. KENDALL CO.
Dear Sirs: I have always purchased your Kendall's Spavin Cure by the half dozen bottles, I would like prices in larger quantity. I think it is one of the best liniments on earth. I have used it on my stables for three years.
Yours truly, CHAS. A. SNYDER.

KENDALL'S SPAVIN CURE.

BROOKLYN, N. Y., November 3, 1888.
DR. B. J. KENDALL CO.
Dear Sirs: I desire to give you testimonial of my good opinion of your Kendall's Spavin Cure. I have used it for Lameness, Stiff Joints and Spavins, and I have found it a sure cure. I cordially recommend it to all horsemen.
Yours truly, A. H. GILBERT,
Manager Troy Laundry Stables.

KENDALL'S SPAVIN CURE.

SANT, WINTON COUNTY, OHIO, Dec. 19, 1888.
DR. B. J. KENDALL CO.
Gents: I feel it my duty to say what I have done with your Kendall's Spavin Cure. I have cured twenty-five horses that had Spavins, ten of Ring Bone, nine afflicted with Big Head and seven of Big Jaw. Since I have had one of your books and followed the directions, I have never lost a case of any kind.
Yours truly, ANDREW TURNER,
Horse Doctor.

KENDALL'S SPAVIN CURE.

Price $1 per bottle, or six bottles for $5. All Druggists have it or can get it for you, or it will be sent to any address on receipt of price by the proprietors. DR. B. J. KENDALL CO., Enosburgh Falls, Vt.

SOLD BY ALL DRUGGISTS.

$93 Sewing-Machine FREE To at once establish trade in all parts, by placing our machines and goods where the people can see them, we will send free to one person in each locality, the very best sewing-machine made in the world, with all the attachments. We will also send free a complete line of our costly and valuable art samples. In return we ask that you show what we send, to those who may call at your home, and after 2 months all shall become your own property. This grand machine is made after the Singer patents, which have run out; before patents run out it sold for $93, with the attachments, and now sells for $50. Best, strongest, most useful machine in the world. All is free. No capital required. Plain, brief instructions given. Those who write to us at once can secure free the best sewing-machine in the world, and the finest line of works of high art ever shown together in America. TRUE & CO., Box 740, Augusta, Maine.

The Runaway—A Pilgrim From "Old New England."

"Would they put her in the asylum," she wondered, "if they caught her?"

Folks would surely think she was crazy.

She stopped at the stone wall to rest, and looked back timorously at the old familiar scene.

Far behind stretched the meadow, a symphony of olive and green in the late fall. Here and there by the sunken boulder stood soldierly goldenrod, or berry bushes clothed now in scarlet and gold. At intervals in the long slope stood solitary trees, where fluttering, brittle leaves fell in the gentle chill air. In summer time she remembered well the hay-makers rested in the shade, and the jug with ginger water she made for the men was kept there to be cool.

She seemed, as she sat there, to remember everything. The house was all right, she was sure of that; the key was under the kitchen door mat, the fire was out in the stove, and the cat locked in the barn.

She held her work-flattened hand to her side, panting a little, for it was a good bit of a walk across the meadow, and she was eighty years old on her last birthday. The cows feeding looked home-like and pleasant.

"Good-by, critters," [illegible] "[illegible] the time I've [illegible] me to [illegible] an' I allus [illegible] on the way, not never [illegible] as [illegible]."

[illegible]

"[illegible]," she muttered [illegible] along.

At the foot of the hill [illegible] upon an old log and wa[illegible] train.

Across the road, guarded [illegible] sign, "Look out for the Engine," ran two parallel iron rails, that were to be her road when the big monster should come panting around the curve.

At last the dull rumble sounded, a shrill whistle, and she hurried to the track, waving her shawl to signal.

This, in the conductor's vernacular, was a cross-roads station, where he was used to watch for people waving articles frantically. The train stopped, and this passenger was helped aboard. He noticed she was a bright-eyed old lady, very neat and precise.

"How far?" he asked.

"Bostin."

"Get there in the mornin'," he said kindly, waiting for the money, as she opened a queer little reticule, where, under her knitting, wrapped in a clean cotton handkerchief, was her purse with her savings of long years—the little sums Sam has sent her when he first began to prosper in the west, and some money she had earned herself by knitting and berry-picking.

At a cross-roads, as they went swiftly on, she saw the old sorrel horse, the rattling wagon, and John with his family driving homeward. She drew back with a little cry, fearing he might see her and stop the train, but they went on so fast that could not be, and the old horse jogged into the woods, and John never thought his old Aunt Hannah, his charge for twenty long years, was running away.

At Boston a kindly conductor bought her a through ticket for Denver.

"It's a long journey for an old lady like you," he said.

"But I'm peart for my age," she said anxiously; "I never had a day's sickness since I was a gal."

"Going all the way alone?"

"With Providence," she answered brightly, alert and eager to help herself, but silent and thoughtful as the train took her into strange landscapes where the miles went so swiftly it seemed like the past years of her life as she looked back on them.

"Thy works is marvellous," she murmured often, sitting with her hands folded, and a few idle days had there been in her world where she had sat and rested so long.

In the day coach the people were kind and generous, sharing their baskets with her and seeing she changed cars right and her carpet-bag was safe. She was like any of the dear old grandmas in Eastern homes, or to grizzled men and weary women, like the memory of a dead mother as faint and far away as the scent of wild roses in a hill-side country burying-ground. She tended babies for tired women and talked to the men of farming and crops, or told the children Bible stories; but never a word she said of herself, not one.

On again, guided by kindly hands through the great bewildering city by the lake, and now through yet a strange land. Tired and worn by nights in the uncomfortable seats, her brave spirit began to fail a little. As the wide, level plains, lonely and drear, dawned on her sight she sighed often.

"It's a dreful big wurld," she said to a gray-bearded old farmer near her; "so big I feel e'enmost lost in it but, hopefully, 'across them deserts like this long ago Providence sent a star to guide them wise men of the East, an' I haven't lost my faith."

But as the day wore on and still the long, monotonous [illegible] and showed no human habitation, no [illegible] of green, her eyes dimmed, something like [illegible]

[illegible]

[illegible] went out West. [illegible] was always adventurous, and for ten years she did not hear from him; but John was different and steady, and when he came of age she gave him her farm, with the provision she should always have a home, otherwise he would have gone away too. Well, for five years they were happy, then John married, and his wife had grown to think her a burden and did not care for her, and she felt she had lived too long.

"I growed so lon-some," she said pathetically, "it seems I couldn't take up heart to live day by day, an' yit I knowed that our folks was long lived. Ten years back, when Sam wrote he was a doin' fair an' sent me money, I begun to think of him; for he was allus generous an' kind, an' the greatfulest boy, an' so I begun to save to go to him, for I knowed I could work my board for a good meny years to come. Fur three years he ain't hardly wrote, but I laid that to the wild kentry he lived in. I said b'ars an' Injuns don't skeer me none, fur when I was a gal up in Aroostook kentry there was plenty of both, an' as fur buffalers them horned cattle don't skeer me none, for I've been used to a farm allus. But the lonesomeness of the medders has sorter upset me an' made me think every day Sam was further off then I ever calculated on."

"But what will you do if Sam ain't in Denver?" asked the farmer.

"I hev put my faith in Providence," she answered simply, and the stranger could not mar that trust by any word of warning.

He gave her his address as he got off at the Nebraska line, and told her to send him word if she needed help. With a warm hand-clasp he parted from her to join the phantoms in her memory of "folks that had bin kind to her, God bless 'em," and then the train went rambling on.

But many of the passengers had listened to her story and were interested, and they came to sit with her.

One pale little lad in the seat in front turned round to look at her now and to answer her smile. He was going to the new country for health and wealth, poor lad, only to find eternal rest in the sunny land, but his last days brightened by the reward for his thoughtful act and kindness.

"She probably brought those boys up," he thought, "and denied her life for them. Is she to die unrewarded, I wonder. There cannot be any good in the world if that be so." He thought of her and took out his poor purse; there was so little money in it, too, every cent made a big hole in his store; but the consciousness of a good deed was worth something. "I mayn't have the chance to do many more," thought the lad, buttoning his worn overcoat.

He slipped off without a word at a station and sent a telegram to Denver.

"To Samuel Blair"—for he had caught the name from her talk—"Your Aunt Hannah Blair, of Maine, is on the W. & W. train coming to you.

It was only a straw, but a kindly wind might blow it to the right one after all.

When he was sitting [illegible] after the message had gone its way, she leaned over and handed him a peppermint drop from a package in her pocket.

"You don't look strong, dearie," she said; "hain't ye no folks with ye?"

"None on earth."

"We're both lone ones," she smiled, "an' now sad it be [illegible] am [illegible] to fuss [illegible] of the [illegible] your [illegible] that [illegible]

"[illegible]

[illegible]

H[illegible] Denver [illegible] to meet this train. His glance fell on the tiny black figure.

"Why, Aunt Hannah, [illegible] with a break in his voice, and she—[illegible] his big arms, tears streaming [illegible] withered face.

"I knowed Providence would let me find ye, Sam," she said brokenly, and no one smiled when the big man sat down beside her and with gentle hand wiped her tears away.

"Why, I've sent John twenty dollars a month for five years for you," he said angrily, as she told him why she ran away, "and he said you could not write, you had a stroke and was helpless, and I have written to you often and sent you money. It's hard for a man to call his own brother a villain."

"We won't, Sam," she said gently, "but just forget, an' I won't be a burden to you; I can work yit, an' for years to come."

"Work, indeed!" [illegible] "I owe you everything," he cried. "And my wife has longed for you to come. There are so few dear old aunts in this country, they're prized, I tell you. Why, it's as good as a royal coat-of-arms to have a dear handsome old woman like you for a relation."

Then he found out who sent the telegram and paid the lad, who blushed and stammered like a girl and did not want to take it.

"I suppose you want a job," said the big man. "Well, I can give you one; I'm in the food commission business. Give you something light. Lots of your sort, poor lad, out here. All the reference I want is that little kindness of yours to Aunt Hannah.

"Here's the depot, Aunt Hannah, and you won't see 'bars' and Injuns, nor the buffaloes you were talking about, but the prettiest and sunniest city you ever set your dear eyes on."

He picked up the the carpet bag, faded and old-fashioned, not a bit ashamed of it, though it looked like Noah might have carried it to the ark.

They said good-by, and the last seen of her was her happy old face beaming from a carriage window as she rolled away to what all knew would be a pleasant home for all her waning years.

From the South.

To the Editor of The Advance.

DEAR SIR,—Thinking you would be interested to know something about the ways and dealings of the people here in the South, I will do my best to inform you in a measure.

I would first call attention to the fact (for I believe it to be a fact) that for the most part the stories, both hearsay and printed, are exaggerated. For instance the practise of whipping negroes is not, with the exception of a few cases, so severe as we are taught to believe. Another truth I learn: the negroes will steal anything they can, without being caught, and you have to keep them in their place, and if you cannot frighten them you must knock them down or anything else to gain your end. The southerners tell me that when a northerner comes here it is so easy that the negroes just have a picnic with him. He does not watch them and they steal him poor before he knows it. Then he is harder on a negro than one raised in the south. I have often heard that the negroes to-day are worse off than they were when slavery, and I think, and am convinced that as a whole they are in some respects. In slavery a man could not afford to starve his negroes and so lower the value of them, because they were a cash article. [illegible] them, and clothed [illegible] the animals were in a better [illegible] than they are to-day. The negro [illegible] there are some of them [illegible] [illegible] say, resting afte[illegible] [illegible] of them are lazy [illegible] of them, who do work de[illegible] They live in filth [illegible] their money in gami[illegible]

There is a great quantity [illegible] [illegible] I have seen [illegible] large [illegible] each crop, but no[illegible] peaches. The [illegible] not very productive [illegible] I have been out to see the[illegible] which were so thin [illegible] the [illegible] without [illegible] any account. There were [illegible] and three [illegible] were set [illegible] As I approached [illegible] singing a hymn [illegible] Then [illegible] them would [illegible] I se go[illegible] Don't you want [illegible] And so they went on singing, and [illegible] and yelling, just having the [illegible] time possible. As the grain here is so thin on the ground, they (the cradlers) gather it, each time they strike a blow with the grain, with their hand, and they will strike a second blow and gather it in one hand off the cradle fingers, then drop it. The binder puts two or three of these handfulls together and he calls it a bundle, which is about five inches in diameter. A good cradler can cut five or six acres in a day, and one can bind it all easy enough. I came across lots on my way home and I saw something which looked like a shock of wheat. I went to examine it and found it was wheat. I looked around a little and discovered two or three more, shocks and I began to think, this may be a wheat field. I looked around still more, and saw more shocks. I thought, there can be no reasonable doubt about it's being a wheat field. The principal farm produce here is cotton. This year is not very good for cotton, the weather is so unusually cool it does not do well. They make very well of it when it is a good crop. Wheat here runs from 8 to 15 bushels per acre, oats 20 to 30, corn on the ear 15 to 25 or 30. It is not so all through the south. There is very fine farming land in parts of the south. Tennessee is for the most part a good farming state.

A Zanzibar despatch says the Germans are doing their utmost to create a disturbance there, and a rising against Europeans is thought probable.

George Duncan Bryson was hanged at Boulder, Montana, Friday for the murder of Annie Lindstrom, [illegible] He died protesting his innocence. [illegible] hailed from Hespeler, Ont.

The people of the United States [illegible] annually about seven postal [illegible] every man, woman, child; that [illegible] their total consumption for a year reaches 3,000,000.

A young man at Titusville, [illegible] who could not afford to take his bride on a wedding tour, bought $5 worth of tickets for the merry-go round, and they proceeded to ride to their hearts content.

The Mortgage.

We worked through spring and winter through summer and through fall.
But the mortgage worked the hardest and the steadiest of them all;
It worked on nights and Sundays, it worked each holiday,
It settled down amongst us and it never went away.

Whatever we kept from it seemed almost as bad as a theft;
It watched us every minute and it ruled us right and left,
The rust and blight were with us sometimes,
and sometimes not;
The dark-browed scowling mortgage was forever on the spot.

The weevil and the cutworm, they went as well as came;
The mortgage stayed forever, eating hearty all the same,
It nailed up every window stood guard at every door,
And happiness and sunshine made their place with us no more.

Till, with failing crops and sickness, we got behind upon the grade,
And there came a dark day upon us when the interest wasn't paid.
And there came a sharp foreclosure, and I kind of lost my hold,
And I grew weary and discouraged, and the farm was sold cheaply sold.

And the children left and scattered, when they hardly yet were grown;
My wife she pined and perished and I found relief alone.
What she died of was a "mystery," and the doctors never knew;
But I know she died of mortgage—just as well as I wanted to.

If to trace a hidden sorrow were within the doctor's art,
They would found a mortgage lying on that poor woman's heart.
Worse than sickness, drought or tempest, on a farmer's land may fall,
But the first-class ruination, trust a mortgage against them all.

—Will Carleton.

Take Me, I'm All Thine Own.

BY FRANCIS S. SMITH.

My hand is free, this heart is pure
And beats for thee and only thee.
And I saw thy winning face
And loved not, and was fancy free.
I loved thee, and if thou canst say
With truth for me and me alone
Thou'lt dwell in your heart of hearts—
Then take me, I'm all thine own.

I love thee deeply, truly love;
For thee my life I would resign!
And I require in exchange
Love such as that which I equal mine.
And then I'd let thy bosom reign,
Without a rival near my throne—
If thou canst this condition meet,
Then take me, I'm all thine own.

'Tis heaven when two are joined in love
So deeply that 'twere death to part;
Oh, 'twere death if I were doomed
To live on a divided heart!
Then shouldst ever slight my love,
Or crime thou never couldst atone—
Perish thought so base as this!
No, take me! I am all thine own!

—New York Weekly.

The Dying Barber.

The dying barber's hands were crossed,
He moved his lips in prayer,
And tossed as he lay and tossed,
"There'll be no pacting there!"

His work was done, his weary mind
No longer was perplexed
With visions of the man who whined
"Just cut the wart next."

No more his face to warm with care,
Or strop to a peaceful hush,
No more beside his chair
Would feebly murmured "Brush!"

All was still; his tired soul
Of earthly cares had flown,
And sped towards that blissful goal
Where partings are unknown.

—Chicago Herald.

The Homeless Laddie.

Bewail the hirnie that stands at the door;
The storm is hameless and friendless and poor,
Then few hearts to pity the wee cowering form
That ne'er sheltered but frae the bield frae the storm.
Your name may be humble, your haddin but sair,
For the poor and the lowly hae little to spare,
But we'll never miss a morsel, though sma' be your store,
To the wee friendless laddie that stands at the door.

When the cauld wind is goughin' sae eerie and chill,
And the snaw flakes o' winter lie white on the hill,
When we meet in the gloamin' around the ingleside,
Be thankfu' for haddins and hames o' your ain,
And think what the fockless and friendless maun
dree,
Wi' a heart to pity and nae hand to gie.
That we got eless bosom might freeze to the core
Gin ye turn'd the bit laddie awa' frae the door.

The bird seeks a bield o'er the wide ocean wave;
In the desert the cavert the fox has a cave;
And the hare has a den 'neath the wild winter's snaw,
But the wee friendless laddie has nae hame ava!
Then pity the laddie sae helpless and lone,
Like gift to the poor is recorded aboon;
For the warm heart o' kindness there's blessin's in store,
Save a hand to the laddie that stands at the door!

Hawick J. THOMSON.

How Would You Answer?

What would you do if you had a wee tease,
Asking you daily such questions as these:
"Mamma, did God simply turn down the light
Just when he guessed it a time to be night?"
"Are fairies made out of a butterfly's wing?"
"Why do the trees put their clothes on in spring,
And then when cold winter comes get all un-dressed?"
"How does the robin get blood on its breast?"
"Will Santa Claus ever get that letter of Zeb's?"
"Are baby-ties made out of big spider-webs?"
"Do the man in the moon smoke while looking about?
And are the blue clouds just the smoke he puffs out?
And the stars, are they just the wee sparks he lets drop?
"Do cat-tail's grow up from——" But here I will stop
And ask you again, Will you tell, if you please,
How you would answer such questions as these?

Harper's Young People.

CHOOSING.

She sat by his side in the corner nook,
In the bloom and blush of youth,
And the maiden frankness of her open brow
Was lit by the light of truth.
Can the word condemn if her heart beat fast,
As the word she longed to hear,
With a sound like the sweep of Love's silken wing,
Broke softly on her ear?

But why in her eyes is that far-away glance?
And why is that catch in her voice?
Ah, who can tell all that may be hid—
All that lies in a woman's choice?
Then her face is raised, with a look, to his,
And a smile like the graces wore:
"Why, of course I will," "Vanilla!" she said,
So he ordered two plates more.

WARNER'S Safe Cure removes headache, deafness, nausea and convulsions. Why? Because the troubles are symptoms of malaria (uric acid poisoning). "Reynold's System of Medicine" says of the symptoms of uræmia: "They generally begin insidiously, with headache and vomiting, followed by heaviness, indifference and somnolence, succeeded by general convulsions and coma."

THE HOME CIRCLE.

Things About the Household that Every Woman Ought to Know.

THE DRESS OF TO-DAY.

Hints to Housekeepers.

To give stoves a good lustre add either sugar or alum to the lead.

Remove stains from cups and saucers by scouring with fine coal ashes.

Vinegar improves by keeping, therefore it is best to lay in a large supply.

A raw cranberry, cut in two, and half of it bound over a corn, is recommended as a relief.

Individual plates for vegetables are not used much now. Only salads are separately served.

Cold tea is the best thing with which to clean grained wood. Never use ammonia for this work.

After washing a wooden bowl dry it at a distance from the stove, so that it may not warp or crack.

Lime free from grit mixed with alcohol applied with leather will give a beautiful polish to steel.

When recipes call for a cupful it means just half a pint; this amount in granulated sugar weighs just half a pound.

Chamois can be washed in warm water without soap; rinse well, and pull and stretch to soften while drying.

Salt will curdle new milk; so in preparing custards or porridges the salt should not be added until the dish is prepared.

Binding a piece of lemon around the toe, rubbing the corn with green peach tree leaves, are both very good remedies.

Meat and vegetables are much better if served when they are done than if left to get cold before they are eaten.

To remove tar, rub well with clean lard, afterward wash well with soap and water. Apply this to either hands or clothing.

To take ink out of linen, dip the ink spot in pure melted tallow, then wash out the tallow and the ink will come out with it.

A silver spoon put into a glass jar will temper it so that it can at once be filled with anything hot, even to the boiling point.

How many have tried sunflowers for bean poles? Plant them very early, and when one foot high plant two beans to a stalk.

To break up a bad cold bathe the feet, or the whole body, in very hot water, and drink a cup of hot ginger tea and go immediately to bed.

Be very particular about disinfecting the kitchen sink. Washing soda, two tablespoonfuls to a gallon of boiling water makes a good disinfectant.

Red pepper pods or a few pieces of charcoal thrown into the pot in which onions, cabbages, etc., are being boiled will prevent the unpleasant odor.

Starch polish.—A piece of stearine, candle spermaceti, or white wax as large as a robin's egg will give a nice gloss. A teaspoonful of salt to each pint of starch will prevent sticking.

If the coal cinders, when taken from the stove, are put in an old tin and cold water poured over them, in an hour you will have nice clean cinders that will burn clear and good, without the disagreeable trouble of sifting them.

An emergency cabinet should contain a roll of old linen and one of soft flannel, a graduated glass for medicines, court plaster, a bottle of ammonia, one of camphor, turpentine, and one of sweet oil, a china jar of mixed mustard for poultices, and any medicines prescribed by a physician.

Silverware, to keep bright, should never be washed in soapsuds. Clear water is best. To prevent articles from tarnishing warm them and apply with a soft brush a thin solution of collodion in alcohol. The ware can be brightened by rubbing with a flannel or chamois skin dipped in whiting or chalk, then with a newspaper.

Hints About Dress.

The newest blouses are made of washing silk, trimmed with stripes of a figured border.

Silk shoes and stockings of the same color as the gown accompany ball and evening toilets.

Hosiery worn with low walking shoes should be the color of the shoes, usually, of course, black.

A cloth mantle for children is made with a yoke, the skirt portion gathered to it, and pinked all round. It is inexpensive and picturesque.

Lace and embroidered skirts of last summer may be worn this year by arranging them as tunics, mounted at the top with a casing with colored ribbon run through.

Many ladies have their travelling dresses made with contrasting waistcoats, which may be changed at will, thus allowing a variation of costume when trunks are not available.

A pretty empire poke for country wear is of green straw, the brim faced with green velvet, three or four shades of green ribbon being bunched on the crown, holding a cluster of large white daisies.

Very ladylike and dainty costumes for summer are shown, made of a handsome quality of Bengaline or surah, figured with small devices over grounds of gray, amber, terra cotta, strawberry, reseda, pale olive and old rose.

Watteau draperies, as well as the straight styles, are employed for India and Burmese silks, and they are trimmed, according to the use for which they are indicated, with velvet revers, etc., or with quantities, more or less, of creamy lace.

The revolution in sleeves is being accepted, and some of the newest are very wide at the top, and either lace or button inside the arm. French women allow them to droop over the hand, carrying out the mediæval mode in its entirety.

The new fancy straw head-coverings show all sorts of fancy designs. In many of the bonnets and round hats they are arranged in what is known as "row and row" braids, these showing very chic and pretty effects in color and device.

Princesse dresses of "oyster-shell" white satin are favorite gowns with wealthy dowagers. These are draped with crepe de chine, also in oyster-shell white, which new shade has a gleaming silvery gray tint with no cream whatever in its reflections.

Corduroy is to be the material of the autumn and winter, and it is now being made up into evening cloaks which completely envelope the figure, reach to the hem of the dress, and fit in the back, the collars rounded and standing up about the throat.

There is certainly nothing in the jewel or floral kingdom which can quite take the place of lace as a personal adornment. All do not look well in either jewellery, or ribbons, or flowers, but the softening and beautifying power of lace is almost magical.

A Story About Carlotta Patti.

The Birmingham Mail tells a local anecdote of the late Mdme. Carlotta Patti. She was to sing in the Town Hall one evening in 1874. With the laudable desire to induce all Birmingham to come and hear their nightingale Messrs. Harrison, the concert managers, announced the cantatrice as a "sister of Adelina Patti." If this latter famous name was writ very fine and large upon the bills, it may have been the printer's accident; it may have been the compiler's design. What, indeed, does it matter now that nearly fifteen years have passed? The concert did not promise very well, all the same. When, however, the hour for its commencent drew near, there were not many seats vacant, for the entrepreneurs had resorted to an expedient not unknown in their business. They had distributed complimentary tickets rather freely, and Carlotta was assured at any rate of a large audience when she came. But Carlotta, like Mariana's lover, tarried long. She tarried so long that Mr. Percy Harrison thought it might be as well to walk round to her hotel and jog her memory. He had but time to exchange a few brief, burning sentences with her before an express bore her away to London. She had come and seen the bills, and proper pride had conquered her. Was she, Carlotta Patti, to sing under the ægis of her happier sister's name? Indeed not; and there was an end on't. Not for Mr. Percy Harrison. He had to explain to his audience, to proffer them their money back. Some loyal patrons stayed and heard the bereft programme. Some went. And there were dead heads, to their eternal shame be it recorded, who drew money from the check-takers on their complimentary tickets. One gentlemen claimed for a cab in from the distant country, and got it. With much magnanimity he refrained from claiming for his wife's bouquet. It's an ill wind that blows nobody good. Edwin and Angelina had received complimentary tickets. In the heat of the moment he drew 10s. on them; and bought her some gloves. Edwin's second thoughts were honest; and he returned the money. But Angelina kept the gloves. And the lovers were estranged. This is authentic.

Here are a Few Things that it Will Pay to Remember.

Here are a few miscellaneous hints, rules and facts worth remembering:

A cord of stone, three bushels of lime and a cubic yard of sand will lay 100 cubic feet of wall.

One thousand shingles, laid four inches to the weather, will cover 100 square feet of surface, and five pounds of shingle nails will fasten them on.

A box 16 inches square and 8 2-5 inches deep will contain one bushel.

One cent saved each day and put out at 6 per cent. interest will accumulate to $950 in fifty years.

Eight bushels of good lime, 16 bushels of sand and one bushel of hair will make enough good mortar to plaster 100 square yards.

A stone, used by grocers, is equal to 14 pounds.

It takes from 1½ to 2 bushels of wheat to sow one acre of ground.

To find the amount of hay in a mow allow 512 cubic feet for a ton.

A thousand laths will cover 70 yards of surface, and 11 pounds of lath nails will nail them on.

How Women Have Corrupted Men.

The gum chewing habit is certainly on the increase throughout the country. An epidemic has fastened itself upon the best and fairest of America's daughters from Maine to California, and from 5 years of age up to those uncertain days that lie beyond the hope of matrimony. And from the daughters and wives and sweethearts this form of maxillary calisthenics has been communicated to fathers, husbands, sons and lovers until America has become a nation of gum-chewers. The sales of chewing gum in Minneapolis have nearly doubled in the last year.—Pioneer Press.

More Than He Fished For.

Miss Dovecote (hostess)—Why don't you come into the parlor and dance, Mr. Orkwood?

Mr. Orkwood (who loves flattery)—Ah, deah me, you know, I darnce so beastly, don'tcherknow, that I'm sure I'd make a fool of myself.

Miss Dovecote (reassuringly)—You couldn't do that, I'm sure, Mr. Orkwood. You know it takes a wise man to play the fool.

What Disturbed Him.

"I always sleep with my watch under my pillow," said a travelling man to a friend during a conversation concerning train robberies.

"I used to do that, but I've quit it."

"Why?"

"Because I never could tell which was keeping me awake, the watch or the bed ticking."

Qualified.

"Hello, Lamb, are you still striking it rich in Wall street?"

"No; in fact, I lost all I had there!"

"I'm sorry for that. What are you doing now?"

"Just now I'm writing 'Tips for Speculators' for the daily press."

A Necessary Delay.

Mrs. Willowly—Have you ordered your new dress yet?

Mrs. Gushington—Not yet. I am waiting to see what Bridget is going to wear.

HEART FAILURE

Is Too Frequently Given by Physicians as Cause of Death.

The American Analyst thinks it would be an excellent idea if physicians of the present day would vent some other reason for about all the deaths which occur nowadays than the heart failure. It is difficult for any one conversant with the organs of the human body to understand how any human being can die without heart failure, while the causes of the failure of the heart at death may be very numerous. This might not be of serious moment where it not for the fact that hundreds of people are being nearly frightened to death by the constant use of the cause for sudden deaths, and many people who are sick, and necessarily have some heart symptoms, are kept in constant terror by reading or hearing in other ways of death after death by heart failure. It would be well if physicians who are too indolent or too ignorant to search out the disease lying back of the heart failure to consider how much harm they are doing the community, and if they cannot correct the habit, newspapers and the public should avoid giving currency to this unfounded and dangerous phrase. There are probably no more deaths from heart failure in these times than heretofore, but a new cause for death has been coined, and the nervous and timid are being severely injured by it.

Sale of Southdowns at West Wickham.

The world-famed flock of pure bred Southdowns sheep, which, as was aptly remarked, has taken Mr. Henry Webb, of Streetly Hall, Linton, Cambs., a lifetime of labor and love to bring to their present state of almost absolute perfection, was brought to the hammer on Wednesday afternoon, Mr. John Thornton, the eminent auctioneer, as he had done on the previous day at Sandringham, conducting the sale with that ability, geniality and courtesy which characterize all his dealings. When the Babraham flock, belonging to Mr. Jonas Webb, was dispersed, realizing an average of £11 15s 9d for 927 head, Mr. Henry Webb increased and improved his flock by the addition of about seventy of his father's best old ewes from the sale, as well as several rams of different ages. The Babraham flock has a world-wide reputation; it was descended from the best Sussex flocks, the blood of the sheep of Mr. John Ellman (who may be called the father of the breed) being its mainstay. The principle has been to raise a flock having purity of blood with hardy constitutions, that any farmer might breed from, and from which exhibitors might select show yard winners. The sheep are on a large scale, being very short-legged with deep carcases, with grand heads, fine sloping shoulders, and good thick legs of mutton; whilst the wool, which has been an especial study, is thick and close, and of remarkably fine quality. The sheep are folded throughout the year on the land, for out of about 550 acres only about 30 are pasture. It may be mentioned that the highest price for sheep of any breed last year was realized by a Southdown ram, which was by a son of one of Mr. Henry Webb's sheep. There was a large gathering from all parts of the country, the company present including the Duke of Richmond, Mr. Clarke Goodwood (his Grace's agent), Mr. Beck (H. R. H. the Prince of Wales' agent), Mr. E. W. Beck (agent to Lord Hastings), Mr. Smith (Duke of Hamilton's agent), Mr. Turner (agent to the Marquis of Bristol), Mr. B. D. Cook (Kimbolton, agent to the Duke of Manchester) Mr. Blair (agent to Mr. F. J. S. Foljambe), Mr. Prentice (Stowmarket, Secretary to the Suffolk Sheep Society) Mr. Alfred Heasman (editor of the Sussex Herd Book), Messrs. R. A. Houblon, T. Drake, T. Chalk, H. J. Cheffins, Grimwood Cook (Horseheath), Martin and George Slater, J. Clayden, F. G. and S. Jonas, S. Leverett and others. A recherche luncheon, supplied by Mr. Meeks, of the Crown Hotel, Linton, was set out in a spacious barn, tastefully decorated for the occasion. Accommodation was provided for between 300 and 400 guests. The Duke of Richmond, who presided, in proposing the health of Her Majesty and the Royal Family, referred to the great predilection show by the Queen for everything connected with agriculture, to the interest Her Majesty had shown in the Windsor Show, and to the forthcoming marriage of the Princess Louise of Wales. (Cheers.) His Grace next gave what he termed the toast of the afternoon. He was extremely flattered when some months ago his friend Mr. Webb honored him by asking him to preside on the present occasion. (Applause.) He entertained the liveliest recollection of his excellent father, whom he had held in the warmest regard; he was a man who was well known amongst agriculturists, and respected by all classes. (Cheers.) They had before them a candelabra, presented to the late Mr. Webb by the Emperor of the French, in recognition of the gift of a ram. (Applause.) He (His Grace) almost thought if his friend would give him the choice of one of his rams that day he would imitate the example of the Emperor of the French. (Applause and laughter.) There was no pleasure without alloy, and their pleasure was somewhat marred by the thought that they were assembled to witness the dispersion of one of the most famous herds of Southdowns which had ever existed in the country. He He had an hereditary interest in the Southdowns. (Applause.) They had been handed down to him, and he was endeavoring to maintain the honor and credit of the breed. They would all admit that the sheep about to be sold were the best specimens of any Southdown ewes produced at any sale. (Applause.) Mr. Webb suitably responded. Mr. Charles Howard submitted "The health of the Duke of Richmond," who was one of the most popular and respected noblemen in the country, and who had been aptly described by the Prince of Wales as the farmer's friend. (Cheers.) The Chairman said he was always delighted to find himself at a meeting of agriculturists, for he felt he was amongst a body of friends. They had passed through many years of agricultural depression, which had been felt by all classes—owners, occupiers and laborers—but he now trusted there was a gleam of hope for the future, and he concluded by giving them the sentiment, "Live and let live." (Cheers.) Mr. Seymour, of Preston, Kent, proposed the health of Mr. Thornton. Mr. Thornton feliciteously remarked upon that truly English scene, and the occasion which had brought them together. (Cheers and laughter.) The party now made their way to the sale ring, and after a few apropos observations by Mr. Thornten, the real business of the day commenced. The result was considerably in advance of general expectations. Eighty-three rams realized £2,696 8s., an average with a fraction, of £32 9s. 9d. The highest price was fetched by lot 12, and the Duke of Richmond was loudly cheered as Mr. Thornton declared it sold to His Grace for 210 gs. (the top price for a ram at Mr. Webb's father's sale was, we are informed, 260 gs.) Mr. Harry Brassey secured another fine animal for 190 gs.; Mr. Lucas, a couple, which fetched respectively 150 gs. and 100 gs.: Mr. Murietta also had to bid 150 gs. for a yearling, and Mr. Edwin Ellis 140 gs. The ewes, 415 in number, made £3,043 5s., averaging nearly £7 11s. 6d. The grand total of the 489 sheep catalogued was £5,739 13., with an all round average of close upon £11 10s. 6d. Mr. Thornton congratulated Mr. Webb at the close, and said the sale would be recorded in history as one of the most remarkable in sheep-breeding.—Southwest Suffolk Echo, July 6th.

STRANGLED BY A DOG.

A Baby Killed by a Playful Puppy.

By a most singular accident a baby lost its life in Kentucky yesterday. John Howard, a farmer, lives about two miles below Ludlow, opposite Riverside. Yesterday his wife, while engaged in her household duties, sat her 18-months-old child on the floor. The little one began playing with a puppy that happened to be in the room at the time. Fastened around the puppy's neck was a long, light chain that dragged on the floor. The baby and puppy were having a lively time when Mrs. Howard heard a bump. She looked around and saw the little playmates tangled up in a heap, the puppy having pulled the baby over. The mother started to pick the child up, when she was horrified to find that its face was distorted and its body limp. She also found that during the play the loose end of the chain had in some way become wrapped around the baby's neck, choking it to death in the presence of its mother. Every effort was made to restore respiration, but it was too late.—Cincinnati Enquirer.

New Stationer's Fancies.

An eagle's claw in exquisitely wrought brass makes an unique and handsome clip.

An eagle's feather in bronze, perfect in color and plume, makes a beautiful pen-tray.

A silver lute, with a sheet of music resting lightly upon it, makes a very ornamental ash tray.

A cute little bronze paperweight consists of a bright-eyed, fluffy, yellow chick standing on a feather.

A small, circular, black leather inkstand, with oxydized silver fittings, has on the cover a tiny, russet leather wallet for stamps.

A tiny cucumber, as green and fresh-looking as if plucked before sunrise, is one of the latest conceits for pocket match safes.

Dufferin and Temperance.

Canada's most popular Governor-General, Lord Dufferin, was among the notable men whom the late T. H. Parker successfully sought to influence on the temperance question. A friend who visited Turkey, and spent a week at Constantinople with Mr. Barker, paid a complimentary visit to Lord Dufferin, who was then Britain's representative there. "Mr. Barker was always true to the temperance question, and lost no opportunity of advancing it. With admirable tact he took occasion to lay before his lordship (interspersed with general conversation) some striking remarks on his favorite question, and I fancy they made an impression on his lordship which will not soon be forgotten by him."—Citizen.

Women of Note.

There are 275 women preachers in the United States.

Mrs. Emily Crawford, the most famous of women journalists, has lived in Paris for more than thirty years.

Mrs. Frances Hodgson-Burnett has been engaged to edit the children's department of a syndicate of English and American newspapers, for which she is to receive $7,500 a year.

Mrs. George H. Corliss will erect a fine building for the Young Men's Christian Association at Newburyport, Mass., as a memorial of her late husband, the famous engine-builder.

It is by no means improbable that the Landgrave of Hesse will marry one of the younger daughters of the Prince of Wales, and that the hereditary Prince of Hohenlohe-Langenburg will become the husband of the other.

Land in the Argentine Republic.

Some idea of the enormous extent of undeveloped area in the Argentine Republic may be inferred from a recent government report on the agriculture of the province of Santa Fe. Its area is nearly twenty-five million acres, but 1,500,000 acres are under cultivation, and these are owned by 18,000 individuals, of whom half are immigrants from abroad. The total population is 220,000, and the province contains 2,600,000 head of cattle, 500,000 horses and mules and about 3,000,000 sheep.

Undoubtedly True.

"The bigger a man is the greater are his chances for success," observed the Judge.

"How do you make that out?" asked the Major.

"He always has his weigh."

AS COOL AS A CUCUMBER.

I am a level-headed man
In spite of Fashion's rule,
I'm dressing in the happy plan
Of keeping nicely cool.

I wear a nobby flannel shirt
Beneath a "blazer" coat;
No stuck-up collar, starched to hurt,
Is scraping at my throat.

A helmet hat protects my head
From aching with the heat,
And shoes undressed and very red
"Refrigerate" my feet.

Blue serge or linen trousers wide
That no suspenders need,
Held by a pretty sash outside,
Give comfort, Oh, indeed!

—The race problem—which horse to bet on.

A CHAPTER OF HORRORS.

How Heads Are Chopped Off in the Flowery Kingdom.

EXECUTION OF FIFTEEN MEN IN CHINA

Reader, be warned. I have looked upon men being cruelly tortured; I have stood in the shambles where human beings are slaughtered like pigs; my boots have dripped with the blood of my fellow-creatures; I must exorcise memory with my pen. Therefore, gentle reader, unless your nerves are fairly strong and your taste healthily gory, pass this letter by.

It was in Canton, a city like no other Chinese city I have seen, a colossal human ant hill, an endless labyrinth of streets a dozen feet wide and a score high, crowded from daylight to dark with a double stream of men and women, exactly like the double stream between an ant hill and a carcase. All this mass of humanity is presided over by the most foreigner-hating Viceroy in China, and, therefore, it may be imagined what is the temper of the populace, especially as the Cantonese are the most turbulent people of the Flowery Kingdom. During the day the streets of Canton are in semi-obscurity, as they are closed in at the top by broad strips of cloth and long advertising streamers, but at night they are as black as Tartarus. Public safety and order are supposed to be preserved by occasional posts of soldiers, with a collection of weapons and instruments of torture hung up outside to strike terror into the evilly disposed. But, as may be imagined, crime of every kind is rife in Canton, and so bad is the reputation of the place that very often a servant from another part of China, travelling with his master, will rather forfeit his situation than accompany him there. And where the crime is, there is the punishment, too. It by no means follows in China that the person punished is the criminal, but there is enough cruelty in Canton to glut an Alva. Respect for the presence of an occasional foreigner causes a good deal of it to be hid, and the spectacle of a man hung up in a cage to starve to death in public is not a common one there as it is in other parts. But I think I can describe enough to satisfy you.

It is, however, the last act of the drama of Chinese justice that is the great revelation. I am inclined to think that nobody can claim to have an adequate and accurate appreciation of Chinese character who has not witnessed a Chinese execution. This is not difficult to do at Canton, for the Canton River swarms with pirates, and when these gentry are caught they generally get short shrift. A few bamboolings to begin with, then several months in prison—and it is not necessary to explain what a Chinese prison is—with little to eat and a stiff course of torture, and then one fine morning a "short, sharp shock" at the execution ground. If you care to accompany me there I will try to place the scene before you.

THE EXECUTION

is fixed for 4 30, so at 4 the guide comes for us at Shameen, the foreign quarter of Canton, and our chairs carry us rapidly through the noisy alleys of the native city. Until we get close to the spot there is no sign of anything unusual. There, suddenly we run into a jammed crowd at the end of a long and particularly narrow street. The chair coolies, however, plunge straight into it and it gives way before us till we are brought up by a huge pair of wooden gates guarded by a little group of soldiers. To hear these men talk you would suppose that they would die then and there rather than let us pass, but the production of a couple of ten cent pieces works a miracle and they open the gates for us, vainly trying to stop the rush of natives that follows us in and carries us before it right into the middle of the open space. It is a bare piece of ground, 50 yards long by a dozen wide, between two houses, whose blank walls hem it in on three sides. To-day it is the execution ground; yesterday and to-morrow the drying ground of a potter who lives there. There is no platform, no roped-off space, nothing but this bare bit of dirty ground so crowded with Chinese that we are forced into the middle, not more than four feet from whatever is to take place. It is no use to try to get further off—here we are and here we must stop. Suddenly the gates are thrown open again, and, welcomed by a howl of delight from the crowd,

A STRANGE AND GHASTLY PROCESSION

comes tumbling in. First, a few ragamuffin soldiers, making a fine pretence of clearing the way. Then a file of coolies carrying the victims in small shallow baskets slung to bamboo poles. As soon as each pair reach the middle of the space they stoop and pitch their living burden out and run off. The prisoners are chained hand and foot and are perfectly helpless. The executioner stands by and points out where each load is to be dumped. He is dressed exactly like any other coolie present, without any badge of office whatever. The condemned men have each a long folded piece of paper in a split bamboo, stuck into their pigtails; upon which is written their crime and the warrant of execution. One after another they arrive and are slung out. Will the procession never end? How many can there be? This is more than we bargained for. At last over the heads of the crowd we see the hats of two pretty mandarins, and behind them the gates are shut. The number of men is fifteen, and the executioner has arranged them in two rows, about two yards apart, and all facing one way. All except one seem perfectly callous, and he had probably been drugged with opium, a last privilege which the prisoner's friends can always obtain by bribery. They exchange remarks, some of them evidently chaff, with the spectators, and one man was carried in singing and kept up his strain almost to the last. The executioners—there are now two of them—step forward. The younger tucks up his trousers and sleeves and deliberately selects a sword from several lying close by, while the other, an older man, collects the strips of paper into a sheaf and lays them on one side. Then he places himself behind the front man of the nearest row and takes him by the shoulders. The younger man walks forward and stands at the left of the kneeling man. The fatal moment has come. There is an instant's hush and every one of the two rows of condemned men behind, twists his head round and

CRANES HIS NECK TO SEE.

I will not attempt to describe the emotions of such a moment—the horror, the awful repulsion, the wish that you had never come, the sickening fear that you will be splashed with the blood, and yet the helpless fascination that keeps your eyes glued to every detail. The knife is raised. It is a short, broad-bladed, two-handled sword, weighted at the back and evidently as sharp as a razor.

For a second it is poised in the air, as the executioner takes aim. Then it falls. There is no great apparent effort. It simply falls, and moreover seems to fall slowly. But when it comes to the man's neck it does not stop; it keeps falling. With ghastly slowness it passes right through the flesh and you are only recalled from your momentary stupor when the head springs forward and rolls over and over, while for a fraction of a second two dazzling jets of scarlet blood burst out and fall in a graceful curve to the ground. Then the great rush of blood comes and floods the spot. As soon as the blow has fallen the second executioner pitches the body forward with a "Hough," it tumbles in a shapeless heap, and from every throat goes up a loud "Ho!" expressive of pleasure and approval of the stroke.

But there is no pause; the executioner steps over the corpse to the front man in the second rank, the knife rises again, it falls, another head rolls away, another double burst of blood follows it, the headless body is shoved forward, the assistant shouts "Hough!" and the crowd shouts "Ho!" Two men are dead. Then the headsman steps back to the second man of the front row, and the operation is repeated.

Two things strike you; the brutal matter-of-factness of the whole performance, and the extraordinary ease with which a human head can be chopped off. As a whole it is precisely like a drove of pigs driven into the shambles and stuck; and in detail it is—or seems—no more difficult than splitting a turnip with a carving knife or lopping off a thistle with a cane.

CHOP, CHOP, CHOP, THE HEADS ROLL OFF

one after the other in as many seconds. When the seventh man is reached, either because the knife is blunted or the executioner misses his blow, the neck is only cut half through. But still he does not stop. He comes quickly back, takes another knife, passes on to the next man, and only comes back to finish the wretched seventh when all the other heads are lying in bloody pools in front of the shoulders which carried them a few moments before. And every man has watched the death of all those in front of him with a horrid animal like curiosity, and then bent his own neck to the knife. The place is ankle deep in blood, the spectators are yelling with delight and frenzy, the heads are like bowls on a green, the horrible headless bodies are lying all about in ghastly grotesque attitudes, the executioner is scarlet to the knees and his hands are dripping. Take my word for it that by this time you are feeling very sick.

Fortunately you are not detained long. The moment the last head is off the crowd is gone with a rush, except a score of urchins who begin skylarking with the bodies and pushing each other into the blood. The bodies are thrown into a pond and the heads are plastered up in big earthenware jars and stacked up with those already round the wall of this potter's field. I had a few minutes' conversation with the executioner afterward. Decapitation, he told me, was not the occupation of his family; it is only a perquisite. But the business is not what it was. Formerly he used to get $2 a head for all he cut off; now he only gets 50 cents. It is hardly worth while chopping men's heads off at that rate. But then it doesn't take very long. Would I buy his sword? Certainly. Nine dollars. HENRY NORMAN.

A Sinking City.

Real estate appears to have a downward tendency in Northwich, a town of England, wherein a small excitement is always prevalent as to whose house will sink or topple over next. The footpath on both sides of the road opposite the old Wheatsheaf Inn has begun to crack and sink rapidly. The Local Board officials are keenly watching the footpath, which has already sunk a foot. It is estimated that Northwich loses £1,400 yearly from this dislocation of gas and water-mains alone, and keen disappointment is felt at the refusal of the Goverment to appoint a Royal Commission to inquire into the subsidences, perhaps to learn their cause, which is not stated, though the phenomena may be due to the salt mines and brine springs in the neighborhood.

Quaint Advertisements.

Here are some advertisements which have recently appeared in the London papers: "A young lady most earnestly wishes to become acquainted with thorough believers in spiritualism. No trifler need answer." "A smart young novelist wanted at once. Salary about £4, increase to £6. Good hours. Good connection." "Agents wanted to sell beautiful portrait of the Right Hon. W. E. Gladstone, printed upon wood cut down by himself." "Young man wants secretarial engagements with literary man. Qualifications: Considerable ignorance, fair capacity for labor, some literary enthusiasm and ability to write shorthand."

FREDERICK T. ROBERTS, M. D., Physician to the Royal College of Surgeons, University of London, Eng., says: "Loss of appetite, loss of eyesight, dyspeptic symptoms, irregularities of the bowels, are some of the symptoms of the advanced kidney disease. Warner's Safe Cure cures these troubles, because it removes the cause, and putting the kidneys in a healthy condition, enables them to expel the poisonous or waste matter from the system. This is why Warner's Safe Cure cures so many symptoms that are called diseases.

An All-Around Favorite.

Mrs. Batts—What a delightful conversationalist Mr. Jabberbox is! It just does me good to hear him talk.

Miss Minnie Ball—Yes, indeed; but how restful it is to hear the silence while he listens to somebody else!

Nobody There.

Dudy (insinuating himself into a railroad seat alongside a pretty Miss)—Nobody occupying the seat with you, Miss?

Miss (looking at him disdainfully)—Nobody yet!

TREATMENT OF COUGHS.

Hints for the Allaying of a Very Unpleasant Habit.

In a recent discussion concerning coughs and their treatment by the Clinical Society of the New York Post-Graduate Medical School and Hospital, Dr. W. A. Shufelt said that he would like to say a word in regard to the habit of coughing which he thought had been lost sight of. He believed that a cough was in every case a reflex paroxysm, and that the more one coughed the more likely it was to be repeated. After the patient had had a cough for several days it required much less irritation to bring on this paroxysm than at first. He thought many patients got this habit, and by exciting the nerves irritated the cough. He had seen many cases in which the patients, having been directed to refrain from coughing as much as possible, had improved rapidly. It was a subject worthy of a great deal of investigation. It was well known that whiskey or brandy or a similar stimulant would relieve a cough, and the speaker thought that could only be explained on the theory that the stimulant excited the nerve centres in the brain, and in that way the paroxysm was reduced. He had seen some cases in which a galvanic battery, using the positive pole below the angle of the jaw, would also relieve a cough. The theory of counter-irritants accorded with this view; that was, he stated, that counter-irritants, blisters upon the chest, acted more upon the central nervous system than by relieving the arterial pressure by drawing blood to the surface. In regard to the treatment of cough, of recent years he had given up cough medicines of all kinds. He believed we could do more with such remedies as cresote and alum and turpentine. Turpentine and iodoform combined were excellent. Two drams of creosote, two drams of terebene and two drams of tincture of iodine in an ounce of refined spirits; 15 drops of this, to be inhaled whenever the paroxysm came on, he considered far superior to the nauseous mixtures that were often given. In acute bronchitis, instead of using medicines he was in the habit of using a tablespoonful of terebene in a pint of boiling water, and directing the patient to inhale this three or four times during the day.

BABBLE AT PARIS.

Police Unable to Handle the Crowd of Criminals at the Exposition.

The recent terrible murders reported at Paris are the natural outcome of a mob-like semblance of a horde of criminals gathered there from all parts of France attracted by the exposition. The Paris correspondent of the London World writes: "The crowds that you see wandering about the exposition seem happy and peaceful enough, but look at the crowd outside the exhibition. Take your seat at a table at the Cafe de la Paix, for instance, and watch the crowd. Go to the law courts and listen to the remarks of the heroes of the crime of Auteuil. Go to the races and examine the formidable army of petty book makers and adventurers of both sexes, who have no regular means of existence. Talk with the chief of the police. All these sources of information will convince you that Paris, at the present moment, swarms with dangerous characters, whose audacity is increasing all the time. The police are even powerless to keep the boulevards in decent order, and to preserve the public from the annoyance and importunity of the hideous voyous who howl their wares from morning until night in front of the cafes, ready with insult and foul grimaces. As for the waiters and inspectors of the cafes, they dare not interfere with these scoundrels for fear of their vengeance; the police do not molest them, except in extreme cases, because the prisons are not big enough to hold them, or the laws practical enough to punish them; hence the ever-growing strength of an army of scoundrels, prostitutes, thieves and assassins."

Killed by a Bee.

A remarkable fatality from the sting of a bee is reported from Dorsetshire, England. A farmer who was attempting to hive a swarm of bees was so careless as to allow his mouth to stand wide open. Into this more or less inviting retreat a bee flew in search of a new home. The insect lodged in the farmer's throat, and being unable to go further it used the weapon provided by nature. The man's throat immediately began to swell, and despite all efforts at assistance, in a very short time he died from suffocation.

The Princess' Thimble.

The thimble presented to the Princess Louise at the wedding last week by the Rt. Rev. Lord Arthur Charles Hervey is described as one of the most exquisite demonstrations of the goldsmith's art. It is of gold enamelled with rosebuds and thistles, and the top is composed of a huge diamond. It is pleasant to feel that if the Princess should ever have to apply for a job in an overall factory she would have something to begin work with.—Washington Post.

Not the Cat She Knew.

Uncle George was asking little Florence if she knew how to spell. "Can you spell cat" he said.

"Oh, yes, I can spell that," she replied.

"Well, why don't you spell it, then?"

She looked very wise, but shook her head—"I don't know what kind of a cat you mean."

His Shocking Taste.

Miss Caustique—I suppose I'll have to congratulate you, Harriet, on your engagement to Harry, but—

Harriet—But! But what?

Miss Caustique—Well, I must say Harry has shocking taste in everything. I never knew him to show good taste in the selection of a single thing.

A bachelor of forty he,
A man of culture, pride and wealth;
A maid of twenty summers she,
With sparkling eyes and glowing health

He wooed, but not as others have,
With loving words more sweet than true.
He laid his bank-book in her hand,
And merely turned to "Balance due."

—A Western newspaper recently contained this advertisement: "A middle-aged woman who is capable, honest and industrious, but as homely as a stone-fence wants work.

DUKE AND DUCHESS OF FIFE.

The Royal Wedding Feast—The Dresses Worn—The Trousseau—The Honeymoon.

A London cable, describing the Royal wedding, says: Soon after 11 o'clock the State coach and liveries of the newly-created Duke of Fife were seen coming up the Royal Mews towards the "entre portico of the Palace. His handsome figure and well-favored face was set off to perfection by his full Highland costume, with a kilt of the famous Duff tartan and the broad green ribbon of the Thistle across his breast. In addition to the Star of the latter Order he also wore that of the Order of Albert of Saxony, conferred upon him when he visited Dresden as the chief of the special embassy sent to convey the Order of the Garter to King Albert. The Duke was accompanied by his friend, factotum and alter ego, Horace Farquhar, one of the most popular men in London, and who was to act as his groomsman during the ceremony.

DRESSES.

The bridal dress of the Princess was of the richest white satin Duchesse, very long, and with a flowing train fastened to the corsage. The skirt was entirely draped with volants of the most magnificent fine point De Gaze, intermixed with garlands of orange flowers. The bodice was of the same kind of satin, cut open in V shape, with a high Medici collar and elbow sleeves of lace. Volants of the latter were also arranged on either side of the V to the waist so as to entirely cover the satin, and were carried over the shoulder, forming a V behind. A train of orange flowers was arranged to fall from the left shoulder to below the right side of the waist. On her head she wore a wreath of orange flowers, with a point DeGaze veil, her coiffure and dress being sprinkled with a quantity of magnificent diamonds. Supporting the bride were eight bridesmaids, the Princesses Victoria and Maud of Wales, the Princesses Victoria and Louise of Schleswig-Holstein, the Princess Victoria of Teck, the Countesses Feodore and Victoria, and Helene of Gleichen. They were all dressed in a lovely shade of blush pink faille, with demi trains of draped crepe de chine, over which were arranged broad moire sashes. The bodices were cut V-shaped, with elbow sleeves, and trimmed with crepe de chine, with bouquets of pink roses at the throat. Each bridesmaid also wore pink roses in her hair. The bridesmaids' eight bracelets were designed by the Princess Louise herself, and consisted of narrow gold bands not much more than a quarter of an inch wide, set with the monogram "L. F." in diamonds, surmounted by a royal crown and an earl's coronet. These are in diamonds, too.

THE WEDDING FEAST.

The guests took luncheon in the supper room. This spacious apartment, with its dark, highly-polished floor, with the outer wall a glowing mass of solid gold plate, had an entirely royal appearance. A table was arranged around three sides, at which the guests took a champagne luncheon, standing. The bridal party sat down to a wedding breakfast in the main dining-room. The long table had seats for forty. In accordance with custom, two toasts were offered: "Her Majesty the Queen, and the "Bride and Bridegroom." In the absence of the Earl of Latham, the Lord Chamberlain, this duty fell on the Lord Steward, Lord Mount Edgecombe. There were no speeches, but when the second toast was proposed Her Majesty, to the surprise of everybody, rose in her seat at the head of the table, and under the magnificent ceiling of gray and gold, with the portraits of her kingly and queenly predecessors gazing down at her from the north wall, lifted her glass to join in honoring the toast. Her Majesty seemed in a remarkably happy humor throughout all the ceremonies.

GONE TO SHEEN HOUSE.

Between the heavy showers which marked the afternoon the Duke and Duchess of Fife, for so they are gazetted to day, got into a close carriage and were driven to Sheen House. The Duchess wore a travelling dress white sicilienne of bold outstanding cord, the sides of the skirt very flat and straight, simulating somewhat the directoire coat and trimmed with lace and ostrich feathers. Over this was thrown a magnificent mantle of cream cloth, lined with pink surah. This had a high Medici collar of white and gold passementerie. The bride wore a bonnet of orange blossoms. The newly-wedded couple had an ovation all along the route to their house, near Richmond. On arriving they were enthusiastically welcomed. They passed between files of Venetian masts, decorated with floral festoons. The path was covered with carpet, upon which wild flowers were strewn by girls dressed in white. To-night Mortlake and Richmond, in the vicinity of the Earl of Fife's house, were brilliantly illuminated.

THE TROUSSEAU.

Much parade is made of the claim that this is a very simple wedding, for the reason that both the Queen and the bride wished to avoid ostentation, yet the cost of the bride's trousseau is estimated at $30,000. To make a possible political point this had been ordered from London, Dublin and Edinburgh impartially. Ireland is said to have sent the finest lace ever made in Ireland, while the manufacturers of Scotland laid themselves out to send some of the daintiest of underwear imaginable.

Death of An Admiral.

A London cable says: Admiral Thomas Bailie, of Wyburgh, died yesterday morning at Kelso. The Admiral joined the naval service shortly before the battle of Navarino, in which he took part, being then a lad of 16 years, and for which he received the Navarino medal. During the Crimean war the Admiral commanded the British fleet in the White Sea, and successfully blockaded the Russian fleet. He was an uncle of the present Earl of Haddington, and of Lord Polwarth.

Mrs. Wabash—Did you read about the Stimson scandal in the Bugle this morning? Mrs Lakefront—No; I never read such things. But Mr. Lakefront told me about it, Mrs. Wabash—Some of it was pretty bad, wasn't it? Mrs. Lakefront—Yes, indeed; especially that at the bottom of the third column on the first page.

Dr. McGlynn.

"Base ye call us," cry the people,
Worshippers of ease and gold,
Sordid need, and gross ambition,
Like the base-born slaves of old;
But our hearts have thrilled within us
Hearing of the greatand free
Of past ages—holy, just ones—
Sons of light and liberty

"Give us back Savonarola,
Italy's great priest who died—
Saviour of a slavish people—
He who tyranny defied!
O the flames that wrapped his body
Lightens up the night of Time!
One more herald of the sunrise
In the darkness glows sublime.

"Give them back, those sons of freedom,
Baseness from our midst will flee,
Give Mazzini, Gracchus, Danton,—
We will hear, rise up, be free
But now is the reign of Mammon.
Only gold is gain
And we sigh for life's past greatness,
Sigh for it in vain."

O ye deaf ones, O ye blind ones!
Like your sires of old
Dreamers crying Light has perished,
Freedom's fires grown cold
Rouse ye from your heavy slumber
See the dawn is here.
Heralds of the coming sunrise
On all sides appear

Look around you see the great ones
Throng on every side
Martyrs in your midst have perished
Whom ye scorn—deride
Heroes in your midst have suffered,
Champions of the truth,
Scorning scorn, and hating hatred—
Mammon's reign forsooth.

Hear the great Savonarola,
He has come to earth once more,
And his thrilling voice is heard
Round the world from shore to shore
Stronger than all superstitions
Potent in the darkness yet—
Striking off and branding withers
Baseness with his mighty scorn.

Though they hate him, tyrants fear him,
Cower beneath his stern calm gaze
From his eyes looks forth undaunted
The great soul of olden days
Hebrew Daniel and Isaiah
Sons of God, of Light and Truth,
Fearless thoughts are his to utter,
Dying for her in their youth.

Earth's strong heroes are its pure martyrs,
Born to suffer and to save
Champions ever of the people
Sons of toil or hopeless slave.
Leaders in the van of progress—
Greatness ever is akin
Boom ye giant sons of free from
For our priest McGlynn.

Picton, Ont.

The Festive Fly.

How are you, friends and relations, a-
I'm back again, you see
Come back to pay my summer
And frisk awhile with thee

The music of my wings
Is heard on every side
From morn till eve I sing,
And round about I glide.

I love to take my morning stroll
On some bald-headed pate
I love to jump from nose to nose,
And round and round I skate.

But if perchance my host's friend
Has hair upon his head
It makes me mad for I am sad
Upon his ear I tread

Oh, what a joy profound it
Is to hear you toss and swear,
While around your head softly flit
And buzz with not a care.

I love to perch upon your nose,
Half peeping from the sheet
Upon your nose I love to pose
And fiddle with my feet.

I love to kiss the nectar'ine lips
Of every maiden meek
I love, between those coy red sips,
To daily on her cheek

I love—but I shall have to cease,
A furtive hand is nigh
I'll see you later as you know
Until that time good-by

CURRENT TOPICS

AN average of five feet of water is estimated to fall annually over the whole earth, and, assuming that condensation takes place at an average of 3 000 feet, scientists conclude that the force of evaporation to supply such rainfall must equal the lifting of 332,000 000 pounds of water 3 000 feet in every minute, or about 300,000,000 horse-power constantly exerted. Of this prodigious amount of energy thus created, a very small proportion is transferred to the waters that run back through rivers to the sea, and a still smaller fraction is utilized by man; the remainder is dissipated in space.

IN an interesting letter to Science H. A. Hasen, of Washington, gives some interesting and valuable particulars respecting the properties and nature of fog. He says it is admitted that fog is simply cloud composed of water, dust or solid minute spheres of water from 1-7000 to 1-1000 of an inch in diameter. Many have supposed that a dust particle must be a nucleus for each sphere, but an examination under the microscope of evaporated fog has proved that such is not the case. Briefly stated, the cause of fog is as follows: It is essential that there be no wind. The sky must be saturated, or nearly so. The formation of fog is a purely mechanical process unaccompanied by heat.

THE journalists who feed the English end of the Atlantic cable have put in a particularly busy week or so. Ordinary gossip has been switched off the wires and nothing below a golden wedding or Royal nuptials has been good enough for these young men to handle. They have fed the public with angel cake and lady fingers until they are getting tired of it. But a rather pretty story about the newly-wedded Princess and her sweetheart will bear repeating. It is said this shy Royal maiden had been soft on the Earl for years; in fact, even before she came out, but she had never told her love. And during these five years the Princess always bought a birthday present for the man she loved, but as she never dared give it to him, the little gift was laid away in a drawer and carefully locked up. This was only a bit of girlish sentiment, but it shows that love—like death levels all, and shows the Princess is a woman with a heart.

It Walked.

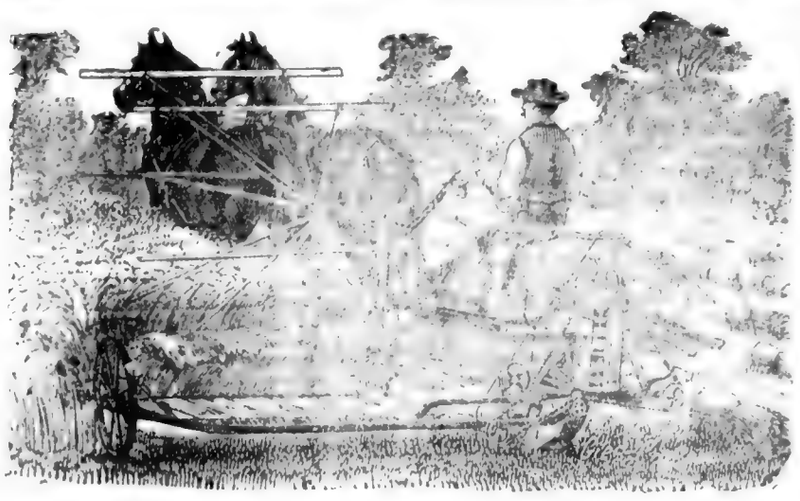
"Have you any second hand typewriters you'd like to sell?" asked the peddler

"No," replied the merchant, "but I've one I'll give away."

"What's wrong with it?"

"Chews gum and spells dozen 'nzz.'"

It is a sign that a woman is getting old when she stops crying over trouble and begins to think.



THE BRANTFORD LIGHT STEEL BINDER!

Over Four Thousand Sold in Season 1888. Being More Than Half of all Other Binders made in Canada.

Before placing their orders for 1889, we respectfully request the farmers to:
1st. Carefully examine the Brantford Machines and faithfully compare with others.
2nd. Enquire of your neighbors who have used "Brantford Machines" and get their opinion of their working and lasting qualities.
If you will follow the above advice you will be convinced of these two facts
1st. Brantford Machines are possessed of more improvements and are better made than any other machines in Canada.
2nd. "Brantford Machines" are more popular, give better satisfaction, and are more durable than any other machine in Canada.
Therefore 1st. Give your order EARLY for a Brantford Binder and Mower
2nd. And you will be sure to be perfectly satisfied with the machine you get.

THOS. A. BLAKELY,
FLESHERTON.

Heard's Carriage Works.

MANUFACTURER OF

Carriages, Buggies, Wagons, Sleighs, Cutters, &c., &c.

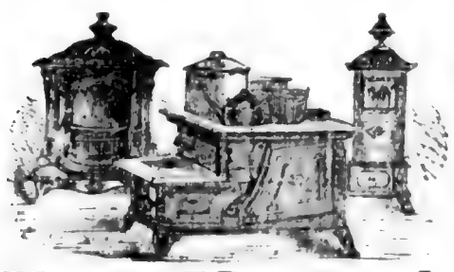
HEARD'S IMPROVED HARROWS AND GATES.

Special Attention given to PAINTING, TRIMMING, HORSE SHOEING and all kinds of JOB WORK. Nothing but first class material used throughout and satisfaction guaranteed. We have for sale

——Lumber, Lath and Shingles.——

Also Agent for Dick's Rollers, Mowers and Binders, Dick's Champion, Royal Rob Roy, Granger and Standard Plows, Two and Three-Furrow Gang Plows, Horse Powers for 4 Horses, Straw Cutters, Scufflers and Turnip Drills.

JOHN H. HEARD, Durham Street, Flesherton.



FLESHERTON STOVE EMPORIUM

A large assortment of STOVES, in Bakers, STOVE FURNISHINGS, TIN, WARE, COPPERWARE, LAMP GOODS etc., constantly on hand.

EVETROUGHING A SPECIALITY.

F. G. Karstedt,

Strain's old Stand
Flesherton.

FLOUR, FLOUR, STONE FLOUR!

MR. P. LOUCKS

Is prepared to do your Gristing on short notice and grinds on the old terms of every twelfth bushel. Seven cents per bag of two bushels for Chopping, done every day. The Little Mill is big in the estimation of the public.

Satisfaction Guaranteed

P. LOUCKS, Proprietor.

Good stabling for horses

BLACKBURN'S

is the place for choice goods and fair prices.

Choice Roller Flour, Bran and Shorts, at rockbottom prices.

Cured Meats, Bologona,
Mixed bird seed
Pure prepared Corn.
General assortment of canned goods

CHOICE HONEY

CONFECTIONERY of all kinds
ICE CREAM

and cooling summer drinks. Choice Fruits a specialty

OAT MEAL, CORN MEAL, CRACKED WHEAT and GRAHAM FLOUR, always on hand.

Remember the place, next door to M Richardson & Co's.

For lame back, side or chest, use Shiloh's Porous Plaster. Price 25 cents For sale at the Medical Hall.

Are you made miserable by indigestion constipation, dizziness, loss of appetite yellow skin? Shiloh's Vitalizer is a positive cure. For Sale at the Medical Hall.

The Rev. Geo. H. Thayer, of Burbone Ind., says: "Both myself and my wife owe our lives to Shiloh's Consumption Cure. For sale at the Medical Hall.

For Sale

Steam Saw mill for sale at Flesherton Station 2 run stone, double reed bolt, shunt mill, dresser and purifier. Will be sold cheap and on easy terms. This is a bargain. Apply to

ROGER LEVER
Flesherton P.O

Monthly Fairs.

Orangeville—The second Thursday in each month.
Dundalk—Tuesday before Orangeville
Flesherton—Monday before Orangeville
Markdale—Saturday before Orangeville.
Durham—Third Tuesday in each month.
Chatsworth—Monday before Durham
Holland Centre—Saturday before Chatsworth
Priceville—Monday before Durham.
Hanover—Monday before Durham.

This Year's

MYRTLE

CUT and PLUG

SMOKING TOBACCO

FINER THAN EVER.

See

T & B

in bronze on
EACH PLUG and PACKAGE

Improved Farm for Sale.

Lots 148, 149 and 150, 3rd range east, T. and S. R., containing 100 acres, 80 cleared, good clay loam, well improved, good frame house and log barn, frame stable, good orchard, etc. This farm is well watered and improved, and is considered one of the best in this section. It is one mile and a half from the village Flesherton. Will be sold on very easy terms. For further particulars apply to

JAS. BEECROFT,
Flesherton P.O

COUNTY & DISTRICT

Mr. Robt. Reed, of Owen Sound, has secured the contract for the harbor works at Midland.

The Durham Chronicle is becoming noted for the extravagant language it uses. Mt. Forest Examiner.

A young man named Butler, of Hamilton, fell off an excursion train near Beeton and was killed by the cars.

Mr. J. T. Coulter, of Galt, owned a horse 44 years of age, which had to be shot last week, owing to an injury of his hip bone.

Beeton had a heavy frost on Monday night of last week which cut off all the young pumpkins and squash. Claude appears to have escaped.

Silas Milligan ran down from Penetang Saturday to see his friends—Beeton World. Silas must have had a good long pair of legs, but even so we venture to swear that he took the train when going back.

According to the Beeton World, Rev. Mr. Chestnut preached an able sermon there on Sabbath last. We notice with a feeling of pleasure that the World did not in the item referred to indulge in any chestnutty jokes upon the name of Mr Chesnut.

A Woodstock belle was absent visiting friends a short time ago. She wrote home requesting her mother to send her overshoes. Her mother answered stating that a hen had just hatched out a brood of chickens in one shoe, and that her grandfather had taken the other shoe for a woodbox. This is no fish story.

An exchange says that the drug store of Messrs Blakoff & Bowler has changed hands. The reason is not given, but possibly it was because it got its fingers burnt in some acid. Another theory is that it was merely the employees which were changed. In that event it was no doubt because the hands were found to be light-fingered.

Collingwood Aug 10 Collingwood was visited by another fire last night, which originated in McKenzie's foundry on Fifth street, and destroyed it and a dwelling belonging to N. B. Hilborn. The cause of this fire is unknown. The general impression seems to be that there is a fire-bug about, as three fires in one week is rather too much for pure accident.

Another fire of a disastrous character started at an early hour Saturday morning in the machine shop and foundry of Geo. McKenzie, Fifth street, destroying building and contents; insured for $1,200 in the Mercantile Mutual. A rough cast dwelling on the next lot owned by N.B. Hilborn and occupied by Mrs. Ovas was also totally destroyed; insured in the Mercantile for $600. D. McQuad's dwelling barely escaped. The furniture was removed by a naval; insured in the Imperial.

Enoch E. Knott was at one time Reeve of Euphrasia Township, Grey County. Step by step he was elevated to that honorable position. About that time he contributed red hot patriotic letters to the Orange Sentinel, and occasionally found his way into the columns of the more cool headed local newspapers. He became a distinguished individual and his fame travelled through all the regions round about from Slabtown to the muddy little outlet of the Sydenham creek. Still he was not satisfied. He became a speculator, lost lots of money, and when he suddenly visited the Southern shores of Lake Ontario he had become decidedly famous. So thought his sorrowing friends, who had entrusted their several little piles to his fatherly care and keeping. They mourned because Elijah responded not to their touching appeals. And now we learn that Elijah has departed from the ways of his forefathers and has connected himself with the Roman Catholic church. If this be really so, then The Review extends its deepest sympathy to the members of the latter body with whom E. E. will come in contact. They've caught a Tartar! 'Streetsville Review.

ORILLIA, Aug. 10. A fatal accident happened at 3 p.m. to Mr. John Robinson, a well-to-do farmer, who lived at Ardtrea, six miles from Orillia. Mr. Robinson was driving home with a load of tanbark, and had a spirited team. The back of the load came down and frightened the horses which ran away. The jolting of the wagon shook Mr. Robinson off, and he was either kicked in the region of the heart by the horses, or run over by the wagon. He was picked up by his nephew, Mr. Mathew Robinson, who brought him to town. He only lived a couple of hours after the accident.

BOOTS & SHOES.

I have a very large supply on and and

Selling very Cheap.

IN LADIES WEAR. Prunella, Kid, Polish and Buff Dongola, Lace and Button.

Misse's, Youth's and Children's

A large assortment, all sorts and sizes.

MEN'S WEAR

Fine Calf and Dongola, Balmorals and Gaiters, also Heavy Boots and Shoes. Prices and Material cannot be beat.

W. CLAYTON.

Photos, Photos, Photos.

We are now turning out work far superior in style and finish to any ever produced in Flesherton.

COPYING and ENLARGING at MODERATE RATES.

PICTURE FRAMING

done in all its branches. A good stock of FRAMES and MOULDINGS kept constantly on hand. Will also introduce the new BROMIDE PORTRAIT, a picture that is giving entire satisfaction wherever introduced. SAMPLES can be seen at my Gallery where all particulars as to Price, Style &c., can be ascertained.

MRS. BULMER,
FLESHERTON.

HEALTH FOR ALL.

HOLLOWAY'S PILLS & OINTMENT

THE PILLS

Purify the Blood, correct all Disorders of

Liver, Stomach, Kidn'ys, and Bowels.

The invigorate and restore to health Debilitated Constitutions, and are invaluable in all Complaints incidental to Females of all ages. For Children and the aged they are priceless.

THE OINTMENT

an infallible remedy for Bad Legs, Bad Breasts, Old Wounds, Sores and Ulcers. It is famous for Gout and Rheumatism. For disorders of the Chest it has no equal.

For SORE THROAT, BRONCHITIS, COUGHS, COLDS

Glandular Swellings, and all Skin Diseases it has no rival; and for contracted and stiff joints it acts like a charm.

Manufactured only at Professor HOLLOWAY'S Establishment,
78, New Oxford Street (late 533, Oxford Street), London,
and are sold at 1s. 1½d., 2s. 9d., 4s. 6d., 11s., 22s., and 33s. each Box or Pot, and may be had of all Medicine Vendors throughout the World.

☞ Purchasers should look to the Label on the Pots and Boxes. If the address is not 533, Oxford Street, London, they are spurious.

PRICEVILLE BAKERY.

A. WATSON!

Desires to inform the public that he can furnish

CAKES AND PIES

To Order.

FIRST CLAS BREAD ALWAYS ON HAND.

will visit Flesherton twice a week—on TUESDAYS and FRIDAYS, with a full supply of goods.

DROP A CARD IF YOU DESIRE ME TO CALL.

WEDDING and FANCY cakes a specialty

A. WATSON,
Priceville.

Situation.

with steady employment and good pay all the year round, to reliable men furnishing satisfactory references. S.A. McOMBER & Co., Nurserymen. Rochester, N. Y

FLESHERTON PLANING MILLS

Having purchased the Flesherton Planing Mills from R. J. Sproule, Esq., I now desire to inform the

PUBLIC

that I am in a position to do

ALL KINDS

—OF—

General planing mill work,

such as

SASH, DOORS, DOOR FRAMES
Planing and Matching, re sawing, etc.

Good Workmanship Guaranteed.

A large quantity of good dry pine lumber on hand.

W. J. HOWARD,
Flesherton.

LOOK!

HAVING done business in Canada for years our reputation is established. We want three men in your vicinity to represent us, to whom exclusive territory will be given. Handsome outfit free. Salary and expenses paid weekly. Previous experience not required. Write at once for terms. Hardy stock for Canada a specialty. MAY BROTHERS, Nurserymen, Rochester, N.Y

FLESHERTON ADVANCE.

"TRUTH BEFORE FAVOR."—"PRINCIPLES, NOT MEN."

VOL. VIII., NO 425. FLESHERTON, ONT., THURSDAY, AUGUST 22, 1889. W. H. THURSTON, EDITOR & PROPRIETOR

WATCHES,

Clocks, ● Jewelry.

STUDY

Your Own Interests

by buying your Watches, Clocks, Jewelry, Spectacles and Silverware at

Russell's Noted

JEWELRY STORE,

FLESHERTON.

In watches we have a very large stock of Elgin, Waltham, Illinois Springfield, Columbus and Swiss Lovers in Ladies' and Gents' sizes. Gold, Silver and Silver oro cases. Brooches and Barpins, of the latest design. Fine Gold and Rolled Gold Earings, Cuff Buttons, Charms, Chains and a beautiful stock of Ladies' Gem Engagemen Rings. A full supply of 18 K Wedding Rings always on hand. Also a large and well-assorted stock of Silverware and Spectacles at very low prices and remember the place to get your Watches, Clocks, Jewelry, etc. repaired is at

RUSSELL'S, FLESHERTON.

All work personally attended to by J. G. Russell

THE ONE PRICE

Cash Store.

STILL ON DECK!

Goods cheaper than ever

This is the time for all farmers to lay in a good stock of

Groceries

for haying and harvesting. We have put the prices down to meet the demands.

Dry Goods, Boots, Shoes, Etc.

—AT—

ROCK - BOTTOM - PRICES.

More Customers wanted

To Carry off the Bargains.

McDONALD & EVANS,

Wright's Old Stand.

Pumps ! Pumps !

J. McCullough,

Markdale,

manufacturer of pumps, desires to inform the public that he is prepared to furnish pumps for

Deep wells, gravel wells, etc.

parties who have heretofore had difficulty with their wells are

Guaranteed Satisfaction

by using my articles. I learned my business with the late J. Fear, of Meaford, the superiority of whose pumps was a household word in Grey a few years ago.

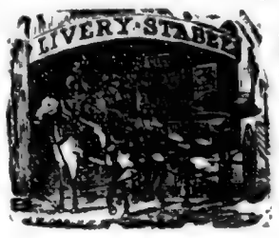
Be sure and call on me if you desire anything in the pump line.

J. McCullough.

FARM FOR SALE CHEAP, AND ON EASY terms, lot 7, con. 2, township of Euphrasia containing 200 acres. This is a splendid valuable timber farm. Well timbered with mixed hardwood, hemlock and cedar. Splendid soil. 1½ miles from the beautiful village of Kimberley in Queen's Valley where there are mills, stores, post office and church, and 11 miles from Flesherton on the C. P. R., where there is a splendid market for all kinds of produce, stock, lumber and timber. Apply to R. J. Sproule, auctioneer and real estate agent, Flesherton

Flesherton Livery Stables.

D. CLAYTON, Proprietor.



First class horses and vehicles for hire at reasonable rates.

Stables opposite Munshaw's hotel. Special attention paid to commercial business

THE ADVANCE.

Is published

Every Thursday,

FROM THE OFFICE,

Sydenham Street, - - Flesherton, Ont.

TERMS OF SUBSCRIPTION.

$1 per annum when paid strictly in advance $1 50 per annum when not so paid.

ADVERTISING RATES

One column, 1 year $50, half col., do., $27 quarter col. do., $15

Transient advertisements charged at the rate of 8cts per line for first insertion and 5cts. per line each subsequent insertion.

W. H. THURSTON.

Editor and Proprietor.

A TOWNSHIP HALL FOR OSPREY.

The township of Osprey has never been the possessor of a township hall, and the council of that township is an itinerant one, held here to-day and there to-morrow. Maxwell, Badgeros, Feversham and Singhampton are the various points at which meetings are held throughout the year, and the ordinary ratepayer of Osprey is not certain as to where the next meeting of the council will be held without making special inquiry. This state of affairs is most unsatisfactory, and to have these montlily meetings of council peddled around from point to point during the year, for the purpose of distributing the lota of patronage which accrues from such meetings, to merchants and hotelkeepers, is a policy of exceedingly doubtful advantage. In fact the argument for some thing is not admissive of contradiction. It would be better, all will admit, if there was a certain point where the municipality could erect a hall and make such point the financial and business center of the township. This must be done in the near future : we know of no cause why it should not be done immediately. Heretofore the railway tax has been a burden to the township, and a prudent council did not care to involve extra burdens of taxation upon the people. But with only one more levy of taxes for railway purposes the coast is practically clear, and immediate steps should be taken to provide suitable premises for the transacting of township business. At present the accommodation in any of the villages mentioned is inadequate, and the prosperous and well-improved township of Osprey should at once discard the primitive itinerant system which it has labored under during the years of railway taxation for one more in accord with those of progress and the demands of expediency, so soon as they have rid themselves of the railway tax. The building of a township hall is an absolute necessity in any well-regulated township, and the time is opportune to agitate the matter in Osprey. Build now and have the cost begin where the railway tax departs.

As to where the new centre shall be is perhaps a question which will be pretty hard to decide ; and yet, from an outside point, we will say it should not be so. Singhampton is on the extreme eastern boundary of the township ; Feversham has not all the facilities which Maxwell enjoys, and Badgero's is in the same position. Maxwell is more easy of access to all concerned as a whole, than any other point in the township ; it has a good gravel road leading east and west, telegraph line, stores, hotel, etc., as well as having the advantage of being as nearly central as any of the other places named, and we think that there the headquarters should be established. However, all this is a matter for the people themselves to decide upon, and we simply give our views in a suggestive form, leaving it with our numerous patrons in the interested township to accept or discard our hints as seemeth best.

The Hamilton Times, preparatory to the carnival, earnestly requested every citizen of Hamilton to "adorn or improve his premises so that the city as a whole will strike the strangers as a pleasant place to live in." The candor of the Times in admitting that Hamilton is not a pleasant place to live in without these extra fixtures is worthy of all praise.

Mayor Clark, of Toronto, who has been absent in England for some time attending to financial matters in connection with the city, returned home on Saturday and was tendered a reception which no mayor ever yet saw exceeded in brilliancy. Mayor Clark is the pet of the public in Toronto, and well deserves the great honor.

Hamilton is blossoming as the rose this week. She is enjoying a carnival of brilliant magnitude, only bounded by the mountain on one side and Burlington Beach on the other. In fact the Hamiltonians themselves believe that its scintillations are quite visible from Atlantic to Pacific. But then you know, they are a people built with abnormal imaginations.

Inventor Edison has been made a count, and his wife a countess. This will count for something when his daughters come to a marriageable age.

Fall Shows.

Following is a list of the dates of fall fairs in this vicinity :

NAME.	PLACE.	DATE.
East Grey	Flesherton	Sept. 23 and 24
South Grey	Durham	Sept. 24 and 25
Great Northern	Collingwood	Sept. 25 to 27
Central Ag'l Socty.	Walters Falls	Sept. 24 and 25
Industrial	Toronto	Sept. 9 to 21

General News.

The contract for the Northern Pacific's big hotel building at Winnipeg has been let at $300,000.

Will you suffer with Dyspepsia and Liver Complaint? Shiloh's Vitalizer is guaranteed to cure you. For sale at the Medical Hall.

Winnipeg citizens at a meeting decided to erect a monument to the memory of the late Mr. Norquay.

The Provincial Treasurer of Quebec has paid to Father Turgeon, on behalf of the Jesuits, the sum of $13,333, being eleven months' interest on the $400,000.

Shiloh's cough and Consumption Cure is sold by us on a guarantee. It cures Consumption. For sale at the Medical Hall

The pack of salmon to date this year in British Columbia totals 376,000 cases, which is larger than any previous year's pack by 127,000 cases.

Anasal injector free with each bottle of Shiloh's catarrh remedy. Price 50 cts. For sale at the Medical Hall.

The winnings of the Canadian Wimbleton team in England this year amounted to £432—an average of $90 per man—besides the Kolapore cup.

That hacking cough can be so quickly cured by Shiloh's Cure. We guarantee it. For sale at the Medical Hall.

Young Twitchell, charged with the late burglary in Kingston, has been released on $6,000 bail.

Shiloh's Cure will immediately relieve Croup, Whooping Cough and Bronchitis. For sale at the Medical Hall.

The people of Warren county, Georgia have organized to drive out the Mormons.

Sleepless nights, made miserable by that terrible cough. Shiloh's Cure is the Remedy for you. For sale at the Medical Hall.

John G Morley, a young man living near Rockwood, Ont., was killed by lightning on Monday night.

Russian papers are abusing the Shah for his friendly expressions regarding England.

Fire at Tonawanda Tuesday destroyed 3,000,000 feet of lumber.

The South Fork dam at Conemaugh is to be rebuilt.

ADVICE TO MOTHER.—Are you disturbed at night and broken of your rest by a sick child suffering and crying with pain of Cutting Teeth? If so send at once and get a bottle of "Mrs. Winslow's Soothing Syrup" for Children Teething. Its value is incalculable. It will relieve the poor little sufferer immediately. Depend upon it, mothers, there is no mistake about it. It cures Dysentery and Diarrhœa, regulates the Stomach and Bowels, cures Wind Colic, softens the Gums, reduces Inflamation, and gives tone and energy to the whole system. "Mrs. Winslow's Soothing Syrup" for children teething is pleasant to the taste, and is the prescription of one of the oldest and best female physicians and nurses in the United States, and is for sale by all druggists throughout the world. Price twenty five cents a bottle. Be sure and ask for "Mrs. Winslow's Syrup," and take no other kind.

THE MARKETS

FLESHERTON.

Carefully Corrected Each Week.

Fall Wheat
Spring Wheat
Barley
Oats
Peas
Butter	0 14	0
Eggs fresh		0
Potatoes bush
	0
Hides
Sheepskins
Geese	0
Turkeys	0
Chickens per lb	0	0

SIGN

"Big Spex"

Reads of watches in

Gold, filled gold and Coin-silver cases.

Ladies' and Gents' sizes.

Walnut and Nickle Clocks.

I am represented by A 1 watches and clocks backed up by reliable warrants, in more homes of Central Grey, than any jeweler doing biz. in this section.

If prices are not shed rock every time

QUALITY Considered,

I would not be able to hold such a large share of Grey Co. trade as I have at present.

"CASH or CREDIT"

will positivily do better by you.

Goods, Work and Warrants Considered.

than you can do elsewhere. Spex artistically fitted.

Work Carefully Done.

Fair Charges.

Stock now complete in all lines.

Can save you $1 to $3.00 on watches.

Other lines will be held on live and let live margins.

W. A. BROWN,

Jeweler and Optician,

MARKDALE, Ont.

BRITISH SEA DOGS

Reviewed by Emperor William Off Portsmouth.

A MAGNIFCENT DISPLAY.

Three Five Mile Lines of Battleships Closely Inspected.

NEXT WEEK'S MIMIC WAR.

A last Monday night's Portsmouth cable says: The annual naval review, the greatest naval review that England or any other country ever saw, took place to-day at Spithead. The sun shone down upon the wide green sea of brilliant flags and changing craft. In the wide water picture there were thousands of moving vessels, great and small; there were big ocean steamers, big excursion steamers, coasting steamers, steam yachts, tow boats, tug boats and shore steam launches, all brilliant with bunting of all colors, made all the brighter by the escaping clouds of steam. There was a great fleet of sail yachts, five hundred of them and more, dancing along over the bright green surface under a crisp, fresh breeze, their white sails bending in graceful undulations to the English ensigns they were perpetually passing. There were white ships' launches and pinnaces shooting across the water in all directions, with hissing steam pipes and fluttering white ensigns, the most important, if the smallest of all the boats in motion, and straight in immobile lines over the many square miles of sea area that these pleasure boats occupied lay the grim iron monsters of the fleet quietly at anchor, stern and silent as grim and unbending as so many black armoured and iron helmeted knights, looking on in majestic indifference at the petty frivolities of the children's masquerade.

It was the greatest fleet of warships that was ever gathered together, greatest in number and by far the greatest in power. They made an impressive sight, a grim scene that compelled every observer to stop and think to the extent of his personal ability, these three five-mile lines of battleships, each built to do the utmost harm of which a ship is capable with powder, shot and shell, or with torpedo and dynamite. All along the line were peeping out frowning guns which could quickly make brick yards of all the forts in the world.

Her Majesty's guardship Seahorse left Sheen Jetty just as the rusty clang of the dockyard clock announced half past 1. The admiralty had ordered that the Seahorse should keep abreast of the review movements, in order that the press representatives might see everything that occurred.

At half past 3 o'clock the station at Trinity pier announced that the Royal party had arrived for disembarkation, the young Emperor being sharply on time, as usual. The Alberta put off to the Victoria and Albert, and as Emperor William stepped on board the Royal standard of Germany ran up to the main to take its place beside the other, the two brilliant flags flying together in picturesque fraternity thenceforth throughout the day. The Emperor was accompanied by a brilliant party, including Count Bismarck and his full suite. With him also came Prince Christian of Schleswig-Holstein, Prince and Princess Henry of Battenburg, Prince Henry of Prussia, and the Lords of the Admiralty. The Victoria and Albert quickly gathered way, and headed for the lower end of Ryde-bank. As she did so the first explosion in a day of explosions began. A flash and boom came from the gun deck of the Valorous, the ironclad that always guards the sea in front of Osborne when Her Majesty is there.

The view from this point was novel and altogether interesting. It was a five-mile avenue of sea water, 400 yards wide, lined with ships as far as the eye could see, brilliantly draped with flags standing out clearly for some distance, and then all ran together; masts, flags, smoke-stacks, turrets and barbettes mingling in strange confusion, in which the second lines of similar ships had a part. The royal yacht passed the Spider, Sand Fly, Sharpshooter and Mohawk before any sign of recognition became manifest. A moment later all over the fleet the general salute came. The Seahorse was in the midst of it, and the way in which those cannons banged all round the ears of everybody on board had a strong tendency to oust any desire for war. It was bang, bang, bang and boom, boom, boom, and smoke-clouds that hid the ships, concealed the fleet and lent a hazy look to the entire visible universe. The sheets of solid, rolling white smoke came from all parts of the various ships, wherever the saluting guns happened to be placed, and this smoke, seized by the wind, sailed off into the thinner and bluer clouds of indefinite size to an indefinite height. It was a grand salute, numbering 15,000 guns altogether, and when it had finally ceased and the smoke had rolled away, every ship, like a wrought-iron massive butterfly coming out of a cocoon of cannon smoke, took on a new appearance, majestically gaudy.

The Emperor wore full uniform with the cocked hat of an admiral of the fleet. The Prince of Wales wore the same. The Emperor had a telescope which he was constantly using. He inspected all minutely and with great interest. He was constantly in motion or in conversation, and took a business-like interest in the scene which evidently afforded him much gratification on occasions. He took off his hat whenever the Royal yachts passed one of the line ships. Every tar on board joined in the cheer which went ringing away to seaward with hoarse enthusiasm truly British. Then the commanders on the bridge uncovered, and the Emperor uncovered also. He takes off his hat very often, and does it extremely well.

The aquatic procession consisted of the Trinity yacht Galatea leading, the Victoria and Albert, the Hohenzollern, Osborne and Admiralty yacht Enchantress. It passed up the main line and down the second line amid two hours of cheers and naval courtesies, then it returned to the main line and stopped abreast of the Howe for a reception. In the meantime the sea had become everywhere dotted with white steam launches, coming from every direction and converging towards the Howe. They contained various commanders on their way to the reception. Meanwhile the Victoria and Albert had completed the inspection and come up abreast of the flagship. She stopped, the port gangway, carpeted with red, was lowered, and the signal that flew up to the masthead announced that His Majesty was ready to receive. Upon this the large steam pinnace of Admiral Sir Edmund Somerset, admiral of the fleet, put out from the Howe and crossed to the Royal yacht. Sir Edmund went on board and was duly presented to His Majesty, and then the formal presentation began. A flotilla of launches crossed the tossing stretch, each bearing a captain or commander in command. In half an hour all were gathered on board, and a procession was formed, two and two, the captains having been sorted into fleets and squadrons. All being ready, His Majesty took his position in the open space at extreme aft of the main deck. He stood alone, the Prince of Wales behind him and a little group composed of the Princess of Wales and her daughter and Princess Beatrice still further back. The ladies were in gray dresses of various shades, tasteful exemplars of the costume known as fashionably nautical. Lord George Hamilton, in court dress, had already presented Admiral Commerel, and that Admiral now headed the procession of officers, who marched from the saloon along the seaboard quarter to the stern. The Emperor took off his cocked hat with a free circular sweep at every presentation, and also shook hands with an emphatic muscular grip.

While the presentations were going on the flagship Howe dragged her anchor and had to let go her spare anchor. After the presentations the yachts weighed and proceeded to the westward at a quarter to 7, amid the same salutations as before. As she stood away she hoisted a signal. It was: "The Emperor and the Prince of Wales, on behalf of the Queen, wish to express to the admirals, captains, officers and men of the assembled fleets their highest approbation of the appearance and efficiency of the magnificent fleet assembled.'

THE COMING FIGHT.

The broad lines which are to be followed at the approaching naval manœuvres may be briefly laid down as follows: When war is declared, which will not be till after the combined squadrons have exercised for some days at what used to be called steam tactics, but is now known as fleet evolutions, and have filled their bunkers up with coal again, Vice-Admiral Baird, with Rear-Admiral Tracey as his second in command, will be at liberty to do as much damage to the seaports and shipping of Great Britain as he can. The Admiralty will not interfere with him at all, and he will hold no communication with them. Ireland will be his headquarters, and two of its ports, probably Berehaven and Queenstown, will be considered to be so fortified as to be impregnable. To Sir George Tryon, who will, as is only right, have a much more powerful fleet than Baird's, the frustration of the enemy's tricks and the defence of our coasts will be intrusted. His bases of operation will be Milford Haven and Lamlash Bay, in the Isle of Arran, where his second in command will be located. Admiral Tryon will be in direct telegraphic communication with the Admiralty, who will direct his movements according to the information they receive about Baird from the signal-stations round the coast.

A Portsmouth cable says: The great chain cables were rising with a hoarse clank, clank through the hawse holes; the anchors were being hove short; heavy streams were making round aurioles of water spray, as the hose was turned on the muddy chains; long lines of blue jackets were running along the decks, bending under the weight of ropes which were pulling heavy stream pinnaces from the water up to the high davits; fifes and drums on every deck were furnishing the inspiring combination of squeak and bang, which takes the place of the "heave ho" on Her Majesty's ships; sentries were pacing the bridges; crowds of barefooted men in blue were washing the decks; steam was escaping from the deck pipes and side vents, and all up and down the fleet strings of brilliant coloured signals were flying to the mastheads to fall with a despairing droop a few minutes afterwards, like so many shot pheasants. It made the prettiest of pictures in the dark of morning this bright coloured deaf and dumb language of the deep, and to make vivid the fleet of the sea, all the world came.

"C" and "D" are weighing anchor, answered a courteous petty officer on the Howe to your correspondent. They were weighing anchor. There was no doubt of it. Two squadrons at least were about to move, and the spectacle was awaited with interest. Battle ships at anchor are all very well, but they have the inert and unsatisfactory impressiveness of a stuffed bull dog. After all, it is the bull dog in motion, with his hair bristling, his teeth showing, his mouth opening like a porthole that makes his reputation as a beauty, and bull dogs had begun to move. The Raccoon at five minutes to 5 began to to forge ahead. The fleet line for the first time was broken. The cruiser moved majestically out of its place into the middle lane, and went steaming grandly away between the fleet. The Inconstant followed with impressive rapidity, her three masts perpendicular against the sky. Then, with a flash and roar, came the big floating battery, the Prince Albert, and the coast-defence ships Hotspur, Gordon and Hecate. They had an effect that was nothing more or less than weird, these great masses of metal tearing so actively through water. It was weight irresistible and power beyond opposition. The feeling they created was the sense one sometimes has in trying to sympathize with the panting locomotive, only it was the sense intensified to an indefinite degree. Grandest of all by accident of circumstances was the outcoming of the Cyclops. She came directly down the sun's path with all its blaze squarely behind her. She seemed to tower on high, a strange living and breathing Frankenstein of the seas, as she shot through gold filmed waves, the wall all on fire through all her line with the sun glare on davits, rails, boats, ventilators, air tubes, smoke stacks, smoke clouds as she came. But on passing, the light left her, and grown grey and sober she churned her way rapidly to the westward as if weary of inactivity.

Now the torpedo boats began to come out of the harbor at full speed. They darted down the north line in squadrons of six and seven, like shoals of fastest flying black porpoises, half in and half out of the water. They cut instead of mounting the waves. They were very fish-like, flying so fast and so low in the water. They thrust their noses into the billows as if they loved them and received spray that dashed in clouds about their bows just as gladly as if spray was their natural nutriment, and they had not had their breakfast. The second group of them passed, and were quickly out of sight. There was a great hole in the fleet line where C and D squadrons had been. A and B were to go next, but not for some hours, and so your correspondent shaped his course for Ryde, purchased one of the gilded waiters at the Royal Pier Hotel, and sat down to breakfast. In the forenoon A and B went out one by one to the eastward.

The German Emperor, though expected at the Cowes regatta, was too much interested in the navy to leave it long for yachts, and the Victoria and Albert took him and the Prince of Wales outward with the fleet. The two big squadrons went out in single column. The line ships were too far apart in this form to be very impressive as groups, but after rounding Bembridge point, the head ships slowed down, the after ones caught up and the procession went down the Isle of Wight coast. It was a grand sea picture that nobody living along the shore permitted himself to miss. St. Catharine's Point is a high bluff that rises hundreds of feet in precipitous shelves from the shore. From the summit the ocean was a flat stretch of wide waters, whose distances were indefinite and interminable. Five miles out in the blue the Immortalite was steaming into the Channel, a snow white, symmetrical, rapidly disappearing spot on the blue. Three miles behind her came the grand procession, far enough away from the observer to gain for the first time during the week the quality of compactness. It sailed along in two long columns. "B" squadron was headed on the shore side by the Northumberland, Vice-Admiral Beals' flagship, with the Rattlesnake torpedo catcher on her starboard beam. Behind came the Monarch, Hero, Mersey, Arethusa, Irish Conqueror and Grasshopper. Abreast of these was the other line, sailing evenly with them, headed by the Anson, Rear Admiral Irvine's flag ship, with the Curlew torpedo catcher on her port beam. Behind were the Iron Duke, Devastation, Collingwood, Calypso, Camperdown, Magicienne, Grasshopper and Nymphe. There was a wide stretch of sea and then came a squadron following the same track. The Hercules, Rear Admiral Lyon's flagship, headed the shore line, followed by the Neptune, Ajax, Invincible, Balkan, Prince, Northampton, Undaunted, Galatea, Thames, Mercury, Melpomene, Serpent and Sandfly. Abreast of them were the Rodney, Admiral Tracey's flagship, the Howe, Rupert, Warspike, Shannon, Narcissus, Media, Marathon, Mohawk and Spider, and over the glittering, diamonded stretch of deep calm ocean these massive ships, transformed by distance into pretty tiny toys, passed slowly to be lost to sight where blue meets blue.

The "B" squadron, otherwise the Achill fleet, goes to Black Sod Bay, in Ireland, thence to England with the unreal ferocity of imaginary war. The "A" fleet, the chief defending squadron, goes to Milford Haven. "C" squadron, defending, goes to Lamlash Bay, and "D," also defending, to Plymouth. "F" and "G" will protect the vicinities of Hull and Leith.

PRAYERS RESTORED HER SIGHT.

A Middletown (N. Y.) Woman's Remarkable Experience With Faith Curists.

A Middletown, N. Y., despatch says: Faith Mission is the name under which a religious organization in this city was recently incorporated. The Mission services are held on the upper floor of an old school house that was abandoned by the city many years ago. The leading spirit of the Mission is David L. Conkling, teller of the First National Bank. Faith Mission is very liberal in its views, opening its doors to all who profess Christ. Of late the pulpit has been occupied by Faith Curists, represented by Elder Hancox, of the Church of the First Born, Jersey City. On Sunday, July 28th, he devoted his time to recounting the cures effected in answer to the prayers of himself and his faithful followers. In the audience was a middle-aged woman, Mrs. William Boyce, a member of the Presbyterian Church and the wife of an employee on the State Asylum farm, who for fourteen years had suffered from impaired vision. One of her eyes was totally blind and the sight of the other was so defective that she could only see dimly by the aid of the strongest glasses. Mrs. Boyce was much impressed by Hancox's remarks and going forward for prayers was anointed with oil. Next morning, while working in the house, her sight was suddenly restored. She hastened to tell the neighbors and as proof read the smallest print in the Testament. On her husband's return from work she saw him for the first time in fourteen years with the eye that had been totally blind. Scores of people have been to see her during the week, and yesterday at the Mission's services she gave proof of the cure by reading at sight, without glasses, articles in small type which she had never before seen.

T. Granger Stewart, M. D., F. R. S. E., Ordinary Physician to H. M. the Queen, in Scotland: Professor of Practice of Physic in the University of Edinburgh, in writing of Bright's disease, says: "The blood itself is altered in its chemical composition. Its density is diminished, the corpuscles and albumen being deficient, while the water is correspondingly increased. The quantity of urea is above the normal. This is a plain recognition of the necessity of directing active treatment with Warner's Safe Cure when the blood is over-charged with urea or uric acid poison.

When daily life is to do the will of God, no disappointment is possible; neither can failure come in. Step-by-step following is the most quieting, disentangling thing in all the world.—Woman's Journal.

—Gussie—What is the-aw-orwigin, do you know, of thwowing up the sponge, old chappie? Mr. Sissy—Thwallowing the thponge, I pwesume, Gussie. And Gussie took the subject under advisement.

UNHAPPY MRS. MAYBRICK.

Sentenced to Death—Mr. Justice Stephen Hooted by the Crowd.

A Wednesday's Liverpool cable says: At the conclusion of the Maybrick trial three women fainted while the judge pronounced the sentence of death. The sentence pronounced, the prisoner, who at the concluding phrase, "And may the Lord have mercy on your soul," had clasped her hands convulsively together, required for a moment the support of the two female warders, but recovering her nerve, she walked down the stairs with a firm step and unassisted. When His Lordship, preceded by the usual retinue of javelin men, chaplain and sheriffs, made his appearance in the streets the crowd commenced to yell and hoot. His Lordship took no notice of the disturbance but proceeded to his carriage. The police not expecting a demonstration of the kind were not in any extraordinary force, and they only partially succeeded in keeping the crowd clear of the conveyance. The horses, being fine spirited animals, became restive, but the coachman, seeing the position of affairs, whipped them up and drove at a rapid pace up the London Road toward Newsham House, the judge's residence, followed for some distance by a yelling crowd. This treatment was the less deserved because throughout the trial Mr. Justice Stephen had been even anxiously careful that no point that told in favor of the prisoner should be overlooked.

As an instance of popular fickleness, a somewhat similar scene occurred in connection with the removal of the now convicted prisoner. It was at first intended to surround the prison van with an escort of mounted police, but this idea was abandoned, and when the van drove out of St. John's lane at the end of the private passage, by which the prisoners are taken to and removed from the courts, a large crowd awaited its appearance and indulged in hoots and groans for the prisoner, which continued until the van disappeared in the direction of Walton Jail. There is a rumor that Mrs. Maybrick is pregnant. If this were so it would save her from the noose, but the report is not believed. When a woman under death sentence makes such claims, she is placed in the hands of a jury of twelve matrons. If their verdict is that the prisoner is with child, she is respited, which means imprisonment for life. Otherwise she is hanged.

A Liverpool cable says: There are people who do not believe Florence Maybrick will be hanged. There are many who do not believe that she should be hanged. Many of the latter class, who are influential persons, have so expressed themselves in letters to the London editors. Petitions are being sent to Manchester and London, so that members of the bar who have left Liverpool may have an opportunity of signing them.

The merchants and brokers pray that the sentence of death may be respited with a view to commutation or reprieve, on the ground that there was no direct evidence of the administration of arsenic by the prisoner to the deceased; that the case against the prisoner on the general of facts was unduly prejudiced by the evidence of motive, and that there is room for grave doubt whether the circumstantial evidence relied on by the prosecution was weighty enough to justify conviction; that there was a strong body of medical testimony on behalf of the defence that death was ascribed to natural causes; that there was not sufficient evidence on the part of the prosecution; that it was due to arsenical poisoning; that, having regard to the conflicting nature of the medical evidence and the very widespread doubt as to the propriety of the verdict on general grounds, it would be in the highest degree unsafe to permit an irrevocable sentence to be carried out.

Messrs. Cleaver and Holder, Mrs. Maybrick's solicitors, have received letters from other towns, asking for copies of the petition for signature, and they have drawn up a form for general use similar to that of the merchants and brokers.

Mrs. Maybrick was in a prostrate condition this morning, and was attended by the doctor, who, however, states that her condition is not serious, but is due to relapse after the great strain of the past week. She has again protested her innocence to the jail chaplain. This afternoon she had recovered her composure somewhat, and was visited by her mother, Baroness Von Roque, who since the commencement of the proceedings has been living in the vicinity of the jail in order to be near her daughter.

There was a large crowd outside the jail, and the prevailing sentiment was one of pity for the prisoner.

The governor and officials of the jail decline positively to give any information about the prisoner, and information on this head has to be sought in other quarters. The interview between the mother and daughter, which was but brief, was painful and affecting, the prisoner being of the two the most agitated. She, however, expressed her appreciation of the kindness of the officials in allowing her mother to visit her, the visit having afforded her much consolation. Last night when she returned from court she walked to the condemned cell with a firm and elastic step, and as if she had not realized the terrible position she was in. This morning, however, a revulsion of feeling seems to have set in.

Some City Nuisances.

The man or woman who will have the window in a car up or down according to his or her special desire, reckless of the comfort of others. The people who talk at the play or the lecture while all around them are trying to listen to the performance. The woman sitting just behind us at church, who is always swinging a fan, and from whom we cannot escape, although we know that the current of air will give us a stiff neck for the next two days. The young man who whistles ("for want of thought" describes his character truthfully), and whose piercing notes go through the weary listener's brain like the puncture of a stiletto.—New York Journal of Commerce.

—"Do you imagine M Porcine s well off?" "I judge so, from the fact that she said her father owned next to the largest abbattoir in Chicago." "Do you know what is next to the largest abbattoir in Chicago?" "No; what?' ' A vacant lot.',

A FATAL CANNON ACCIDENT.

They Didn't Know It was Loaded Till they Touched It Off.

A Wednesday's special from Yarmouth, N.S., says: A most startling and remarkable accident occurred here last night about 9 o'clock. The streets were filled with people when the sound of a discharging cannon was heard in the centre of the town. It was found that one of the old 32-pounder cannon in the drill shed had been discharged and the shot had killed a man named James Cosman, in Wilson's stable, in the next street. The Artillery Company meet in the drill shed for gun drill every Tuesday evening. They go through the exercise of loading and firing the cannon, using the regular large iron shot, but having only a bag of sawdust for powder. Last Tuesday night when drill commenced an obstruction was found in one of the guns, which proved to be a shot jammed in tightly in some way near the breech. Various means were tried to get it out without success, and the gun was then left until last night, when Capt. T. R. Jolly tried to blow the shot out by putting in powder at the touch-hole and firing it. The breech was previously sounded with a drift, apparently showing that the gun was empty, save for the shot. A small quantity of rifle powder was put in the breach and a friction tube exploded, but there was no effect until the third attempt, when there was a startling report and the drill shed was filled with smoke. The shot tore through a heavy rolled-up gymnasium mattress, through the doors of the rifle rack, through the end wall of the building, entered the back of Wilson's stable, where the stableman was cleaning a horse, struck him a glancing blow, breaking his neck, and then passed through four heavy board stall partitions before it was spent. The report of the gun and the effect produced were out of all keeping with the amount of powder poured into the touch-hole, and the cause of the accident is a mystery. It is believed by many that whoever jammed the shot in the cannon had first got some powder and put in a charge, but if this was so it seems strange the gun did not go off until the third firing of the powder inserted at the breach.

FLY PAPERS AS A COSMETIC.

Brussels Druggists Have Their Say on the Maybrick Case.

A Brussels cable says: The Maybrick trial has caused almost as great a sensation on the continent as in England. The Independence Belge compares the case to the celebrated Lafargue affair of thirty years ago. The Brussels newspaper has also sought to throw light upon one of the points of the trial which has remained somewhat obscure, and to-day publishes the result of interesting inquiries. The reporters have made the fly papers theory the subject of their inquiry. Mrs. Maybrick alleged that she had employed these arsenic impregnated papers for her complexion, after the example of German women. The counsel for the prosecution objected, and no witnesses were produced to prove that German women made use of fly papers, as alleged, and consequently this part of Mrs. Maybrick's defence was worthless. Ten Brussels chemists, who have been consulted by the Independence, have totally different opinions. Of these, nine stated that fly papers could be used successfully in the cure of skin diseases and eruptions, while the tenth went further. He carried on his profession many years in Germany, and declares that in that country many women are in the habit of using fly-papers to beautify their complexions. The preparation of the papers is the same as that which Mrs. Maybrick said she had followed. Another chemist named Hairant, who also spent several years in Germany, corroborated the previous statement. He pointed out that fly papers are generally impregnated with a strong solution of quassia amara, the extremely bitter taste of which would certainly have aroused Maybrick's suspicions had any liquid containing it been given him to drink.

THE BOULANGER TRIAL.

The General Charged with Intrigue, Falsehood and Conspiracy.

A Paris cable says: The trial of General Boulanger before the high court of the Senate was resumed yesterday. The Procureur-General, continuing his address, charged that General Boulanger had held a veritable political court at Clermont-Ferrand when he was in command of the troops there, and he had originated secret intrigues, electoral agitation and systems for corrupting officials. Notwithstanding these acts he had written to the War Office disclaiming any connection with what had been done in his name.

Here there were protests from the Senators belonging to the Right.

The Procureur-General declared that there were documents before the court which clearly marked the downward path of Gen. Boulanger from insubordination to intrigue, falsehood and conspiracy. The Government also had evidence to show that Gen. Boulanger had tried to have conveyed to Prince Bismarck the information that he (Boulanger) only desired to be appointed Consul for life.

The Procureur-General described the proceedings of the League of Patriots at Rochefort and the initial steps of the attempt against the State, which commenced with the scene at the Lyons depot when Boulanger started for Clermont-Ferrand and continued until the Longchamps review, when Boulanger was hiding in Paris awaiting the result of his manifesto. The Procureur's speech was received with many impatient cries to "Adjourn! adjourn!" The trial was finally adjourned.

Here's Richness.

The appointment of women on School Boards does not meet with approval in all quarters. A janitor in one of the Public Schools thus relates his grievances: "Here I have been janitor of this school for 15 years and not a soul has ever been in the basement but myself, and now this woman comes to inspect the school, and the first thing she does is to ask to see the basement. And that basement," he added plaintively, "wasn't in a fit condition for any one to see."—American Analyst.

Accepted suitor—Won't you find it awkward when you meet your other two husbands in heaven? Interesting widow—I don't expect to meet either of them there.

THE FAMILY CIRCLE.

What Will Be Worn the Coming Fall.

LECTURE ON LOVELY LINENS.

Valuable Suggestions for the Sick-Room.

RECIPES AND OTHER NOTES.

The Coming Fashions.

While all the world of fashion is making itself merry through the gay summer-time at the various resorts, busy heads and hands everywhere are making ready for the season that is to follow so closely in the footsteps of this rapidly retreating one, and are deciding what shall be presented in the way of high novelties for wear when the cool days call for change of raiment. Word has already come from the centres of fashion that velvet, that most regal of all fabrics, will be worn a great deal this autumn and winter. Not the brocaded velvets, nor the striped stuffs, but the plain-surfaced silk velvet. This beautiful fabric can never be too highly valued; and why should it? It stands alone among all the textiles; nothing takes it place. It is beautiful in its own unaided beauty. It needs nothing in the way of ornament or trimming to enhance its stately loveliness. It is the queen of all the materials that was ever made, and the very fact that it is to head the list augurs a season of rich and elegant dressing, with stately lines and dignified effects. Thick corded silk will also be fashionable, making a marked contrast, indeed, to the soft, yielding stuffs that have been the favored wear in silken stuffs during the summer. The woollens that will be the most generally worn this autumn will, it is prophesied, be quite profusely embroidered, either all over the surface or as a deep border. Some samples of the latter have been received, and dresses made from them are already brought home by returning European travellers, as a little hint of the preparation already being made for the approaching autumn and winter. Cashmere of an olive, mignonette or Egyptian green—a bright, rather dark shade—embroidered with a broad border in an oriental design, makes a charming costume worn in the form of a princess polonaise, or with a tunic divided from the bodice and very slightly draped. As to the mixture of materials, it seems just now as though it would consist only in putting into dress sleeves a different stuff from the body of a gown. The Frenchdressmakers began his odd innovation early in the summer, and they are still carrying out the idea. To what extent it will obtain during the autumn and winter it is, of course, quite impossible to say, but it is not at all uncommon now in either Paris or London. How American women will receive the fashion, remains to be seen.

Lovely Linens.

In a lecture recently given by Mrs. T. M Wheeler before the ladies' classes of a New York art school she said: "We require that the dish out of which we eat, the bed in which we sleep, the carpet on which we tread, shall have some share of beauty." Then she talked on household linens. The old-fashioned notion of a linen chest well stocked with homespun flax is superseded by piles of daintily embroidered linens for different uses. The monogram of the fair owner is worked in many pieces by her own hands, and each separate article bears some suggestion of the owner's personality.

The woman who loves to see beauty and daintiness about her embroiders her towels in different designs to suit each apartment. Her bed linen is fine and ample, and in the department of the table she allows her love of beauty full sway.

Linen for the bed quite as well as the bed in which we sleep can have its share of beauty, for true beauty has its root in appropriateness.

The sheets and pillow-slips of a well-ordered linen closet should be guiltless of machine stitching. Their hems should be daintily sewed by hand. The machine has its uses, but within this precinct it is ostracised. The hems of the sheets should be at least three inches wide, and in one corner there should be seen the monogram of the chatelaine daintily worked with white linen floss. No bit of color should mar the inviting usefulness of the pure white linen. There is, in the words of the old adage, a place for everything, and the bed linen is not the place for color.

The pillow-slips may be treated in a manner similar to the sheets, and the bed will be not only pleasant to look upon, but also will give an added sense of usefulness to the many occupants.

The towels that fit the corner of our linen closet are susceptible to decoration. Here color may be well used and suitable designs executed as elaborately as the time and patience of the worker admit.

Fringed towels are much in use, but inasmuch as they distribute more or less of lint wherever they go, at least some of the supply may well be hemmed.

Suggestions for Sick Rooms.

A large, sunny room should be selected for the invalid; if without a carpet so much the better. Sunshine as a disinfectant is worth bushels of chloride of lime.

The bed linen should be changed at least once in three days; the blankets once a week, those that have been removed being hung in the open air for a few hours, then thoroughly aired in a warm room.

The room should be kept thoroughly ventilated and at a temperature not lower than 68 degrees nor higher than 70 degrees. If the patient is kept warm air may be freely admitted without the least danger.

The carpet of a sick room should be lightly brushed once a day with a wetted broom. The furniture and woodwork should be wiped with a damp cloth. Dry dusters and feather brushes are worse than useless.

The cross sheet should invariably be kept free from crumbs and wrinkles, as these are a frequent cause of bed sores. Whenever the least redness shows on the patient's body the skin must be at once bathed with alcohol, thoroughly dried and dusted with powdered oxide of zinc.

A sheet folded once lengthwise, laid across the bed, with the upper edge just touching the pillows and the ends tightly tucked under the mattresses, will be found to add greatly to the patient's comfort. It does not wrinkle like a single sheet, and crumbs may be readily brushed off it.

The nurse's dress should invariably be neat, tasteful and pretty. Slippers or boots of felt should be worn. To be continually smoothing the bed, pestering the patient with sympathy and saying a dozen times an hour, "How do you feel now?" is enough to drive a sick man wild.

Meals for invalids should look as tempting as possible. The tray should be covered with the whitest napkin, and the silver, glass and china should shine with cleanliness. The patient should not be disgusted by a display of too much food, and should not be consulted beforehand as to what he will eat or drink.

In bathing the invalid should never uncover too large a surface at once. Pin a blanket round the shoulders, fastening it behind, and remove the night-dress under that. Put the hand under the blanket and sponge the skin, a small portion at a time. A woman's hair should be combed every day if she is able to bear the fatigue. If it has become tangled a little sweet oil will loosen it.

Household troubles should be kept far from the sick-room. Above all, an invalid or an apparent convalescent should be saved from his friends. One garrulous acquaintance may in half an hour undo the good of a week of tender nursing. In long illnesses a small bed-table will be found indispensable. Every cup, glass, spoon and utensil used should be taken out of the room and washed as speedily as possible. as to walking on tip-toe and whispering, othing can disturb a sick person m ores.—Home Topics.

Dressing-Gowns for a Princess.

The Czarina has just had three wonderful dressing-gowns made for Princess Alexandra of Greece, who is about to be married to the Grand Duke Paul, of Russia. One of them is made of white silver fox fur, cut princess shape and edged with a border of real gold-plaited threads about a hand-breadth wide. The second is made of sable, fastened up the front with six agraffes, each composed of a cluster of real pearls. The effect of the pure white pearls on the bright dark fur is said to be positively dazzling. The third of these luxurious garments is made of blue-fox fur, and is encircled at the waist by a diamond belt. Several thousand skins have been used to make these dressing-gowns, which represent an almost fabulous worth. The Czarina is said to have explained the lavish outlay by saying she chose fur that the Princess, who comes from the sunny south, might be well protected against the cold.

New Designs in Jewelry.

Diamonds inserted in ivory are now seen in miniature portrait jewelry.

Mounted on a plain gold hoop bracelet, a moth of diamonds, opals and rubies shows with fine effect.

A large white pearl held between the nippers of a realistic looking crab is a recent design for lace pins.

Among scarf pins the much abused telegraph pole is represented with diamond insulators on the gold arms.

Initials formed by sprays of gold-backed enamel forget-me-nots are lace pins recently seen at the watering places.

Queen chain pendants are assuming every conceivable form. An eighteenth century spinning wheel is the most recent.

A plain gold scimitar with the hilt profusely inlaid with emeralds and torquoise forms a decidedly handsome hairpin.

A sea shell in relief, with finely etched marine scene surrounding it, forms an artistic decoration for silver mirror front.

Sloping Shoulders.

The feminine shoulder, which has for some time been treated by dressmakers in a manner to make it look as square as possible, is about to slope off. The pouf will go, according to the Paris fashion, and then the curve will again be natural and revealed.—New York Sun.

Receipes.

Tomato Soup.—Wash, scrape and cut small the red parts of three large carrots, three heads of celery, four large onions and two turnips; put them in a saucepan with a tablespoonful of butter and a half pound lean ham; let them stew very gently for an hour; then add three quarts of brown gravy soup and a little black pepper, with eight or ten ripe tomatoes; let boil for an hour and a half, then strain through a sieve; serve with fried bread cut in dice.

Croquettes of Fowl—Mince the remains of a cold fowl, carefully removing all skin and bone, and fry three shallots in one ounce of butter; add the minced fowl, dredge in one teaspoonful of flour, add pepper, salt, pounded mace, one teaspoonful of pounded sugar, and sufficient white sauce to moisten it; stir to it the well-beaten yelks of two eggs, and set aside to cool; make the mixture into balls, dip in egg and bread crumbs, and fry a rich brown.

Stuffed Tomatoes.—Hollow out the centres of twelve tomatoes, chop some cold meat or chicken, add bread crumbs, one chopped onion, three eggs well beaten, one quarter pound of butter and seasoning; form into forcemeat balls and fill the centre of the tomatoes; stew them gently in gravy. Before serving up brown them with a salamander.

Vegetable Marrow au Gratin.—Parboi two marrows, quarter them, drain thoroughly, and place them on a buttered dish; sprinkle over grated Parmesan cheese, pepper and salt to taste, and a little grated nutmeg; lay small pieces of butter on the top; cover with finely-powdered bread crumbs, bake for twenty minutes, and serve very hot.

Beef Soup.—Boil one small beef bone in three quarts of water. When it has boiled three hours add two onions, two turnips, four potatoes chopped fine, two tablespoonfuls each of barley and rice; season with salt and pepper. Boil one hour longer.

THE late Dr. Dio Lewis, whose name is a household word all over the globe, warmly endorsed the use of Warner's Safe Cure in cases of kidney disorder. He said over his own signature: "If I found myself a victim of serious kidney trouble, I would use Warner's Safe Cure."

—A pure and noble woman is like a great and good newspaper—neither of them ever grows old.

THE LAND OF EGYPT.

Remarkable Discoveries Made by M Naville.

The two large July gatherings held in London, England, by the Victoria Institute are considered to have been of much importance. The President, Sir G. G. Stokes, Bart., President of the Royal Society, took the chair at both, and on each occasion the members crowded the large hall engaged to the doors. At the first meeting Professor Sayce's account of his examination of the library brought by Amenophis III. from Assyria to Egypt 34 centuries ago, was given. The Lord Chancellor delivered an eloquent speech on the occasion, and M. Naville, the discoverer of Succoth-Pithom, Bubastis, and other places of great historical importance in Egypt, characterized the discovery described by Professor Sayce as one of the most important, and perhaps really the most important, of this century; and the Victoria Institute's members were not slow in recognizing the value of their fellow-member's work. At the second meeting, the members assembled to welcome M. Naville on his arrival in England after his discovery of the site of Bubastis, and his exploration thereof. The business of this meeting was commenced by the election, as members, of several who had applied to join the Institute as supporters, including His Excellency Count Bernstorff, and several Australian and American associates, after which M. Naville himself described his own discoveries at Bubastis, for the first time in England—his last visit to England having been previous to those discoveries. The Society of Arts having most kindly placed their apparatus at the disposal of the Victoria Institute, he showed, by lime-light, the photographs he had made on the spot. M. Naville commenced by quoting the prophecy of Ezekiel against Egypt, because it contained the names of the leading buried cities, the recovery of the records of which he is so desirous to obtain; and here we may be permitted to digress for a moment to call attention to the fact that the authoress of the last published work in regard to the East declares that this prophecy had not been fulfilled according to the prophet's words. Strange that the greatest and most successful Egyptian explorer of modern times should go to this very prophecy for light to enable him to find that which others had failed to discover? Taking the last city named, he described how he found Pibseth-Bubastis, how each day's excavating work brought him new relics, new inscriptions; how he found Rameses II., in the 19th dynasty, had, as usual, blotted out the names of previous Pharaohs, and put his own name on everything, even on the statue of a Pharaoh of the 4th dynasty; and how, by careful comparison, aided by the fact that Rameses II. had not been quite thorough in his appropriations, he had discovered which Pharaoh of the 4th dynasty the statue represented. He came to the conclusion that Bubastis was founded at least as early as in the reign of Cheops, between whom and Pepi, of whose influence there were traces, 500 years intervened, 800 years after there was a transformation of the city in the 12th dynasty; in the 14th dynasty there was the invasion of the Hyksos or Shepherds, who, from the statutes of great beauty found, and from other evidences, must have been a highly-cultivated people, who, he considered, must have come from Mesopotamia. Dr. Virchow considered that their monuments represented Turanians, and Professor Flower considered them to represent people of a Turanian or Mongoloid type, but that did not mean that the population itself was Turanian. Their worship and language was of a Semitic type, but the statues of their kings showed that they were not Semites. M. Naville added: "It was then what it is still now; and I believe that the conquest of Egypt by the Hyksos is not unlike what would happen at the present day if the population of Mesopotamia overran the valley of the Nile; you would have masses, in great majority of Semitic race, speaking a Semetic language, having a Semitic religion, and being under the command of Turks, who are not Semites but Turanians."

M. Naville, having referred to the head of a Hyksos King, which he had sent to the British Museum, added that he had found two statues of Apepi, the Pharoah of Joseph, and inscriptions in regard to the Pharoah of the Exodus, and many others of high interest. But it would be impossible to refer to the mine of interesting matter in this paper, and we can only congratulate the members of the Victoria Institute on possessing it; it is certainly worth the whole year's subscription to possess this one paper. M. Naville, in concluding, said: "I cannot dwell at great length here on the events of the Exodus, yet I should like to mention that the successive discoveries made in the Delta have had the result of making the sacred narrative more comprehensible in many points, and in one especially in showing that the distances were much shorter than was generally thought. I consider, for instance, it important to have established that Bubastis was a very large city, and a favorite resort of the king and his family. It is quite possible that, at the time when the events preceding the Exodus took place, the king was at Bubastis, not at Tanis, as we generally believed."

The First Omnibus.

The invention of omnibuses is due to the philosopher Pascal, who, in February, 1667, obtained a "privilege"—what we should call a patent—for public carriages to travel through certain streets of Paris. They held eight passengers, who paid 6 sous each, and were very successful, although an act of the Parliament of Paris forbade them being used by lackeys, soldiers and other humble folks. Pascal died in 1667 and his useful invention did not long survive him. The omnibus reappeared in London about the beginning of this century and was adopted in several French provincial towns before Paris accepted it again.—London Standard.

The Woman's Temperance Magazine, published in Tokio, Japan, is the first paper edited by women in that country. The editors are Miss Asai and Mrs. Tasaki. The design on the cover is an angel floating over the earth and scattering printed leaves for the use of mortals.—Woman's Journal.

THE SUMMER BABY.

The Trials and Tribulations of Mother and Child.

The summer baby goes on a good many excursions—in fact, the summer baby is a dissipated creature this hot weather. It is brought in town to shop, and it is taken down to the Beach to commune with old Ontario, and it is dandled from the end seat of an open car to catch the passing breeze. I meet the s. b. in all stages of white gown and prickly heat wherever I go, and I sympathize with its supine indifference to the world profoundly. The summer baby is very careless of personal appearances; it has all it can do to brace up long enough to have a cap tied under its little chin and a clean face put on. Occasionally, however, it burrows in a ripe plum or takes a nip from a sticky piece of candy, with results that make it excessively attractive to flies; but, then, the baby is agreeable, and why need anybody else care? With all the discomfort, and even cholera infantum staring it in the stomach, the summer baby has a good time. It is the tired, heated mother who is worried; she plumps her offspring down in the sand on the shore with an air of desiring to plant it, or she snatches the darling off the far from immaculate floor of the car, as though the child was a brand plucked from the burning and she meant to extinguish it. Sometimes the summer baby's poor little head wabbles like a Japanese's doll's, and it behaves as "fretty" as an old man who can't find his spectacles; life isn't running smoothly then, you may be sure; the miserable heat is playing witch work with its tender digestive organs. Fresh air and real cow's milk are wholesome, and shopping tours and crumby cake are the reverse, but, of course, the summer baby doesn't go a-shopping from choice, and so one is all the more sorry to find it sitting on a counter in August, while "mummer" buys its shoes or her own. Whenever the summer baby is encountered lolling in a perambulator under the trees in the Public Garden the combination is regarded as about as advantageous as the reigning dog star would be likely to permit in the city. A baby has the courage of its ignorance, but the summer baby is a perfect lump of heroism—to keep along at all.

Regularity of Habit.

One of the most difficult of all minor habits to acqire, says an able writer, is that of regularity. It ranks with that of order. The natural inclination of most persons is to defer until the last possible moment, or to put it off to another time, where this can possibly be done. Yet habits of regularity contribute largely to the ease and comfort of life. A person can multiply his efficiency by it. We know persons who have a multitude of duties, and who perform a vast deal of work daily, who set apart certain hours for given duties, and are there at the moment and attend rigidly to what is in hand. This done, and other engagements are met, each in order and a vast deal accomplished, not by strained exertion, but by regularity. The mind can be so trained to this that at certain hours in the day it will turn to a particular line of duty, and at other hours to other and different labors. The very diversity is restful, when attended to in regular order. But let these run together, and the duties mixed, and what before was easy is now annoying and oppressive, and the exact difference between many is at this point. There are those who confuse and rush, and attempt to do several things at once and accomplish little, while another will quietly proceed from one duty to another and easily accomplish a vast amount of work. The difference is not in the capacity of the two, but in the regular methods of the one, as compared with the irregular and confused habits of the other.

No Musical Sense in Horses.

An interesting report regarding the development of the musical sense in horses has just been made by a committee of German zoologists and botanists. The report says: "The investigations as to the musical sense of horses have shown that that sense is very poorly developed in these animals. It has been proved beyond doubt that horses have no notion whatever of keeping time to music and that at circuses they do not dance, according to the tune, but the musicians have to keep time according to the steps of the animals. Other investigations show that horses do not understand military trumpet signals. It is only the rider or the animal's instinct of imitation which induces horses to make the moves required by the signal, but no horse without a rider, however carefully trained, takes the slightest notice of a trumpet signal and the same observation has been made on a large number of cavalry horses without riders."

I Remember.

I remember, I remember,
When I was but a boy,
How Castor Oil and Epsom Salts
Robbed life of half its joy.
I remember, I remember,
When for each trifling ill,
The family Esculapius
Prescribed the Big Blue Pill.

But happily, (let suffering humanity murmur a prayer of thanksgiving), that period of woe is past. Speedy and painless relief from all the ills of a disordered stomach or impaired liver, can be obtained by the use of Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Purgative Pellets. They do not gripe, weaken or nauseate. Small, sugar-coated, pleasant to take, and mild and gentle in action. Neatly put up in glass vials. One a dose. Smallest, cheapest, easiest to take.

One on Carlyle.

Carlyle, when a youth, attended a Presbyterian Church at Cummertrees, Dumfrieshire. The preacher, Rev. Davie Gillespie, spoke on "youth and beauty being laid in the grave." Something in his discourse tickled the future philosopher. He "smiled audibly," whereupon the dominie turned on him remarking: "Mistake me not, young man, it is youth alone that you possess."

He Really Was.

Father—Willie, where have you been?

Willie (the hopeful)—Upstairs, putting red pepper into Uncle 'Rastus' shoes.

Father—I am surprised, Willie! I thought you were above doing a mean act.

Willie—So I was, sir. [illegible]

THE ART OF SWIMMING.

Common Sense When in the Water—Everyone May Learn.

There is no knack in swimming, says the Family Doctor, albeit few of us swim by instinct. Remember that the one indispensable requisite is a confident belief that you cannot sink while you keep your hands under water and your legs the least in motion. Every person should know that his or her body is specifically lighter than the water.

Plain swimming is a perfectly easy and simple operation. Keep your hands open, with the palms rather concave, and the fingers close together that no water can pass between them. Lean with your chest on the water, and as you throw your arms forward your body will assume a horizontal position just beneath the surface. With slow and steady action let the legs follow the motion of the arms, or rather act simultaneously with them. Then spread the hands so as to describe a half circle, the elbows coming close to the body and the hands to the chest. A few yards is all you willaccomplish at first.

Keep up your head in all cases, and if you feel any inconvenience by the water entering your mouth close your lips and it cannot get in. In getting ready for each successive stroke draw back your legs by a simultaneous motion, keep the feet wide apart with the toes well turned out, and as you send out the arms kick the legs backwards and sideways to the full extent, keeping them separate until they have described as wide a circle as possible, the legs closing together at the end of each stroke. Press against the water with the sole of the foot, and not with the toes, and you will make more easy and rapid progress.

ALMA LADIES' COLLEGE,

St. Thomas, Ontario.

All Graduates of Alma Fine Arts College are legally qualified to teach in Public and High Schools, Collegiate Institutes, Mechanics' Institutes, and the Arts Schools of the Province.

☞Last year Alma passed 116 out of 137 candidates in the Provincial Arts Examinations, took the only four full Advanced Certificates given in the Province, also six full Primary Certificates and won two Gold Medal Certificates.

Alma's record in past years has been unequalled in the Fine Art work, and she now stands unrivalled in this respect in the Dominion of Canada.

Her Art room and apparatus are admittedly the best in Ontario, and her staff of instruction unsurpassed.

A number of graduates of Alma Fine Art School have received Collegiate appointments in Canada and the United States.

For 60 pp. Calendar, address Principal Austin, A.M.

A Widespread Injury.

Journalist—I would like to get a pension.

Pension Agent—Were you injured while you were in the army during the war?

"Yes, I was a newspaper correspondent, and I did so much hard lying that I strained my conscience, and as everybody connected with the army is getting pensions I thought I'd just file my claim."

Health and Beauty.

She is a form of life and light,
That, seen, becomes a part of sight:
Health on her cheek, and beauty in her eye,
Her form all grace and queen-like majesty.

The secret of her splendid health and beauty is simply this: she averts and avoids the many ills peculiar to her sex by the use of Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription. This is the only remedy for woman's peculiar weaknesses and ailments, sold by all druggists, under a positive guarantee from the manufacturers that it will give satisfaction in every case, or money will be refunded. See guarantee on bottle-wrapper.

The Richest Woman.

The richest woman in America is a resident of South America. She is not only the richest woman in the Americas, but she is the richest woman in the world. She has one of the largest fortunes held by either sex. This woman is Dona Isadora Cousino, of Chili. She is the biggest real estate owner in Santiago and Valparaiso. South American fortunes are hard to estimate, but many people have put hers above $200,000,000. Money multiplies fast in her hand, for her eye is everywhere.

A Reward of $500 is offered by the manufacturers of Dr. Sage's Catarrh Remedy, for a case of catarrh which they cannot cure. The mild soothing, cleansing and healing properties of this remedy are irresistible. 50 cents by druggists.

True Caution.

"Hold this revolver for me a minute, won't you?" said one travelling man to friend.

"I don't know about that," was the reply. "I'm timid about fire arms"

"But it isn't loaded."

"I know it isn't. Go ahead and load and I'll chance it. I've heard enough about pistols that weren't loaded."

At Work by the Day.

She—Oh, see that scarecrow out there in the field!

He—That isn't a scarecrow.

She—It must be; see how motionless it is.

He—That's the hired man at work.

—"What prompted you to rob this man's till?" asked the Judge of the prisoner. "My family physician," said the prisoner, "told me I required change."

D C N L 34' 89.

AGENTS MAKE $100 A MONTH with us. Send 20c. for terms. A colored rug pattern and 50 colored designs. W. & F BUSH, St. Thomas, Ont.

DUNN'S BAKING POWDER
THE COOK'S BEST FRIEND

GEO. MITCHELL,

BANKER,

FLESHERTON.

DRAFTS BOUGHT AND SOLD.

Special Attention paid to the collection Notes and Accounts, 2nd door North Richardson & Co's.

The Local News.

What is Happening in Our Own Vicinity.

Mr. Thos. A. Blakely has sold sixteen self-binders during the past season.

W. J. Blakeston, of Hillside Academy, gave us a pleasant call on Tuesday.

Look out for McDonald and Evans' change of advertisement next week.

The cattle fair at Priceville on Monday was well attended and a large number of cattle were sold.

There was no regular service in the Presbyterian church last Sabbath, owing to the continued absence of Rev. Mr. Emes.

WANTED.—An experienced weaver, or a smart young woman to learn. Also a boy or girl to wind bobbins and reel yarn. Apply at the Flesherton Woolen Mill.

In the council minutes of last meeting of council the name of John Hargrave, as collector for ward No. 1, should have read John Hazard. Typographical error

Readers will notice by our advertising columns that the Owen Sound Collegiate Institute re-opens on Monday, Aug. 26th. This Institute has been remarkably successful. Read the announcement.

Mr. W. Wood, merchant at Flesherton station has a splendid stock of general dry goods and groceries, which he is selling at very reasonable prices. His stock of ladies' dress goods is more extensive than it has ever been before. Call in and examine.

Will McFarland, while camping out at Bell's lake last week shot a very large loon.—Markdale Standard. Mr. Ed. Richardson, of Flesherton, claims half the honor of that capture. He says he broke the bird's leg with a ball and Will finished it with a shot gun.

The Priceville correspondent of the Durham Chronicle says, with reference to the game of baseball which was played between Priceville and Flesherton two weeks ago, that "the ladies who were present were very enthusiastic, and showed a feeling against the visiting team which Priceville ladies would not be guilty of on such occasions."

We have received from the office of the Manitaba Colonist a publication in magazine form entitled Port Arthur Illustrated. It is very neatly executed, the illustrations being of superior excellence, and all printed on heavy toned paper, making the book a credit to the place with which it deals, and the office of publication as well.

The Flesherton Advance has entered on another volume. Success to ye. Creemore Star. Yes, brother, age is creeping on. The Advance was eight years old last June, but we neglected to mention the fact at the time. We have to wear spectacles and our memory is failing us, but don't you forget that in other respects we are still a vigorous old coon for our years.

In an item published in the Markdale Standard this anomaly exists.: "The horse ran for about a half a mile when he was caught. The buggy and harness are a total reck. He happened lucky that he was not killed." Who happened lucky that he was not killed? Was it the buggy, or the harness, or the horse, or the individual that caught him, or the half mile that he ran for? It is evident that something was nearly killed, but what was it? Where was the half mile situated that the horse ran for? How could he run, anyway, when he was caught? When—but our head aches. Ain't used to literary puzzles of this kind.

A Strange Beast.

A year ago the Shelburne Free Press noted the finding, near that village, of the ribs of some huge prehistoric animal. These remains were discovered while excavating for a well, but owing to the large quantity of water flowing in operations had to be abandoned. Lately, however, work has been resumed and the result is that other portions of the mammoth beast have been unearthed. Those who have seen the bones cannot place the species of animal to which they belong. So far as known no other remains of a like nature have ever been discovered. They belong to neither the mastodon or mammoth. One horn has been secured, which, Mr. R.L. Mortimer, of the Free Press, imforms us, must have stood out nine or ten feet from the head, or about twenty feet from tip to tip. The horn has the orthodox curve of an oxe's horn. A large number of the bones are now on exhibition, but the complete skeleton has not yet been exhumed. Here is something which may puzzle the zoographer to describe. So far we have not heard of the remains having been examined by any professor competent to decide as to the order of the animal which they represent.

Garden Party.

The garden party which was advertised to be given by the young ladies of the Methodist Church, took place on Friday evening last, on the spacious grounds of Mrs. Geo. Dinwoodie, near Flesherton, having been postponed from Wednesday owing to rain. The party gathered together was not large. The evening was rather cool, which, no doubt, caused a great many to remain away. The elements seemed to frown upon the young people in their efforts to get up this party. Those who were there, however, appeard to enjoy themselves heartily.

Good Crops.

The following from the Manitoulin Expositor go to show that agriculturists on the island will have no cause of complaint this season: "Eighteen ears of fall wheat, containing 770 grains, on straw four feet six inches long all grown from one grain. They stand at present in the corner of our office and came from the farm of Wm. Peters and are no better than the rest of the field. Timothy 6 feet 2 inches long, oats 5 feet 8 inches long, and spring wheat 5 feet 6 inches long with fourteen ears to the one root. These also stand in our office and came from the farm of Henry Shannon, the grain all large and plump and handsome enough to please anyone."

In the Peanut Business.

An item has been going the newspaper rounds stating that the Canadian Pacific railway company has fired all newsbutchers and candy mongers from their lines, and that henceforth the passenger may ride in peace. This is a mistake. The company, considering that the catering in these lines was not satisfactory to travellers, has taken over the business itself and will hereafter pester passengers on the latest approved plan. This is done through philanthropic motives, we presume. Of course the fact that Mr. Burgess (we think his name was Burgess) late proprietor of the news company which supplied the C.P.R. trains, made $16,000 in three years, may have been a small incentive in the eyes of the railway authorities. It sounds nice, does it not, to read that the C.P.R. are selling peanuts, popcorn packages, and oranges for a living!

The Wiarton Excursion.

One of the most pleasant excursions which we have ever enjoyed was that given by the united Foresters and Workmen of Shelburne and Dundalk to Owen Sound and Wiarton on Monday last. The train which conveyed the party consisted of ten coaches, containing between seven and eight hundred people, of which number Flesherton contributed about thirty. Upon arriving at Owen Sound the party was transferred to the steamer Carmona, which was in waiting, by which they were conveyed to Wiarton, where they arrived at 2.30. The village of Wiarton is growing steadily and surely. Fifteen years ago, when we first saw it, it was a mere hamlet, with probably twenty houses. To-day it is an incorporated village with the population and appliances of a town. It boasts of several excellent hotels, of which the Arlington is the best appointed and most pretentious. The public park skirting the cliffs which overlook the bay is not by any means the least attraction which Wiarton boasts. The park is picturesquely situated and is made more beautiful by a small assistance of nature. Trees and rocks adorn it; tables are placed at intervals for the accommodation of picnic parties, and a limpid stream of cold water wanders through it, rising from out the limestone cliffs near by. The village has a system of waterworks and fire protection of which any city might be proud. An exhibition of this was given by the fire department for the benefit of their visitors. Four different lines of hose were attached to two hydrants and an inch-and-a-half stream poured from each to a great height. We should say that Wiarton is practically impregnable to fire with the magnificent protection which is afforded by her waterworks. The time at our disposal was not sufficient to examine the town as we would have liked to, but from what was seen we should judge the place has not yet seen its palmiest days. Everything has an appearance of newness, yet there is a substantial glow of health which predicts still greater growth in manufactures and mercantile industries. The boat left at 3.20, and Owen Sound was reached at 6.30, where the excursionists had until eight o'clock to do that future western metropolis of Ontario, the Flesherton contingent arriving home a little after 10 o'clock, having enjoyed a pleasure trip which will not soon be forgotten.

Flesherton public school opened on Monday last.

An amusing game of baseball was played on Monday afternoon between the married and single men of Flesherton. There are conflicting rumors as to how the score stood, some placing it at 10 to 15 in favor of the married men, others claiming that it was 34 to 45 in favor of the single men. This latter statement we are ourselves inclined to accept.

Notice.

The members of Fonntain Council, R. T. of T., are earnestly requested to attend the next meeting of Council on Tuesday evening, Aug. 27, as business of importance is to be transacted.

Married.

Mr. John McGowan, miller, of Priceville, was united in marriage yesterday (Wednesday) to Miss —Grey, eldest daughter of Wm. Grey, Esq., Artemesia. Our hearty congratulations go with the happy couple.

To New York.

A cheap excursion will be run to New York from Toronto on Saturday, Aug. 31. Fare for the round trip from Toronto to New York and return, only $11. For particulars apply to H.W. VanEvery, 5 Adelaide st. east, Toronto.

Northern Business College.

We have received the annual announcements of the Northern Business College. Those who are desirous of receiving a business education would do well to write for them to C. A. Fleming, Principal, Owen Sound. See Advertisement elsewhere.

Personal.

Mrs. Jones, of Toronto, is visiting friends here.

Miss Feeny, sister of Father Feeny of Irish Lake, is visiting in New York.

Miss Jessie Damude, of Fonthill, is visiting with her uncle, Mr. S. Damude.

Mrs. Jas. Trimble, of Michigan, is visiting at Mr. R. Trimble's.

Mr. McDonald, merchant, and wife, have been visiting relatives in the vicinity of Ripley during the past week.

Mr. R. Cook intends to make another visit to Manitoulin island this week or next.

Mr. Walter Leitch has returned from Owen Sound for a couple weeks holidays.

Mrs. D. S. Monroe and Miss Frank Wright are visiting with their mother, Mrs. Wm. Wright.

A Fine Hotel.

While in Owen Sound on Monday we took occasion to visit the new Patterson House, which has lately been erected there. We found it even superior to what we had been led to expect. Mr. Duncan is the same genial landlord that he was while keeping the old City Hotel, but his new house is more in keeping with the requirements of a city than a place the size of Owen Sound. It will be many a day before a finer building will be erected in that place. The inner appointments, cuisine, etc., are entirely in keeping with outward appearance—first class in every respect.

Division Court.

There was a very large attendance at the Division Court held here on Tuesday, including seven lawyers. A number of cases were adjourned until next court. There was one case tried of more than ordinary interest, that of Kingston v. Wolseley. Kingston is a lawyer of Mt. Forest, and Wolseley a farmer in the township of Proton. The latter owed a third person, who, it appears, was indebted to Kingston, and had given him an assignment of his claim against Wolseley. After the assignment had been made and notification given it appears that Wolseley paid over his indebtedness to the assignor and Kingston sues for the amount. Judgement was given for the plaintiff.

Peanuts.

According to a correspondent of the New York Evening post, 3,200,000 bushels of peanuts are consumed in this country every year. They come chiefly from Virginia and North Carolina, although Tennessee also produces a small crop. "Peanuts are planted at corn-planting time. Each kernel produces a running vine, like crab grass, and each root produces about twenty pods. When ripe, the plow is run through the loamy soil, on a dry day, just before frost. The nuts are dried and shocked up like corn to keep dry before housing. When marketed, they go to a cleaner where they are put through steam power machines and polished, after which they are graded according to size and variety. This year there is but two-thirds of a crop, and they are higher in price than since 1884. The crop begins to come into the market about the first of September. The Virginia nut is the largest and finest. The Wilmington is a smaller sort, and the Spanish nut, a still smaller variety, is one whose kernels peel perfectly clean, thus making it valuable for confectionary."

NEW ADVERTISEMENTS

Owen Sound COLLEGIATE INSTITUTE.

Re-Opens Monday, Aug. 26th.

The Best Equipped School in the Province.

A Staff of Seven Specialists.

RECORD, 1889.

ALL the pupils of the Institute, who tried the University Examination, were successful. Six matriculated, one taking honors in every Department. The candidates from this school at the Departmental Examinations received a larger number of Teachers' Certificates than did those of any other school in the Province. Six received first class; thirty-two, second class; and forty-six, third class. At the Art School Examinations the Students of the Institute obtained three hundred proficiency certificates—the largest number received by the pupils of any one institute. Two pupils tried the Primary Examination of the Law Society and succeeded.

For further information apply to

F. W. Merchant, Principal. D. R. Dobie, Sec of Board.

NORTHERN BUSINESS COLLEGE.

Owen Sound, Ont.

Re-Opens on Sept. 2nd for Ninth College Year.

Business Department. Shorthand and Typewriting Department, and Ornamental Department.

The most complete and practical College in Canada.

For Annual Announcements giving full Particulars address

C. A. Fleming, Principal.

VOTERS' LIST.

1889.

Municipality of the Township of Artemesia, County of Grey.

NOTICE is hereby given that I have transmitted or delivered to the persons mentioned in the third and fourth sections of "The Voters' List Act," the copies required by said sections to be so transmitted or delivered of the list made pursuant to said Act of all persons appearing by the last revised Assessment Roll of the said Municipality to be entitled to vote in the said Municipality at Elections for members of the Legislative Assembly and at Municipal Elections; and that said list was first posted up at my office at Flesherton, on the 5th day of August, 1889, and remains there for inspection.

Electors are called upon to examine the said list and if any omissions or any errors are found therein, to take immediate proceedings to have the said errors corrected according to law.

WM. J. BELLAMY,
Clerk of the said Municipality.
Dated this 5th day of August, A. D., 1889.

Hub Thill Spring,

MANUFACTURED BY Butts & Ordway,

Pat'd Dec. 1, 1885. 147, Pearl St., Boston.

Of Interest to every man who uses a Wagon or Carriage.

THIS ANTI-RATTLER IS the BEST,

Because it is effective, simple, easily adjusted, durable, inexpensive. There are no projecting ends to tear the sponge or wash cloth. It fits any size coupling.

—FOR SALE AT—

Heard's Carriage Shop

BEES FOR SALE.

I HAVE TWENTY-FIVE SKIPS OF BEES ALL in first-class condition, of which I am desirous of disposing of fifteen. Parties desiring bees would do well to communicate with me.

JOHN FLEWES
Kimberley Ont.

Medical.

DR. CARTER,
M.C.P. & S., Ont.
PHYSICIAN, SURGEON, &c.
FLESHERTON.

Office, Strain's block. Residence, J. G. Russell's.

J. G. Hutton, M.D.C.M.

Member of the College of Physicians and Surgeons, Ontario.

Enquire at office, one door east of Grier's store or Atkinson's Hotel.

Priceville, Nov. 19, 1888.

DRS. SPOULE & EGO.
MARKDALE ONT.
Office :—Manley's Drug Store.
T.S. SPROULE, M.D., etc. ANGUS EGO, M.D., etc late of Tottenham, Ont.
Dr. Ego will be found at Markdale House at night

J. P. OTTEWELL,
VETERINARY SURGEON.
Graduate of Ontario Vet. College.
RESIDENCE ON COLLINGWOOD STREET
Sixth Door East of Presbyterian Church.
FLESHERTON.

Dentistry.

DENTISTRY.

Dr. Thomas Henderson,
SURGEON DENTIST
Gold Medalist and Honor Graduate of R.C.D.S.,

Will visit FLESHERTON, (Munshaw's Hotel) 1 and 2 of each month. Teeth extracted, inserted and filled in the highest styles of the art, at moderate rates.

Head Office, 761 Yonge St., Toronto

J. P. MARSHALL,
L. D. S., DENTIST,
Visits Markdale the 1st and 3rd Wednesday of each month.
Flesherton each trip on the day following.

Legal.

J. W. FROST,
Barrister, Solicitor, Conveyancer, Etc.

Flesherton Office, next Post Office, Spoule's Building, on Thursdays.
Owen Sound Office, Frost's Building

P. McCULLOUGH,
Barrister, Solicitor, &c.
Office, over McFarland's Store Markdale. Money to Loan.

Business Cards.

John W. Armstrong,
Flesherton, Co. Grey.

DIVISION COURT CLERK, COMMISSIONER in B. R., Conveyancer, &c. Agent for purchased sale of lands. Appraiser for C. L. C. Com., and F. P. B. & S. Society. Money to Loan on most reasonable terms. Issuer of Marria Licenses. Notary Public.

MONEY TO LOAN.
AT LOWEST CURRENT RATES
on Town or Farm Property,
S. DAMUDE,
Flesherton.

Mr. Wm. Karstedt,
Stone Mason, Bricklayer and Plasterer
MATERIAL FURNISHED
Estimates given free. Ornamental Plastering a Specialty.
Residence one door south of Advance Office

W. J. BELLAMY
TWP. CLERK ARTEMESIA.
CONVEYANCER, COMMISSIONER, INSURANCE AGT, &C

DEEDS, MORTGAGES, LEASES, &c., prepared and properly executed. Insurance effected in first-class companies. Money to lend at lowest rates.

R. J. Sproule,

POSTMASTER, Flesherton, Commissioner in B. R., Licensed Auctioneer, Conveyancer, Appraiser and Money Lender. Real Estate and Insurance Agent. Deeds, Mortgages, Leases and Wills drawn up and Valuations made on shortest notice. Auction Sales attended to in any pary of the County. Money to loan at lowest rates of interest. Collections attended to with promptness and despatch. Charges low. Agent for the Dominion Steamship Company Cheap tickets from Flesherton to Liverpool, Glasgow, London or any of the British Ports. Parties intending to visit England, Scotland or Ireland, will please ask rates before purchasing their tickets elsewhere.

House and Lot for Sale.

A good house and lot, opposite the Methodist Church, Flesherton, is now offered for sale. The house is large and roomy, fine lot, good stable and yard, splendid well on the premises, fruit, trees, etc. This is a rare bargain. Apply S. VANDUSEN, Flesherton.

Competition Defied!

PRICES CHALLENGED

THE PEOPLE

Wonder!

How we can sell so cheap and at the same time keep up the standard quality.

OUR MOTTO IS

SMALL PROFITS

—AND—

QUICK RETURNS,

And the large trade we are doing proves that our efforts to please and give satisfaction are appreciated by the public.

To speak of our cheap or leading lines would mean to enumerate our whole stock which in

PARLOR FURNITURE

CONSISTS OF

Plush & Hair Cloth Suites,
Sofas,
Lounges,
Centre Tables
Sideboards,
Cupboards,
Chairs,
Etc.

—IN—

Bedroom

Furnishings

We have still better values than ever. Whole bedroom suites of beautiful finish and design at remarkable low prices. Spring Matresses and Mixed Wool Matresses lower than ever.

J.E. MOORE

Furniture Dealer and Funeral Director.

1 & 2,
Durham St.,
FLESHERTON

Mormonism.

Mr. Editor, I will now give you more Mormon Revelation touching money matters, as they rail on all others for preaching for money, but that they preach for nothing but for the purpose of saving souls. We will now refer to their own Revelations in B.D.C., and let the reader judge for him or herself. Page 300 B. D. C., verily thus saith the Lord, I require all their surplus property to be put in to the hands of the bishop of my church of Zion. P. 301 B.D.C., and after that those who have been tithed shall pay one tenth of all their interest annually,and this shall be a standing law to them forever for my priesthood. P. 302, B. D, C., awake! Oh kings, come ye with your gold and silver to the help of my people. P. 284, B. D. C., as fast as ye receive money by hundreds, or by fifties, or twentys, or tens or fives, cast it into the treasury, and let no man say or claim that as his own afterwards, or any part of it. P. 230, B. D. C., and if any man shall give to any of you a coat or suit, take the old and cast it to the poor and go on your way rejoicing. P. 190, B.D.C. let Newel R. Whitney retain his store, and let him impart all the money he can impart, and send it to the land of Zion. Let him and Oliver Cowdery visit the churches expounding these things to them. This is my will of obtaining moneys even so I have directed. He that sendeth treasures to the land of Zion shall receive an inheritance in this world and also in the world to come. P. 193, B.D.C., and verily it is a day of sacrifice and a day of tithing of my people, for he that is tithed shall not be burned at his coming. P. 194, B.D.C., they are told to not get in debt to their enemies, but that the Lord could take as he pleased and pay as it seemed good, and as they were his agents, and on his errand, whatever they would do accordingly to his will was his business, and that they were sent to provide for his saints in the last days that they might obtain an inheritance in Zion, giving them the assurance that they would obtain it. The reader can understand the meaning of this. P. 303, B.D.C. Joe had a revelation to build a boarding house to board strangers in. It was to be built as Joe would direct. This house was to be a healthy habitation if it was to be built unto the name of the Lord. P. 304, B. D. C., Joe says, let all my saints come with their gold and silver, and precious stones, and with all precious things of the earth, to build this house. On page 307, B. D. C., Miller, Wright, Synder and Haws were commanded by Joe to form a stock company, for to raise money for the building of this house. Joe had a revelation that they could not accept less than $50 from any person as stock in that house, but they were permitted to receive as high as fifteen thousand from any one who was able to give it, and such as would continue stockholders in the house, they and their heirs were to have a place in that house from generation to generation. Joe had a revelation then that caps the climax, of Mormon lying and blasphemy. I will give his own words: And as I said to my servant Abraham, even so I say to my servant Joseph, in thee and in thy seed shall the kindreds of the earth be blessed. Then on page 308-9, B.D.C., Joe has a revelation to several others to pay stock to this house telling them that they may have a place in that house from generation to generation. P. 312,B D.C.,Joe says to the Mormons, let no man pay stock to this company unless he be a believer in the Book of Mormon and the revelations I have given you saith the Lord, and on page 313, B D.C., verse 37, verily I say to you, I now give you the officers belonging to my priesthood that ye may hold the keys thereof the priesthood, which is after the order of Melchisedek, which is after the order of my only begotten son. First I give to you Hiram Smith to be a patriarch to you, to hold the sealing blessing of my church, even the holy spirit of promise whereby you are sealed up to the day of redemption that ye may not fall. See 2 Cor., 1st chap., 22 verse for a flat contradiction of this claim. These people claim to be inspired, and to have the gift of the spirit which sheds its love abroad in the hearts of all good christians,which enables them to pray for their enemies, but on page 277, B.D.C ,they are told by the Mormon god, and whosoever ye curse I will curse and my presence shall be with you even in avenging me of mine enemies to the third and fourth generation of them that hate me.

I have given but a few of their revelations to the readers of The Advance,but I think it is enough to show that they are both imposters and blasphemers How any one could be so besotted in superstition as to publish this stuff with its selfishness,folly,low cunning and hypocrisy as revelations from God, is unaccountable to all common sense. That men should remain dupes of such a knave after such imposition is still more inexplicable.

ANTI-MORMON.

COUNTY & DISTRICT.

Hanover is discussing fire protection.

An old lady died near Mt. Forest last week aged 99.

The Stayner Sun is responsible for the statement that there dwells in the township of Sunnidale two red-headed negroes.

A Toronto business man wrote to a Mt. Forest firm, and addressed his envelope as follows: "Munfores furniture Manfacture Co. Ont."

One day last week three ladies left Durham for a trip to Walkerton, whose aggregate weight would go 800 lbs. Who says the people of South Grey are a half starved lot. – Grey Review.

In the band tournament Thursday at Listowel the 32nd Battalion band, of Walkerton, took first prize; Traax's band, of the same place, second and Forest City band, of London third in the competition for second-class bands.

During the storm on Tuesday afternoon the barn of Mr John Johnson, sr., on the back line Melancthon, was struck by lightening and burned to the ground. The stable adjoining was also burned. Both were log buildings. A considerable quantity of hay,four acres of barley, a fanning mill and other implements were destroyed. Mr. Johnson had no insurance.—[Shelburne Economist.

During the heavy thunderstorm which passed over this vicinity on Wednesday morning last, lightning struck the residence of Mr. David Stewart, Shrigley, passed down the eave-trough and in at the door way. Mr. Stewart's two sons, James and William, and his two little daughters, were standing in the door watching the rain when the lightning struck them, knocking all four senseless. One of the little girls recovered first and discovered one of her brothers' clothes to be on fire, she dashed water on him and put it out, then ran to the neighbors for assistance. During her absence one of the young men recovered and upon finding the house on fire commenced fighting the flames, finally extinguishing them. Medical assistance was sent for, and the two young men were found to be badly burned about the legs and back, also one of the little girls was slightly burned. The father was telegraphed for, he being absent at the Teachers' Convention at Niagara. At last accounts all are in a fair way for recovery.—[Dundalk Herald.

THE JUDGESHIP.—The vacant Judgeship, caused by the death of Judge Macpherson, is already occupying considerable attention and being very actively discussed. Why there should be so much speculation as to the successorship we cannot understand. It is a well established rule that the Junior Judge should succeed to the Senior Judgeship in the event of a vacancy. Not only common courtesy but every vestige of public policy suggests and emphasises the wisdom of such a course. To think for a moment, that the Government at the dictation of a political faction would violate this well understood principle, would be accusing them, in advance, of a public outrage. The rumors we hear must be surely without foundation. Judge Lane, since his appointment to the Junior Judgeship has faithfully performed his duties and his decisions, as far as we can learn,have been characterized by a judicial fairness that command the confidence and respect of the people generally. In his promotion to the Senior Judgeship of the County Judge Lane will receive the congratulations of all classes.—[O. S. Advertiser.

There is nothing small about Chesley justice. According to the Enterprise bad blood has existed for some time past between Alfred Eigholtz and Joseph Jackson, both of Sullivan. Their pent up hatred of one another finally found vent when on Thursday last Eigholtz issued a challenge inviting Jackson to meet him at the German church on the 8th con. for the purpose of fighting it out. Jackson would not accept the challenge but sent word next day to Eigholtz to meet at Jackson's brother's place when the matter would be settled. Eigholtz promptly put in an appearance and the fight took place, Jackson coming out second best. The affair coming under the notice of constable Coulter a warrant was secured and both men arrested. The case was tried in Hanover on Monday night. For writing the challenge, Eigholtz was fined $10 and costs amounting in all to $21.00. For assaulting Jackson he was fined $5 and costs, amounting to $17.50. Then Jackson for assulting Eigholtz was fined $5 and costs which also amounted to $17.50. Thus the melee cost them in all $56. When the trial was over, Jackson lent Eigholtz $17 to pay his fine and the two once more became friends.

Meaford Road.

From our own Correspondent.

The population here has been increased by a girl at Mr. A.Johnston's and a boy at Mr. W. Summer's.

Mr. J.Graham came very near losing a valuable mare. A grain cradle was left close to the barn and backing the team out one got entangled in the cradle receiving a very bad cut on one of the front legs, severing the sinews and leaving the foot almost useless.

The bricklayers are hard at work at Mr. R. Buchanan's new house.

Mrs. R. Warling and her son and daughter-in-law went to Chatsworth last week to see Mrs. Richardson, who is dangerously ill.

Some miscreant placed paris green and salt on the roadside close to the stone church, evidently for the purpose of destroying some animals running on the road. Judge Lynch should have charge of such persons.

Inistioge.

From our own Correspondent.

Harvesting is the order of the day here.

The fall wheat has suffered considerably from the rust. The oat crop promises to yield fairly well.

Since my last correspondence death has been present with us. On Wednesday, the 7th ult, Mrs. Wm. Duggan passed peacefully away to her reward. Rev. Mr. Shilton, of Flesherton, performed the funeral services which took place on Friday following to the Inistioge cemetery. Her aged partner has the sympathy of the neighborhood in his sad bereavement.

On the 19th ult. the Inistioge Division Sons of Temperance gave an entertainment at Proton Station in the Presbyterian church. The program was a good one and was attentively listened to by the audience. The lunch which was served was everything that could be expected. $10.00 was the receipt at the door, among which was 50 cents of bogus money,which, we understand, is plentiful in the vicinity of Proton. Rumor says that it is manufactured there. On returning home one of the teams found a difficulty in getting along the road by coming in contact with some logs that had been placed on the road by some low lived persons who evidently missed their object, as no bones were broken.

The ladies aid society of this place intend having a garden party at Mr. Walter Nichols, on Wednesday, 15 inst., the charge will be 15c. 25cts. The money is wanted to fix the grave yard and give it a presentable appearance, and it is certainly a commendable one and should receive the attention of all who use the yard for a burying ground.

Miss Lizzie Hutchinson returned to her school at Wyebridge on Monday last.

Mrs. Irish, who has been seriously sick for some time, is recovering.

Victoria cheese factory has made another sale of cheese, 8¼c. per pound being the price realized.

The Gale Harrow agents are scouring this vicinity at present.

Mr.McArdle returned and took possession of our school which opened on Monday last.

Maxwell.

From our own Correspondent.

Quite a number of the young people of Maxwell joined in the excursion to Wiarton on Monday last

Mr. and Mrs. Hodgson, of Walkerton,former residents of Maxwell, have been paying their old friends a flying visit.

Mr. C.J. Sproule returned from Toronto, where he had been attending the Military School during the holidays. He looks well and seems to be glad to get back again. He commenced his duties on Monday morning. The bell is a great improvement to the school house, and it gives entire satisfaction.

Mrs. L. Clark is at present in Bay City, Michigan, whither she went for the purpose of attending her son Alex., who has had to have a piece of the bone taken from his arm. They are expected home this week.

The Rev. Mr. Graham, of Markdale, will officiate at the Holy Communion service in the Church of England next Sunday morning.

Mr. J. Reid has returned to West Toronto Junction.

Kimberley.

From our own Correspondent.

We are informed that Mr. Bishop of this place has sold his mill to Mr John Plewes. We are sorry to loose such a genial young man as friend Bishop, but hope our loss will be his gain.

Quite a number of the citizens of this vicinity started the other day in search of huckleberries. They took lots of pails, but as the recent frosts had frozen the berries they were obliged to come home without any. However, they say they had a good time.

Mrs. Brown, who has been visiting here for some time past, returned to Toronto on Saturday last.

A couple of gentlemen from Toronto were rusticating in this vicinity last week. They succeeded in catching quite a number of the speckled beauties.

The Church of England minister from Heathcote,preached in the school house here on Sunday evening last.

The new church and hall here is progressing rapidly.

Mr.and Miss Judson, of Kincardine, are visiting in this vicinity.

REMOVAL

I desire to inform the public that I have removed my well known tin shop to

MOORE'S Block, Durham St.

A complete stock of tinware will be found in my new premises.

REPAIRING,
EAVETROUGHING
Etc. done as heretofore.
I have secured the agency for
the Celebrated Singer Sewing Machine

Requesting my old friends to come and see me in my new shop, I remain, etc.,

JAS. SULLIVAN.

D. McTavish,

HORSESHOER AND
GENERAL BLACKSMITH,
Collingwood Street,
FLESHERTON, - ONT.

Manufacturing of Wagons, Sleighs, Buggies Democrats, etc. Horseshoeing promptly attended to. Special attention given to contracted or tender feet.

Logging and Plow Chains constantly on hand.

KENDALL'S SPAVIN CURE

The Most Successful Remedy ever discovered, as it is certain in its effects and does not blister. Read proof below.

STREETSVILLE, P. Q., May 3, 1889.

DR. B. J. KENDALL CO., Enosburgh Falls, Vt.

Gentlemen.—I have used Kendall's Spavin Cure for Spavins and also in a case of lameness and Stiff Joints and found it a sure cure in every respect. I cordially recommend it to all horsemen.

Very respectfully yours,
CHARLES J. BLACKALL.

KENDALL'S SPAVIN CURE.

ST. THOMAS, P. Q., April 22, 1889.

DR. B. J. KENDALL CO., Enosburgh Falls, Vt.

Gents:—I have used a few bottles of your Kendall's Spavin Cure on my colt, which was suffering from Influenza in a very bad form, and can say that your Kendall's Spavin Cure made complete and rapid cure. I can recommend it as the best and most effective liniment I have ever handled. Kindly send me one of your valuable books entitled "A Treatise on the Horse." Yours respectfully,

I. F. WILKINSON.

KENDALL'S SPAVIN CURE.

FORT ELLICE, MAN., May 10, 1889.

DR. B. J. KENDALL CO., Enosburgh Falls, Vt.

Gentlemen:—I always keep your Kendall's Spavin Cure and Blister on hand and they have never failed in what you state they will do. I have cured a bad case of Spavin and also two cases of Ringbone of years standing, on mares which I bought to breed from, and have not seen any signs of disease in their offspring. Yours truly,

D. J. O'KEEFFE.

Price $1 per bottle, or six bottles for $5. All druggists have it or can get it for you, or it will be sent to any address on receipt of price by the proprietors.

DR. B. J. KENDALL CO., Enosburgh Falls, Vt.

SOLD BY ALL DRUGGISTS.

Voices.

A man died yesternight. To-day the town
Makes mention of his taking off, and sums
His virtues and his failings. On the street,
Midst many barterings and lures of trade,
In homes where he was known, in busy marts,
Or public places where the commonweal
Gathers the town-folk; up and down his name
Is spoke of in as various ways of speech
As are the various voices sounding it;
Gruff-throated bass shrill treble of old age,
Soft sibilancy of a woman's tongue,
Or reed-like utterance of a little child
Thus one, his mate in business: "Ah! a shrewd
Dry head was that; much loss to us, much loss,
And as for heart"—wise shrug of shoulders now—
"Well, 'tis but little quoted here on 'change."
Another, who had summered with him once
In leisure time: "A right good fellow gone?
'Tis true, he liked his ease; but who does not?
For me, give me the man that Horace loved,
Who deemed it wise to fool when seasonable."
A tiny one who oft had found great store
Of sweetmeats in his hand, and, prized far loss,
Great store of tenderness within his heart:
"Oh, won't he come and see us any more?"
His surpliced pastor, bound to save his soul,
Balanced a bit by inconsistencies
He thought he saw, in private to his wife:
"Alas, poor soul, if he had only grasped
That matter of the creed, and made us sure!
But then—his heart was right, and God is good."
And one, a woman, who had found his arms
An all-protecting shelter through long years,
Said naught, but kissed the tokens he had left,
And dreamt of heaven for his sake alone.
Meanwhile, what was this man, and what his place?
You ask, confused by all this Babel talk
Of here and yonder, from his fellow-men.
I am as ignorant as any one
Whose speech you heard, and yet I loved him well.
Nay, ask me not; ask only God. He knows.

—Richard E. Burton.

A STRANGE MONEY-LENDING CASE.

(From London Truth.)

"It really is too bad of your father. When you come into the title, Ronald, you will not have a shilling to support it with."

"I can't help it mother. You know I've remonstrated with the governor often enough, but nothing that I can do will stop him. He's raised more than a thousand in the last month."

The speakers were Hon. Mrs. Browning, wife of Hon George Browning, brother and heir to the Earl of St. David's, and her only son, Ronald. They were now discussing the extravagant habits of the aforesaid George, whereby he bade fair to anticipate the whole of the St. David's property before he came into it at all. This property, which was not entailed, was left in an unusual manner. The present earl had only a life interest in it, the reversion being left to his brother and heir out-and-out—what the lawyers style "in fee simple." But by a codicil to the will it was ordained that, should the Honorable George die before his brother the earl, the latter should acquire the "fee simple" of the property, and be empowered to leave it to whomsoever he chose. Now, the earl was fond of his nephew, Ronald, and had frequently stated his determination to leave the whole property to him in the event of his father's demise. On the other hand, if the Honorable George outlived his brother, he would naturally leave the property to his son when his end came. Thus, whichever event happened, Ronald appeared sure to succeed to the family estate

But this was not really the case; for the Honorable George, being of an extravagant turn of mind, and unable to subsist on his younger son's allowance, was rapidly involving the St. David's property by post-obits, at a rate which in a very few years would mortgage the whole of it so that if he outlived his brother, and succeeded to the property, he would have to surrender every acre of it to the money lenders. A further evil in the case was that the Honorable George, being very few years younger than the earl, and having lived a fast, dissipated life, was regarded as by no means certain to outlive his brother. And thus the money had to be raised from Jews at an exorbitant interest.

Mrs. Browning's brother, James Godfrey, senior partner in the great banking house of Godfrey, Jones & Godfreys, 1,001 Lombard street, had lent his brother-in-law money at 5 per cent., until he discovered that he had an affection of the heart, when he promptly refused to accommodate him with another shilling; and the Honorable George accordingly took refgue with the Hebrews and cent. per cent.

"It was a ridiculous thing," Mrs. Browning argued, "for the property ever to have been left in that manner. Your only chance, Ronald, is that your father should not outlive the earl."

"Hang it, mother, I can't poison the governor—as the old Romans used to treat their obnoxious relatives! Such conduct is out of date."

"Don't joke about the matter, Ronald. It is nothing to laugh at, I assure you!"

"I know that well enough, mother, and I wish to goodness I could do something to stop the governor in his headlong extravagance. It is not only the loss of the property that I fear, but my uncle James has let me see pretty plainly that, if this sort of thing continues, he'll make Amabel break off her engagement with me."

Amabel was Mr. James Godfrey's only daughter, and cousin and financee of Ronald Browning.

"James is very strict on the point of money," Mrs. Browning answered. "And only two days ago he gave me to understand what you have just said."

"D——n it, mother, it's rather hard lines on a young fellow like me to be cheated by his governor's confounded extravagance, not only out of a fine estate, but also out of the prettiest girl in London."

"Your father must be stopped!" his mother said emphatically.

"But how?" It's out of the question. Uncle James has pitched into him, the earl has pitched into him, you have alternately blown him up and appealed to his better feelings, and I have sulked and growled at him till I'm tired of it. But all to no purpose. He promises amendment every day, and every day commits some fresh extravagance. Not down yet, you see, and nearly 12 o'clock. That means he was late at the club last night, where, I dare say, he lost no end of money at loo, or poker, or some other infernal game."

"I wish, Ronald, that you would go and see your Uncle James, and consider with him whether some plan cannot be devised to stop your father."

Ronald pushed his chair impatiently back from the breakfast table. "It's perfectly useless," he said; but I want to see Amabel, so I'll go round there to luncheon. If my uncle is at home, I'll take occasion to broach the subject to him—just to satisfy you, mother. But, of course, he'll be unable to do anything."

"Your uncle is a clever man, Ronald, and I have great faith in him."

Ronald shrugged his shoulders and made no answer; he evidently did not share his mother's opinion.

At that moment the honorable George entered the breakfast room. He was an oldish man, nearly 70, and the marks of fast living had stamped themselves very clearly on his once handsome countenance. But his dress, his elegant figure and his sprightly manner were all twenty years junior to his face.

The surly reception which he had from his wife and son did not affect his urbanity in the least; he was perfectly suave, cheerful and good-humored; told them what a pleasant evening he had spent at the club last night (omitting to mention that he had lost several hundred pounds at cards); asked what news there was in the morning paper; inquired whether Ronald was seedy this morning, as he looked devilish grave. To which inquiry his son replied by leaving the room to make his morning toilet. His father's unassailable good humor only made his conduct the more provoking, for no one was ever known to see the honorable George out of temper. This was partly what rendered him so utterly incorrigible. When he was dressed, Ronald walked leisurely round to his uncle's house in Hamilton place. As the footman opened the door to him, his uncle chanced to be crossing the hall and stopped.

"Ah, Ronald," he said, shaking hands with him not very warmly, "come to see me, eh?"

"I came to see Amabel especially; but I did wish to have a word with you."

"That is lucky, for I have something important to discuss with you. Just step in here. There is still twenty minutes before lunch."

So speaking, the banker ushered the way into his private study, and shut the door. He was a stout, rather handsome old gentleman, with a certain pompous dignity of manner. After pacing the length of the hearth rug several times, with his hands beneath his coat-tails, he said:

"What do you think the St. David's estates are worth, Ronald, eh?"

"Twenty-five thousand a year, I understand, uncle."

"So they are—every shilling of it! And to be an earl, with £25,000 a year, is a noble thing, Ronald, and gives a man high standing in the world. And that is what I thought you would one day be, when I consented to your engagement with Amabel. But, from what I can judge now, by the time you become Earl of St. David's, you are likely not to have £25,000 or £10,000, or even £5,000 a year."

"I know what you mean. And that was what I wanted to talk to you about. My father's extravagance is rapidly involving the property."

"Involving it! The word is scarcely strong enough. In another year or two he will have forfeited his right to every single acre. I do not speak at random, I assure you. Having long been anxious about the state of your father's affairs, I determined, last week, to obtain accurate information concerning them. So I visited Lionel Levi, of Jermyn street, with whom your father has had most of his pecuniary transactions, and pretended that I wished to buy up his bills. They amounted, I found, to more than £100,000."

"Good gracious! What can the governor have done with all that money ——?"

"Oh, he has not had a fifth part of it in cash. That makes it all the more provoking. By raising the money at this outrageously exorbitant interest he is practically selling the property to the Jews at a fifth of its real value."

"Can't he be stopped somehow?"

"Impossible! We have no hold upon him. So, unless your father—ah, ah—fails—to—ah—survive the earl, you will be a penniless peer, Ronald. And, pardon me for saying so, I cannot regard with complacency the prospect of Amabel's marrying a beggar!"

"You are very plain spoken, uncle!"

"I'm a straightforward man of business, sir, and there's no palavering about me. I don't wish to hurt your feelings, Ronald, for you are a good fellow, and I like you; but, at the same time, I am bound to do my best for my daughter's welfare. And I cannot permit her to throw away a number of certain fortunes now for this problematical one of yours in the future. The young Marquis of Truro might be hers tomorrow, and so might Sir Owen Meredith, both of whose estates are larger than the St. David's."

"You mean that you wish our engagement broken off?"

"Precisely! I really regret it, Ronald; but it is for Amabel's sake."

"And what does she say to this?"

"Amabel is a sensible girl, and will do what her father bids her!"

"You will let me see her, and tell her this?"

"Certainly. And if you two can lay your heads together and devise some plan for securing the estate against your father's extravagance—why then the engagement may continue."

"Is that a bargain?"

"Yes; but I fear that you will not profit by it much, since the condition involved is an impossibility."

It may be imagined that, after this conversation, Ronald's manner at lunch was far from cheerful. His aunt and cousin rallied him on his low spirits; but he refused to be drawn out of himself, and he sat moody and despondent.

When luncheon was over, the banker went off to Lombard street, and Mrs. Godfrey, who was the kindest and most considerate old lady in the world, left Ronald and Amabel together in the inner drawing room.

"What is the matter, Ronald?" Amabel asked, as soon as they were alone.

Ronald put his arm around her and drew her to him. To call her "the prettiest girl in London" was, perhaps, a rather sweeping statement; yet she was, beyond doubt, very lovely. And as she stood looking fondly into his handsome face, her auburn head resting against his shoulder, and her dainty little white hands clasped round his arm, it is no wonder that he cursed his father's extravagance more bitterly than ever.

"Has not my uncle told you?" he asked.

"Told me what."

"About our engagement. He wants it broken off, because my governor is anticipating the property, by raising money upon it, and when I come into the title there will be little or none of the estate left."

The little white hands clasped tighter on Ronald's arm, and the tender hazel eyes looked still more fondly into his.

"I can't give you up, Ronald, whatever my father may say! And what does the property matter. Father has always promised to give me a dowry fit for a princess; we can live upon that!"

"But, if you marry me against his will, he will not give you the dowry. No, Amabel, there is only one way out of it—and that is an impossible one."

"That sound Irish. But what do you mean?"

"Your father told me that if I could devise some certain means either to stop my father's extravagance, or secure myself against the consequences of it, our engagement might continue."

"And is that impossible?"

"Utterly. Every conceivable method has been tried and—failed."

"Tell me all about the matter, Ronald; and let me see if I cannot think of some plan."

The young man told her all the circumstances of the case, adding at the end, "There, my darling, you see how hopeless it is."

"I'm not so sure that it is hopeless. Tell it me all over again, so that I may understand it quite, quite clearly."

Ronald complied; pausing every now and then to—but this has no bearing on the story, and, therefore, need not be entered into.

"Now, Ronald," said she, smiling up into his face, "I mean to think of some plan. And when I mean to do a thing, it is as good as done. I shall rack my poor little brain day and night, and shall give it no rest until the plan has been thought of. Don't look so glum, sir. I tell you a plan shall be found."

Ronald only smiled hopelessly. "I have great faith in woman's wit," he said, "but even it cannot accomplish impossibilities.

And she answered, looking fondly into his eyes:

"The power of woman's wit is perhaps limited, but there is no limit to the power of woman's love."

At that minute Mrs. Godfrey, having discreetly coughed to announce her approach, entered the inner drawing-room, and, soon after, Ronald took his departure.

Amabel refused to go out for a drive that afternoon. She wished to be left alone and to think. She sat in the library, by herself, gazing dreamily into space, and buried in her own meditations. At length her cheeks suddenly flushed, and her eyes grew bright, and clapping her hands, she jumped up from her chair, crying aloud:

"I have got it!"

"What have you got, my dear?" asked Mr. Godfrey, who had just come back from the bank and entered the room at that very minute.

"Oh, father! I have thought of a plan!"

"What plan? What on earth do you mean, Amabel?' was the banker's perplexed rejoinder.

His daughter threw her arms round his neck, kissed him, and, drawing him into an armchair, sat upon his knee. Then she whispered something in his ear, and began to talk in a low, eager voice, growing more excited as she went on.

Mr. Godfrey's face, which at the beginning had assumed an obstinate and unyielding expression, gradually relaxed into a complaisant and approving smile.

"You are a true daughter of your father, my dear," he said, at the end. "A first-rate financier! The plan is a clever one, and, I believe, quite feasible. Who would have thought that that little brain of yours contained such cunning? We'll send for Ronald this very evening, and see what he says to your suggestion."

So a note was despatched to Ronald Browning, requesting him to dine in Hamilton place that evening, as his uncle had something important to communicate.

After dinner the three conspirators—Mr. Godfrey, Amabel and Ronald—held a secret conference in the banker's study. Mrs. Godfrey was not included, because, though the most amiable of old ladies, she could not be trusted with a secret.

In the meantime, the Honorable George, all unconscious of the plot that was being hatched against his extravagance, thought that he would try to recoup himself by the aid of the turf. So, with his usual princely recklessness, he backed the favorite for the Cambridgeshire for £3,000. The favorite, unfortunately, was beaten, and the Honorable George was in the position of being forced to raise £3,000 in cash before settling day. He went to his friend the money lender, Lionel Levi, of Jermyn street, nothing doubting but that that worthy would be quite ready to accommodate him. But, to his great surprise and dismay, the worthy Lionel refused to let him have a shilling.

"What the devil does this mean?" the Honorable George asked. "There is still nearly three-quarters of the property unencumbered."

And Lionel answered:

"True! But I do not like the look of your health, sir, and, to put it plainly, I think it very probable now that the earl will outlive you."

"What the deuce is worse about my health now than when you lent me that thousand last month?"

"I was not aware then that your heart was affected!"

"No more it is, by Gad! Who told you so?"

Lionel Levi smiled incredulously. He had it on good authority. He had already lent him £20,000, which he now saw every chance of losing. And the long and short of it was that he would not advance another sixpence.

The honorable George left in a rage, and drove to another money lender of his acquaintance. To his great wrath and chagrin, this individual treated him to the same reply, and assigned the same reason.

The would-be borrower was furious. Who on earth had been spreading that report about his heart? He thought that no one knew of it, except his own immediate family. It really was d—d provoking. These Jews all clung together, and very likely by this time the information had gone the round of every Hebrew in London.

He drove home to luncheon, and to consider his position. A pile of letters had come in for him since he had left the house two hours before. He turned them carelessly over; most were of a bilious appearance, and he did not open them. But there was one, marked on the envelope "Private and confidential," whose contents he deigned to inspect, "though I am sure," he soliloquized, "it's only some infernal advertisement——" "Egad!" he ejaculated a minute later, "Glad I did open it, by Jove! Just the very thing I want!" It ran as follows:

1,200 DUKE SREET, ST. JAMES', S. W.

DEAR SIR,—In the event of you requiring at any time a temporary advance of cash, I shall always be happy to accommodate you. Having a large capital at my command, I am able to advance money at a more reasonable rate than most lenders and to supply it at the shortest possible notice —— —— Yours truly,

DANIEL LAZARUS.

"Well, I'm hanged," muttered the Honorable George to himself, when he had finished reading the above. "If this isn't one of the luckiest things ever happened! Here, at any rate, is a Hebrew who has not heard of my heart disease. I'll call upon him this very afternoon and borrow that £3,000."

"I'm going out, my dear, to pay a few visits," he said to his wife after luncheon, and the first visit he paid was to MR. Daniel Lazarus' office, at 1,200 Duke street, St. James'.

As he entered his club that evening, two men were standing in the lobby, with their backs to him, talking.

"I know for a fact, that Levi refused him this morning," said the one.

"That is excellent, answered the other. Hon. George slipped past them unobserved. He recognized them both. They were his brother-in-law, James Godfrey, and his son, Ronald.

"So ho," he thought inwardly, "that was a dodge of yours to prevent my borrowing money, was it? I wonder how you would both look if you knew that I have this very afternoon paid into my bankers a cheque of Daniel Lazarus' for £5,000?"

From this time forward Hon. George plunged into more hopeless extravagance than ever. His wife and son ceased to remonstrate—either because they did not guess the real extent of his loans or because they thought remonstrance useless. His visits to Daniel Lazarus grew frequent, but the latter was always ready to accommodate him with cash.

"I'll be frank with you," the money lender said, on the occasion of one of these visits. "The fact is I am gambling for your estate. I have set my heart upon it, and have bought up all your bills from Levi. Our friend Lionel was growing nervous about his money—thought that you were sure to die before the earl, so he let me have the bills on reasonable terms. I know that there's a chance of your dying before the earl, but I also know that there's a good chance of your surviving him. I speculate on the latter. The game is worth playing, too, since at my present rate of interest (which is so high because of the risk involved) I shall by the expenditure of a hundred thousand in cash chance winning five hundred thousand in land. On the other hand, I may lose everything, if you are so disobliging as to die before the earl."

"Egad!" answered the Honorable George, with a laugh. "That's the only chance for my son. Why, you've lent me close on fifty thousand now!"

"That involves half the estaste, and your bills, which I have bought up from Levi, involve it to the extent of another quarter. Therefore, only a quarter remains for you to borrow upon. I shall be willing to accommodate you, sir, to the full extent of that security."

"Well, Lazarus, if you don't do so, it shall not be for want of application on my part. I promise that."

This conversation took place some twelve months after Hon. Geo. Browning's first introduction to Danial Lazarus. It will, therefore, be seen that he had been spending money with tolerable freedom during that period. He had, in truth, thrown it away with a reckless lavishness peculiar even for him. The next half year found him no more economical, and at the end of that time scarcely an acre remained upon which money could be raised.

But now an event happened which brought great joy to the heart of Danial Lazarus and such others as had claims upon Hon. Geo. Browning. The Earl of St. David's caught a sudden chill on the first day of cover-shooting. A sharp attack of bronchitis followed, and within 48 hours the noble earl was a dead man.

The Honorable George (we beg his pardon—the new earl) received the intelligence with his usual imperturbability. He did not much relish the prospect of his pecuniary embarrassments being disclosed, but Lazarus was an obliging fellow, and the disclosure might yet be deferred for some weeks.

He found, however, that Lazarus, the accommodating lender, was a very different man from Lazarus the creditor, in full possession of his legal rights. For, on the same afternood that he received the telegram with the news of his brother's death, a note reached the Honorable George from Lazarus, requesting him to step round to his office before 6 o'clock and arrange for the immediate transfer of the St. David's property.

Highly indignant at such a summary proceeding, he drove straight to 1,200 Duke street:

"'Pon my life, Lazarus!" he said irritably, as he entered the money lender's office, "this haste is positively indecent. You might at least have waited until after the funeral."

Daniel merely shrugged his shoulders, and answered, coldly:

"I am quite within my rights, sir! Besides, I am acting on instruction. For I may as well inform you that I am not a principal, but only an agent, in this affair."

"Come, Lazarus, that is a very old story."

"It is true, nevertheless, in the present case. To convince you beyond doubt, I will introduce you to my principal at once. Will you step this way, please?"

The Honorable George followed the money lender into an inner office, and there found, to his utter astonishment, no other a person than his brother-in-law, the banker.

"What the devil does this mean?" he ejaculated.

"Listen!" answered Mr. James Godfrey, a curious smile playing about his lips, "and you will understand. 'Tis I that have lent you the money."

"You! Pooh! You're joking."

"On the contrary, I am quite serious. Seeing that you were bent on selling your estate to the Jews at a fifth of its true price, I used Amabel's dowry—£100,000—to buy it up with. In doing so, no risk was run; for if you survived the earl, I could claim, by law, the whole estate; and, if the earl survived you, he had given me his word to leave the property to Ronald, and Ronald promised to settle £100,000 of it upon Amabel, in repayment."

"You mean that I have, in fact, sold the estate to you?" said the new earl, when his surprise permitted him to speak.

"Precisely! And it is my intention, this very day, to settle it upon Ronald and Amabel, and their children after them. You will not have the control of a single acre, George!"

"Well, well," the other replied, accepting the inevitable with his customary easiness, "after all, it had better go to Ronald than to the Hebrews."

An Electric Catechism.

Scribner's Magazine (743 Broadway, New York) is publishing a series of articles on electricity. The following twenty questions and answers contain a hint of the extent of the ground to be covered:

1. How strong a current is used to send a message over an Atlantic cable? 30 cells of battery only. Equal to 30 volts.

2. What is the longest distance over which conversation by telephone is daily maintained? About 750 miles, from Portland, Maine, to Buffalo, N.Y.

3. What is the fastest time made by an electric railway? A mile a minute by a small experimental car. 20 miles an hour on street railway system.

4. How many miles of submarine cable are there in operation? Over 100,000 miles, or enough to girdle the earth four times.

5. What is the maximum power generated by an electric motor? 75 horse power. Experiments indicate that 100 horse power will soon be reached.

6. How is a break in submarine cable located? By measuring the electricity needed to charge the remaining unbroken part.

7. How many miles of telegraph wire in operation in the U. S.? Over a million, or enough to encircle the globe forty times.

8. How many messages can be transmitted over a wire at one time? Four, by the quadruplex system in daily use.

9. How is telegraphing from a moving train accomplished? Through a circuit from the car roof inducing a current in the wire on poles along the track.

10. What are the most widely separated points between which it is possible to send a telegram? British Columbia and New Zealand, via America and Europe.

11. How many miles of telephone wire in operation in the U.S.? More than 170,000, over which 1,055,000 messages are sent daily.

12. What is the greatest candle power of arc light used in a lighthouse? Two million, in a lighthouse at Housthoim, Denmark.

13. How many persons in the U.S. are engaged in business depending solely on electricity? Estimated, 250,000.

14. How long does it take to transmit a message from San Francisco to Hong Kong? About 15 minutes. Via New York, Canso, Penzance, Aden, Bombay, Madras, Penang and Singapore.

15. What is the fastest time made by an operator sending messages by Morse system? About forty-two words per minute.

16. How many telephones are in use in United States? About 300,000.

17 What war vessel has the most complete electrical plant? United States man-of-war Chicago.

18. What is the average cost per mile, of a transatlantic submarine cable? About $1,000.

19. How many miles of electric railways are there in operation in the U. S.? About 400 miles, and much more under construction.

20. What strength of current is dangerous to human life? 500 volts, but depending larely on physical conditions.

Pipes the Favorite in Philadelphia.

Nothing is more noticeable now-a-days than the great increase in the number of men who smoke pipes on the street. This is by no means confined to workmen with their short clay dudeens. Clerks, lawyers, brokers, dudes and the young and old of all classes seem to prefer the pipe to the cigar, unless there is a high wind. Fine meerchaums, briar roots, an occasional corn-cob or a sally mical are among those seen. When the largest sizes are balanced carefully between the lips, and the men's trousers are turned up all around, "because it's raining in London, don' ch'er know," the possessor may be set down as an Anglomaniac. However, pipes are the fad now, and they have the merit of cheapness.—Philadelphia Inquirer.

A Valuable Experience.

"There comes the life insurance agent!" exclaimed a Wall street broker, as he stood at a window in his office the other morning.

"To see you?"

"Yes. He's bothered the life out of me for the last six months to take out a policy."

"My dear sir, you must have encouraged him to start."

"Well, I guess I did. He asked me for a light for his cigar, and I gave it to him. It will be a valuable experience to me."

WM. ROBERTS, M.D., Physician to the Manchester, Eng., Infirmary and Lunatic Hospital, Professor of Medicine in Owen's College, says: "The attention of the patient is awakened some months, or it may be years, after advanced kidney disease exists." If you think it unwise to take further chances use Warner's Safe Cure before the malady becomes any further advanced.

—"Shoot any one that bothers you," said a Georgia man to his wife on presenting her with a shotgun. She followed his advice and now he has a bad wound in the neck.

—The secret of life is not to do what one likes, but to try to do like what one has o do.

Two small girls—"Oh, auntie, we've come to tell you there's a baby at our house!" Aunt—"That is nice. Did the stork bring a little brother or a little sister?" Little girls (puzzled)—"Nobody knows till the christening."

Trifles.

The little joys and little cares,
They come upon us unawares—
And life is smiles, or frowns it wears.

The foes that tramp unheralded,
No banner carried at their head,
These leave the heart dried up,and dead.

A hand-clasp at the garden gate,
A whisper when the moon is late—
And strength is ours to conquer fate.

O trifling acts for weal or woe!
The pain would not harass us so,
The gladness not as sudden go,

If we could draw a freer breath,
If we could push aside dread death,
And hear untired the words God saith.

So much to do, ere hands are cold;
So far to fare, ere limbs grow old;
So much to say, ere story's told—

That we lose sight of better things;
Forget, in all our wanderings,
To use love's buoyant, sweeping wings.

And I, yes, I sometimes forget
To lure away your care and fret
And kiss the cheek that tears have we

Here let us pledge ourselves anew,
Each to the other, open, true—
Lest life lose all its morning dew.

Who knows what day we say good-by?
When one shall in the churchyard lie—
Let us cling closer, you and I!

William Haskell Simpson

TERRIBLE NAPHTHA EXPLOSION.

A Yachting Party Blown up and Four Persons Killed.

A Wednesday's Buffalo despatch gives the following account of a very sad accident to a pleasure party: This afternoon the family of Mr. L. B. Crocker, Superintendent of the New York Central Stock Yards at East Buffalo, had boarded Mr. Crocker's new yacht, the Cedar Ridge, for a trip down the river. The boat lay at her dock at the foot of Ferry street. The yacht used naphtha for fuel and almost as soon as the engineer had received orders to get ready, two loud explosions were heard and fragments of the yacht were seen shooting skyward. The boat was completely demolished.

The following is a list of the casualties:—

Dead—Ethel and Lancy Crocker, young girls, burned; Howard Crocker, boy, drowned; John Rubenstein, carpenter, working on dock, covered with burning naphtha, burned to death.

The injured are:—Miss Charlotte Crocker, very seriously burned; Miss McLean, a guest of the Crocker family, badly burned; Engineer Coalmeyer, severly burned.

Mrs. Crocker, mother of the three dead children, and the young lady, the latter being perhaps fatally burned, is seriously ill and has not yet been informed of the death of her children.

TERRIFIC GAS MAIN EXPLOSION.

Two Men Killed and Many Injured by an Exploding Main.

A last (Friday) night's Pittsburg despatch says: There was a terrific explosion on the south side shortly after six this evening. Booth & Flynn were testing a thirty-inch natural gas main, which they had laid for the Monongahela Natural Gas Co. Their workmen were testing it before turning on the natural gas by means of compressed air. They ran the pressure up to seventy-five pounds per square inch, when the dead cap on the end of the pipe blew out, scattering debris in every direction. Several hundred workmen employed in the iron mills were returning home and a number stopped to watch the experiment. They were struck by the debris and flying missiles as though a bomb had exploded. The pipe was braced with heavy timbers, and these were hurled into the crowd with terrific force. The workmen and spectators were thrown down, and one, who was killed, was hurled against a brick house and his neck broken. A general stampede followed, and a scene of wildest excitement ensued.

The cries of the injured could be heard several squares. John Miller, single, aged 23, and John O'Connor, single, aged 25, were killed, and several were seriously injured.

Durable Whitewash.

There are several methods of making serviceable wash. The common whitewash is made by putting quicklime into a tight barrel, pouring on water to slake it, and adding water till it is of the consistency of cream. This is used for ordinary work. But a much better whitewash which stands weather well is made as follows: Put half a bushel of quicklime in a barrel and add boiling water till it is covered nearly six inches deep; cover the barrel to keep the steam in, and when the violent ebullition is over; add water enough to bring it to the consistency of cream, allowing four pounds of rice flour to each half bushel of lime, or the rice flour may be mixed with the water for slaking; mixing the flour carefully in cold water before putting it in the hot water until thoroughly set, and then pour it all over the lime, as directed. To improve the above, add two pounds of sulphate of zinc and one pound of salt. To change the color, add yellow ochre for cream tints, raw umber and lampblack for gray tints, and umber, red, and lampblack for fawn tints. The permanence of whitewash thus prepared is remarkable, and, when once tried, will be used to the exclusion of the ordinary mixture.

T. Granger Stewart, M.D., F.R.S.E. Ordinary Physician to H. M. the Queen in Scotland, Professor of Practice of Physic in the University of Edinburgh, writes: "Hypertrophy of the heart is almost always present in cases of advanced cirrhotic disease, and also in the advanced stages of the inflammatory affection. One may trace in patients the gradual development of this hypertrophy advancing pari passu (together) with the progress of the renal (kidney affection." In a large number of these cases the kidney disease entirely overlooked, and the trouble ascribed to heart disease as a cause, when in reality the kidney disease is the cause and the heart trouble the effect. This error is made easy on account of the kidney disease having no local manifestations in the majority of cases. The kidney disease can be cured by the timely use of Warner's Safe Cure and the consequence avoided.

Charles Arnold, the American comedian, arrived at New York on Saturday after an absence of four years. He made quite a lot of money in Australia.

NEW MIND READER.

Appearance and Doings of the Young Muscovite.

A formidable rival to Mr. Stuart Cumberland, M. Verbeck and other famous "thought readers" has, says a Paris correspondent, appeared in the Salle des Conferences, on the Boulevard des Capucines. The new "mind magician" is M. Onofroff, a tall young man of Muscovite origin, who calls himself, with considerable justice, the "celebrated fascinator and mysterious reader of thought." Notwithstanding the numerous attractions of Paris and the heat which prevailed in the little lecture hall on the boulevards, M. Onofroff attracted a large audience, and his novel experiments were watched with close and unflagging interest. Among the first of the experiments was a "murder scene." A gentleman, completeiy unknown to the "thought reader," was asked to imagine some particular spot where a murder had been perpetrated, and to fasten on somebody in the hall as a sham assassin. M. Onofroff not only pointed out blindfolded the place of the crime and the imaginary murderer, but also took the knife with which the crime was supposed to have been effected out of the pocket of a third person who had been included in the cogitated combination of the person whose thoughts were under experiment. In another instance, M. Onofroff put out a gas jet which had been the object of the thought of another person in the room. The audience applauded heartily the new "thought reader," and had every reason to be amazed at some of his experiments. M. Onofroff is more brisk in his movements than Mr. Stuart Cumberland, and at times his whole body quivers like an aspen leaf as he is following up the psychological trail and striving to come in contact with objects of thought.

How to Avoid Consumption.

The startling statement that consumption is a contagious disease, and precautions should be taken against it as such, is officially announced by the Board of Health.

Recently the principal physicians of the Health Department were directed by the Board to prepare a brief report on the nature of consumption, with rules to prevent its spread, for popular distribution.

Yesterday the report was presented to the Board and a resolution was passed directing that 10,000 copies of the rules be printed and distributed at once.

"Pulmonary consumption," says the report, "is a disease capable of being communicated from one person to another. The germ of the disease exists in the expectoration of the patient."

The directions for preventing the communication of the disease are given in nine rules, of which the following are most important:

"Do not sleep in the same room with a consumptive patient."

"See that all eating utensils used by the patient are thoroughly cleansed with boiling water."

"In washing do not mingle the clothing of the patient with that of the other persons."

"Consumptive mothers should not be allowed to nurse their children."

"Household pets, such as animals and birds, are capable of contracting the disease and communicating it to other persons, and should be promptly destroyed if even suspected of being infected."

"Rooms occupied by consumptive patients should be thoroughly cleaned—floor, walls and ceiling—at least once a week."

The Board of Health authorities believe that a strict adherence to these rules will do much to check the spread of this most terrible scourge.—New York Morning Journal.

Is Ice Water a Healthy Drink?

In the opinion of the editor of the Sanitary Volunteer, the official organ of the New Hampshire Board of Health, there is a great deal of sentiment and many opinions regarding the use of ice water that vanish when the light of reason and experience is turned upon them. The fact is that ice water, drank slowly and in moderate quantities, constitutes a healthful and invigorating drink. There is no doubt that ice is a great sanitary agent, and every family ought to be provided with it during the warmer months of the year. It is true that the inordinate use of ice water, or its use under some special conditions and circumstances, is attended with great danger; so is the improper use of any other drink or food. The assumption that iced water is dangerous, and that iced tea, or iced coffee, or iced lemonade is a harmless substitute, is simply a delusion. As the source of danger feared by some is the degree of cold, we fail to see clearly how flavor modifies the effect of temperature. There are individuals, undoubtedly, who cannot drink ice water without injury, and who ought never to use it, but to a great majority of persons it is refreshing and healthful. Its use, temperate and discreet, is in no way to be condemned, which cannot be said of some of its substitutes.—The Sanitary News.

A Negro Boy-Preacher.

There is in Brunswick a little negro boy whose years probably do not exceed eight, who has never attended school, but whose natural genius is remarkable. His name is Alexander Washington. He is known as "Preacher," from the fact that, without license and without denomination, he makes his living by preaching to the negroes, charging sometimes 5 cents, sometimes $1, for a sermon, according to the nature of his congregation. On Sunday last a Times reporter heard this juvenile exhorter delivering a discourse on the gamblers, near the Pope Catlin's dock. In a quaint but thoroughly sensible manner he condemned them to everlasting death. His use of English so readily, always having words to express a thought, is certainly remarkable. The negroes almost reverence and worship him on account of his unusual intelligence.—Branswick (Ga.) Times.

—"Gimme a bite of yer apple, Bill," said a street urchin to his fellow, who was munching a big yellow pippin he had surreptitiously snatched from a huckster's stand. "Naw, I won't," said Bill. "Well, gimme the core then." "Thar ain't goin' to be no core."

Fanny Davenport is on her way home from Europe. So is Emma Abbot.

TWO TIMES TWO ARE FOUR.

How Multiplication Led a Firm to the Verge of Bankruptcy.

Everybody has heard the story of the man who had to give his horse to the blacksmith for shoeing him according to the rule of armithmetical progression—one cent for the first nail and doubling the price for each nail—and of the farmer who gave his farm to the young man who worked three weeks at the rate of one cent for the first day, two for the second, four for the third, and so on, but probably Buffalo furnishes the first case of this kind outside of fiction where the contract was drawn and payment demanded. On account of the recent fire, the Queen City Rag Company had on hand a quantity of rags which they wished to dispose of. Oppenheimer & Co. on the Terrace proposed to buy them, but the terms could not be agreed upon. Finally the Queen City Company offered Mr. Oppenheimer 20 bales of rags on the basis of one cent for the first bale, two for the second, etc., doubling the price of each bale.

Mr. Oppenheimer thought he had a good bargain, and a contract was drawn up. When the purchaser got time to figure up the cost of his purchase, he found that he had agreed to pay $10,485.75 for 20 bales of rags, which were really worth $7 50 a bale, or $150. The following table shows what rags cost according to arithmetical progression:

No. of bale.	Cost of bale
1	$ 01
2	02
3	04
4	08
5	16
6	32
7	64
8	1 28
9	2 56
10	5 12
11	10 24
12	20 48
13	40 96
14	81 92
15	163 84
16	327 68
17	655 36
18	1,310 72
19	2,621 44
20	5,242 88
Total	$10,485 75

It is said that the contract will be contested in the courts.—Buffalo Courier.

A Graveyard Insurance Scheme.

About six months ago, at Mahanoy City, Pa., when Squire O'Brien's father was very ill, and not expected to live, a plan was conceived of placing insurances on his life. With whom the scheme originated has not come out yet, but in its execution Constable Pat Foley had a hand. A man named Gallagher, who was perfectly well, was secured to represent himself as old Mr. O'Brien, and Dr. H. A. Klock passed him as a subject for a large insurance policy in the Prudential Mutual Aid Association. O'Brien, senior, died four or five months ago. Then a certificate was presented to the Prudential, and on proofs duly submitted it paid Squire O'Brien nearly $1,200. In the division of the money one of the conspirators was left out. After repeated threats of exposure had failed to bring him any return, he squealed. His revenge took the shape of a letter to the Prudential. The company hired Captain Doughtery, the well-known Pinkerton detective, to investigate the case. He spent a few days in Mahanoy City, and got to the bottom of the scheme. The result of his work was the arrest of Squire O'Brien, Constable Foley, Dr. Klock and Mr. Gallagher as parties to the fraud. All four were taken before Squire Ketner, who, after a brief hearing, put them under $1,000 bail each. Gallagher at the hearing was pointed out by the detective as the man who was examined. The affair created a sensation in Mohanoy City, particularly as all the parties interested are very prominent, politically and otherwise.—New York Daily Commercial Bulletin.

Harrison the Nepotist.

Pittsburg Post.)

Shortly after his inauguration, President Harrison laid down the rule that "the only way to get satisfaction out of a public office is to please yourself while in it." Here is the family list of appointments. It indicates one way in which Brother Ben is "pleasing himself" and "getting satisfaction" out of the office. A very rich list this is:

1. The President's brother.
2. The President's brother-in-law.
3. The President's father-in-law.
4. The President's son's father-in-law.
5. The President's wife's cousin.
6. The President's son's wife's cousin.
7. The President's nephew.
8. The President's daughter's brother-in-law.
9. The President's brother-in-law.
10. The President's wife's niece's husband.
11. The President's son's brother-in-law.
12. The President's brother-in-law.
13. The Private Secretary's brother-in-law.
14. The Secretary of State's son.
15. The Secretary of State's nephew.
16. The Pension Commissioners's two daughters.
17. The Indian Commissioner's wife.
18. The Indian School Superintendent's wife.

Fourteen "Thats."

In thirty-one words how many thats can be grammatically inserted? Answer: Fourteen. He said that that that that man said, was that that that one should say; but that that, that that man said, was that that man should not say. That reminds me of the following says and saids: Mr. B——, did you say, or did you not say, what I said? because C — said you said you never did say what I said you said. Now, if you did say that you did not say what I said you said, then what did you say?—America.

Carefully Brought Up

Lawyer—Yes, I wish to hire an honest young man to do office work. Were you carefully brought up?

Applicant—Oh, yes; I came up on the elevator, sir.

Martin Farquhar Tupper, the author of "Proverbial Philosophy," lives in a handsome country house in England. He bears a striking resemblance to Longfellow in his old age. Tupper does not agree with his old schoolfellow, Mr. Gladstone, on the question of Home Rule.

REGARDING BABIES.

Reasoning in Children is Primitive and Develops Slowly.

In the course of a lecture delivered in Philadelphia the other day a distinguished female physician said that the inability of a abby to hold up its head was not due to the weakness of the neck, but to the lack of development of its will power. The act of standing was instinctive and initiative, while facial expression and gesture were due almost wholly to imitation. A baby's smile, she said, was the most misunderstood thing in infancy. A real smile must have an idea behind it, but the expression resembling a smile, which is so often seen on a very young baby's face, was without an idea, and was due to the easy condition of the stomach or some other physical satisfaction. The smile with an idea does not appear earlier than the fourth week. So, too, with the crying of a baby. The contortion of the features is due to physical causes. The baby sheds no tears, because the lachrymal glands are not developed for several weeks after birth.

The chief pleasure of all children is to change from one condition to another by their own efforts. This is the beginning of the development of the will power, and is often attested in what has been called "imperative intention of tears." This is not disclosed until after the second or third month.

A baby tests everything by its mouth its sense of taste being the surest and most reliable guide it has. The attention of all young children is difficult to attract, and they must attain considerable age before they begin to notice. Then colors and sounds are most potential. Fear has been known to be manifested by a baby only three weeks old, and in all cases the sensation is produced by sound more than by sight. Children of luxurious and carefully guarded homes are almost wholly without fear, but the children of poor and exposed parents always manifest it.

Jealousy and sympathy begin to manifest themselves in the second year. Curiosity also begins to develop here, and proves to be a self-feeder throughout childhood. A little later the ego begins to appear, and the baby has the first consciousness of itself. The ego first appears as a muscular sense, and the infant gradually learns to distinguish itself from the surrounding objects. It is first the hand that is distinguished, and then the foot, and finally the whole body.

Memory does not appear before the child is 2 years of age. All the reasoning of children is primitive and elementary, and develops slowly. Darwin noted an association of ideas in the mind of his child when it was only five months of age.

The lecturer related experiences of babies with the first view of mirrors, and showed that their actions under the new conditions were similar to those of anthropoid apes and dogs under like conditions.

Removing Paint.

The ordinary process of scraping old paint, or burning it off, is hardly expeditious enough for general purposes, and is also laborious. Soda and quicklime are far more thorough, and the paint is more quickly removed. The solution of half soda and half quicklime is thus made: The soda is dissolved in water, the lime is then added, and the solution can be applied with a brush to the old paint. A few minutes is sufficient to remove the coats of paint, which may be washed off with hot water. Many preparations are sold for the removal of paint, all of them having some basis of alkali. A paste of potash and strong lime is far more effectual in operation, and the oldest paint can be removed by it. Afterward a coating of vinegar or acid should be used to cleanse the surface before repainting. One authority on the subject recommends the gasoline lamp, a quart of oil being sufficient to last 3½ hours. The method is considered superior to gas, as the flame is stronger and the cost less, besides which the lamp can be carried to any part, which cannot be done conveniently with a gas jet. But the use of flame of either is dangerous and to be avoided when possible. Many a house has been burnt to the ground from using jets of flame. For removing varnish, spirits of ammonia is used, but it is a slow process, and several applications are necessary. Scraping and sandpapering can be employed; but it must be done carefully by experienced hands, or the surface of wood will be injured. The chemical process of removal has the advantage of leaving the surface in a better condition than burning off or scraping, and for large surfaces of paintwork is to be preferred.

Starting Street Cars.

Three employees of a New York firm have been at work in Bridgeport, Conn., recently on a curious invention which is called a "car starter." A Bridgeport paper says that various experiments with it will be made on a horse car in that city this week. The device "consists of a strong spring, which, upon loosening the car brake, sends the car forward a distance of eight feet, even when the car is heavily loaded. The inventor has just completed the arrangement. He expects to realize a fortune from his invention, as the principal cause of the disablement of horses on horse lines is the great strain brought to bear upon them in starting the cars when they contain a large number of passengers. The spring is so arranged that its force can be strengthened and diminished at will, so that in starting a car containing only a few passengers the force will not be great enough to cause the front of the car to strike the animals' rear legs."

In Deep Water.

Miss Bessie Neater, of Boston—Her books are simply delightful. Indeed, I think she is the most liberal writer I know of.

Miss Hattie Bacon, of Chicago—Well, I don't know. I don't think she is as liberal as Mrs. Southworth. Mrs. Southworth gives you 400 pages for a quarter every time.

An Old Rule Well Applied.

Creditor—Here, I have found you at last, and I want that little bill of $50 quickly.

Debtor (hastily)—Here's your money. Give a receipt in full, please.

Creditor—There is but $25 here.

Debtor—Yes, but you know he gives twice who gives quickly.

GAMES OF CHANCE.

Their Trivial Character and Moral Aspect

What is culpable in gambling is spending on it any sum which you would be ashamed to spend on the most trivial of all distractions of any other kind, says the Spectator. For a game of chance played for money is an utterly trivial amusement, of which the best that can be said is that it gives a certain amount of discipline to the understanding and character, in teaching a true estimate of the elemen of chance on the one hand, and cheerful ndifference on the other hand. But it seems to us that, if the right limits be assigned to risk at such games of chance, there is at least not less, perhaps we might justly say a good deal more, to be said for them than can be said for spending such sums as are actually spent on the gratification of the palate or the mere dazzling of the eye. In games of chance you do learn to realize practically what it means in life to have the odds against you, as men so often must have them against them in much more serious matters, and matters where it is far less possible to calculate the amount of the odds against them. You might learn, too, and often do learn, how much piquancy is given to otherwise very stupid occupations by the uncertainty of the issue. And you certainly get a very good opportunity of practising equanimity in small reverses and magnanimity in small successes. Take it all in all, we hold that games of chance played for such trivial sums as a man may properly pay for the most trivial of other amusements, are by no means wrong, though it is extremely wrong to encourage in yourself so great a taste for the excitement of risk that you are willing to pay for that excitement as much as you would pay for the most healthful and ennobling of human recreations—recreations which develop the body, or cultivate the mind, or stimulate the soul. We do not believe that there can be any wrong in enjoying in a moderate way in pure play the sort of excitement which all great explorers, all great scholars, all great pioneers, all great soldiers, all great sailors, enjoy in a large way in the pursuit of their various objects in life. But when the element of risk is sought after for itself alone, when it is entirely dissociated from any useful or noble or beautiful object beyond itself, then it ought undoubtedly to be kept, and jealously kept, within very narrow limits, and not permitted so to eat into the nature that everything seems to be tame and uninteresting which is not flavored with risk. After all, the certainties of life are infinitely greater and higher than the uncertainties, and the one delight which it is impossible to connect in any sense with the divine should not be the one in which man finds his most vivid satisfaction.

Eight Uses for Salt.

Salt and water cleans willow furniture.

Salt in whitewash will make it stick better.

Wash the mica of the stove doors with salt and vinegar.

Brasswork can be kept beautifully bright by occasionally rubbing with salt and vinegar.

Damp salt will remove the discoloration of cups and saucers caused by tea and careless washing.

When broiling steak throw a little salt on the coals and the blaze from dripping fat will not annoy.

Salt as a tooth powder is better than almost anything that can be bought. It keeps the teeth brilliantly white and the gums hard and rosy.

If the feet are tender or painful after long standing or walking great relief can be had by bathing them in salt and water A handful of salt to a gallon of water is the right proportion. Have the water as hot as can comfortably be borne.

Buying a Mountain.

It is one thing, says a country gossip, to buy a mountain, another thing to know what to do with it. Sir Edward Watkin cheerfully admits that it was for him Mr. Perks bought the summit of Snowdon. The price paid for the property was £5,750. The hon. baronet was asked what he thought of doing with his bargain, "Oh, nothing particular," he answered with a smile. "It was a little bit of Welsh vanity as much as anything else that prompted me to make the purchase." It presently appeared, however, that there was something else in Sir Edward's mind, for as the conversation went on he revealed that it is his intention to offer a site on the top of Snowdon to the Royal Astronomical Society for purposes of an observatory like that on Ben Nevis. Sir Edward also comtemplates greatly improving the road to the summit.

She Is Engaged.

Miss Caroline Fitzgerald, whose engagement to Lord Edward Fitzmorris, the younger brother of the Marquis of Lansdowne, has been announced by cable, is only 21 years old, but is a fine classical scholar and a clever linguist. She studied Sanscrit under Prof. Whiting of Yale College, and has published a book of poems. A large fortune in her own right has enabled her to fully gratify her taste for study and travel.

George Furnished the Arms.

Emma—So you're engaged to young George Halby.

Sadie—Yes; George and I came to an understanding some weeks ago. You remember the wheat corner in Chicago?

Emma—To be sure I do.

Sadie—Well, that's the time I got caught in the squeeze.

Scandalous.

Jones—"Do you know her?"

Brown—"No."

"I do. She is the main support of a great 'crook.'"

"What, that lovely creature support a crook? Impossible!"

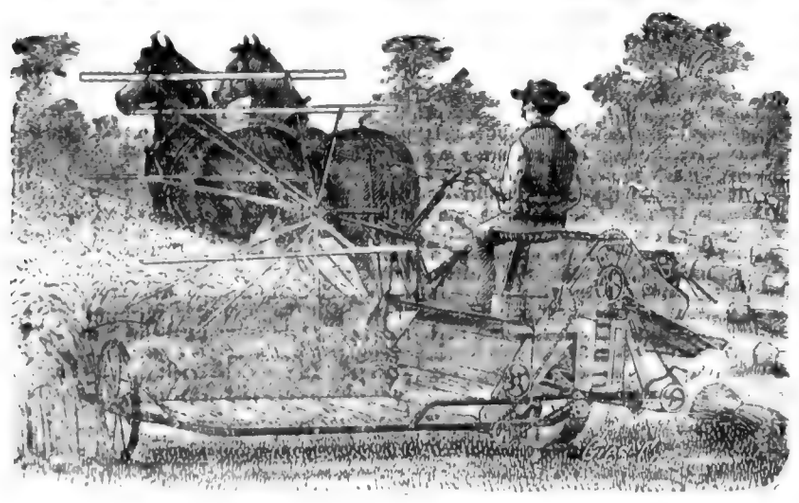
"It's a fact, I tell you. Look at the handle of her parasol."

Ordering Groceries.

Delivery Boy—What shall I bring you for dinner, Mrs. Youngwife?

Mrs. Youngwife—Let me see. Oh, yes! Bring me a quart of strawberries and two bars of soap.

—The water lily keeps its head above water about as well as anything we think of just now.



THE BRANTFORD LIGHT STEEL BINDER!

Over Four Thousand Sold in Season 1888. Being More Than Half of all Other Binders made in Canada.

Before placing their orders for 1889, we respectfully request the farmers to 1st Carefully examine the "Brantford Machines" and faithfully compare with others
2nd Enquire of your neighbors who have used "Brantford Machines" and get their opinion of their working and lasting qualities
If you will follow the above advice, you will be convinced of these two facts:
1st "Brantford Machines" are possessed of more improvements and are better made than any other machines in Canada
2nd "Brantford Machines" are more popular, give better satisfaction, and are more durable than any other machine in Canada
Therefore 1st Give your order EARLY for a Brantford Binder and Mower
2nd And you will be sure to be perfectly satisfied with the machine you get.

THOS. A. BLAKELY,
FLESHERTON.

Heard's Carriage Works.

MANUFACTURER OF

Carriages, Buggies, Wagons, Sleighs, Cutters, &c., &c.

HEARD'S IMPROVED HARROWS AND GATES.

Special Attention given to PAINTING, TRIMMING, HORSE SHOEING and all kinds of JOB WORK. Nothing but first-class material used throughout and satisfaction guaranteed. We have for sale

——Lumber, Lath and Shingles.——

Also Agent for Dick's Rollers, Mowers and Binders, Dick's Champion, Royal Rob Roy, Granger and Standard Plows. Two and Three Furrow Gang Plows. Horse Powers for 4 Horses. Straw Cutters, Scufflers and Turnip Drills.

JOHN H. HEARD, Durham Street, Flesherton.

FLESHERTON STOVE EMPORIUM

A large assortment of STOVES of every STOVE FURNISHINGS, TINWARE COPPERWARE LAMP GOODS etc constantly on hand

EAVETROUGHING A SPECIALITY

F. G. Karstedt,

Strain's old Stand
Flesherton.

FLOUR, FLOUR, STONE FLOUR!

MR. P LOUCKS

Is prepared to do your Gristing on short notice and grinds on the old terms of every twelfth bushel. Seven cents per bag of two bushels for Chopping done every day. The Little Mill is big in the estimation of the public.

Satisfaction Guaranteed

P LOUCKS, Proprietor.

Good stabling for horses.

BLACKBURN'S

is the place for choice goods and fair prices.

Choice Roller Flour, Bran and Shorts, at rockbottom prices.

Cured Meats, Bologna.
Mixed bird seed.
Pure prepared Corn.
General assortment of canned goods.

CHOICE HONEY,
CONFECTIONERY of all kinds.
ICE CREAM

and cooling summer drinks. Choice Fruits a specialty.

OAT MEAL, CORN MEAL, CRACKED WHEAT and GRAHAM FLOUR, always on hand.

Remember the place, next door to M. Richardson & Co's.

For lame back, side or chest, use Shiloh's Porous Plaster. Price 25 cents For sale at the Medical Hall.

Are you made miserable by indigestion constipation, dizziness, loss of appetite yellow skin? Shiloh's Vitalizer is a positive cure. For Sale at the Medical Hall.

The Rev. Geo. H. Thayer, of Burbone Ind., says: "Both myself and my wife owe our lives to Shiloh's Consumption Cure. For sale at the Medical Hall.

For Sale

Steam flour mill for sale at Flesherton Station 4 run stone, double reel bolt, smut mill, duster and purifier. Will be sold cheap and on easy terms. This is a bargain. Apply to

ROGER LEVER
Flesherton P.O

Monthly Fairs.

Orangeville—The second Thursday in each month
Dundalk Tuesday before Orangeville
Flesherton Monday before Orangeville
Markdale Saturday before Orangeville.
Durham Third Tuesday in each month.
Chatsworth Monday before Durham
Holland Center Saturday before Chatsworth
Priceville Monday before Durham
Hanover Monday before Durham.

This Year's

MYRTLE

CUT and PLUG

SMOKING TOBACCO

FINER THAN EVER.

See

T & B

in bronze on
EACH PLUG and PACKAGE

Improved Farm for Sale.

Lots 148, 149 and 150, 3rd range east, T. and S. R., containing 100 acres, 80 cleared, good clay loam, well improved, good frame house and log barn, frame stable, good orchard, etc. This farm is well watered and improved, and is considered one of the best in this section. It is one mile and a half from the village Flesherton. Will be sold on very easy terms. For further particulars apply to

JAS. BEECROFT,
Flesherton P. O

Things Amusing and Strange.

NOT ORIGINAL, BUT WORTHY OF PERSUAL.

"Better late than never"
Is a comforting refrain,
Save when you reach the station
Too late to catch the train.

There are said to be at present 3,064 languages spoken by the inhabitants of the globe.

Willian Mooney, of West Pike, Potter county, Pa., has a peculiar head of hair When a storm approaches every hair in his head stands out straight, and as he wears his hair very long he is quite a ridiculous sight. On that account he never leaves the house when it is cloudy.

The kangaroo is in danger of being exterminated. Its skin is so valuable that large numbers of kangaroos are killed, and high authorities are of opinion that unles the process is stopped Australians will soon have seen the last specimen of this interesting animal.

There seems to be no end to the mischief the sparrow is capable of. One of the little feathered rascals recently took up his residence in a pipe of an organ in the Catholic Cathedral at Louisville, and the organist went nearly crazy before it was discovered what kept his instrument out of tune.

Rev. Frederick Mayer, pastor of the Evangelical Church at Lansing Mich., drew $5,000 in a recent lottery. Mr. Mayer sees nothing sinful in acquiring money in that way, but his congregation does, and there is likely to be a vacancy in the pulpit of this church very soon.

One of the best tributes to the regard in which women are held is found in the fact that men, the world over, revolt at the thought of hanging one of that sex, even though she may have committed murder. This feeling is so strong in England that Mrs. Maybrick may escape the full penalty of the law.

In China the habitations are counted every year in a curious manner. The oldest master of every ten houses has to count his families, and has to make a list, which is sent to the Imperial tax house. Last year the whole number amounted to 879,585,500 inhabitants.

To Keep Off Mosquitoes. Take a small quantity of a two per cent. carbolic acid solution and sprinkle sheets, coverlets, pillow, and bolster on both sides, the edges of bed curtains, and the wall next the bed. The face and neck may also be slightly wetted with the solution. Not a single gnat or mosquito, it is said, will come near

In 1816 it took just one bushel of corn to buy one pound of nails, now one bushel of corn will buy ten pounds of nails. Then it required sixty-four bushels of barley to buy one yard of broadcloth, now the same amount of barley will pay for twenty yards of broadcloth. It then required the price of one bushel of wheat to pay for one yard of calico, now one bushel of wheat will buy twenty yards of calico.

The Sarnia Observer says:—"A curious fact in connection with the Jesuits estates business has been brought to light by Dr. Cameron, M.P.P. for Huntingdon (the only English speaking Liberal in the Quebec Legislature). After the estates were taken possession of by the Government in 1800, Sir James Craig, then Governor, granted a portion of the property to St Andrew's Presbyterian church, on which a church was erected, and in 1823 or 1824, Lord Dalhousie, then Governor, granted additional ground to enlarge it, and also £300 sterling from the revenue of the Jesuits' estates to help in building the church. Between 1800 and 1831, £7,093 were granted to the Episcopalians of Quebec out of the fund, and £984 paid to the Episcopal minister. If the estates were held in trust by the government for educational purposes purely, the administrators of affairs in the early part of the century were evidently not aware of the fact."

A curious adventure happened recently to Mr. D. Campbell, permanent-way inspector of the Indian Midland Railway. As he was travelling on the Cawnpore line some twelve miles out of Jhnsi, seated on the front of the locomotive, he noticed a large number of vultures collecting and evidently disputing over some object, which, as the engine drew near, proved to be the carcase of a jackall. The locomotive, with the inspector in the front, charged in among the birds, who seemed to be determined, notwithstanding, to abide their prey. The result was that while some were killed others of them were thrown against Mr. Campbell, whom they straightway proceeded to attack in a most vicious manner tearing his clothes and inflicting considerable wounds on his hands and face. He was able, however to retain his position on the engine and to defend himself from further injury.

BOOTS & SHOES.

I have a very large supply on and and

Selling very Cheap.

IN LADIES WEAR. Prunlela, Kid, Polish calf and Buff Dongola, Lace and Button.

Misse's, Youth's and Children's

A large assortment, all sorts and sizes.

MEN'S WEAR

Fine Calf and Dongola, Balmorals and Gaiters, also Heavy Boots and Shoes. Prices and Material cannot be beat.

W. CLAYTON.

Photos, Photos, Photos.

We are now turning out work far superior in style and finish to any ever produced in Flesherton.

COPYING and ENLARGING at MODERATE RATES.

PICTURE FRAMING

done in all its branches. A good stock of FRAMES and MOULDINGS kept constantly on hand. Will also introduce the new BROMIDE PORTRAIT, a picture that is giving entire satisfaction wherever introduced. SAMPLES can be seen at my Gallery where all particulars as to Price, Style &c., can be ascertained.

MRS. BULMER,
FLESHERTON.

HEALTH FOR ALL.

HOLLOWAY'S PILLS & OINTMENT

THE PILLS

Purify the Blood, correct all Disorders of

Liver, Stomach, Kidn'ys, and Bowels.

They invigorate and restore to health Debilitated Constitutions, and are invaluable in all Complaints incidental to Females of all ages. For Children and the aged they are priceless

THE OINTMENT

an infallible remedy for Bad Legs, Bad Breasts, Old Wounds, Sores and Ulcers. It is famous for Gout and Rheumatism. For disorders of the Chest it has no equal

For SORE THROAT, BRONCHITIS, COUGHS, COLDS

Glandular Swellings, and all Skin Diseases it has no rival; and for contracted and stiff Joints it acts like a charm.

Manufactured only at Professor HOLLOWAY'S Establishment,

78, New Oxford Street (late 533, Oxford Street), London.

and are sold at 1s. 1½d., 2s. 9d., 4s 6d., 11s., 22s., and 33s. each Box or Pot, and may be had of all Medicine Vendors throughout the World.

☞ Purchasers should look to the Label on the Pots and Boxes. If the address is not 533, Oxford Street, London, they are spurious.

PRICEVILLE BAKERY.

A. WATSON!

Desires to inform the public that he can furnish

CAKES AND PIES

To Order.

FIRST CLAS BREAD ALWAYS ON HAND,

will visit Flesherton twice a week—on TUESDAYS and FRIDAYS, with a full supply of goods.

DROP A CARD IF YOU DESIRE ME TO CALL.

WEDDING and FANCY cakes a specialty

A. WATSON,
Priceville.

Situation.

with steady employment and good pay all the year round, to reliable men furnishing satisfactory references S.A. McOMBER & Co., Nurserymen, Rochester, N. Y

FLESHERTON PLANING MILLS

Having purchased the Flesherton Planing Mills from R. J. Sproule, Esq., I now desire to inform the

PUBLIC

that I am in a position to do

ALL KINDS

—OF—

General planing mill work,

such as

SASH, DOORS, DOOR FRAMES Planing and Matching, re sawing, etc.

Good Workmanship Guaranteed.

A large quantity of good dry pine lumber on hand.

W. J. HOWARD,
Flesherton.

LOOK!

HAVING done business in Canada for years our reputation is established. We want three men in your vicinity to represent us, to whom exclusive territory will be given. Handsome outfit free. Salary and expenses paid weekly. Previous experience not required. Write at once for terms. Hardy stock for Canada a specialty. MAY BROTHERS,
Nurserymen, Rochester, N.Y

FLESHERTON ADVANCE.

"TRUTH BEFORE FAVOR."—"PRINCIPLES, NOT MEN."

VOL. VIII., NO 426. FLESHERTON, ONT., THURSDAY, AUGUST 29, 1889. W. H. THURSTON, EDITOR & PROPRIETOR.

WATCHES,
Clocks, Jewelry.
STUDY
Your Own Interests
by buying your Watches, Clocks, Jewelry Spectacles and Silverware, at Russell's Noted
JEWELRY STORE,
FLESHERTON.

In watches we have a very large stock of Elgin, Waltham, Illinois Springfield, Columbus and Swiss Levers, in Ladies' and Gents' sizes. Gold, Silver and Silver ore cases. Brooches and Barpins, of the latest design. Fine Gold and Rolled Gold Earings, Cuff Buttons, Charms, Chains, and beautiful stock of Ladies' Gem Engagement Rings. A full supply of 18 K. Wedding Rings always on hand. Also a large and well-assorted stock of Silverware and Spectacles at very low prices, and remember the place to get your Watches, Clocks, Jewelry, etc, repaired is at

RUSSELL'S, FLESHERTON.

All work personally attended to by J. G. Russell

ONE PRICE
CASH STORE.

As fall is approaching the topic for conversation is where can we get the Best Value for the Least Money!

We cannot do without the necessary woollens to keep us warm during the long winter months.

WHERE CAN WE GO, THEN,

The CASH STORE offers you a free inspection of their stock in all lines of WOOLLENS. A lot of flannels now on hand.

A New Department.

We have just opened a choice lot of CROCKERY, GLASSWARE, LAMPS, etc, see our prices.

Special lines in Men's Long Boots in the fall.

Highest cash price paid for butter and eggs.

McDONALD & EVANS,
Wright's Old Stand.

Pumps! Pumps!

J. McCullough,
Markdale,

manufacturer of pumps, desires to inform the public that he is prepared to furnish pumps for

Deep wells, gravel wells, etc.

parties who have heretofore had difficulty with their wells are

Guaranteed Satisfaction

by using my articles. I learned my business with the late J. Fear, of Meaford, the superiority of whose pumps was a household word in Grey a few years ago.
Be sure and call on me if you desire anything in the pump line.

J. McCullough.

FARM FOR SALE CHEAP, AND ON EASY terms, lot 7, con. 2, township of Euphrasia containing 200 acres. This is a splendid valuable timber farm. Well timbered with mixed hardwood, hemlock and cedar. Splendid soil, 1½ miles from the beautiful village of Kimberley in Queen's Valley where there are mills, stores, post office and church, and 11 miles from Flesherton on the C. P. R., where there is a splendid market for all kinds of produce, stock, lumber and timber. Apply to R. J. Sproule, auctioneer and real estate agent, Flesherton.

Flesherton Livery Stables.

D. CLAYTON, Proprietor.

First class horses and vehicles for hire at reasonable rates.
Stables opposite Munshaw's hotel.
Special attention paid to commercial business

THE ADVANCE.

Is published

Every Thursday,

FROM THE OFFICE,

Sydenham Street, - - Flesherton, Ont.

TERMS OF SUBSCRIPTION:

$1 per annum when paid strictly in advance $1.50 per annum when not so paid.

ADVERTISING RATES.

One column, 1 year, $50; half col., do., $27; quarter col. do., $15.

Transient advertisements charged at the rate of 8cts. per line for first insertion and 3cts. per line each subsequent insertion.

W. H. THURSTON,
Editor and Proprietor.

WHERE THE CHIPS SHOULD FALL.

Since the distinct refusal of Governor Stanley to interfere in the matter of the Jesuit's Estate Bill, a noticeable lull has been apparent over the troubled political waters of this province. The people have stopped talking, and have commenced thinking on a larger scale than they did previous to the refusal. The severe rebuke administered to the doughty deputation has been accepted by many of those whose sympathies had been drawn towards the agitation, and even those who were somewhat undecided in their views, as being applicable to themselves, as well as to the individual members of the deputation, and the result is that a reaction, to a certain degree, has set in. When such high authority as the Governor-General proclaims the act as intra vires of the Province of Quebec clamorers hesitate, and those who were wont to encore keep silence and ask themselves how the Dominion Government could well do otherwise that to allow the Bill to become law, when it is known that the Legislature of Quebec would have persisted in their demand, and have probably precipitated a race war in that province, the gravity of which could not be foretold. Quebec is by a large majority Roman Catholic and is in a position to force such a demand as that which was made, or "smash" the government which refuses her request. This is a sad fact, but it is true, and the remedy will never be applied until both or all of our political parties are prepared to place themselves as one man upon the sacrificial altar, and even that would be no lasting remedy while Quebec holds the balance of power.

The conclusion to which all must arrive who have considered this matter thoroughly is that the present and past agitation has been fruitful of much good, however meagre the returns appear at present. It has also painfully emphasized the fact that no great disease can be cured in a day, no matter how strong the physic applied. The matter will assuredly be righted, but it requires time. When the other provinces become more populous and powerful. Quebec will have become comparatively weaker.

The great question, however, that is now being asked, is, what party is the most to blame for the state of affairs existing with reference to the Jesuits' Estates Bill? In our estimation such questioners have not far to search for the answer. Mercier's Reform Government of Quebec are the real and only criminals. They it was who formed the Act, and it is they alone who are responsible for its vigorous life to-day. Principal Grant, of Queen's University, Kingston, in a recent utterance, gave voice to what is probably accepted by two-thirds of the people as the most reasonable conclusion as to the motives underlying the act of the 188 when voting for allowance, in the following words:

Some considered the Act intra vires of the province, and in such case their theory of provincial rights forced them to leave it alone. No matter how bad they might consider the measure or how offensive its preamble, you can see how this would be, particularly with members from the smaller provinces. These could not be expected to cut a rod that might be applied next time to their own backs. Ontario, too, though big enough to take care of itself, has also been particularly zealous of its provincial rights. Other members who believe that intra vires acts may be vetoed, if opposed to the general interests of Canada, might surely believe also that to veto this bad Act would be still more against the general interest. Sometimes you may be shut up to Hobson's choice—bad to leave this Act on the statute book, you say, but worse to veto it. Therefore, on grounds of prudence, let it alone. 'This is the argument from expediency,' you may say; that word does not frighten me. Surely it is better to do what is expedient than what is inexpedient. It seems to me, therefore, a great mistake to breathe out indiscriminate slaughter against the one hundred and eighty-eight. It's worse than a mistake; it's wrong. Some of those men voted more conscientiously than some of the thirteen. Not a few of them, certainly, deserve better of the country than two or three of the thirteen who might be named.

What, then, in the face of all the facts, would be the better course for us to pursue? Is it to fight with all the vigor at our command the members who were given "Hobson's choice," and chose what they believed to be the least evil of the two; kill them politically, and give them no opportunity to redress the error (if it was an error)? Or is it to return them with the better knowledge of our desires and claims upon them, our deep aversion to the advances of this ecclesiatical hydra, and deeper conviction of the necessity of a firmer stand being taken against Roman aggression, all of which they have without doubt acquired during the past few months? We feel satisfied that the great majority will agree with us in our conclusion that the latter is the only proper line to follow in the great majority of cases.

The itinerant threshing machine now goes from hum to hum.

The Toronto Globe is at present busily engaged in calling its contemporaries liars. It applies the epithet to the Empire and another "whose name has escaped us." Is the Globe being driven into a corner, that it thus turns upon its pursuers?

In its issue of Saturday last the Toronto Globe gave an illustrated description of the town of Owen Sound. As an advertisement the letterpress is all that could be desired, but a proportion of the illustrations are rank libels upon the place and people. The large cut giving what is purported to be a view of the town from Snider's Hill is unrecognizable to old natives of the place. The cut of Mayor Morrison reminds one of the ghost of a Comanche Indian, minus paint and feathers, and a great sorrow appears to be weighing him down, judging by the length of face from stem to stern. If the weight of grief does not culminate when Mr. Morrison views his "remains" as given in Saturday's Globe we fail to connect in our surmises. The other illustrations are fair to middling, some of them good. Taken as a whole, however, we do not think the people of Owen Sound will feel proud of the delectable manner in which they have been dished up for the amusement of the people of Canada.

The sale of medicines for illegal purposes calls for suppression and we are pleased to see the College of Pharmacy moving in the matter. That the columns of family newspapers are polluted with indecent advertisements of this character is a blot on journalism.—Beeton World. Right you are brother, and this paper has refused more than one of that description during the past summer.

ADVICE TO MOTHER.—Are you disturbed night and broken of your rest by a sick child suffering and crying with pain of Cutting Teeth? If so send at once and get a bottle "Mrs. Winslow's Soothing Syrup" for Children Teething. Its value is incalculable. It will relieve the poor little sufferer immediately. Depend upon it mothers; there no mistake about it. It cures Dysentery and Diarrhœa, regulates the Stomach and Bowels, cures Wind Colic, softens the Gums, reduces Inflamation, and gives tone and energy to the whole sistem. "Mrs. Winslow's Soothing Syrup" for children teething is pleasant to the taste and is the prescription of one of the oldest and best female physicians and nurses in the United States, and is for sale by all druggists throughoutt the world. Price twenty-five cents a bottle. Be sure and ask for "Mrs. Winslow's Soothing Syrup," and take no other kind.

THE MARKET

FLESHERTON.

Carefully Corrected Each Week.

Flour	$3 00
Fall Wheat	0
Spring Wheat	0
Barley	0
Oats	0
Peas	0
Butter	0
Eggs, fresh	0
Potatos bush.	0
Pork	6
Hay per ton	9
Hides	3
Sheepskins	0
Geese	0
Turkeys	0
Chickens per pair	0
Ducks per lb	0
Wool	0

SIGN
"Big Spo
Reliable watches in Gold, filled and Coin-sil cases.
Ladies' and Gents' size
Walnut and Nickle
I am represented by A 1 watches backed up by reliable warrant homes of Central Grey, than a doing biz. in this section.
If prices are not shed rock
QUALITY
Consider
I would not be able to h share of Grey Co. trade as I
"CASH or C
will positivily do better b
Goods, Work
Warrants Consi than you can do elsewhere.
cally fitted.
Work Carefully D
Fair Ch
Stock now complete in all Can save y
to $3.00
watche
Other lines will be held on live margins.
W. A. BRO
Jeweler an
MARKDALE, Ont.

THROUGH THE HEART.

A California Marshal Shoots Down an ex-Judge.

A DINING CAR TRAGEDY.

A Lathrop, Cal., despatch of Wednesday says: Upon the arrival of the southern overland train at 7.20 this morning, U. S. Supreme Court Judge Stephen J. Field and Deputy U. S. Marshal David Nagle walked into the depot dining-room for breakfast and sat down side by side. Soon afterwards Judge David S. Terry and wife came in. They were proceeding to another table when Mrs. Terry, evidently recognizing Justice Field, did not sit down, but retired to the train for some unknown purpose. Before she reached it, however, and as soon as she had left the dining-room, Judge Terry approached Justice Field and stooping over him slapped his face. At this juncture Deputy Marshal Nagle arose from his seat and shot Judge Terry through the heart. As he was falling the Deputy Marshal shot again, but missed him, the bullet going through the floor. The Judge did not utter a sound. He had hardly fallen when Mrs. Terry rushed to the side of her husband's body and threw herself upon it.

Then ensued a scene of the wildest excitement. People rushed from the dining-room and others rushed in. During this time Justice Field and Deputy Marshal Nagle retreated to a sleeping car, where they were securely locked within. At times Mrs. Terry would call upon the citizens to arrest them. Before the train pulled out Constable Walker entered the sleeper and was carried away on board. He informed the spectators that he knew his duty and would perform it.

During the time the train was standing at the depot Mrs. Terry was running wildly alternately from the body of her husband to the sleeper, demanding admittance, that she might slap Justice Field's face, and at the same time begging that they be detained and have their examination here.

Previous to the entrance of Constable Walker into the car Sheriff Purvis and his deputy, of Stanislaus County, had already taken charge of Nagle.

After the shooting Deputy U. S. Marshal Nagle backed up against the wall of the dining-room and warned everyone not to arrest him, saying he was a United States officer in the discharge of his duty. There was no semblance of any attempt to arrest him. Constable Walker took Deputy Nagle from the train at Tracy and proceeded with him to Stockton, where he is in jail. District Attorney White has ordered the arrest of Justice Field upon his arrival is San Francisco.

The announcement that Judge Terry had been killed caused extraordinary excitement here. The scene of the tragedy is 83 miles from this city. The possibility of an encounter between Terry and Justice Field has been recognized ever since the imprisonment of Terry for contempt of court ten months ago. Terry was at one time Chief Justice of the Supreme Court of California and has always been a prominent figure in the political history of the State. He was married to Sarah Althea Hill, who claimed to be the wife of ex-Senator Sharon, while prosecuting her claim against the Sharon estate. Justice Field last year rendered a decision denying her claim to be the wife of Sharon. Mrs. Terry created a scene in court, charging Justice Field with being corrupt. The woman resisted a deputy-marshal who tried to remove her. Terry interfered, drawing a dagger. He was disarmed, and Terry and his wife were adjudged in contempt and committed to jail. Justice Field went to Washington, returning to this city six weeks ago. Newspaper articles were printed intimating it would be dangerous for Justice Field and Terry to meet personally, as it was thought the latter might insult the former, while the fact was also recognized that Justice Feld would be quick to resent an attack from Terry, knowing it could only result fatally to one or the other in view of Terry's record. Terry was born in Kentucky in 1823. He served in the Texan army under Sam Houston. He came to California in 1849, and in 1855 was elected Justice of the Supreme Court of California on the Native American ticket. Upon the death of Chief Justice Murray in 1857, Terry became Chief Justice. He opposed the Vigilance Committee of 1856 and stabbed one of the members who attempted to arrest his friend Maloney. Terry killed Senator Broderick in 1859 in a duel as the result of political differences.

A Stockton despatch says: The coroner arrived here at 11.40 to-day with Judge Terry's body in a box covered with white cloth. Mrs. Terry rode in the express car with the remains. Deputy-Marshal Nagle was brought here from Tracy in a buggy. He refused to be interviewed, but said, "I am a Deputy United States Marshal and simply did my duty as an officer." He was locked up alone and soon after sent for the local attorney. Nagle was very cool and determined, but looked pale.

A warrant of arrest was served upon Justice Field at 1 o'clock this afternoon at the latter's chambers. A writ of habeas corpus was at once sworn out before Judge Sawyer, of the Circuit Court, and heard by him in Chambers.

The Supreme Court of the State of California, of which the late David S. Terry was formerly Chief Justice, this morning refused to adjourn out of respect to Terry's memory. This decision was announced from the bench, and the reasons given were that Terry resigned his judicial position to fight a duel, and that he was killed while in the act of assaulting a justice of the United States Supreme Court.

Not His Usual Way.

Mrs. Blotterwick (reading)—"Among those who paid their respects to the President was Hon. John Doubleface, of Buncombe." Can that be old Doubleface, our neighbor?

Blotterwick (who keeps a large store) dubiously—Hardly possible. I never knew of his paying anything before.

—A Great Injury Done: "I've been injured by a statement in your paper." "I am sorry, sir. What did I say?" "You stated that I had compromised with my creditors for 70 cents on the dollar." "Well?" "Well, I haven't done anything of the kind; it was 40 cents."

THE MAYBRICK CASE.

Petitions Being Numerously Signed—Mrs. Briggs' Contradictory Story.

A Wednesday's London cable says: There are no new developments of importance in the Maybrick case. The army of letter writers are still filling the newspaper offices with waste paper. Home Secretary Matthews, in spite of the deluge of letters and petitions, keeps his own counsel. Fifty-two members of Parliament have signed the memorial asking for a commutation of Mrs. Maybrick's sentence. The signers of the petitions in Liverpool number 46,000.

Mrs. Briggs was about the only interesting feature of the case to-day. Goaded by the interview with Baroness Von Roque, Mrs. Briggs came to the front and denied that she had worked up the case against Mrs. Maybrick, of whom she was a friend, she affirmed. Mrs. Briggs contradicted herself curiously. In the first part of the interview she said she had first heard of the poison when the woman Yapp told her that her mistress was poisoning the master. Towards the finish of the interview she said the idea of poison never entered her head until the doctor refused the death certificate.

All sorts of rumors touching Mrs. Maybrick's health are afloat. Her latest ailment is quick consumption.

A Thursday's London cable says: The Maybrick case found its way into the House of Lords to-day and ruffled the temper of the Lord Chancellor to an extent absolutely dangerous to his health. In language mild and choice Lord Fitzgerald asked if during the coming recess the question of constituting an effective Court of Appeal in criminal cases would be considered, and if it were deemed expedient would the measure to effect such an object be presented.

The face of the Lord Chancellor became covered with a hue that betokened a rapid approach of apoplexy. He could only imperfectly express his regret, he said, that such a question should be raised. It was a matter he preferred not to discuss at such a time.

Lord Herschel coolly stated that it was impossible to obtain attention to the necessity of any particular reform except when the public mind was excited on the subject. He trusted the matter would be seriously considered by the Government at the coming recess, as there was undoubtedly a wide-spread feeling that such a tribunal would give additional security against injustice and against such an agitation as the suspicion of injustice created.

To-morrow's Lancet, after a thorough review of the medical testimony, will say: "We can have no desire that the royal prerogative of mercy should not be exercised in this case, but as a duty to the living relatives of the deceased, to a painstaking, fearless and honest jury, and to one of the greatest ornaments of the English bench, we solemnly assert as our unbiased opinion that the verdict arrived at in Mrs. Maybrick's trial was warranted by the evidence."

A last Friday night's London cable says: The Press Association states that Home Secretary Matthews will recommend to the Queen the commutation of the death sentence of Mrs. Maybrick to penal servitude for life, and that the commutation of sentence will be announced after the Queen has given her formal assent. The Home Secretary and the experts assumed that Mrs. Maybrick was not guilty, and acting upon this assumption sifted every scrap of the testimony given, especially that in relation to the husband's craze for arsenic, which is of great weight, and will, it is believed, turn the scale in the prisoner's favor. It is a noteworthy fact that the Lord Chancellor is seldom consulted in such cases except when a reprieve is meditated.

A despatch from Norfolk, Va., says a well-known woman of this city, Mme. Mary Hogwood, yesterday went before a notary and made oath to some startling statements concerning the late James Maybrick, whose wife is now under sentence of death in Liverpool, charged with her husband's murder. Despite the bad character of the woman, she bears a fair reputation for truth and veracity, and her affidavit will be accompanied by letters from several of the most respectable men of Norfolk attesting that fact. Her statement is as follows:

Know all men by these presents. That I, Mary Hogwood, residing in the city of Norfolk, Va., do unhesitatingly say that I knew the late James Maybrick for several years, and that up to the time of his marriage he called at my house, when in Norfolk, at least two or three times a week, and that I saw him frequently in his different moods and fancies. It was a common thing for him to take arsenic two or three times during an evening. He would always say before taking it, "Well, I am going to take my evening dose." He would pull from his pocket a small vial in which he carried his arsenic, and putting a small quantity on his tongue would wash it down with a sip of wine. In fact so often did he repeat this that I became afraid that he would die suddenly in my house, and then some of us would be suspected of his murder. When drunk Mr. James Maybrick would pour the powder into the palm of his hand and lick it up with his tongue. I often cautioned him, but he answered: "Oh, I am used to it; it will not harm me." One of the vials used by Mr. Maybrick to carry arsenic was left by him in my care during his last visit here, and I shall be glad to turn it over to the authorities if it can be of any use. I have been quite ill for a long time—so sick that I have paid little attention to the newspapers, and therefore I knew hardly anything about the facts concerning the alleged murder; but knowing Mr. Maybrick as I do and his habits, I am not surprised in the least at hearing of his death, and do not believe that his wife had any more to do with causing his death than I had. I have always believed that his habit of arsenic eating would carry him off.

The press is still filled with communications from people who claim Mrs. Maybrick is innocent. Mrs. Maybrick may be possessed of many desires, but one is pre-eminent. From morning till night she entreats to be permitted to write to the Queen. She has not been allowed to do so. She is but a wreck of her former self. Her attire is blue home-spun, her food is regular prison fare. To-day her mail consisted of eleven hundred letters. None containing a reference to the case are given to her, so that she is not allowed to read many. Baroness von Roque wanted to give her a peach to-day, but was not permitted to do so.

ZANZIBAR DISTURBANCES.

Rioters Arrested and Flogged—Fears of Another Outbreak.

A Zanzibar despatch of Thursday says: Of the eighteen prisoners arrested yesterday for a raid on the Indian bazaar sixteen were in the employ of the Sultan, one was in the employ of the Germans, and the other, an Arab, had no employer. Each received fifty blows with a stick yesterday, and they are lying confined in the barracks. The riot occurred between 6 and 7 in the evening, but as no police are ever on duty in the streets in the daytime, soldiers had to be brought from a distant part of the town, and these, after restoring order, patrolled the quarter until 8 in the morning. To-day there was another slight riot in the bazaar between Arabs and Banyans, and two of the latter were beaten. There is still much talk of disturbance brewing for Saturday or Sunday. The authorities should be compelled to have the streets guarded by the police by day as well as by night. The Sultan was absent at his country house when the riot occurred, and drove into town early this morning. There are only two German ships here. The Fifael and Carola have left their moorings and anchored off the German Consulate as a measure of precaution. It is reported that the German Consul has telegraphed to the German commander at Mozambique to return with the Leipzig.

A Zanzibar cable of Friday says The Sultan's principal adviser Mohammed Bakashmal, to whom I recently referred, since the deportation of Leesperadewjee, his predecessor, has been conducting public affairs and exercising a most nefarious influence upon the Sultan, has been exiled, and leaves by the French mail at the end of the month. The British war vessel Mariner left for Seychelles this morning. The Cossack is expected from the opposite coast to replace her. The men-of-war now in harbor are the British Agamemnon and Griffon, the German Pfest and Cariola, the American Swatara, and also one French and one Italian. The Griffon is now moored just below the palace on the north-west side of the town, so as to be able to shell any party coming from the district called Melinde, which is inhabited by Hindees and Arabs and their slaves. If an outbreak should occur, it is there it will commence, and then after the rioters have plundered the Hindees they will repair to the German Custom-house and wreck it. The Agamemnon is moored off the consulate. Everything is ready on board the British and German ships to assist in maintaining order. To-day the place is unusually quiet. Although it is Friday, there has been no selambik or parade of troops, the Sultan having shut himself up in his country house. Some soldiers are on guard in the streets, chiefly in the Hindee quarter. There is almost a panic among the well-to-do Arabs, who fear an occupation. The fall of the Sultan's chief adviser has completely set aside all idea of a rising, and Zanzibar is now quiet.

FATAL EXPERIMENTS.

Patients on Whom the Elixir is Tried Die—Was It or the Doctors to Blame?

A Friday night's Cincinnati dispatch says: Last Saturday Dr. George K. Taylor, one of the best physicians here, invited Chas. S. Steele, who was almost helpless from paralysis, to enter his office, and the doctor injected a quantity of the Brown-Sequard elixir in each of his hips without Steele knowing what it was. The man suffered intense agony, but was told that he would soon get well. The agony was so great that on Monday he called on Dr. Taylor, who told him the more pain he had the more complete would be his final recovery. Yesterday Steele sent for Dr. Watson, who found the inside of Steele's thighs terribly inflammed, swollen, and in a mottled condition, as if gangrene had set in, though it may prove only blood poisoning. Steele has a high fever and is out of his mind. He has a large family, which he supported by taking orders for coal. His friends have retained a lawyer to sue Dr. Taylor for heavy damages.

Sham Battle with Smokeless Powder.

A Berlin cable says: Emperor William and the Emperor of Austria left Berlin at 7.45 o'clock this morning for Spandau, where a sham fight took place. Four battalions of troops crossed the Havel River, which at this point is 450 metres wide, on a bridge constructed of ninety pontoons. The building of the bridge and the passage of the troops were accomplished in a remarkably short time. The battle took place on the heights south of Spandau. One division of the battalions used the new smokeless powder, while their opponents used the old style of powder. The contrast between the effects of the explosives was striking, the troops using the old powder being completely enveloped in smoke. The action ended in the western force being thrown back on Spandau. After the battle Emperor William called the officers together and criticised the operations. The two Emperors lunched in a tent on the field. They returned to Berlin this afternoon. In the afternoon Emperor William and his guest visited the Friedenskirche, where the Austrian Emperor laid a wreath upon the coffin of Emperor Frederick.

Jack-the-Ripper Will Laugh.

A last Wednesday night's cable from London says: The coroner's jury to-day returned a verdict that Alice Mackenzie, the latest victim of Jack-the-Ripper, was murdered. The verdict is on a par with much of the matter in the summing up by the coroner. He said there were grave doubts of her respectability, though it was proven she had lived for six years with a man not her husband, and was open to inducements from anybody else. The Ripper is almost due for another murder.

FREDERICK T. ROBERTS, M. D., Professor of Clinical Medicine at University College Hospital, London, England, says; "Bright's disease has no symptom's of its own and may long exist without the knowledge of the patient or practicioner and no pain will be felt in the kidneys or their vicinity." Ordinary common kidney diseases, many times unrecognized as such, will become chronic and terminate in Bright's (organic) disease of the kidney's, unless taken in hand. Warner's Safe Cure is the only recognized specific that has ever been discovered for this disease. The late Dr. Dio Lewis said, over his own signature: "If I found myself the victim of a serious kidney trouble, I would use Warner's Safe Cure."

REJUVENATING CRIMINALS.

Testing the Brown-Sequard Elixir on Convicts.

A Nashville, Tenn., despatch says: The interest in the Brown-Sequard elixir of life is increasing in this city. Dr. George S. Glenn, State prison physician, encouraged by the success attending an experiment made by him, has decided to begin to-morrow a series of experiments among inmates of the penitentiary, who are anxious to subject themselves to the new treatment.

About three weeks ago Dr. Glenn and his partner, Dr. Schultz, began to experiment, Dr. Schultz himself being the subject chosen. At the time the experiments began Dr. Schultz had partially recovered from an attack of malarial fever, and was suffering from asthmatic troubles, which had reduced him about thirty pounds in weight. He presented a pale, emaciated appearance, his face being almost colorless. His pulse was frequent, small and compressible, and his nervous system much prostrated.

One dram of the fluid was injected into the cellular tissues of the abdomen; the pale face became flushed and the eyes assumed a brilliancy and sparkle as from an intoxicant. The feeling of lassitude disappeared, and a nervous energy began to thrill the whole body. The effect of the treatment is still plainly felt. From that day the patient's general health has greatly improved. Dr. Schultz is gaining his avoirdupois. He has no pains or aches and feels better than he has for years.

HEARTLESS RELATIVES.

They Disown the Dead Body of a Husband and Father.

A Buffalo despatch says: The unknown stonemason who was killed by the Michigan Central train Saturday morning has been identified in a singular manner. In the first place a man from the Chippawa market visited the Morgue and at once identified the body as that of John Myers, who lived at No. 249 Genesee street. Other men who had known him, twelve or fifteen in number, were brought in and identified the body.

Members of his family were then sent for, but they professed to see nothing in the dead man's features that resembled their relative. His wife, his brother-in-law, and a daughter 22 years old said it was not he, but when the dead man's little 14-year-old daughter visited the place alone the story was told.

"That's my papa," she sobbed, in her childish innocence, as she stood by the side of the rigid corpse and looked down into the face of him whom others of the family had refused to recognize.

"This seems like a strange situation," said Morgue-Keeper DeRyder, "but I have had several cases of this kind. One can see by watching the faces of these people that the dead man is their relative, but they are just that heartless that they will deny their own dead father rather than pay his funeral expenses. We shall bury him in Potter's Field."

A Glutton's Death.

A Thursday's Halifax despatch says: While the warship Tourmaline was lying in Barbadoes about two years ago, a colored seaman named Richard McAndrews made application to join the ship and play in the band. His terms were acceptable and his services were retained. The musician enlisted for a period of two years. McAndrews was looked upon as an enormous eater. The manner in which he ate and the quantity he devoured at a meal were astonishing. The Tourmaline was in readiness to proceed to sea with the flagship on Saturday last, but McAndrews was taken very ill through eating too much meat. His sufferings were of the most excruciating kind. He was taken from the ship and conveyed to the marine hospital at the dockyard, and died in terrible agony yesterday afternoon. McAndrews ate so much that it strained him inside, causing a partial paralysis of the rectum. Those sleeping in the same ward with McAndrews say his groans were terrible. The deceased, who was a man of 45 years of age, leaves a wife and family at Barbadoes.

A Military Cook's Suicide.

A Halifax despatch of Wednesday says A terrible suicide was committed at the military camp on Macnab's Island at 5.30 o'clock this morning, the victim being Private Joseph Hill, of the West Riding Regiment. Hill was engaged as cook in the officers' mess on the island, and last evening was placed under arrest for some petty offence, but was not put in confinement, being what is known as a "prisoner at large." This morning he took a loaded rifle, placed the muzzle fairly in his mouth and pulled the trigger. The top of his head was blown off and the pieces scattered in various directions. The body was brought up to the city to-day. Hill was a young man.

Railway Enterprise in China.

A Wednesday's cable says: Chang Chi Tung, Viceroy of Kwangtung, has been transferred to the Viceroyalty of Liang Hu. It is believed that this transfer has taken place in consequence of the memorial in which he supported the construction of the Hankow Peking Trunk Railway. The railway will now be begun shortly under Chang Chi Tung's direction, a Chinese syndicate with a capital of 60,000,000 teels having been formed to carry out the scheme. Li Hang Chang, the elder brother of Li Hung Chang, has been appointed Viceroy of Kwangtung.

A Revised Edition.

Blythe—Your autograph album is one of the finest I have ever seen. The names are all written so neatly and symmetrically.

Lythe—Yes, I copied them myself from the originals, some of which were perfectly horrid.

A Forced Confession.

Angry Wife (sarcastically)—Good morning. How was the show? Did it have a full house?

Belated Husband (who has sense enough left to realize that deception is useless)—Yesh, full ash a goat.

A Comprehensive Order.

Mr. Hyde (of Hyde & Tallow, Chicago)—Waiter, I want a dinner. Waiter—Will ze gentlemen haf table d'hote or a la carte? Mr. Hyde—Bring me a little of both, and have 'em put lots of gravy on it.—Puck.

THE TEXAN FEUD.

"Jaybirds" and "Woodpeckers" Make Things Interesting.

A Houston, Texas, despatch of Saturday night gives the following additional particulars of the feud reported Saturday: Capt. Reichardt left here for Richmond last night with 24 militia men. Two gentlemen who arrived here at 11.35 last night from Richmond reported that the "Woodpeckers" crowd (Negroes) were in the Court House surrounded by the other faction, but no more fighting had occurred. The town was crazy with excitement, the women and children being at home while the men were down town. There was but one light burning in the whole town, and that was at the hotel. The riot was precipitated by a "Jaybird" walking through the town with his Winchester. He was jailed. The fighting soon began. About 75 shots were fired. Sheriff Garvey and ex-Sheriff Blakely, who were killed, were "Jaybirds." All was quiet at midnight.

A Richmond, Texas, despatch says: Since the fighting last evening things have been extremely quiet. The county officials, who are among the "Woodpeckers," retreated to the Court House, carrying their wounded, and still occupy it, supported by th Houston Light Guards. The wounded in the Court House are Judge Parker, now a member of the Legislature, and Deputy Sheriff Mason, shot badly through the shoulder. Parker was shot beneath the shoulder blade and through the groin. The presence of the military will preserve the peace, but the "Jaybirds" are in possession of the streets and no warrant has been sworn out or arrests made. Henry Frost, a leader of the "Jaybirds," who received four bullet wounds, is fast sinking. The "Jaybirds" are undoubtedly prepared for trouble at any moment, while the opposition has been materially weakened by the loss of two leaders. There is a panic among the people here, chiefly the Negroes, and nearly a hundred have left by rail to-day, never to return. Volney Johnson, one of the "Jaybirds," was shot in the jaw with a Winchester and the ball is now somewhere in his neck, but he was walking on the streets this afternoon ready for anything that might arise. A distressing feature is the arrival here of relations of parties who have been killed or badly wounded. A squad of State rangers was here yesterday, but was powerless to check the fight, though making every effort to do so. It is said that Frost, after he was shot down, raised himself on his arms and killed ex-Sheriff Blakely with his Winchester.

PERTURBED JAPAN.

Great Loss of Life by Earthquakes—Floods and Riots.

A San Francisco despatch of Sunday has the following: The steamer City of Sydney, from Hong Kong and Yokohama, which arrived this evening, was expected to bring details of the earthquake at Kumamoto, news of which was cabled from Yokohama on July 30th. One cablegram gave the loss of life at 3,000, while another stated almost the entire town of Kumamoto, with a population of 38,000, was destroyed. Full details had not been received when the City of Sydney left Yokohama, but the newspapers of that city of August 2nd indicate no such loss as given by the cablegrams. Several late telegrams to Yokohama gave the loss at twenty to thirty killed. The Japan newspaper Jiji Shimpo says, however, that by a great earthquake at Kumamoto on July 28th many hills have been rent, houses demolished, and people killed and wounded in the city independent of the surrounding villages. Another shock has been felt, and the inhabitants are fearing further disaster. The people have been seized with superstition on account of the hills being broken open.

The floods having subsided in the various districts of Japan, a fairly accurate estimate of the damage done is obtained. Nine hundred and thirty houses were destroyed by being washed away or broken up by colliding together. Forty-one persons are known to have lost their lives.

The Overland China Mail learns, July 6th, that the rioters in the Fohien Province of China had fled before the approaching troops. Before leaving they burned their boats. The attack on the Chin Chu villages is confirmed. For the loss of four or five of their countrymen last year the rioters revenged themselves by slaughtering between 400 and 500 inhabitants of the Chin Chu villages, including women and children.

The Czar will go to Copenhagen prior to his visit to Potsdam. He will probably meet Emperor William at Potsdam on Sept. 18th.

The Halifax Magistrate on Saturday gave judgment in the case of Otto S. Weeks, charged with shooting at Annie H. Killam, dismissing the case.

The illness of Count Andrassy has taken the gravest turn. The Emperor of Austria receives daily bulletins concerning the old statesman's condition.

Cavaliere Capello is bringing a special decoration from the King of Italy to Mr. Edison, and will at the same time give Mr. Edison the title of Count.

Shocks of earthquake were felt yesterday throughout Herzegovina. A portion of the Mostar railway was damaged, but nothing serious is reported.

Admiral Broun, commanding the French Atlantic fleet, will shortly visit Montreal, and will be given a grand reception by the members of the French colony.

A colored boy named James Finlay, about 13 years old, was drowned Saturday afternoon at Chatham. He was fishing at one of the docks when he fell in.

Mayor Clarke, of Toronto, returned from London, England, on Saturday, and received a cordial reception from his constituents in the Queen City and friends.

W. K. Perry, the aeronaut who sustained severe injuries by falling from a balloon 700 feet high at Mount Holly fair, near Charlotte, N. C., ten days ago, died last night.

On the night of August 9th, while the barge Mona, belonging to the Kingston & Montreal Forwarding Co., was being towed from Lachine to Beauharnois, Pierre Dube, of Montreal, dropped overboard and was undoubtedly drowned. He was missed the next morning. The body has not been recovered.

The Editor.

BEFORE.

Who in his sanctum sits up late,
And strives, with sentences of weight,
To set to right affairs of state?
The editor. Admire him!

Who deeply molds the public thought?
For money who can ne'er be bought?
Who always for the right has fought?
The editor. Respect him!

Who notes what great men do and say,
And files obituaries away
When they shall die, to print next day?
The editor. Revere him!

Who gives us cure for cough or cold,
Who suffers patiently and long
And seldom uses language strong?
The editor. Don't chide him!

Who ignorance must ne'er confess,
Who knows of all things more or less—
Or what he don't know sure can guess?
The editor. Consult him

When youthful talent seeks to rise,'
Who views its growth with friendly eyes,
Its merits quick to recognize?
The editor. Oh, bless him!

AFTER.

Who doth good judgment sadly lack,
Who has of taste not e'er a smack
Who sent my little poem back?
The editor. Confound him!

SHAWLS.

How the Average Woman Effects Her Evenings on the Veranda.

The average woman over 40 is never so content as when hugging herself in a shawl on a hotel piazza, says a correspondent of the Boston Gazette.

Shawls to the right of us,
Shawls to the left of us,
Shawls all around the house
Hug without question.
Chuddas of brown or gray,
Blue, white or cafe au lait;
And each old girl will say
Hers is the best one.

On the slightest pretext a woman will give a little shudder, seize her shawl, and, enveloping herself from waist to ears in it, will settle down like a cat in a feather bed. The white chudda seems to be the most popular, and after dusk it is a wise man that knows his own wife, though it is immaterial for the moment which is which, for women in shawls are all alike; they shiver and hug their elbows, and answer in monosyllables; and if their shawl for a moment slips from their shoulders they are like clipped poodles or wet hens—disgruntled and whining.

How to Manage a Man.

A man never stoops to the means employed by women; he is broader, more liberal, he applies himself to the things which belong to the day, the hour and the object for which we live. Whoever heard of a man losing his temper because his suit would not match his complexion, or fume because six button gloves had been sent when he had ordered seven? What man would faint on Broadway because the clasp that held his hosiery gave way and wriggled on the sidewalk? None! Yet I saw that happen to a woman recently. Yet men are very much like children. Humor them, and they will do your bidding. Make them believe they are always having their own way; don't let them see the silken net you have woven about them, and they will blandly obey your will; but once let them believe they are captive and no puny woman's power will avail against their superior strength.—Marie Jansen in New York World.

Economy in Food.

Farmer Sawyer, of Wallingford, had quite an experience last winter with his cattle. His stock of hay ran out, and being unable to get more in time he gave the cows some of the dry leaves he had collected for bedding, and he was surprised to see that they appeared to enjoy them. The leaves went so well that he concluded that he wouldn't get any more hay for a while, and, in fact, leaves were the only thing that the six cows and two horses lived on during the last half of the winter. While eating hay the cows had given 12 quarts of milk weekly, yielding five pounds of butter. After being put on diet of leaves the quantity and quality of milk increased until they gave 15 quarts of milk, yielding seven pounds of butter. Mr. Sawyer intends to use nothing but leaves during the winter hereafter, as the leaves can be had for the trouble of collecting them, and are better than costly hay or grain.—Meriden Republican.

Character of the Black Bass.

If you want a real good argument any day touch up the black bass issue among the local fishermen. Some of them say that he is an enemy to all sport, a mean, low-lived, vicious specimen of the tribe of fish who sleep in the mud all winter and is worm-eaten all summer. Fish Commissioner Stanley says that the black bass is a splendid mannered, high bred fish, a fighter it is true, but an honest fighter, and one of the best food fishes that swim the streams of Northern America. He says that the stocking of ponds with the fish was wise, and that in years to come more sport will be realized with this fish than the sporting men of rod and line have yet dreamed.—Lewiston Journal.

Anything But That.

Miss Cynthia Mushroom—Now, papa, do be careful at dinner, and don't mortify us before Mr. Stuyvesant Sturtevant.

Mrs. M.—Yes, Phineas, do mind your manners and remember all them little points in that book about etiquette that I've been reading to you.

Mr. M.—Well, that's all right. You kin go ahead and arrange things to suit yerself, but I'm darned if I eat pie with a fork for anybody.

An Experienced Teacher.

"Must I aim at that black spot in the centre of the circle?"

"Why, no; that's what I want you to hit. Aim at that ice-house 10 feet to the right.

—These lines from John Boyle O'Reilly's Plymouth poem are greatly praised over all the country:

One righteous word for Law—the common will;
One living truth of Faith—God regnant still;
One primal test of Freedom—all combined;
One sacred Revolution—change of mind;
One trust unfailing for the night and need—
The tyrant-flower shall cast the freedom-seed.

—Albert C. Savage's little daughter caught the smallpox on board the Pacific mail steamer Newport. Mr. Savage has sued the company for $25,000 damages. He thinks a disfigured girl is handicapped to that amount in life's race.

SCOTLAND'S PRIDE.

The Greatest Bridge in the World—A Cantilever Triumph.

The bridge across the Firth of Forth at Queen's Ferry, Scotland, now approaching completion, is a work of such magnitude and presents so many points of novelty that it has attracted the attention of the whole engineering world. In 1804 a surveyor published designs for a bridge across the Forth at the same spot, and with spans of the like magnitude. That, however, was to be a suspension bridge, with chains like the cable of a fifty-ton yacht, and the total weight of iron was estimated at 200 tons, as contrasted with 50,000 tons of steel in the present structure. While a bridge of 1,700 feet in span was thus conceived of nearly a century ago, it may also be said that the cantilever principle of construction can be found in Egyptian and Indian temples built before the introduction of the arch. An eminent engineer says that the cantilever was in all probability invented by some intelligent savage, who, wanting to get across a stream too deep to ford and too wide to jump, utilized the projecting branches of two opposite trees as cantilevers or brackets, and connected them by a short independent piece of timber, and so formed a cantilever and central girder structure.

The true principle of construction and the nature of the stresses may be illustrated in a simple way. Two men who sit on chairs extend their arms, which they support by grasping sticks butting against the chairs. This represents the two double cantilevers. The central girder is represented by a short stick slung from the arm of each man, and the anchorage by ropes extending from the other arms to two piles of bricks. When stresses are brought on this system by a load on the central girder the arms of the men and the anchorage ropes come into tension, and the sticks and chair legs into compression. In the Forth bridge we must imagine the chairs to be placed a third of a mile apart, the men's heads to be 360 feet above the ground, the pull on the arms 10,000 tons, and the pressure on the legs of the chairs on the ground 100,000 tons. As regards size and weight no existing bridge at all approaches the Forth bridge. There are two spans, each 1,700 feet long; the width of the bridge at the piers is 120 feet; there is a clear headway for navigation at high water of 150 feet; the deepest foundation below high water is 89 feet; the highest part of the bridge above high water is 360 feet, and the depth of water in the centre of the channel is 210 feet. With this depth the bridge could never have been built had it not been for an island in the middle of the Forth. The train weight that will be put upon the bridge will be small compared with the wind pressure needed to be overcome, and to resist wind the lofty columns over the piers are 120 feet apart at the base and 33 feet at the top. As furnishing an idea of the enormous force which the cantilevers are capable of resisting it may be said that a pull of 45,000 tons would be needed to tear asunder the top ties. The greatest pull from passing trains can be only 2,000 tons. The bridge is looked upon as a railway necessity. Indeed, it will furnish the missing link in a great chain of communication throughout the United Kingdom. When we read of such structures, and know that trains reach a speed of sixty miles an hour, we cannot but smile at what the staid old "Quarterly Review" said in 1825: "We trust that Parliament will, in all railways it may sanction, limit the speed to eight or nine miles an hour, which is as as great as can be ventured on with safety."

How and when to Drink Water.

According to Dr. Leuf, when water is taken into the full or partly full stomach, it does not mingle with the food, as we are taught, but passes along quickly between the food and lesser curvative toward the pylorus, through which it passes into the intestines. The secretion of mucus by the lining membrane is constant, and during the night a considerable amount accumulates in the stomach; some of its liquid portion is absorbed, and that which remains is thick and tenacious. If food is taken into the stomach when in this condition it becomes coated with mucus, and the secretion of the gastric juice and its action are delayed. These facts show the value of a goblet of water before breakfast. This washes out the tenacious mucus, and stimulates the gastric glands to secretion. In old and feeble persons water should not be taken cold, but it may be with great advantage taken warm or hot. This removal of the accumulated mucus from the stomach is probably one of the reasons why taking soup at the beginning of a meal has been found so beneficial.

An Effective Threat.

New Yorker—No, sir. I have no money for you.

Dirty Tramp—Well, I don't see nothing fer me ter do but drown myself.

New Yorker—I can't help that.

Dirty Tramp—All right. Where's the reservoir?

New Yorker—Here! Take this dollar and live.

Clearly Defined.

Boston Young Lady—What do you mean by saying that your ball nine has the opposing team 'rattled'?

Omaha Miss—It's when we have them razzle-dazzled and give them the grand razoo.

Lord Randolph Churchill's present to the duchess of Fife was a prayer book.

The compositor who was required to set up "cold horror then my vitals froze" and made it read "my victuals," etc., is now enjoying a vacation in company with the proof reader.

Flowery summer, golden summer, summer of our northern clime;
Spring may be a joyous season, but you beat it every time.

Season of delightful evenings, charming mornings, sultry noons,
Purple dawnings, crimson sunsets, placid starlight, tender moons,

Flowery summer, golden summer, summer of our northern clime,
Life is sweet and worth the living when we see you in your prime.

—First Chicago woman—Have you seen Mrs. Fowler's new summer suit? Second Chicago woman—No, what is it? First Chicago woman—Principally allegations against her husband. She hopes to get the divorce in ten days.

TWO HUNDRED DOLLARS.

A Young Student's Cheap Trip to England

Two hundred dollars is a large sum to a poor man and a small sum to a rich man, says the Youth's Companion. But in the matter of money every thing depends on the way it is used. Some men will get a vast amount of amusement, recreation and refinement out of a few dollars. Other men will spend large sums, and be unhappy or unblessed by the spending. Having occasion to put the matter to a practical test, a young student who lately went to Europe with just $200 is ready to tell what he got for it for the benefit of any who may be blessed with so moderate a sum, and still hesitates to go abroad for fear of not getting enough for the money. This philosophical traveller says:

"I went over, intermediate cabin passage, for $35 from Boston to Liverpool, by one of the finest Cunard steamers. The intermediate passage was not equal to first cabin it its table fare, but I had more fun in other ways. When I reached Liverpool I went to a plain hotel, where I could dine a la carte, or go to the sideboard and help myself, and generally did, and spent three days in the city at very moderate expense. I then went on to London, stopping one day at the Duke of Devonshire's estate, Chatsworth. Once in London I determined on one of the several ways of spending what money I had left. I procured lodging and breakfast and dinner at a cheap boarding-house in Bloomsbury, about ten minutes' walk from the British Museum. I had a Bædeker's guide book, and with its help I mapped out a number of famous places where I could go sight-seeing at very little expense. While on my tramps in the city I would go for a lunch into some restaurant where meals were served from some joint, or into the nearest coffee stand, where I often obtained all I wanted for eightpence and sometimes for sixpence. When I had to use the railways I always went third class. This was not so comfortable as second or first class, but more interesting in many ways on account of the people I met, and that is half the good of travelling at all. When I had occasion to ride I always took a 'bus if I could. This was a never-failing source of amusement to me. I saw more to remember from the top of an English 'bus than from any other place during my whole visit in London, and it was a very cheap source of instruction. The hansom cab was an expensive vehicle, costing a shilling, while the 'bus fares were usually very reasonable, and on some lines, at certain hours of the day, absurdly cheap for the distance. By selecting the right day and hour for visiting many places of interest I succeeded in seeing them for half price or for nothing. There are many places of interest in and about London where, on certain days of the week, admission is free. On certain other days it is sixpence or a shilling. By consulting my 'Bædeker,' and planning a little ahead, I saved many small items in this way. I was also content to do a large amount of walking; and, indeed, in this way I not only saved riding fares, but often saw curious and even rare sights which I should have missed if I had been in the habit of riding to and from points of interest. I spent seven weeks in London, and visited nearly all the large places of note. St. Paul's, Westminster Abbey, Parliament buildings, National Gallery, the Tower, the museum, where I went almost daily, the bank, where I did not go so often, nearly all the suburbs on the west side, the parks and art galleries, the Thames and Chelsea, Lord's cricket grounds and the Zoological Gardens. In many of these places I spent much time in special study, and went frequently, especially to the museums and churches, on the principle that as I had confined my trip abroad to one city I would know as much about it as possible. Getting back to Liverpool I still had money enough for first-class cabin fare to New York, and paid £10, or $50, for my return passage. In the time I was abroad I saw and enjoyed $200 worth at least. My board cost me about $55. My travelling, counting going and coming, was $115. The remaining $30 went for sundries, clothing, amusements, washing and keepsakes of the trip. But if any one can get more out of $200 abroad I wish they would write me and let me know how that I may try it again."

The Spinal Cord Mending.

Dr. Chauncey Bigge, of Bellevue Hospital, has a case of much interest to the medical fraternity. On the 8th inst. H. W. Benedict rode from Fifty-seventh street to Forty-seventh street on a Third avenue surface car. At Forty-seventh street he jumped off. He jumped on the wrong side, and was knocked down and run over by an uptown car. He was taken to Bellevue Hospital, where it was discovered that his spinal cord was fractured. As a rule, the patient does not survive long under these circumstances, but Mr. Benedict is getting along so well that Dr. Bigge hopes the column will knit, and that the patient will recover.—New York Star.

Height of Great Sea Waves.

Carefully repeated experiments made by an experienced English navigator at Santander, on the north coast of Spain, showed the crest of the sea waves in a prolonged and heavy gale of wind to be 42 feet high, and allowing the same for the depth between the waves would make a height of 84 feet from crest to base. The length from crest to crest was found to be 386 feet. Other estimates of the waves in the South Atlantic during great storms give a height of 50 feet for the crests and 400 feet for length. In the North Sea the height of crest seldom exceeds 10 feet and the length 150 feet.

Work of Electricity.

There are now in use in the United States more than 5,650 central electric stations for light and power. There are 210,000 arc lights and 2,600,000 incandescent lamps. There were 59 electrical railways in operation in March last, and 86 roads in process of construction. The increase of capital in electrical investments during 1888 was nearly $70,000,000. These are very significant figures, and they point unmistakably to the course of future inventions and discoveries.

Didn't Agree With Him.

An Eastern man who moved to Chicago lost 120 pounds in three weeks. His wife eloped with a car driver.

"NOTHING FOR OLD MAIDS."

The Mistake the Two Spinster Boggs Made

An elderly lady once remarked to a pretty girl that it was a very serious matter for a young woman to have a sweetheart. The girl answered that it was a far more serious matter not to have one. Certainly the two Misses Boggs, who have committed suicide at Point Pleasant, W. Va., agreed with the young lady. The two sisters were well-to-do. There was no reason why they should die by their own hand, or die at all, apparently. But they killed themselves, leaving a pathetic note, signed by both their names, saying there was "nothing in life for old maids."

It is a melancholy story, but the suicide was founded on a gigantic misapprehension of life. There is just as much here below for an old maid as for anybody else. Suppose they were without husbands? Husbands are not always what the old or young maiden fancy paints them. No more are wives always satisfactory. Socrates is credited with saying that whether one marries or does not marry, he regrets it. If the Misses Boggs had married, they might have got husbands whom they would have had to commit suicide to get rid of. Women have done the like, more than once. But the gravest possible mistake one can make is to take for granted that his personal love, personal comfort and happiness play a very large figure in the plan of this universe. Whoever pursues these aims alone finds they invariably elude him at last, like Will o' the Wisp. If the Misses Boggs wanted children, there was a world full of forlorn, homeless babies, many of them quite as sweet and pretty as any possible Boggs' babies would have been. How much they could have added to human happiness by adopting four or five little waifs and giving them home and education! Then there was the whole world of ideas before them—study, travel, science, art and music. Humanity stumbles blindly and painfully on, seeking always the better way in everything, thankful always to people who show it the better way. All of us owe it to the race to give some part of our time to aiding the rest. In philanthropy, in helping mankind to prosperity, to better, wiser, sweeter ways of living, there is work enough for a million single women, heaven knows!

It is sometimes necessary to pass through a sea of troubles to find at last that the only genuine happiness is found in giving happiness to others. Exactly in proportion as men lose sight of the "miserable aims that end in self," by a mysterious law friends, happiness and hope will drift their way. It is indeed:

A miserable, petty, low-roofed life,
That knows the mighty orbits of the skies
Through naught save light or dark in its own cabin.

—Elmira Advertiser.

How the Shah Keeps Accounts.

Nasr-ed-Deen, like many other potentates, is fond of money, and is supposed to possess a colossal fortune. He pays small salaries to his servants and dignitaries if the money comes out of his own pocket—that is, out of the legitimate revenues of the country—but he pays at least promtly and fairly what he agrees to pay. After deducting what he deems right for army, administration and household purposes he puts the balance away every year into his private treasury. Once the money—which must always be coin—has been dumped into his vaults no power on earth can induce the Shah to give the slightest portion of it back again or to touch it for any purpose whatsoever. When he is compelled to borrow money from the Armenians he pays usurious interest sooner than go to his strong box and take from its illimitable treasures the smallest sum.—Cosmopolitan.

Dwellings for the People.

There is in London a corporation, composed of men and women, called the Ladies' Residential Dwelling Company. This company has already erected dwelling-houses in Gower street and Sloan Gardens for the use of educated women who are obliged to earn their living and to live in lodgings. It is now proposed to build a block of these dwellings in Hampstead. These buildings are arranged in sets of flats, renting from 10 to 25 shillings (from $2.50 to $6.25) per week, or from £2 to £5 per month. There is a cooking range set in each suite, but there is also a large general dining-room connected with each house, in which dinner is served after the work of the day is finished.

Faded Footlight Flowers Bloom Again.

"And, doctor, can you make this bloom again?" asked Father Time, pointing to a specimen of the vintage of 1840.

"I was once a footlight favorite, and men showered me with pearls and diamonds. Oh, can I be young again," she exclaimed with all the fervor of a maiden of 62 summers.

"You shall be queen of the May," responded Dr. Brown-Sequard, as he proceeded to his laboratory and slaughtered a fresh guinea pig.—After the New York World.

The Dog Had no Cause To Be.

She (tenderly)—Did the dog bite you, darling?

He—Yes, he did.

She (reassuringly)—Well, it was papa's dog, darling, and we know he isn't mad.

He—Yes; but I am.

He Should if He Didn't.

DeRyter—Here is a joke I have brought you.

Editor (after reading it)—That is not a joke.

DeRyter—But I say it is. I made it, and I ought to know.

All competent authorities, prominent among them being F. F. Roberts, M. D., Professor of Chemical Medicine at University College Hospital, London, Eng., say "Bright's disease has no marked symptoms of its own, but takes the symptoms of other (so-called) diseases." If you have headache, fickle appetite, failure of eyesight, tube casts in urine, gradual loss of flesh and dropsical swelling, extreme wakefulness, distressing nervousness, do not neglect such symptoms, or you will eventually have Bright's disease, or some other effect of neglected kidney disease. Take Warner's Safe Cure, the only recognized specific for this disease.

To give stoves a good lustre add either sugar or alum to the lead.

ERRATIC WATCHES CURBED.

How the Effects of Electric Magnets Have Been Neutralized by a Bright Idea.

Electricity is now applied to a majority of the watches now made in this country. It used to be that a valuable watch would suddenly lose all self-respect and run like a race-horse on one day and a tortoise on the next. No one could tell what it was. Big prices were paid to the jewellers by unhappy watch-owners who hoped that the wizard of the balance wheel and main-spring could repair their timepieces. As electricity became more popular the irregularities of watches became more marked. But before the watch trade grew desperate a bright mind solved the mystery. He made an experiment, applying the battery to a fine watch, and then tried the effect of the dynamo upon the electrified movement. As one poison counteracts another's effect, so one battery equalized the other's effect. The magnet and the watch movement were made friends, and now a timepiece can mingle with the battery in a familiar way and feel no evil effects from the association.

Mrs. Gladstone.

Margaret F. Sullivan in New York World.

Her figure is tall, shapely and impressive; her carriage is a little too rapid to be entirely graceful; her costuming is—is English, which requires no elucidation. Despite deficiencies in externals, which a French modiste would have no difficulty in abolishing—for Mrs. Gladstone would be a charming subject for a dressmaker of taste—she would be singled out in any company as its most distinguished woman.

The face is uncommonly long even in England, very high in the forehead, and very strong and gentle, equally devoid of romance and of pedantry. The eyes are large, liquid, well-shaped, dark blue, and meditative. The silvering hair is parted in the usual way, and combed in natural waves down either cheek, as in the familiar portraits of noted women forty years ago. Her mouth is well proportioned to the other dimensions of her face, and her voice is low and vibrant with cordiality toward those she addresses.

"Death has so many doors to let out, life," sang an old time poet. In those days they had not discovered remedies that shut those doors. How different is Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery, from the old time doses. Consumption or lung scrofula, is one wide door that it shuts, if taken in time. Don't waste a moment, then lest life slip through that open door. It is guaranteed to cure in all cases of diseases for which it is recommended, or money paid for it will be refunded.

There's a blessing in the bottle on whose label we can read
Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription, for the woman who has need
Of a remedy for troubles none but women ever know.
'Tis her best and truest friend, and happy thousands call it so,
As they think of years of suffering that were theirs before it came,
Bringing them the balm of healing, and they bless the very name of this wonderfully, and deservedly, popular remedy for the various ills woman is heir to. "Favorite Prescription" is the only medicine for women, sold by druggists, under a positive guarantee, from the manufacturers, that it will give satisfaction in every case, or money will be refunded. This guarantee has been printed on the bottle-wrapper, and faithfully carried out for many years.

Not to Be Ruled.

A bachelor who lives in Newark, N. J., and who has always had a fear that his little wife might rule him, says now that a new idea has struck him. He is going to marry a typewriter girl, because he can dictate to her.

The Great Dismal Swamp

of Virginia, is one enormous quagmire of decayed vegetation, a region of gloom and desolation; but not more so than the human system when blocked up by decayed animal matter, which poisons the blood and brings gloom to an otherwise happy household. Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Purgative Pellets remove all waste matter, and give Nature a chance to build up.

An Unfortunate Sequence.

A gentleman was once lamenting to a friend the conduct of his son.

"You should speak to him with firmness and remind him of his duties," said the other.

"He pays no attention to what I say. He listens only to the advice of fools." Then, with a sudden thought, "I wish you would speak to him!"

—"There's a flood in Richmond, Va.," remarked the telegraph editor. "Gweat heaven!" exclaimed the dude reporter, 'will it spoil the thiggawettes?"

She wore a mannish little coat
With knowing little pockets;
She cast aside her necklaces,
Her bangles and her lockets
Her dickey, collar and cravat
Exactly match her brother's;
Her round straw hat is so like his
You can't tell one from 'tother's,
She ventures on a little slang
That sounds quite brusque and mannish
But show her once a mouse or worm
And see the disguise vanish!

—"See here, Mr. Grocer," said a Hartford housewife, "if you are going to bring me any more goods I want them to be the very best." "We keep none but the best." "I presume so; you sell the worst in order to keep the best."

—If you care to boss your own ranch a 60 save your cash at 30.

Dr. Nansen, the explorer, says that the ice in Greenland is 6,000 feet thick.

DONL 35 89.

AGENTS MAKE $100 A MONTH with us. Send 20c. for terms. A colored rug pattern and 50 colored designs. W. & F. BUSH, St. Thomas, Ont.

DUNN'S BAKING POWDER
THE COOK'S BEST FRIEND

GEO. MITCHELL,

BANKER,

FLESHERTON.

DRAFTS BOUGHT AND SOLD.

Special Attention paid to the collection Notes and Accounts, 2nd door North Richardson & Co's.

The Local News.

What is Happening in Our Own Vicinity.

To day is Markdale's civic holiday.

Quilt batts cheap at the Flesherton Woollen Mill.

There were two baptisms in the Baptist church on Sabbath last.

Croquet by lamp-light is the popular game in Flesherton.

Mr. W. J. Howard built last week an enormous cistern for Mr. Lucas, of Markdale.

Mr. Wm. Galbraith and family returned from the western States last week and will remain here.

We have received a copy of Glenelg Agricultural Society's prize list of the fall fair to be held at Markdale on Sept. 26 and 27.

Miss. E Brown, of Priceville, and her father, who has been visiting in Scotland during the past summer, are on their journey home.

The Revere Hotel, Markdale, has changed hands, Mr. T. Jennings having given it up. A gentleman from Collingwood took possession on Tuesday.

Flesherton and vicinity has been suffused with perspiration during the present week. Let us suffuse for two months to come ere John Frost unsuffuseth us.

Mr. C.E. Neil, merchant of Feversham, has removed the contents of his store to Maxwell, where he has taken up quarters in the shop lately occupied by Joseph Carr.

Artemesia Township fall show will be held at Priceville on Thursday, Oct. 3. The prize list has just been issued from this office. Jas Brodie, Vandeleur, secretary.

The output of cheese from Flesherton cheese factory for July was 21,000 lbs., for which 9 cts. was the price received. The same amount of June cheese sold for 8¾c per lb. These were the highest prices paid in Ontario for cheese.

D. F. Ferguson, Balsam Valley, was a welcome visitor to our sanctum on Monday. He reports the wheat crop in that vicinity to be a failure, owing to rust. Peas are a good crop, oats fair, and barley not very good.

Rev. Mr. Emes occupied his own pulpit here last Sabbath. He had been absent for two weeks in Sutton at what proved to be the death bed of his father, who had lived beyond the twilight age of threescore and ten. The funeral took place on Friday afternoon last.

Molaycthon people are blowing about their big mustard. The Economist tells of a stock of wild mustard eight feet long. The thing is indigenous to this township, or at least it is a scarce article, but none too scarce. When we haven't anything better than mustard to brag about, we will quit bragging.

Markdale, as a business place, does not count for much just at the present season of year. Farmers are busy and have no time to go to town. From personal observation on Tuesday we believe it to be quieter than Flesherton. Some of the business men informed us that they do not remember ever seeing it quite so dull as it has been this summer.

The Beeton World now says that a Mr. Macpherson, of Prescott, "made a flying visit to his son's last week." What's the matter with Prescott that it can't raise its own flies? Now if it had been a fishing visit there would have been some sense in the thing. Possibly, however, it is only the World's delicate way of making the fact known that Mr. Mac. does not use worms for bait?

Some men try advertising as the Indian tried feathers. He took one feather, laid it on a board and slept on it all night. In the morning he remarked: "White man say feathers heap soft, white man fool." Some business men invest 25 or 50 cents in advertising, and then because they do not realize a great increase of business they declare that advertising does not pay.—Ex.

The Anthem sung by the Methodist choir in the Flesherton church on Sunday evening last was worthy of special mention. It was exceedingly well rendered.

Will you suffer with Dyspepsia and Liver Complaint? Shiloh's Vitalizer is guaranteed to cure you. For sale at the Medical Hall..

A comfortable house with one and a quarter acre lot (convenient to Flesherton) to rent or for sale on easy terms. Apply to W. H. Flesher, Flesherton.
Aug 27th, 1889.

Fishing stories are a thing of the past. They have come to a fin-is for this season. All the tails which we have chronicled during the past summer were hooked on the fly, and we have not done a bit of line about them, either.

The Meaford Monitor transplanted a lengthy editorial of ours last week without giving credit. Not that we care for ourselves, but we hate to have its readers go away with the idea that the editor of the Monitor would write such nonsense, you know!

According to despatches the American cutter Bear is making things lively for Canadian sealing vessels in Behring Sea. She bears down upon them, cares their hidden sealskins and bears away with them to Ounalaska. Those who have barely time to escape do not forbear doing so. How can the English Government bear to see this thing going on?

Among all our exchanges last week, not one appears to have "dropped to the racket" of the C.P.R. authorities in firing the news company from its road. They one and all gravely applaud the move without dreaming of the motive underlying the philanthropic? act. The news agent still operates, gentlemen, but his master has been changed. He is as frisky as ever, too, and don't you hesitate to remember the fact.

More Honey.

Another large quantity of honey has been left at this office for sale. Twelve cents a pound in small quantities. A reduction will be made on 25 lbs. and over.

Notice to Farmers.

Special reductions in meats to farmers for threshings, or when purchased in large quantities. We kill to live, and furnish first class meats at cheap prices. Petch & Mitchell.

Read the Newspapers.

Sharks, swindlers, confidence operators, and the general fraternity of fakirs, find out people who don't take or read the local newspapers and fleece them quite easily, but the man who keeps posted on current everyday happenings is forewarned and prepared to bounce them unceromoniously, and save himself from being victimized.

Passed.

The Misses Lizzie and Annie Richardson were both successful in passing the recent examinations for third-class teachers. There was some error on the part of the examiners, and word was not received of their success until Friday last. We heartily congratulate the young ladies.

Not to Blame.

A meeting of Liberal Conservatives of ward No. 2, Artemesia, was held last week. After a thorough discussion of matters now exercising the country a resolution was unanimously carried to the effect that, however deep the meeting might regret incorporation of the Jesuits, the Dominion Government was not to blame therefore, or those who were elected to support the government, for the action they took in the matter.

In the Matter of Schools.

From the report of School Inspector Campbell as submitted to the last meeting of County Council we glean the following with reference to schools in this vicinity: "Considering the number of pupils in attendance, the school house in No. 7 Osprey is about the worst in the County. Not only is the room too small, and ceiling too low, but the walls, furniture, etc., appear dirty and forbidding in the extreme. Everything about the school indicates indifference to the comfort of the pupils. Although not wishing to be arbitrary, I must, as in duty bound, insist on some radical change in the appearance and dimensions of schools so neglected. Several other school houses are so bad that in my opinion it is money thrown away to repair them—among the worst of these are No. 4 Artemesia, and No. 8 Egremont. I was, however, notified that the ratepayers of the former had authorized the Trustees to erect a new brick building, not to cost more than $2,500. I have not yet heard from the Trustees of No. 8 Egremont, what they intend to do by way of improvement."

Personal Mention.

Miss Annie McGuire, of Quebec, is visiting her aunt, Mrs. Kingston.

Miss Katy McTavish, of Syracuse, was visiting at Mr. D. McTavish's last week.

Mrs. C.F. Stewart, of Galt, is visiting at Mr. Geo. Stewart's.

W. K. Flesher, Esq., returned to England on Monday last.

Mrs. D. Munroe, Detroit, and Miss Frank Wright, Chicago, returned home on Saturday last.

Miss Laura Roland, of Durham, was a guest of M. Richardson, Esq., for a few days during the past week.

Mr. Geo. Anderson returned to the Northwest on Wednesday of last week.

Mrs. D. Blair is visiting friends in Wiarton.

J.W. Henderson, Esq., is rusticating with his family in Flesherton for a week or so.

Mr. M.F. Madden, of Chicago, who has been visiting relatives in the vicinity of Maxwell, returned home on Monday. Miss M.A. Madden accompanied him.

Mrs. Wm. J. Varley and daughter Ella, of Englewood, New Jersey, also son Richard, of Jersey City, are visiting at her brother's, Mr. Wm. Wilcox's, near Flesherton. They had not seen each other for almost twenty years.

Local Drift.

While taking a walk around the village the other day we were pleased to note the large amount of improvement which has been done during the past spring and summer. New sidewalks have been laid down, crossings made, drains dug and trees planted. If the same amount of improvement is done each year it will not be long until our town will be sufficiently handsome to place in a glass case.

Speaking of sidewalks, though, there is one which is somewhat of an eyesore to us. We refer to the one lately placed from the street up to the school grounds. It is crooked. At whose door this fault lies we do not know but we do know that it is a blemish which could easily be rectified, and ought to be.

Since the late improvements upon our school grounds they are the general admiration of the public. The grounds have been nicely terraced and sodded, and semi-circular walks placed from the new turnstile. The Flesherton school and grounds are now admitted to be the finest in the county outside of Owen Sound. When a few more minor improvements have been made, such as planting more trees and shrubs, straightening of the warped sidewalks, and terracing the northern slope, it will be a place of beauty and a "joy forever." There is nothing like symmetry around an educational establishment. It is the place where the young idea expands, and the surroundings constitute a portion of the curriculum, as well as the A. B. C., geography, grammer and other studies. Let nothing be out of proportion or deformed around the school grounds.

It is rumored that some of our sportive characters intend placing a couple of boats upon Flesher's pond. Could not something be done towards cleaning out that pretty sheet of water, such as removing stumps, etc. It might be made a very pleasant place of resort.

Sleepless nights, made miserable by that terrible cough. Shiloh's Cure is the Remedy for you. For sale at the Medical Hall.

A New Book.

Though the Johnstown Disaster occurred more than two months since, the interest of the public in so remarkable an event has not ceased to be active. H. S. Goodspeed & Co. of New York, have just issued a very complete and richly pictorial history of the event, which is a work of the deepest interest and power. No reader will care to lay aside this thrilling narrative unfinished. In the world's horrible records of evil wrought by the untamed forces of nature, few catastrophes have been more heart sickening. The fearful loss of life, the vast waste of property, the great interruption of business, destroying the complex machinery which fed so many thousands and contributed to the interests of the whole land, are hard to match. Death and ruin take a thousand shapes, but rarely have they assumed a guise so horrible as that in which they rushed down on the people of Conemaugh Valley. The record cannot fail to be of perennial interest, and to stir the hearts of all who read it for the next generation to come, for such a catastrophe, mercifully, comes but once in a century, if so often. Enough time has now elapsed to enable the proper verification of the facts to be made, and a careful and studied statement to be given to the public worthy of so startling a subject. Any hurried and hap-hazard narrative of an event which stands so unique in our history, is far from doing it even partial justice. The author has given us in this book a record both vigorous and accurate, and every reader should have the work in his hands. The book is an octavo handsomely printed and bound, and contains 522 pages, embellished with forty-nine fine full page illustrations. Agents wanted. H. S. Goodspeed & Co. pay all the duty.

That hacking cough can be so quickly cured by Shiloh's Cure. We guarantee it. For sale at the Medical Hall.

Get Married.

Every newly married couple may have The Advance as a wedding present free for six months, upon furnishing satisfactory evidence of the marriage. This is a standing offer and application must be made six months from date of marriage

For dyspepsia and liver complaint you have a printed guarantee on every bottle of Shiloh's vitalizer. It never fails to cure For sale at the Medical Hall.

NEW ADVERTISEMENTS

A Complete History of the Johnstown and CONEMAUGH VALLEY FLOOD

embracing also, a history of the floods in Williamsport, Lock Haven, Sunbury, and all the flooded districts in the State of Pennsylvania, also in Washington, D C, New York, Maryland, Virginia and West Virginia, all of which caused the total loss of over 11,000 lives and the destruction of over $40,000,000 worth of property.

By GEO. T. FERRIS, A. M.

Octavo. 522 pages; Illustrated with Forghty-Eight Full-Page Engravings. Price $1.50. First edition issued August 10th. We pay duty on all books. Agents Wanted. Send 50 cts. for complete outfit.

H. S. GOODSPEED & Co., New York.

Owen Sound COLLEGIATE ✱ INSTITUTE.

Re-Opens Monday, Aug. 26th.

The Best Equipped School in the Province.

A Staff of Seven Specialists.

RECORD, 1889.

ALL the pupils of the Institute, who tried the University Examination, were successful. Six matriculated, one taking honors in every Department. The candidates from this school at the Departmental Examinations received a larger number of Teachers' Certificates than did those of any other school in the Province. Six received first class; thirty-two, second class; and forty-six, third class. At the Art School Examinations the Students of the Institute obtained three hundred proficiency certificates—the largest number received by the pupils of any one institute. Two pupils tried the Primary Examination of the Law Society and succeeded.

For further information apply to

F. W. Merchant, PRINCIPAL. D.R. Dobie, SEC. OF BOARD.

NORTHERN BUSINESS COLLEGE.

Owen Sound, Ont.

Re-Opens on Sept. 2nd for Ninth College Year.

BUSINESS DEPARTMENT, SHORTHAND AND TYPEWRITING DEPARTMENT, AND ORNAMENTAL DEPARTMENT.

The most complete and practical College in Canada.

For Annual Announcements giving full Particulars address

C. A. Fleming, Principal.

Hub Thill Spring,

MANUFACTURED BY

Butts & Ordway,

147, Pearl St., Boston.

Pat'd Dec. 1, 1885.

Of Interest to every man who uses a Wagon or Carriage.

THIS ANTI-RATTLER IS the BEST,

Because it is effective, simple, easily adjusted, durable, inexpensive. There are no projecting ends to tear the sponge or wash cloth. It fits any size coupling.

—FOR SALE AT—

Heard's Carriage Shop

Medical.

DR. CARTER,
M.C.P. & S., ONT.
PHYSICIAN, SURGEON, &c.
FLESHERTON.

Office, Strain's block. Residence, J.G. Russell's

J. G. Hutton, M.D.C.M.

Member of the College of Physicians and Surgeons, Ontario.

Enquire at office, one door east of Grier's store or Atkinson's Hotel.

Priceville, Nov. 19, 1888.

DRS. SPROULE & EGO.

MARKDALE ONT.

Office:—Manley's Drug Store.

T.S. SPROULE, M.D., etc. ANGUS EGO, M.D., late of Tottenham, Ont.

Dr. Ego will be found at Markdale House at night.

J. P. OTTEWELL,

VETERINARY SURGEON.

Graduate of Ontario Vet. College.

RESIDENCE ON COLLINGWOOD STREET Sixth Door East of Presbyterian Church,

FLESHERTON.

Dentistry.

DENTISTRY.

Dr. Thomas Henderson,

SURGEON DENTIST

Gold Medalist and Honor Graduate of R.C.D.S.,

Will visit FLESHERTON, (Minshaw's Hotel) 1 and 2 of each month. Teeth extracted, inserted and filled in the highest styles of the art, at moderate rates.

HEAD OFFICE, 761 YONGE ST., TORONTO.

J. P. MARSHALL,

L. D. S., DENTIST.

Visits Markdale the 1st and 3rd Wednesday of each month.

Flesherton each trip on the day following

Legal.

J. W. FORST,

Barrister, Solicitor, Conveyancer, &c.

FLESHERTON OFFICE, NEXT POST OFFICE, SPROULE'S BUILDING, ON THURSDAYS.

OWEN SOUND OFFICE, FROST'S BUILDING

P. McCULLOUGH,

Barrister, Solicitor, &c.

Office, over McFarland's Store Markdale. Money to Loan.

Business Cards.

John W. Armstrong,

FLESHERTON, CO. GREY.

DIVISION COURT CLERK, COMMISSIONER, B. R., Conveyancer, &c. Agent for purchased sale of lands. Appraiser for C. L. C. Co. and F. P. B. & S. Society. Money to Loan on most reasonable terms. ISSUER OF MARRIAGE LICENSES. NOTARY PUBLIC

MONEY TO LOAN.

AT LOWEST CURRENT RATES

on Town or Farm Property,

S. DAMUDE,
Flesherton.

Mr. Wm. Karstedt,

Stone Mason, Bricklayer and Plasterer.

MATERIAL FURNISHED

Estimates given free. Ornamental Plastering a Specialty.

dence one door south of Advance Office.

W. J. BELLAMY

TWP. CLERK ARTEMESIA,

CONVEYANCER, COMMISSIONER, INSURANCE AGT &C

DEEDS, MORTGAGES, LEASES &c., prepared and properly executed. Insurance effected in first-class companies. Money to lend at lowest rates

R. J. Sproule,

POSTMASTER, Flesherton, Commissioner in B. R., Licensed Auctioneer, Conveyancer, Appraiser and Money Lender. Real Estate and Insurance Agent. Deeds, Mortgages, Leases and Wills drawn up and Valuations made on shortest notice. Auction Sales attended to in any part of the County. Money to loan at lowest rates of interest. Collections attended to with promptness and despatch. Charges low. Agent for the Dominion Steamship Company. Cheap tickets from Flesherton to Liverpool, Glasgow, London or any of the British Ports. Parties intending visit England, Scotland or Ireland, will do well to ask rates before purchasing their tickets elsewhere.

House and Lot for Sale.

A good house, opposite the Methodist Church, Flesherton, is now offered for sale. The house is large and roomy, with good stable and yard, splendid fruit trees, etc. This is the premises, a bargain. Apply

J. S. VANDUSEN, Flesherton.

Supposed Antediluvian Relics.

From The Shelburne Economist.

The little we know compared with what we don't know regarding this world and its inhabitants in all the ages since it was started on its career through space has been most startlingly illustrated during the past few days. "Have you seen the bones?" That has been the all-important question asked by everybody of his or her neighbor since last Thursday morning, when Mr. John Jelly arrived in Shelburne bringing with him a portion of the remains of an animal that is supposed to have existed before the flood.

To commence our story properly we shall have to go back about one year. Last summer Mr. W.B. Jelly, of Bowling Green, ex-Reeve of Amaranth, was engaged in scooping out a watering place for his cattle in a wet piece of land on the south-east quarter of Lot No. 9, Con. 7, of the above-named township, when he came upon a couple of large ribs. Somewhat startled at the discovery, he made up his mind to make a further search for other remains the following day, but the weather set in very wet, water filled up the hole, and further investigation was postponed. A few weeks ago Mr. John Jelly, of Shelburne, while paying Mr. W. B. Jelly a visit, had these ribs exhibited to him, and his curosity being aroused, he, in company with Mr. David Hoey and Mr. John Anderson, both of this place, set out on Monday the 12th inst., to join Mr. W. B. Jelly in resuming the search. Arriving at the place, water was still found to occupy the hole—in fact it had never gone dry from the day of its excavation—and it was with considerable difficulty that they got to work. Filling some old sacks with earth, a small dam was constructed and the water dipped out of the hole and thrown behind the dam. They had not been at work very long when they came upon other bones—ribs, portions of the backbone, &c. But the most important find was made on Tuesday, when the men at work came upon what they at first supposed was a log of petrified wood, but which, after the earth had been removed from it, proved to be a mammoth horn or tusk, eight inches in diameter at the butt and 12 feet 8 inches in length. As there is a piece decayed or broken off the tip, that must have been at least, eighteen inches long, the complete horn or tusk must have been

OVER FOURTEEN FEET IN LENGTH!

Unfortunally this enormous thing was found to be cracked or broken in three pieces and had to be lifted out in sections. An idea of the weight can be had from the fact that the middle piece, measuring about eight feet in length, gave two men all they wanted to do to lift it out of the place in which it was found.

Notwithstanding the rain on Tuesday and Wednesday the search was continued, and the citizens of Shelburne were only informed of the discovery by the arrival of Mr. John Jelly on Thursday morning with a portion of the remains as above stated. In the afternoon the editor of The Economist accompanied Mr. Jelly back to the place, when the men were found to be still at work, occasionally unearthing a rib, vertebra, or some other part of the long extinct monster. The main object of search now seemed to be the other horn or tusk, the jaw-bones and teeth, or some of the leg bones, but up to the time of quitting work Thursday evening none of these had been found.

No doubt our readers would like to know the nature of the soil in which these bones have been so well preserved. The place was a black ash swamp a few years ago, but was cleared up and burnt over. The top soil is a black muck, varying from two to three feet in depth. Below this is a bed of white marl from three to four feet in depth, and below this again is a bed of hard black sand. In the marl were to be seen of various shapes, and it was in this marl that the bones were found.

THOUSANDS OF SMALL SHELLS

Although the men quit work Thursday evening the search is not to be given up. They will return in a day or two, and, with better appliances, will no doubt find more of the remains. The bones appear to be greatly scattered, and a considerable area may have to be gone over, but the matter is in the right hands to secure a successful prosecution. The teeth, if found, will weigh from six to eight pounds each. The writer has seen similiar remains that were found near Dunnville some years ago, but the horn or tusk and the bones were not so well preserved as are these, although in the first-named collection the jaw-bones and teeth were in a remarkable good state of preservation. Mr. W.B. Jelly had also seen the remains found near Dunnville, and they were instantly brought to mind through this discovery.

Archæologists in various parts of the Dominion have interested themselves in this important addition to the relics of antiquities. Last Saturday evening Mr. A.S. Cochrane, of the Geological Survey, Ottawa, came here on the strength of a telegram received at the capital and inspected the remains. He was highly pleased with his visit. Mr. Cochrane has been making an examination of the marl beds at Shallow Lake, near Hepworth, and says they have a good thing there. The department will issue a geological map of the north-western part of this province next winter.

Tuesday evening, Mr. C.A. Hirschfelder, the U.S. Consul at Toronto, and a gentlemen who has collected many valuable specimens and makes archæology a special study, arrived in Shelburne and spent considerable time inspecting the remains. He also was greatly interested in them and says they are no doubt the remains of an animal that stood about twenty feet high—either a mammoth or mastodon. Mr. Hirschfelder is a son of Prof. Hirschfelder, teacher of the Hebrew and Chaldean languages in Toronto University.

The Messrs. Jelly expect to exhibit the remains at the coming fall fair in Shelburne.

General News.

The Viceregal party will not return to Ottawa, until November.

Fifteen prisoners are in the Tombs at New York awaiting trial for murder.

Mrs. Charboneau and Mrs. Richardson, of Kingston, sisters, have had a fortune of $30,000 left them.

Barnum's circus train was wrecked near Watertown, N.Y., Friday, and many of the ring horses were killed.

The last day of the Hamilton carnival passed off as successfully as the preceding days, and the whole erterprise has been an immense triumph.

The three-year old son of John Love, of Port Arthur, has been missing some days, and there is an awful fear that he may have been carried off by bears.

Mr. E.F.R. Zoellner, the furniture manufacturer of Owen Sound, gave a picnic to his employes Friday evening, which was attended by about 3,000 people.

As a Lake Shore freight pulled into the yard at Erie, Pa., yesterday, the engine left the track, and the oil tank exploded, destroying the engine and $50,000 worth of property.

On August 28 there will be direct cable connection with the Old Country through Canadian territory, connections having been made at New Glasgow, N.S., between the Bennett-Mackay cable and the C.P.R. telegraph lines.

Mickel Dyment & sons' No. 1 sawmill was burned at Gravenhurst on Saturday night.

The Pope is reported to be in very poor health and speculation as to his successor is largely indulged in.

The cost of the projected cable line from San Francisco to New Zealand, via the Sandwich Islands, is estimated at $10,000,000.

The war in Hayti is over, and Hyppolite, the revolutionary leader, is victorious.

John Lynch, a New York cobbler, on Saturday shot his wife to make her keep sober.

Graham, the barrel boat navigator of the Niagara, took another trip through the rapids Sunday.

Mail advices from Hong Kong and Yokohama show that great numbers of people have suffered death from floods and earth-quakes.

Schooners arriving at Victoria and Port Townsend report the sizure of several more Canadian sealing vessels by the United States revenue cutters. Some of the seized sealers have been towed to Dunalaska by the Rush.

Advices tell of another terrible flood in China by the bursting of the Yellow River.

A barge ran down a rowboat on the Ottawa River and a man and woman were drowned.

There is a $900,000 estate in Philadelphia which heirs in Kingston expect to prove their claim to.

The Cincinnati and Brooklyn baseball teams began a game at Hamilton, Ohio, Sunday, and had reached the fourth innings when eighteen policemen came on the diamond and arrested all the players, who were at once brought before the mayor and fined $8.35 each. The Cincinnati management paid the fines of all.

COUNTY & DISTRICT.

Prat. Ceasor, Massie, had a rib and hip bone broken by a kick from a horse.

James Anderson, a Mono farmer, committed suicide on Saturday by hanging himself.

Mr. Jos. A. Donovan, barrister, Toronto, and Rev. Mr. Burnitt, of Alliston, were badly lacerated by a dog belonging to a Mrs. Rowe, near Delphi.

Edward Patchell, who lives about one mile from Keswick, Ont., committed suicide Friday night by cutting his throat with a razor. He was about 80 yeas old.

A little Beeton girl prayed as follows the other evening: "And now, dear God, bless papa, mamma, and me, and goodbye, for to-morrow we are going to Tottenham."—[World.

School opened on Monday, and judging from the screams which occasionally rend the school house atmosphere, we should say the physical strength of the teachers had been largely augmented by their holiday outing.—[Chatsworth News.

A despatch from Owen Sound says that the new steamship Manitoba, of the C.P.R. fleet, made a trial trip this afternoon, in which she showed herself to be far superior to her sister ships, the Athabasca and Alberta.

Mr. James Russell, of Midhurst, had the misfortune on Saturday last to lose his barn and outbuildings by fire. The yield of about 35 acres of fall wheat, along with other crops, were stored in the barn and burned. The loss is supposed to be about $3,000, with insurance $1,300.

A telegram from Owen Sound dated Aug. 23 says: This evening at about nine o'clock a lad named Robert John Chesley, aged about 15 years, living near the Polson yards, while putting a revolver together was accidentally shot, the ball entering the region of the heart. Death was almost instantaneous.

Elizabeth Morgan, colored, the oldest inhabitant in this county, died last week at her residence near New Lowell aged 116 yrs. Her parents were Africans captured by slave dealers about 200 years ago. Their freedom was purchased after many years of slavery, and in 1773 at Philidelphia, the deceased was born a free woman. In 1824 she and her husband removed to Canada, when 40 years have been spent in the adjoining township of Sunnidale. Her husband died 16 yrs. ago aged 101 and the remainder of the family are well up in years and past the allotted time of life.—[Creemore Star.

On Sunday afternoon, about one o'clock, the barn and stables of Mr. Nathaniel Thompson, on the fourth line Mono, were discovered to be on fire. Mr. Thompson got to the burning buildings just in time to save his little boy's life. The child had set fire to the building and was still in the barn, unable to get out. The barn was full of grain, also a stack outside and a large quantity of hay. A valuable horse was also burned, together with all his farming implements, wagon, separator and mowers, drill, plow, etc. Mr. Thompson was insured for $600. His loss will be about the value of his crop.

Senator John Macdonald has been to Alaska and in an interview in Winnipeg speaks highly of the Mackenzie Basin and the Northwest generally.

The American Government are demanding that the officers on United States steamers shall be natives of the United States, and there is a commotion on the St. Lawrence.

Eugenia

From our own Correspondent.

Mr. Clemes returned to his vocation and school re-opened after the holidays, on Monday 19th. with an attendance of about thirty-five. During the vacation the trustees had a new floor put in and other repairs made.

On Monday as Mr. Solomon Turner was engaged drawing in peas and while in the act of reaching for the lines, he overbalanced himself and as the wagon was going down hill he fell forward on the horses, this frightened the animals and they ran away. Mr. Turner was shook beneath the wagon, which had quite a load on, and fell on his face the front wheel passing over his shoulders, and the hind wheel struck his head making a severe cut. He was taken to the house and after the wounds were dressed he felt much better. The horses ran for some distance till they came to a hill and were easily stopped, and no further damage was done.

Priceville.

From our own Correspondent.

Fine dry weather.

The farmers are busy in their fields.

Some fine samples of wheat have been brought in, but the majority of fields are injured more or less by rust.

The barley is nearly all saved and will be a good sample.

Mr. Alex. Brown and Miss Brown, who have been in Europe, are expected to arrive home in a few days.

Master Willie Irwin has been home on a visit to his friends.

Mr. W. Watson, sr., and his mother are visiting friends in Georgetown and elsewhere.

Mrs. D. McKinnon has been very ill for some time.

Mr. John McGowan and bride returned on Saturday evening from their wedding trip to Niagara and other places of interest.

Messrs. T. Patton, W. Watson, jr., and others have caught some very fine trout during the past week.

English and American Tailors.

For several days (says the New York Star) a neatly dressed, urbane gentleman, with an English accent and a large number of trunks, has been stopping at a Fifth Avenue hotel, where he has luxurious quarters and a good many visitors. Very few people know what his business is or anything about him, further than that he appears periodically in the spring and fall of the year, pays his bill, and departs for Europe. He is agent for a fashionable tailoring establishment in London. So soon as he arrives in New York with his samples of goods he notifies some fifty or one hundred old customers, who live in New York or near by, that he is ready to call at their houses and take measurements, first sending for their inspection a large bundle of samples of his goods. After a couple of weeks in New York, the quiet gentleman takes passage for London, and in three or four weeks more the clothes begin to arrive, are assessed at the custom House, the duty paid, and then delivered to their owners. There are many hundred men in New York who buy all their clothes in London, and others in different parts of the country, and they say that English-made clothes do not cost any more than if made in the United States, after the duty is paid, and are, in fact, cheaper in some instances, while they possess all the advantages of London clothes, whatever those may be.

You can always tell an American who has just returned from Europe by the cut of his coat. No matter what else he may or may not buy while he is in Europe, our fellow countryman always makes it a point to lay in a supply of clothes when he reaches London. They always seem to be so very much cheaper there. You go about among the shops "pricing" things, and you find an English tailor charging twenty-five dollars for a suit of clothes for which a New York tailor would charge fifty dollars, using the same material. The same difference is observed in the price of nearly every article of clothing—overcoats, hats, gloves, shirts, flannels, etc.—and the temptation to buy is too strong to be resisted. One thing which always astonishes the American who orders clothes in London is the tremendous rapidity with which they are made. You have your measure taken in the morning, and a pair of trousers is delivered at your hotel before dinner time. Two or three suits can be made in twenty-four hours, and an overcoat in a day and a half. It would almost seem as if the various parts of the garments flew together, and in some tailoring establishments they actually advertise to make clothes "while you wait."

A Baseball Romance.

She was a baseball enthusiast, and he was a professional ball player

It was midnight; and as they sat together on the steps of the front porch, he gradually edged nearer to his fair companion, just as one is instinctively drawn toward a newly painted fence.

"Will you tell me the difference between an 'in-curve' and an 'out-curve'? I always get them mixed," she said.

"Well this is an in-curve," he gently murmured, as his left arm stole around her slender waist.

She "got on to it."

But there was some one else who "got on to it" as well.

It was the old man, who softly whispered as he took up his position in the bay window, "I guess I'll umpire this game."

Fifteen short minutes passed and the old gentleman became restless. "I think I'll play short stop," he muttered, and as he made for the door the maiden saw him.

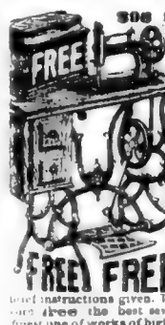
"Slide—you've got to slide," she cried frantically to her terrified lover.

But it was too late, for the old man got in a base hit with the toe of his boot, and as the anguish-stricken young man vanished in the twilight the short stop chuckled, "I guess that will be a home run. I'll go in now and make Juliet give him his release!"—Grip.

Fall Shows.

Following is a list of the dates of fall fairs in this vicinity:

NAME.	PLACE.	DATE.
East Grey	Flesherton	Sept. 23 and 24
Artemesia	Priceville	Oct. 3rd.
Glenelg	Markdale	26 and 27
South Grey	Durham	Sept. 24 and 25
Great Northern	Collingwood	Sept. 25 to 27
Central Ag'l Soc'ty.	Walters Falls	Sept. 24 and 25
Industrial	Toronto	Sept. 9 to 21



$80 Sewing-Machine FREE

To at once establish trade in all parts, by placing our machines and goods where the people can see them, we will send free to one person in each locality, the very best sewing-machine made in the world, with all the attachments. We will also send free a complete line of our costly and valuable art samples. In return we ask that you show what we send, to those who may call at your home, and after 3 months all shall become your own property. This grand machine is made after the Singer patents, which have run out: before patents run out it sold for $40; now sells for $50. Best, strongest, most useful machine in the world. All is free. No capital required. Plain, brief instructions given. Those who write to us at once can secure free the best sewing-machine in the world, and the finest line of works of high art ever shown together in America. TRUE & CO., Box 740, Augusta, Maine.

REMOVAL

I desire to inform the public that I have removed my well known tin shop to

MOORE'S Block, Durham St.

A complete stock of tinware will be found in my new premises.

REPAIRING EAVETROUGHING E dons as heretofore.

I have secured the agency for the Celebrated Singer Sewing Machine

Requesting my old friends to come and see me in my new shop I remain etc.,

JAS. SULLIVAN.

D. McTavish,

HORSESHOER AND GENERAL BLACKSMITH,

Collingwood Street,

FLESHERTON, - ONT.

Manufacturing of Wagons, Sleighs, Buggies Democrats, etc. Horseshoeing promptly attended to. Special attention given to contracted or tender feet

Logging and Plow Chains constantly on hand.

The Most Successful Remedy ever discovered, as it is certain in its effects and does not blister. Read proof below.

STREETSVILLE, P. Q., May 8, 1889.

DR. B. J. KENDALL CO., Enosburgh Falls, Vt.

Gentlemen.—I have used Kendall's Spavin Cure for Spavins and also in a case of lameness and Stiff Joints and found it a sure cure in every respect. I cordially recommend it to all horsemen.

Very respectfully yours, CHARLES J BLACKALL.

KENDALL'S SPAVIN CURE.

ST. THOMAS, P. Q., April 22, 1889.

DR. B. J. KENDALL CO., Enosburgh Falls, Vt.

Gents:—I have used a few bottles of your Kendall's Spavin Cure on my colt, which was suffering from Influenza in a very bad form, and can say that your Kendall's Spavin Cure made complete and rapid cure. I can recommend it as the best and most effective liniment I have ever handled. Kindly send me one of your valuable books entitled "A Treatise on the Horse." Yours respectfully, I. F. WILKINSON.

KENDALL'S SPAVIN CURE.

FORT ELLICE, MAN., May 10, 1889.

DR. B. J. KENDALL CO., Enosburgh Falls, Vt.

Gentlemen:—I always keep your Kendall's Spavin Cure and Blister on hand and they have never failed in what you state they will do. I have cured a bad case of Spavin and also two cases of Ringbone of years standing, on mares which I bought to breed from, and have not seen any signs of disease in their offspring. Yours truly, D. J. O'KEEFFE.

Price $1 per bottle, or six bottles for $5. All druggists have it or can get it for you, or it will be sent to any address on receipt of price by the proprietors.

DR. B. J. KENDALL CO., Enosburgh Falls, Vt.

SOLD BY ALL DRUGGISTS.

Modern Love.

'Twas only a week ago to-night,
You said "good-bye" at the garden gate.
The wind breathed a laugh to the poplar leaves,
And a nightingale sang of love to its mate.

The fireflies gleamed through the meadow dark,
Where the river ran gaily to meet the sea,
And every word was a sweet caress,
Ere you said "good night" at the gate to me.

You spoke of life "as a problem dread,"
And breathed a sigh for your lonely lot,
Then begged a pansy from my hair,
And a sprig of blue forget me-not.

You said, 'twas so bad to live unloved—
That love was love, forever and aye!
And implied, you never could love but one;
Your heart would break if I said you nay.

You spoke so long of men and books,
That mine eyes grew dim, and brain did reel
As you quoted of Tennyson many a page,
And asked "if I didn't dote on 'Lucille'"

'Twas only a week, and yet to-night
I sit alone in the shadows drear,
As the moon creeps over the poplar trees,
And list for a step which I seldom hear.

But soon a voice—and two shadows pass,
When I hear once more an old refrain—
He is quoting "Lucille" and "Locksley Hall,
To my pretty neighbor down in the lane.

The City of David To-day.

The town is as compact to-day as it was when David thrummed upon his harp and the tribes not only of Palestine but of all the world came here to worship. There are magnificent monasteries scattered throughout the city, and on the very top of the Mount of Olives a great Russian church lifts its bulbous domes toward heaven. In the Garden of Gethsemane, where Christ spent the night before he was crucified, there is a resting place for pilgrims, and the Roman Catholics have 1,500 brothers and sisters in their monasteries and convents, while the old Armenian Church has a big monastery near the gate of Zion which contains 180 monks and which can accommodate 2,000 pilgrims. There are Greek Christians here by the thousands and there are Syrians and Copts by the hundreds. There are Abyssinian priests with faces as black as your hat, and you may see every costume and hear every language in the worshippers who gather around the holy sepulchre. The Jerusalem of to-day is the Mecca of millions of souls. It is to hundreds of millions the holiest spot on the face of the earth. And among the others whom I have met in Palestine is the party of American Roman Catholics, the first pilgrimage which has ever been made to the holy city by a band from the United States. It is, above all, a religious city, and, stranger than all, it is again becoming a city of the Jews. The Jews are fast coming back into Palestine, and the Jews of Jerusalem, who now make up a large part of the city, are far different from their brothers in any other part of the world. Their movement toward the holy land is strange, and their life here is so interesting that I have made it the subject of investigation.—F. G. Carpenter's Jerusalem Letter in the Post-Dispatch.

Night Terrors in Children.

Mentally active children of high strung nervous system occasionally suffer from what are termed "night terrors." These paroxysms come on suddenly during sleep, the victim starting up, crying or screaming, and exhibiting other signs of great terror. Such attacks are often quite obstinate, and it generally takes some time to fully awaken the sufferer and bring him to the realization of where he is, and that he is in no danger. The paroxysms in some cases come every few nights for quite a long time, and naturally occasion the parents much annoyance, if not intense disgust, after they know their character. They treat the unfortunate with consideration at first, but are extremely likely before long to show a good deal of temper and impatience if, as they term them, the "crazy spells" are of frequent occurrence. The victim of such attacks is in no wise to blame, and to use harsh measures would be simply inhuman, and add to his terror. Kind and reasoning words are what is needed at such times. If several attacks have occurred it is safe to assume that medical treatment is necessary, and a physician should be consulted. —Ex.

A Polish Election Dodge.

At an election in Poland the other day a smart young candidate tried a manœuvre which almost deserved to succeed for its ingenuity. Nearly all the peasants were against him, and the problem was how to prevent them from voting. The interval is very short between the time when they leave off work and the closing of the polls, so that at the last half hour a great crowd was waiting. Suddenly there was a cry of "Fire" and a rattling of engines. But the ruse did not succeed, the stolid countrymen first waiting to record their vote, and then hurrying off to discuss the conflagration.—London Globe.

Desecration of Sunday in England

The battle against desecration of Sunday continues to rage furiously in England. The Sunday observance societies have attacked the cheap excursion systems of the Brighton Railways, which allows the poorer classes to spend Sunday at the seaside. They have even got a large number of the shareholders of the road to sign a petition against the system.

R. A. Gunn, M.D., Dean and Professor of Surgery, of the United States Medical College; Editor of "Medical Tribune," Author of "Gunn's New and Improved Hand-book of Hygiene and Domestic Medicine," referring to Warner's Safe Cure, said: "I find that in Bright's disease it seems to act as a solvent of albumen; to soothe and heal the inflamed membranes, and wash out epithelial debris which blocks up the tubuli uriniferi (urine bearing tubes); and to prevent the destructive metamorpeosis of tissue. * * * I am willing to acknowledge and commend thus frankly the value of Warner's Safe Cure.

A Real Necessity.

Committeeman—Before engaging you for our pastorate we should like to know if you can preach without notes.

Pastor—No, sir. Bank notes are a necessity with me.

Ada—So you have been to see your husband's friends, have you, Lulu? And how did you like his mother? Lulu—Oh! ever so much, Ada; she made me feel so much at home. Why, in less than 24 hours after I arrived there she had me in the kitchen wiping dishes.

THE FACILE PENCIL.

Shorthand as a Profession Very Much Overcrowded.

FEW REMUNERATIVE POSITIONS.

Some Well Paid Writers—The Various Systems—Lady Stenographers—Some Advice to Students.

In this age of hurry and rush it is but natural that shorthand should receive considerable attention. The saving in time which it effects for those whose time is very valuable, to say nothing of the facilities it affords for securing the words of public speakers or the evidence of witnesses, justifies placing it nigh up in the educational curriculum. But just now, I fancy, it is being rather run into the ground. When men are found who actually advertise over their own signatures for "competent stenographers" at a salary of nine dollars a week, there is required no further evidence of a glut in the stenographer market than the fact that such positions are regarded as "snaps." Not, of course, by "competent" stenographers, in the correct sense; but as they go they fill the places and cut down the figures paid really expert men (who are not plentiful) and drive them out of the business.

Perhaps you are thinking of studying some system of shorthand, and if so I would not discourage you. There are very few people now-a-days to whom a knowledge of shorthand—even if not very thorough—would not prove useful, if practice be maintained. But if you purpose depending on the use of the knowledge of shorthand you expect to gain to make a living a few friendly hints to enable you to take stock of the prospect, uninfluenced by some school prospectus, may be much to your advantage.

The "fat" situations for shorthand writers are confined chiefly to the official reporters of the Houses of Parliament, the courts, a few leading railway offices, and fewer of the larger newspaper offices. Inside of this charmed circle the remuneration is good. Murphy, chief of staff at the United States Capitol, is the best paid United States officer below the President, and receives the somewhat princely salary of $25,000 a year and perquisites. On his shoulders rests the entire responsibility of the work of the Congressional Record and the Senatorial Debates. He has under him a staff of 20 to 25 of the best reporters he can find; and he can size up a pencil pusher very quickly. He is a phenomenal man and an expert writer of the Graham modification of Pitman's system, known as Standard Phonography. Some very large sized stories are told of his work and, as all stenographers of experience know, many of them will stand being very heavily discounted. At Ottawa the Hansard reporters receive $1,500 a year; and there are some of our reporters of the High Court of Justice who receive as much and augment that figure considerably by transcripts. They receive either a stated salary per annum or a per diem allowance for attendance, with ten cents per folio of 100 words for copies of the evidence when required. When they get a long case where two to four copies are required, and can be manifolded on the typewriter, they have a soft snap. Two of our best known and most competent court reporters in Ontario are Mr. Nelson Butcher and Mr. A. J. Henderson, Toronto, to either of whom an all-day take offers no terrors.

Outside of the positions above referred to, and which require not only rapidity on the part of the writer but also a broad education and general acquaintance with the particular line of work entered upon, there are other openings for the aspirant to stenography, chiefly as amanuenses. The salaries are not usually large, and the rapid influx of women into the field has tended to still lower rates, until to-day she is practically master, or rather mistress, of the situation. It is an occupation for which women are well adapted, and when with fair education and moderate speed she combines the use of the typewriter, such a situation affords a young woman a clean, dignified and pleasant means of livelihood. The field of amanuensis work promises to become, as a rule, more and more a woman's preserve. If you are going to study with the view to entering that field you must expect her to fix your salary.

But there are many ways in which the accomplishment will prove beneficial to you indirectly, that is, other than as a main reliance. If you enter the ministry it will bless you daily; if you study law it will be your junior counsel always and aid you in a hundred ways; if you follow medicine it will save you much valuable time and be the means of preserving full and interesting notes which would, did you lack it, never be taken. If you are a newspaper man it will prove daily useful. If you are in business at all it will save you time, and time is money. But what I am trying to impress upon you is that as a means of livelihood—as a profession—it is a bruised reed.

What system should you learn? Well, that is a question upon which there is, naturally, much divergence of opinion, and I do not feel called upon to become arbiter. I have had some experience, and while I feel quite convinced that I write (indifferently, of course) the best system I must admit I have met writers of other systems who did good work. In general, practical reporters in Canada write either Pitman's system or Graham's, which is known as Standard Phonography and which is based on the same general principles as Pitman's. In Washington I found the great majority of those who occupied official positions wrote the Standard, while not one, during my term there, wrote other than Pitman's or Graham's. With either great speed is attainable. On August 22nd of last year a great speed test took place at Lake George, N. Y., before a committee of judges and under stringent rules. Three of the parties entering for the $500 in prizes wrote the Graham system and one the Munson system. The test was a five-minute "take" of strange matter, read by a copy-holder to each contestant, after a synopsis of the matter had been previously read to him. Each had three tests. The most favorable in each was then copied, counted, errors deducted and the prizes awarded. The committee awarded Mr. I. S. Dement, Chicago, 1st, (1,252 words) and Mr. Fred. Ireland, Detroit, 2nd, (1,202 words). Both gentlemen are official stenographers in constant practice, and both write the Graham system. Mr. Nicholes, who wrote the Munson system, failed to decipher his notes. I understand Mr. Ireland has since beaten his performance. This is, however, not ordinary work; it is phenomonal. Few write over 150 words per minute, and a speed of 120 is more common, even among fair shorthanders. The amount of matter taken down in a few hours at that speed would astonish the uninitiated.

And don't be misled by promises to turn you out a skilled shorthand reporter in three months. That is pure deception. You can no more be turned out a reporter in that time than you could be turned out a chemist, a physician or a lawyer. True, you can learn the principles of the art, but the acquisition of speed, the thousand and one things necessary to qualify you as an expert all-round, or even special, reporter must be a matter of much patient study and cultivation. You may set it down as a basic principle that you can only report what you know. Perhaps you have read some of the tall stories with which waggish fellows stuff the credulous, such as that whopper about the stenographer taking a verbatim report of a speech in a foreign tongue, of which he knew not a word; about Murphy reporting ambidexterously and taking two, or even three, speakers at a time. That is all very picturesque fiction. But to report you must comprehend. It is related of a member of the English Commons that he almost had a fit when he read his speech as taken by a rapid (but not expert) reporter, in which his

In heaven yclept Euphrosyne was rendered:

In heaven she crept and froze her knee.

The merely mechanical reporter will never become expert. To be a success the reporter must be an omniverous reader, a close student of men and things, a man of good reasoning powers and above all of instant and unerring decision. Possessed of these qualifications, with a special aptness for the particular branch in which his services are engaged, unremitting study and devotion to his work should win for him the not too munificent remuneration good positions in this overcrowded profession yield. Masquette.

The People Like It.

The precedent set by the marriage of the Princess Louise to the Marquis of Lorne scarcely stirred the same feelings, for it was not so important. The illustrious lady at the time of her wedding, if our memory does not mislead us, stood only twenty-sixth in the order of succession. But the death of the venerable Queen and the accession of the Prince of Wales to the throne elevate the Duchess of Fife to a distinct civic status in the eyes of the law as Princess Royal of England. At this very moment, indeed, she stands third after the heir-apparent in the succession to the throne. That she has, in such circumstances, been permitted to wed out of the royal caste, and to select a husband, not from a minor Tectonic "dukery," if we may venture to appropriate a favorite phrase of Lord Beaconsfield's, but from the ranks of the English nobility, is to the English people a fact of no ordinary significance. It is a sign that in the highest quarters there is some desire to break the tradition perpetuated since the time of George II., that it is necessary to keep the Royal Family of England, or rather those of them who are near the succession, exclusively German. The outburst of popular congratulation with which Her Royal Highness' marriage was hailed on Saturday all over the Empire may be taken as showing that Englishmen are well pleased to find that this tradition is no longer to be held as sacrosanct. Perhaps it may be even taken as confirming the view of the shrewd historian, who held that Englishmen always in their heart of hearts hated the Royal Marriage Act as a thing offensive to their insular pride and prejudices, and that they only tolerated it when it was passed because they did not want to see Mrs. Fitzherbert Queen of England.—London Daily Chronicle.

A Surplus of Widows.

It appears from the last statistical returns that there are about 1,000,000 more women than men in England, and many of these are widows. This is a very surprising discovery. It may be explained, however. In England, as in all old settled countries, women predominate numerically over men, partly in consequence of the superior vitality of girl babies over boy babies; partly because of the large number of young men who go abroad. In England, widows are addicted to the practice of marrying again. How, then, does it come that the number of widows so largely predominates over that of widowers? The explanation is that there are more old men who marry young women than there are young men who marry old women. A large class of men postpone matrimony until late in life. They enjoy the desolate freedom of the bachelor; they are afraid of marrying on scanty means; they dread the loss of their freedom; they have never met the right girl. Thus they only resort to matrimony when they find they absolutely need female companionship. Such middle-aged men usually marry women of 25, or, at any rate, women under 30. It is obvious that, all other things being equal, the chances are that a woman of 25 will outlive a man of 45. The average life of men in easy circumstances is not over 60 years. If the husband dies at 60, the wife, if she is married at 25, will be 40 at the time of his death, and she will have a fair prospect of twenty years' more life. Hence the surplus of widows.

A Physical Demonstration.

Inquirer—How does your protracted meeting prosper, pastor?

Parson—Oh, very well. There's a great wakening at the close of every sermon.

—"Where are we going now?" said the prisoner, as the guard loaded him into the Black Maria. "You're going to the Police Court," was the reply. "Ah, I see; we are merely out for a trial trip."

A volume of the poems of Frederic Tennyson, eldest brother of the poet laureate, is among the reprints in contemplation in London. They have become difficult to procure.

THUMB AUTOGRAPHS.

A Novel Method of Identifying Criminals.

Two men of science in two different countries—Francis Galton in England and M. Bertillon in France—have lately recommended a means of identification which policemen and detectives, with all their ingenuity, seem never to have employed. These gentlemen have observed that the human thumb dipped in ink, in blood, in black lead or in any other loose, adhering substance, and pressed upon a sheet of paper, leaves a mark which is perfectly characteristic of the individual. Mr. Galton has remarked that no two persons' thumbs make the same mark; the lines and depressions in the skin, which make a series of wave lines when pressed upon paper, are never the same in two different individuals. It is urged that this fact would be of very great value in the administration of justice, because a criminal's thumb mark would be a sure means of identifying him, no matter what disguise he might assume. If a business man wishes to make use of a signature which is quite impossible to forge or counterfeit, he has only to dip his thumb in his ink bottle and make a mark with it in connection with his written name. No other thumb will make the same mark, and it would be practically impossible for anyone to imitate this new kind of "autograph" with a pen or other mechanical means.

"In testimony whereof I hereunto set my hand and thumb," the new form of subscription may some time in the future, run, the seal having by that time perhaps completely gone out of use, as it has now except on official documents and with fashionable letter writers. The experiment with the thumb mark may be made by any one who will take a knife blade, hold it over a lamp until it is black with smoke, allow it to cool, apply the thumb to the black surface, and then press it lightly upon a slightly sticky bit of paper, such as the back of a postage stamp. Examined with a magnifying glass, the differences in the thumb marks of different individuals come out very strongly. According to Mr. Galton, thumbs run in family groups, dividing themselves, as it were, into seven or eight distinct types or grand divisions; but within these divisions the differences are so marked as to leave no chance for confusion.—New York Press.

The Homeless in France.

No such institution as our English workhouse exists in France, the only shelter offered those unfortunate members of the human family who find themselves houseless and penniless being the night asylums, which, though admirable institutions in their way, are kept up by private charity, and can receive but a very limited number of the applicants who crowd round the doors both winter and summer. That the absence of workhouses in France does not, however, imply much greater prosperity or thrift than in England is proved by a statement recently made in the Chamber of Deputies by the member for Indre-et-Loire, who informed the Minister of the Interior that in one commune of his department reckoning 6,000 inhabitants, no fewer than 1,400 vagrants had been known to present themselves for alms in a single day. This instance was adduced as an example of the great increase in the number of vagabonds, due presumably, as M. Constans observed, to the hard times experienced by many of the working classes during the past few years. It may be added that to put down vagabondage in France is not easy, offenders of this class only being liable to prosecution in the event of their having neither domicile, nor profession, nor recognized trade—three conditions that are rarely met with together. —London Standard.

What is Beauty?

A young gentleman, describing a young girl to some of his friends, said that she was beautiful. They naturally expected to see some radiant creature with whom they would be instantly charmed. This, however, was not the case, for they found the girl extremely plain, and a laugh was indulged in at the young man's expense. But in a very short time his friends found that they had laughed too soon. The young lady was one of a large pleasure party which went off on a week's outing; and when the party returned, there was not one among them who did not think her beautiful. It was she who had responded most quickly to the requests of her elders, rendering sweet service in a charming way which can be better understood by the delighted recipient than by any pen-picture, however vivid. It was she who had run with gentle helpfulness to the rescue of every troubled child, she who had given up her seat to an older and a more wearied person, with a tact not always shown even by kindly disposed persons. In fact, she had unostentatiously done the countless loving little acts which stamp the doer as a follower of the "One altogether lovely." —Presbyterian.

—Printers' types are not quarrelsome, as a general thing, but we have seen a quadrangle.

—In character, in manner, in style, in all things the supreme excellency is in simplicity.

—The wages of sin may be death, but pay day frequently comes so late the good effect is lost.

HIS MISTAKE.

There was music in the parlor,
Sweet airs were softly played,
And a lurking lover whispered,
"It is my own dear maid."

Then he stealthily approached her,
With one arm around her waist,
A kiss of long drawn sweetness,
Upon her lips he placed.

And a voice in smothered accents
Remarked with humor vicious;
"My daughter is in the kitchen Washing the supper dishes."

Professor James Thomsen has resigned the chair of Civil Engineering and Mechanics in the University of Glasgow.

A process has been invented by means of which photographs can be printed almost as fast as a newspaper, and without dependence on sun or light. They are said to be of the first quality. That, of course, would make photographs much cheaper.

Preparations are already being made in several German university towns to celebrate next year the 300th anniversity of the invention of the microscope. Zacharias Janssen, of Middleburg put together the first microscope in 1590.

BEACONSFIELD'S PRIMROSE.

How the Modest Blossom Became His Favorite Flower.

Lord Beaconsfield's fondness for the primrose originated when he was living in Highbury, London. Here he was much attached to a young lady residing in the same locality, who was the daughter of a gentleman of good property. At a ball given at that gentleman's house the young lady in question wore a wreath of primroses. A discussion arose between Mr. Disraeli and another gentleman as to whether the primroses were real or not. A bet of a pair of gloves was made, and on the young lady being consulted, and the primroses being examined, the bet was won by Mr. Disraeli. The primroses were real primroses and the young lady gave two of them to the future Prime Minister, which he put in his buttonhole and kept and used to show long afterward. Some have thought that because the Queen sent a wreath of primroses to Lord Beaconsfield's funeral the flower became his badge in that way. This is a mere invention. The Queen did not know at the time that the primrose was Lord Beaconsfield's favorite flower, and she did not, consequently, send a wreath of primroses to his funeral at all. Others have entertained the opinion that the noble lord appreciated the flower because he says in one of his novels that the primrose makes an excellent salad. This is incorrect again, and the true history of the way the primrose became the noble lord's favorite flower is recorded above.—Washington Press.

The Belles of Bethlehem.

There is a market inside the Jaffa gate and I can see it just under me as I write. Great piles of oranges and lemons lie upon the flag sidewalk, and there are scores of women with baskets of vegetables before them. Many of these are from Bethlehem, and the Bethlehem girls are the prettiest you see in Jerusalem. They have straight, well-rounded forms, which they clothe in a long linen dress of white, beautifully embroidered in silk, so that a single gown requires many months of work. This dress is much like an American woman's night gown without the frills and laces. It falls from the neck to the feet and is open at the front of the neck in a narrow slit as far down as a modest decollete fashionable dress. Over this they have sleeveless cloaks of dark red stripes and their heads are covered with long shawls of linen beautifully embroidered. Just above her forehead each girl carries her dowry in the shape of a wreath-like strip of silver coins which stand on end fastened to a string, and crown the forehead with money. Some of the girls have several rows of these coins and some have crowns of gold. Not a few have coins of silver and gold the size of our $20 gold pieces hung to strings about their necks, and none of the women hide their pretty faces, as do those Mohammedan girls near by, who, in shapeless white gowns with flowery white and red veils covering the whole of their faces, look like girls playing ghosts in white sheets. Beside these are Russian girls in the peasant costumes of modern Europe and Jewish maidens in gowns and flowered shawls. There are Greek priests with high black caps, and monks of all kinds, such as you see under the black cowls of Europe. The Syrian, the Turk, the Bedouin, the African, the Armenian and the Greek are all in that crowd below me, and among them all is the form of the obiquitous American traveller, who, in pith helmet hat and green sun umbrella, has conquered the east as well as the west.—F. G. Carpenter's Jerusalem Letter in the Post-Dispatch.

Irish Industries Successful.

Irishmen in the United States will be glad to learn the association started by Micheal Davitt a couple of years ago to encourage the industries of their native land, has been a great success, and that the shares of the company are now held at a premium in Dublin. Several good dividends have been declared and there are excellent prospects for the future. It is a patriotic and philanthropic enterprise, and not a money-making scheme. Mr. Davitt has long been convinced that a larger demand for Irish homespun woollens would arise if they were properly introduced in the United States and England, and the result of the experiment has justified this opinion. The difficulty at the outset was to meet the long credits given by English manufacturers, the Irish cottage weavers needing cash for their goods as soon as they were finished. This was paid by the Dublin company, which gave the credit required by the trade, and the weavers were thus enabled to go on with their work. The demand is now said to be larger than they can supply, and the goods are wanted as much in England as in the United States, where the Irish homespuns were at first taken for patriotic reasons, which led to the discovery of their sterling worth.—Correspondence New York World.

He Killed It.

Doctor Talmage, while engaged in delivering a discourse on a very warm day in his Tabernacle recently, was closely watched by a little girl. A fly seemed to bother him very much. He brushed it away several times. It finally lit upon a bald spot on his head. He kept on with his sermon, gesticulating in his peculiar angular way with one hand while he raised the other devoutly over the fly and finally came down on it slowly drawing his hand down and looking at it. The little girl suddenly called out: "Did 'oo till it?" It is unnecessary to say that the audience smiled audibly while the doctor answered, "Yes, I killed it."

Horses In Russia.

Recent statistics show the stock of horses in Russia to be 21,000,000, exclusive of the Caucasus, Finland, and the Asiatic territory. There are six government studs, beside a large number of private ones. The sum of 100,000 roubles is devoted annually by the Russian government to the purchase of stallions. Much has been done in Russia of late years to improve the breeding of horses. Races, trotting matches and "shows" have been multiplied all over the country.

—"What is the matter with your eye?" exclaimed Brown, as Fogg made his appearance with his optic in mourning. "Only a mare clausum," replied Fogg with assumed indifference. "A mare clausum?" "Yes; a closed sea, you know."

MANITOBA AND THE NORTHWEST

The Provincial Grand Lodge of Oddfellows met this morning, when Grand Master Baymer delivered his annual address. A gain of 204 in membership is reported during the year. Committees were appointed for various purposes.

Crop reports from all parts of the Province indicate that harvesting is well advanced, and probably 50 per cent. of the cut crops seems to be turning out better than had been anticipated. A second Government bulletin, which will be issued tomorrow, will estimate the average yield throughout the Province at 14 bushels to the acre; on this estimate the total crop will be between eight and nine million bushels.

John Joslyn, an old and respected citizen of Broadview, was struck by a passing engine to-day and instantly killed.

James Cotter, a bachelor farmer, aged 65, living near Deloraine, hanged himself yesterday morning between 5 and 6 o'clock on a beef scaffold. He had been mentally deranged for some time.

The annual meeting of the Canadian Medical Association closed at Banff last night. There was a large attendance and the meetings were very satisfactory. Toronto was chosen as the next place of meeting. Over fifty of the party left to-day for the Pacific Coast.

Commissioner Herchmer, of the Northwest Mounted Police, is in the city on official business. He says the stock is looking exceptionally well, and in fact he never saw range cattle in such fine condition at this time of the year. The calf crop has been large.

It is reported that thirty-five miles of track will be added to the Manitoba & Northwestern railway this summer. Construction operations are to begin at once.

The Government will not at present fill the vacant Provincial Secretaryship, and it is likely that the French representation will be ignored. It is not improbable that a constituency will be made by which Mr. Martin will assume the new portfolio of Minister of Education, and some new man will be called in for one of the existing portfolios.

At a large meeting of citizens to-night it was decided to erect a public monument in memory of the late ex-Premier, John Norquay.

William Clougher's grain elevator at Otterburne was destroyed by fire last night, with 3,000 bushels of wheat; partially insured. The loss on the building is $3,000.

Mr. H. J. Clarke, Q. C., to day withdrew the charge of criminal libel against Mr. Cyr, ex-M.P., for circulating libelous posters respecting complainant during the Provincial election. The charge against Mr. Acton Burrows for printing the posters in question was dismissed with costs. There is another case against one Robinson, who will be heard on Saturday.

Dr. Gilbert Carberry has been elected Grand Master of the Odd-fellows of Manitoba.

A second crop bulletin of the Manitoba Government, issued to-day, referring to the spring wheat crop, says: "Correspondents invariably gave what in their opinion was as correct an estimate as possible of the average over their respective townships, and a careful compilation of these show that a yield of 10 8 bushels to the acre will be realized over the Province. The reports vary from 3 bushels in some townships to 35 and 40 in others. Taken by groups the eastern show an average of 14 5 bushels per acre, the southwestern 11.7, the central 15.2, and the northwestern 17.3. The counties of Souris River, Rock Lake, Turtle Mountain and Dennis show how great has been the destruction by gophers. Shoal Lake has also suffered largely, but the loss has not been as general as in other places named. The average yield of oats is placed at 21.5 bushels, barley 19.3 and peas 12.5. The total number of farmers in the Province is placed at 13,320, and the average amount put under crop by each 59.2 acres."

Hon. Mr. Dewdney, Minister of the Interior, arrived here to-day by the Pacific express, accompanied by Mrs. Dewdney, Senator McInnes and his secretaries, Messrs. McGirr and Chisholm. A deputation representing the old settlers waited on the minister and presented him with a largely signed petition asserting their claims, which have been published several times, and urging the early settlement thereof. The petition was presented by Mr. LaRiviere, M.P. for Provencher. In reply Mr. Dewdney said he could say nothing in reference to the general claims set forth in the petition until he had consulted his colleagues.

The Sun to-night says: Whatever may have been the intention of the Government three weeks ago in regard to remodelling the educational system, recent events, more especially the resignation of Mr. Prendergast, have sealed the fate of the Separate Schools, and the decision now is to make a clean sweep of them and settle the question once and for all. The French language will also be wiped out. The statement that Mr. Prendergast's resignation was accepted was an error, as he attended a meeting of the Council yesterday. It will be accepted, however, on Mr. Greenway's return, as it would be impossible for Mr. Prendergast to remain under the circumstances. It is stated upon good authority that Mr. Prendergast will continue to support the Government in its general policy.

Several thousand dollars have been subscribed by Baptists for the purpose of erecting a Baptist College in Brandon. An effort will be made to raise money in the east.

One hundred and forty teams went west to-day to work on the Regina and Long Lake road.

Pilgrims to Knock.

A Thursday's Dublin cable says: About 40,000 persons visited the celebrated Shrine of Knock to-day. The vast throng participated in the customary devotions. Several masses were celebrated, followed by a procession, the spectacle being most impressive. Archdeacon Kavanagh, the central figure, was assisted by several clergymen, including two American priests. In the evening a benediction was given to a large number of pilgrims from England, Scotland and America.

"Love me little; love me long,
Ran the words of an ancient song
Which sought to decrease sorrow.
But that is not the modern way;
It's "Love me fiercely for a day,
I'll be divorced to-morrow."

A SOUTHERN DUEL.

Williamson Faced Four Bullets Without Weakening—No Blood.

Details concerning the bloodless duel between Calhoun and Williamson, of Atlanta, Saturday evening show that the affair, though terminating harmlessly, really had exciting and realistic features. When the contestants and seconds reached a battleground undisturbed by officers it was quite dark. All around stretched a dense forest, and, while the men's figures were clearly defined, faces could not be recognized at 10 paces. The men were soon in position, apparently as cool as though the affair was merely a midnight picnic. Capt. Jackson, Calhoun's second, and Mr. King, Williamson's second, met just between the two men.

King took one pistol and Jackson the other. King placed his in Williamson's hand. Jackson walked over and handed his to Calhoun. The two seconds took their positions. The principals and seconds formed the four corners of a square. Col. John Seay rushed in and begged the seconds to settle the matter and not allow the fight. "It is a shame," he said, "to have two such fine men stand up here and shoot at one another." The seconds could not agree upon a settlement, and so announced. It had been arranged that each principal was to empty his pistol—shoot five times. Suddenly King's voice rang out:

"Are you ready, gentlemen?"

"Yes," answered both.

"Then fire."

The first shots were simultaneous. Williamson emptied his revolver, the five shots being fired very rapidly. Calhoun fired only once, and then slowly lowered his pistol as Williamson's bullets were whistling past his head.

"Are you hurt, Pat?" some one cried.

"No, sir," Calhoun coolly replied.

"Williamson, did he hit you?" asked King.

"I was not touched."

Both gentlemen, with smoking pistols in their hands, stood as calm as statues. The silence was broken by the ringing voice of Calhoun.

"Mr. Williamson," he said, "I have four remaining balls which I have the right to fire at you. I now ask if you will withdraw the statement you made before the Legislative Committee?"

"I will," replied Williamson, in a clear voice, "provided you will say that you intended no personal reflection up me."

The spectators drew a little nearer to hear and see better. Calhoun then said: "When I made those statements I did it to impress upon the Legislature that your railroad had been offered the Central; will you withdraw your statement? I say this holding four balls in my pistol which I have the right to fire. I have no desire to take Williamson's life."

"I will withdraw it," replied Williamson, "when you say that you meant no personal reflection."

"What I say," Calhoun replied, "is that I wanted the Legislature to understand that your road was offered the Central in 1887. You came to the Kimball House to see me. Do you remember that? All I want before firing my remaining balls is for you to say that you came to my office in 1887."

"I will do so," replied Williamson, "provided you say you meant no personal reflection."

Capt. Jackson interrupted with:

"Mr. Williamson, have you any respect for me as a gentleman of honor?"

"I have," replied Williamson.

"Well," said Capt. Jackson, "I say as a gentleman that I would withdraw the statement."

Williamson's response was: "If Mr. Calhoun will say that he intended no personal reflection."

"Will you withdraw?" demanded Calhoun

"If you say it."

"Will you withdraw?" again asked Calhoun. "I hold four balls."

"I am ready for you to fire," was Williamson's firm reply. "Then we will load and fire again."

"Allow me to speak to Mr. Williamson," said King, his second.

King approached Williamson and, while talking, began to examine his revolver. Capt. Jackson approached quickly and asked what that meant. "I am simply examining Mr. Williamson's revolver," replied Mr. King, "to see if it fired all five balls."

"You may come up and see. That's all right," said Capt. Jackson. Calhoun had remained quiet during this talk, but as soon as it ended, and King was withdrawing, his voice rang out clearly: "In my remarks before the Legislative Committee Mr. Williamson personally did not enter my mind." Then raising his pistol he said: "With the understanding that you withdraw your remarks after my statement, I fire the remaining shots in the air. I expressly reserved my shots to do this." With these remarks four shots rang out and four balls went skyward. Then Calhoun approached and the two principals shook hands, and the party started quickly for the car. Entering the car, Calhoun said: "Mr. Williamson, we will let this matter end here."

"We will," replied Williamson, giving his late antagonist's hand a hearty shake.

The Big Tunnel Scheme.

A New York despatch says: On Monday last, after an interval of two years, actual work was resumed on the submarine tunnel to connect New York with Jersey City. For the first time the financial part of the undertaking has been placed on a firm basis, and it is claimed the tunnel will be completed before 1892. It will be walled in, so as to make two independent tunnels, each 5,900 feet long. There will be an approach of three-fourths of a mile on each side, making a total length of over two and a half miles for each tunnel. About 2,000 feet of the north section of the tunnel has already been completed.

Anarchy in Zanzibar.

A yesterday's cable from Zanzibar has the following: Last night a party of natives entered the Indian bazaar and commenced thrashing the Indian men and women without distinction until they were ultimately stopped by the soldiers. Eighteen arrests only have been made and these men are in the fort. To-day they were flogged. The police arrangements here are infamous.

CURRENT TOPICS.

French physicians who are studying the matter are confident that hypnotism will in time succeed the use of chloroform in the practice of painful surgical operations. Many most remarkable experiments in this direction have proved successful. Patients have been hypnotized, and while in that condition undergone operations of the most painful and delicate nature without evincing sensibility in the slightest degree.

King Ja Ja, of West Africa, who is imprisoned on one of the islands of the West Indies by the English Government, has become a prey to melancholia. He refuses to eat and has grown extremely thin. He would have died months ago if he had not kept up on wine and tobacco. One of his wives is with him, but he will not speak to her and spends his time roaming about puffing cigars and sunk in gloomy reverie.

Denmark is rapidly developing into a sort of poultry yard annex to Great Britain—that is to say, a large portion of the eggs consumed in the latter country are the product of the Danish hens. This trade began some twenty years ago, at which time there were annually shipped from Denmark to England something like 900,000 eggs. The business has expanded steadily until the export now amounts to over 111,000,000 annually.

The amount of human blood spilled in bringing the Paris Exposition to completion is something enormous. The records show that during the erection of the buildings no less than 6,350 men were treated for injuries of one kind or another received while at work on them; 300 workmen were injured as to their legs, 200 were badly injured in their eyes, 114 were scalded or badly burned, 50 had fingers cut off. The death roll from falls foots up 24, though this is said to be far below the actuality.

The four hundredth anniversary of the discovery of America by Mr. C. Columbus falls in the year 1892, and New York and Chicago are the two leading cities struggling for the site of the world's fair with which it is proposed to mark the event. Both cities are going ahead with the preliminaries, as if the matter had been finally settled in their favor, and playing what might be called a bluff game. Congress has the privilege of settling the matter of a site for the fair.

Mr. Raikes, the British Postmaster-General, has introduced a threepenny post-card, intended principally for the Australian service. The stamp which appears upon the card is an entirely new design. For the usual head of the Queen which has hitherto formed the main feature of the British stamp, Mr. Raikes has substituted a full-length figure of Her Majesty in her jubilee robes. The stamp and superscription are printed in red.

The connection of the Red Sea with the Mediterranean by the Suez Canal has had one effect which is as disagreeable as it was unexpected. Before the canal was opened all the watering places on the Mediterranean enjoyed a complete immunity from the presence of sharks, these fish being practically unknown then. But the canal has been utilized by the objectionable creatures to such an extent that sharks which have come from the Red Sea are now so numerous in the Mediterranean that it has become necessary to warn bathers in many places to be on their guard continually.

Following the example of St. Paul, who was all things to all men, the Brooklyn Young Men's Christian Association has adopted a rather novel plan to inveigle young men into its rooms. The free reading room, gymnasium, open meetings, social entertainments, etc., have been insufficient to draw the crowds it desired, and it has fallen back upon the dodge adopted by the saloons, cigar stores, billiard rooms, etc., to entice the unsuspecting youth within their doors, that of bulletining the baseball games. The association will thus be able to mingle good advice and Christian precepts with the stealing of bases, put outs and errors.

The food consumed on one of the large steamships from New York to Liverpool was as follows: Nine thousand five hundred pounds of beef, 4,000 pounds of mutton, 900 pounds of lamb, 256 pounds of veal, 150 pounds of pork, 140 pounds of pickled legs of pork, 600 pounds of corned tongues, 700 pounds of corned beef, 2,000 pounds of fresh fish, 20 pounds of calves' feet, 18 pounds of calves' heads, 450 fowls, 240 spring chickens, 120 ducks, 50 turkeys, 50 geese, 600 squabs, 300 tins sardines, 300 plovers, 175 pounds sausage, 1,200 pounds of ham, 500 pounds of bacon, 10,000 eggs, 2,000 quarts of milk, 700 pounds of butter, 410 pounds of coffee, 87 pounds of tea, 900 pounds of sugar, 100 pounds of rice, 200 pounds of barley, 100 jars of jam and jelly, 50 bottles of pickles, 50 bottles of sauces, 20 barrels of apples, 14 boxes of lemons, 18 boxes of oranges, 6 tons of potatoes, 24 barrels of flour.

Yankees Paying Us Back.

A Boston despatch of yesterday says The Nova Scotia schooners Francis Arthenius and Aurora Borealis, arrived in port to-day and were held by the Customs officials in libel for $1,000 fine on a charge made by Captain Fengar, of the revenue cutter Woodbury, of having been in American waters over 24 hours and not reporting at the nearest custom house. It seems the two vessels were on August 1st in Passamaquoddy Bay, near Quoddy roads, during very thick weather, and both captains claim they were becalmed in the fog and could not tell whether they were in American or Canadian waters until after the prescribed time. They have both appealed to Washington to have the fines remitted, but will be held until the national authorities have been heard from.

The late Dr. Dio Lewis said: "The truth is, the medical profession stands dazed and helpless in the presence of more than one kidney malady." He also said: "If I found myself the victim of a serious kidney trouble I would use Warner's Safe Cure."

—All things come to those who wait—including disappointment.

THE MIKADO'S SON.

Japan's Future Sovereign Being Educated According to Western Notions.

His Imperial Highness Prince Haru, heir apparent to the throne of Japan, is now in his tenth year. A delicate child in his early days, he has happily acquired health and strength as years went by. No imperial prince in this empire has ever been similarly brought up. The prince's mode of life is modelled almost entirely upon western lines. He attends the nobles' school daily, and studies precisely as do his fellow-students. The Choya Shimbun says that in both literature and military science he has made extraordinary progress, but of what this bugei (military science) consists we cannot precisely say. In olden times a noble Japanese began, at a very early age, to study the use of the bow, the sword and the lance, but even in the case of an imperial prince skill in managing such weapons scarcely continues to be included among essential accomplishments. Doubtless Prince Haru takes lessons in fencing and equestrianism as a part of his school course, and in archery as a pastime. The Choya tells us that he has a cold bath every morning; that his diet is chiefly meat; that he has shaken himself entirely free from petticoat government; that his constant companions are officers and tutors; that he is fond of visiting beautiful scenery as at Enoshima and Atami; that he plays on the seashore and in the woods like any ordinary boy, and that in consequence he is lusty and active. Our contemporary quotes Mr. Takasaki, Vice-Grand Master of the Board of Ceremonies, as saying that if such an education had always been given to the youthful Diamyo, the present representatives of that body would occupy a very different place in the national polity, and that the history of Japan during the past two thousand years contains no instance of the heir to the throne being brought up in such a manner. We learn on the same authority that Prince Haru treats everybody, even to the lowest of those about him, with the greatest courtesy; that he takes a keen interest in his fellow-students at the nobles' school, making minute inquiries whenever any one of them is prevented by sickness from attending, and that his conduct is in every respect exemplary.—San Francisco Examiner.

MR. VANDERBILT'S NEW HOME.

It Will be Made of White Marble and Modelled After Ancient Grecian Buildings.

The colossal size of Mr. Frederick Vanderbilt's new house, and especially of his entrance hall, is still a topic of conversation at Newport, says the Boston Times. Sidney Smith once said of an abnormally stout woman: "One might take one's morning walk around her, always supposing that one is in rude health and good physical training." And the remark would apply equally well to Mr. Vanderbilt's house, the inmates of which must get all the exercise they want within its walls. The entrance hall, notwithstanding its great size, is admirably proportioned, and the marble porch which opens out of it gives a fine view of the ocean and rocks, and of the pretty stone archway at the foot of the lawn through which the water breaks and ripples and then rushes back again to the sea. The charm of the great houses of Newport is their individuality. Each one is the outcome of an enormous expenditure of money, but of money laid out under totally different conditions and directed by individual taste and preferences. Hence sameness and monotony are unknown. The mansion only just begun by Mr. William K. Vanderbilt will, it is said, be absolutely unique in its style of architecture and decoration. It is to be of white marble and modelled after the buildings and temples of ancient Greece. Marble will also enter largely into the finish of its interior, and it is rumored that exquisite carvings and sculpture have been ordered for the ornamentation of its lower floors.

JUMPED THE TRACK.

Smash-up on the W. P. R.—Three Killed, Many Injured.

A Pittsburg despatch of last Friday night says: The south bound passenger train on the Butler branch of the Western Pennsylvania Railroad, which left Butler, Pa., at 2 35 o'clock this afternoon, jumped the track at Sarvers station, and the entire train, consisting of two passenger coaches and a combination smoking and baggage car, went over an embankment and was totally wrecked. Three persons were killed outright and 25 others injured, a number of whom will die. The accident was caused by the spreading of the rails on a small bridge. The rails were on stringers, which had rotted with time and long service. The engine passed over the bridge safely, but the first car was derailed and plunged down into the abyss some thirty feet below. The rails ploughed through the second car, and the escapes were miraculous.

A bootless attempt—To get upstairs without being heard by your wife.

There's something attractive about her,
It isn't her beauty of face.
It isn't her ribbons or lace
But there's something attractive about her,
And I swear that I can't live without her,
And that is the state of the case.

There's something attractive about her,
It isn't her glance or her smile,
It isn't her elegant style;
But I'm poor and I can't live without her,
For that something attractive about her,
You know, is the size of her pile.

—The following words were set to tune as an anthem by Mr. Joseph Barnby, Precentor at Eton, for the recent Royal wedding:

O Perfect Love, all human thought transcending,
Lowly we kneel in prayer before Thy Throne.
That their's may be the love that knows no ending
Whom Thou for evermore dost join in one.

O Perfect Life, be Thou their full assurance
Of tender charity and steadfast faith.
Of patient hope, and quiet, brave endurance,
With childlike trust that fears no pain or death.

Grant them the joy which brightens earthly sorrow;
Grant them the peace which calms all worldly strife,
And to life's day the glorious unknown morrow
That dawns upon eternal love and life.

EPITAPH FOR A GOSSIP.

Here lies an ancient dame whose tongue
Could never rest, so loose it hung.
She talked so constant and so fast
That when Azrael came at last
To quench in her the vital flame
He hesitated, for the dame
Was such a talker, the record saith,
He feared she'd break the silence of death.

The Reason.

HE

It isn't that she's young,
It isn't that she's fair,
It isn't that she has a charming grace,
It isn't that her gown
Is the wonder of the town,
Or that every one admires her pretty face.
It is simply that in life
Every man must have a wife
The duties of his household to attend;
Else his dinner will be cold,
And his cook a saucy scold,
And his sorry tribulations without end.

SHE.

It isn't that he's rich,
It isn't that he's tall,
It isn't that he drives a coach and four,
It isn't that he's wise,
Or has very handsome eyes,
And virtues to be counted by the score.
It is simply that in life
Every girl must be a wife
(Unless, forsooth, she's one that's not afraid),
As for me, I'd die outright,
With dread horror and affright,
If I ever thought I'd be an old maid.

THE FORCE OF HABIT.

Firemen Whose Sleep Cannot be Broken Except by the Sound of the Gong.

A great many people wonder how it is that firemen are so easily aroused from their slumbers at night by the sound of the gong, and not being able to see through it clearly conclude that their sleep must be a very nervous one, says Fireman John Callahan in the St. Louis Globe-Democrat. This is a wrong impression. When a man first joins the department he is wakeful and nervous, but a few weeks' acquaintance with the method of being awakened banishes all this, and no matter how tired or weary a fireman may be when he retires, or how soundly he sleeps, he is wide awake at the first tap of the bell. Long service in the department makes this method of being awakened so habitual that the sound of even the bell of an alarm clock will awaken the fire laddie when he could not be aroused by calling or tugging at him. I have become so accustomed to the habit of being awakened by the sound of a bell that when I go home on my day off and lay down to sleep I have to set the alarm clock at the hour I intend to leave. I was on the department nearly a month before I got my first recreation day, and I remember that when I went home and fell asleep my folks tried to awaken me at midnight to go to work. They tugged and pulled at me, but I did not awaken. They became alarmed and called in a neighbor, who was also a member of the department. He saw at once what was the matter, and brought in a dishpan to my bedside and hammered on it with a stick. I was up at the first stroke and threw my arms around him, thinking it was the pole. It caused a great laugh, of course, but fully illustrated the force of habit.

OUR YOUNGEST SISTER.

A New British Colony Formed at Old Calabar.

The question of the future government of the West African oil rivers from Benin to Old Calabar is being investigated by Her Majesty's Commissioner (Major Claude Maxwell McDonald), who is now on the coast, and has held a "palaver" with the kings and chiefs at Old Calabar. From a recent report it would seem that two proposals were placed before the natives for their consideration. The first was that the oil rivers should be governed by a royal chartered trading company, and the second was that the rivers should be made into a Crown colony. The candid opinion of the natives was asked by the Commissioner, who gave the natives time to consider the matter before replying. They were also requested to ask any question they wished, but they were not to ask the probable amount of taxation, as that question could not then be answered, though for their information they could get particulars of the duties which are now levied at Lagos and in the Royal Niger Company's territories. The natives retired, and next day they one and all decided to accept a Crown colony, preferring to be under the direct rule of Her Majesty's Government. It is further stated that the missionaries were also in favor of a Crown colony.

Scottish News Notes.

The Free Presbytery of Edinburgh on the 29th ult. inducted Dr. Marcus Dods as Professor of New Testament Exegises in the New College.

Private Paterson, of G Company, 1st L. R.V. (Glasgow), shot his mother with his rifle on the 27th ult. in her house after an altercation. The family belong to Ayrshire.

Mr. John Melrose, for many years one of the leading citizens of Hawick, has died at Trinity, near Edinburgh. For a long period he was the principal partner in the firm of James Melrose & Sons, engineers, Hawick.

The Dundee Town Council have resolved to present the Marquis of Lorne with the freedom of the city, on the occasion of his visit in October to open the Victoria Art Galleries.

The Shah told Sir Algernon Borthwick—so a London paper assures us—that he liked Scotland immensely. He had never seen such beauty among the women anywhere else.

At the welcome meeting to Principal Rainy, of Edinburgh, in Melbourne, the usually sedate Presbyters went the length of calling for three cheers for the Principal when he rose to speak. It is understood that Dr. Rainy will return home by way of the United States.

The death is announced of Admiral the Hon. Thomas Baillie, of Dryburgh Abbey. The Admiral died rather suddenly at the Cross Keys Hotel, Kelso, on the 31st ult. Deceased, who was an uncle of the present Earl of Haddington, saw a good deal of service in the British navy, having been present at the battle of Navarino, and held command of the British fleet in the White Sea during the Crimean war.

His Youthful Guard.

When the Shah arrived at Berlin a small boy, dressed in gorgeous garments of gold and purple, was noticed at one of the windows of the train. Nobody knew who he was, and many stories were current, but it is now stated that the little lad, who is only 5 or 6 years old, and who accompanies the Shah everywhere, is a sorcerer from Teheran, whose presence is supposed to guard Nasr-ed-Deen from all ills and all misfortunes during his journey.—Once a Week.

THE BRANTFORD LIGHT STEEL BINDER!

Over Four Thousand Sold in Season 1888. Being More Than Half of all Other Binders made in Canada,

Before placing their orders for 1889, we respectfully request the farmers to:
1st. Carefully examine the "Brantford Machines" and faithfully compare with others.
2nd. Enquire of your neighbors who have used "Brantford Machines" and get their opinion of their working and lasting qualities.
If you will follow the above advice, you will be convinced of these two facts:
1st. "Brantford Machines" are possessed of more improvements and are better made than any other machines in Canada.
2nd. "Brantford Machines" are more popular, give better satisfaction, and are more durable than any other machine in Canada.
Therefore: 1st. Give your order EARLY for a Brantford Binder and Mower.
2nd. And you will be sure to be perfectly satisfied with the machine you get.

THOS. A. BLAKELY,
FLESHERTON

Heard's Carriage Works.

—:— MANUFACTURER OF —:—

Carriages. Buggies, Wagons, Sleighs. Cutters, &c., &c.

HEARD'S IMPROVED HARROWS AND GATES.

Special Attention given to PAINTING, TRIMMING, HORSE-SHOEING and all kinds of JOB WORK. Nothing but first-class material used throughout and satisfaction guaranteed. We have for sale

——Lumber, Lath and Shingles.——

Also Agent for Dick's Rollers, Mowers and Binders, Dick's Champion, Royal Rob Roy, Granger and Standard Plows. Two and Three-Furrow Gang Plows. Horse Powers for 4 Horses. Straw Cutters, Scufflers and Turnip Drills.

JOHNH. HEARD, Durham Street, Flesherton.

FLESHERTON STOVE EMPORIUM

A large assortment of STOVES, (a makes) STOVE FURNISHINGS, TIN WARE, COPPERWARE, LAMP GOODS etc, constantly on hand.

EVETROUGHING A SPECIALITY.

F. G. Karstedt,

Strain's old Stand
Flesherton.

FLOUR, FLOUR, STONE FLOUR!

MR. P LOUCKS

Is prepared to do your Gristing on short notice and grinds on the old terms of every twelfth bushel. Seven cents per bag of two bushels for Chopping, done every day. The Little Mill is big in the estimation of the public.

Satisfaction Guaranteed.

P. LOUCKS, Proprietor.

Good stabling for horses.

BLACKBURN'S

is the place for choice goods and fair prices.

Choice Roller Flour, Bran and Shorts, at rockbottom prices.

Cured Meats, Bologona,
Mixed bird seed.
Pure prepared Corn,
General assortment of canned goods.

CHOICE HONEY,
CONFECTIONERY of all kinds.
ICE CREAM

and cooling summer drinks. Choice Fruits a specialty.

OAT MEAL, CORN MEAL, CRACKED WHEAT and GRAHAM FLOUR,

always on hand.

Remember the place, next door to M. Richardson & Co's.

Shiloh's cough and Consumption Cure is sold by us on a guarantee. It cures Consumption. For sale at the Medical Hall

For lame back, side or chest, use Shiloh's Porous Plaster. Price 25 cents For sale at the Medical Hall.

Croup, whooping cough and Bronchitis immediately relieved by Shiloh's Cure. For sale at the Medical Hall.

For Sale

Steam flour mill for sale at Flesherton Station 2 run stone, double reel bolt, smut mill, duster and purifier. Will be sold cheap and on easy terms. This is a bargain. Apply to

ROGER LEVER
Flesherton P.O

Monthly Fairs.

Orangeville The second Thursday in each month.
Dundalk—Tuesday before Orangevie.
Flesherton—Monday before Orangevie.
Markdale Saturday before Orangeville.
Durham—Third Tuesday in each month.
Chatsworth—Monday before Durham.
Holland Center—Saturday before Chatsworth
Priceville Monday before Durham.
Hanover—Monday before Durham.

'This Year's

MYRTLE

CUT and PLUG

SMOKING TOBACCO

FINER THAN EVER.

See

T & B

in bronze on
EACH PLUG and PACKAGE

Improved Farm for Sale.

Lots 146, 149 and 150, 3rd range east, T. and S. R., containing 100 acres, 80 cleared, good clay loam, well improved, good frame house and log barn, frame stable, good orchard, etc. This farm is well watered and improved, and is considered one of the best in this section. It is one mile and a half from the village Flesherton. Will be sold on very easy terms. For further particulars apply to

JAS. BEECROFT,
Flesherton P.O

The Ideal Husband.

You've a neat little wife at home, John,
As sweet as you wish to see,
As faithful and gentle-hearted,
As fond as wife can be:
A genuine, home-loving woman,
Not caring for fuss or show;
She's dearer to you than life, John;
Then kiss her and tell her so.

Your dinners are promptly served, John,
As likewise your breakfast and tea;
Your wardrobe is always in order,
With buttons where buttons should be.
Her house is a cosy house nest, John,
A heaven of rest below;
You think she's a rare little treasure;
Then kiss her and tell her so.

She's a good wife and true to you, John,
Let fortune be foul or fair;
Of whatever comes to you John,
She cheerfully bears her share
You feel she's a brave, true helper;
And perhaps far more than you know,
'Twill lighten her end of the load, John,
Just to kiss her and tell her so.

There's a crossroad somewhere in life, John,
Where a hand on a guiding stone
Will signal one "over the river,"
And the other must go on alone.
Should she meet the last milestone first, John,
'Twill be comfort amid your woe
To know that while loving her here, John,
You kissed her and told her so.

—Woman's Magazine.

Things Amusing and Strange.

NOT ORIGINAL, BUT WORTHY OF PERUSAL.

MASHED,

"How dare you treat me thus?" he wrote,
"You saucy little shrew!
To call me small potatoes, just Because I'm mashed on you."

She seized the pen in wilful mood,
And these lines off she dashed:
"The smaller the potatoes are The easier they're mashed."

Health makes wealth—and there is more demand for the finished article than the raw material.

A society has been started in London to promote the development of the science of mesmerism and of the application of hypnotism to practical medicine.

Rev. W. W. Carson, of Kingston, tells a remarkable spider story. While pouring water into a wash bowl, a huge spider that was in the basin crawled rapidly up the stream and into the jug. He is still mystified regarding the fact.

Victoria Morosini, the daughter of the millionaire, who married her father's coachman several years ago, and starred on the stage and latter in the back chorus, has done satisfactory penance for her social sin, and is again with her father as a modest but attractive belle at Saratoga. The whereabouts of the husband are unknown to the outside world.

A man who went to pick berries near Bear Lake, Pa., a few days ago, was found some hours later lying on the grass unconscious, with a huge rattlesnake fastened to his trousers. The snake was killed and the man was revived with cold water. He had not been bitten, yet he was affected just as if he had been, until his finders talked him out of it.

Mr. Gladstone's library at Hawarden is one of the finest private libraries in England. It has more than 20,000 volumes. Mr. Gladstone loans his books out to any one in the neighborhood who wants to read them. Formerly people could keep them as long as they liked, but a few years ago the rule was made that a book could be kept for one month only. It is the regular free library of the district.

It is reported, on the authority of a Gibbon correspondent, says the Omaha Bee, that some Buffalo County hunters found in the sand hills south of Lowell a band of petrified elk, surrounded by a circle of petrified coyotes, the adjacent atmosphere being full of petrified yelps and howls, each yelp having a diamond in one end and a geologist's hammer in the other, and every howl containing a pearl and a butcher's knife.

One of the Vanderbilts had his portrait painted by a French artist. When the work arrived in New York a customs duty of 30 per cent. was paid upon it. Mr. Vanderbilt was not satisfied with the picture and sent it back to the artist to be worked over. On its return to America another tax was exacted, making the total amount paid to the Government $2,000, just two-thirds of the sum received by the artist. It is said that Mr. Vanderbilt's views on protection are somewhat modified by this transaction.

A cat in Mississippi recently gave up its life to save the community. The river was very high, and the dyke which had been built to keep out the water gave way in one place. The water was pouring in unnoticed when the cat passed by and, realising the condition of affairs, crawled into the hole and stopped the flood. It is estimated that $80,000 and a number of lives were saved by the heroic feline, and the villagers have built a beautiful tomb of red granite, with mice carved in relief, over the bones of the animal.

Catarrh cured, health and sweet breath secured, by Shiloh's Catarrh Remedy Price 50 cents. Nasal Injector free. For sale at the Medical Hall

BOOTS & SHOES.

I have a very large supply on and and

Selling very Cheap.

IN LADIES WEAR. Prunella, Kid, Polish calf and Buff Dongola, Lace and Button.

Misse's, Youth's and Children's

A large assortment, all sorts and sizes.

MEN'S WEAR

Fine Calf and Dongola, Balmorals and Gaiters, also Heavy Boots and Shoes. Prices and Material cannot be beat.

W. CLAYTON.

Photos, Photos, Photos.

We are now turning out work far superior in style and finish to any ever produced in Flesherton.

COPYING and ENLARGING at MODERATE RATES.

PICTURE FRAMING

done in all its branches. A good stock of FRAMES and MOULDINGS kept constantly on hand. Will also introduce the new BROMIDE PORTRAIT, a picture that is giving entire satisfaction wherever introduced. SAMPLES can be seen at my Gallery where all particulars as to Price, Style &c., can be ascertained.

MRS. BULMER,
FLESHERTON.

HEALTH FOR ALL.

HOLLOWAY'S PILLS & OINTMENT

THE PILLS

Purify the Blood, correct all Disorders of

Liver, Stomach, Kidn'ys, and Bowels.

They invigorate and restore to health Debilitated Constitutions, and are invaluable in all Complaints incidental to Females of all ages. For Children and the aged they are priceless.

THE OINTMENT

an infallible remedy for Bad Legs, Bad Breasts, Old Wounds, Sores and Ulcers. It is famous for Gout and Rheumatism. For disorders of the Chest it has no equal.

For SORE THROAT, BRONCHITIS, COUGHS, COLDS

Glandular Swellings, and all Skin Diseases it has no rival; and for contracted and stiff joints it acts like a charm.

Manufactured only at Professor HOLLOWAY'S Establishment,

78, New Oxford Street (late 533, Oxford Street), London,

and are sold at 1s. 1½d., 2s. 9d., 4s. 6d., 11s., 22s., and 33s. each Box or Pot, and may be had of all Medicine Vendors throughout the World.

☞ Purchasers should look to the Label on the Pots and Boxes. If the address is not 533, Oxford Street, London, they are spurious.

PRICEVILLE BAKERY.

A. WATSON!

Desires to inform the public that he can furnish

CAKES AND PIES

To Order.

FIRST CLAS BREAD ALWAYS ON HAND.

will visit Flesherton twice a week—on TUESDAYS and FRIDAYS, with a full supply of goods.

DROP A CARD IF YOU DESIRE ME TO CALL.

WEDDING and FANCY cakes a specialty

A. WATSON,
Priceville.

Situation.

with steady employment and good pay all the year round, to reliable men furnishing satisfactory references. S.A. McCOMBER & Co
Nurserymen, Rochester, N. Y

FLESHERTON PLANING MILLS

Having purchased the Flesherton Planing Mills from R. J. Sproule, Esq., I now desire to inform the

PUBLIC

that I am in a position to do

ALL KINDS

—OF—

General planing mill work,

such as

SASH, DOORS, DOOR FRAMES
Planing and Matching, re sawing, etc.

Good Workmanship Guaranteed.

A large quantity of good dry pine lumber on hand.

W. J. HOWARD,
Flesherton.

LOOK!

HAVING done business in Canada for years our reputation is established. We want three men in your vicinity to represent us, to whom exclusive territory will be given. Handsome outfit free. Salary and expenses paid weekly. Previous experience not required. Write at once for terms. Hardy stock for Canada a specialty. MAY BROTHERS,
Nurserymen, Rochester, N.Y

FLESHERTON ADVANCE.

"TRUTH BEFORE FAVOR."—"PRINCIPLES, NOT MEN."

VOL. VIII., NO 427. FLESHERTON, ONT., THURSDAY, SEPTEMBER 5, 1889. W. H. THURSTON, EDITOR & PROPRIETOR

WATCHES,
Clocks, Jewelry.
STUDY
Your Own Interests
by buying your Watches, Clocks, Jewelry Spectacles and Silverware, at Russell's Noted
JEWELRY STORE,
FLESHERTON.

In watches we have a very large stock of Elgin, Waltham, Illinois Springfield, Columbus and Swiss Levers, in Ladies' and Gents' sizes. Gold, Silver and Silver ore cases. Brooches and Barpins, of the latest design. Fine Gold and Rolled Gold Earings, Cuff Buttons, Charms, Chains, and beautiful stock of Ladies' Gem Engagem en Rings. A full supply of 18 K. Wedding Rings always on hand. Also a large and well-assorted stock of Silverware and Spectacles at very low prices, and remember the place to get your Watches, Clocks, Jewelry, etc, repaired is at

RUSSELL'S, FLESHERTON.

All work personally attended to by J. G. Russell

ONE PRICE
CASH STORE.

As fall is approaching the topic for conversation is where can we get the Best Value for the Least Money!

We cannot do without the necessary woollens to keep us warm during the long winter months.

WHERE CAN WE GO, THEN,

The CASH STORE offers you a free inspection of their stock in all lines of WOOLLENS. A lot of flannels now on hand.

A New Department.

We have just opened a choice lot of CROCKERY, GLASSWARE, LAMPS, etc, see our prices.

Special lines in Men's Long Boots in the fall.

Highest cash price paid for butter and eggs.

McDONALD & EVANS,
Wright's Old Stand.

Pumps! Pumps!

J. McCullough,
Markdale,

manufacturer of pumps, desires to inform the public that he is prepared to furnish pumps for

Deep wells, gravel wells, etc.

parties who have heretofore had difficulty with their wells are

Guaranteed Satisfaction

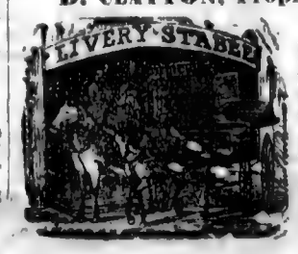
using my articles. I learned my business with the late J. Fear, of Meaford, the superiority of whose pumps was a household word in Grey a few years ago.
Be sure and call on me if you desire anything in the pump line.

J. McCullough.

FARM FOR SALE CHEAP, AND ON EASY terms, lot 7, con. 2, township of Emphrasia containing 100 acres. This is a splendid valuable timber farm. Well timbered with mixed hardwood, hemlock and cedar. Splendid soil, 1½ miles from the beautiful village of Kimberley in Queen's Valley where there are mills, stores, post office and church, and 11 miles from Flesherton on the C. P. R., where there is a splendid market for all kinds of produce, stock, lumber and timber. Apply to R. J. Sproule, auctioneer and real estate agent, Flesherton.

Flesherton Livery Stables.

D. CLAYTON, Proprietor,



First class horses and vehicles for hire at reasonable rates.
Stables opposite Munshaw's hotel.
Special attention paid to commercial business

THE ADVANCE.

Is published

Every Thursday,

FROM THE OFFICE,

Sydenham Street, - - Flesherton, Ont.

TERMS OF SUBSCRIPTION:

$1 per annum when paid strictly in advance
$1.50 per annum when not so paid.

ADVERTISING RATES.

One column, 1 year, $50; half col., do., $27; quarter col. do., $15.

Transient advertisements charged at the rate of 8cts. per line for first insertion and 3cts. per line each subsequent insertion.

W. H. THURSTON,
Editor and Proprietor.

THE FRENCH SCHOOLS.

Most formidable of all questions which will confront the Mowat government at the forthcoming election will be its position re the French schools of this province. A commission was appointed at last session of the Legislature to enquire into the truth of charges perferred by a member of the Opposition (Mr. Craig), and the report of that commission was published last week. As given by the Globe, even with the pruning and suppression of evidence which it was within the power of the government to commit, it is a complete vindication of Mr. Craig's attitude on the question. It shows that in eighteen schools in Ontario the teachers cannot teach English. A large number of the French schools in Ontario teach English about as Iroquois would be taught from Longfellow's glossary to Hiawatha—without any perceptible progress in the language—the pupils being in nearly every case "very backward," or "knew scarcely any English." Another very damaging admission made, is that in several of the schools English has been taught during the past year, only, or in other words since Mr. Craig drew the attention of Mr. Ross to his duty in the matter.

The question of French schools in Ontario will prove a higher mountain than Mr. Mowat's government has ever yet scaled. In one province, at least, Canadians will prove that their school system shall be free from ultramontane or ultra-protestant interference, and that is the province of Ontario. Manitoba, the youngest province in Canada, is setting us a good example in abolishing separate schools, and the precedent will eventually be followed by some of the other provinces at least, and we are inclined to think that Ontario will not bring up the rear. In the meantime it is aggravating to note that Canadians are spending money for the purpose of inculcating foreign tastes and a foreign language to nearly 7,000 of her growing population, without any endeavor whatever to make them learn the language of the country and conform to British manners and Canadian customs.

OUR EXHIBITION!

Two weeks from Monday next will be an important day at this point. The East Grey agricultural exhibition will open in Flesherton on that day. The directors have been sparing no pains to make this the best and most attractive exhibition ever held here. The special attractions arranged for will, without doubt, prove a great drawing card. Thus far the special attractions secured are as follows: Baseball match, open to the county, for which a magnificent silver cup will be offered as a prize. For horsemen there will be a trial of speed, three times around the track—walk, trot and go-as-you-please. There will also be a foot race, and the Campbell Highland dancers. In connection with this latter we might say that last year prizes were offered for dancers in Highland costume but there were no entries. This year the directorate have made arrangements with Master Johnnie and Miss Katie Campbell, of London, to give an exhibition of Highland dancing, to be accompanied by the bagpipes. These little people have exhibited in all the large cities of Ontario, and are the wonder and admiration of all who have seen them. Added to these, efforts are being made towards getting up a baby show. At present writing it is not known whether the latter will materialize, but even without it we think there will be sufficient attraction to bring out such a crowd as has never before attended the East Grey Agricultural Society's fall exhibition.

Great Britain is the literary country par excellence. From a late compilation of statistics The Advance learns that the number of letters passing annually through the postoffices of Great Britain is forty for each inhabitant, while for the United States it is only twenty. Australia is second with thirty-five, and Russia foots the list with two. Our explanation of these figures would be something like this: The average Britisher has more time at his disposal than the American, and the latter does his match-making in person, while the courts attend to his divorce matters with despatch and without the use of correspondence. As for Russia, her natives really have not the time or means to write. Any people using a language that includes such words as "Blomonosowaskatchewowkoff" can readily be excused from corresponding with their friends. Germany is a marvel of industry. She actually writes the same number of letters per annum as the United States, and that in her own language, too, one word of which would include nearly as many letters as an American would use in a proposal of marriage, or a "freundschaftsbezeigungen."

A poor Englishman came out to this country and made his way to Winnipeg. There he could find nothing to do, and being without money tramped back to Montreal, where he arrived nearly dead, and the last heard from him he was keeping his weather eye open for a kind-hearted captain to take him back "'ome" to his ma. If a lot more of his blooming poverty-stricken, imbecilic countrymen would take warning by his sad fate, this Canada would be well rid of a nuisance. It is all right for Englishmen to make their home in Canada, of course, but we are not just now in want of men of any nationality who, if they cannot get a government clerkship, will not accept a bookkeeper's situation, or that of a farm laborer, hod carrier, or any other of a thousand and one things. As a rule they are too particular by half, and would rather starve than soil their fingers. The above is a case in point.

The latest "slot" machine is a butter maker. You pour new milk into the slot and carry home your butter "right away off." See description elsewhere.

The Keewatin "Hustler" spent a short, eventful, hustling life, and like many another precocious youngster, it has died in infancy.

Are you made miserable by indigestion constipation, dizziness, loss of appetite yellow skin? Shiloh's Vitalizer is a positive cure. For Sale at the Medical Hall.

ADVICE TO MOTHER.—Are you disturbed at night and broken of your rest by a sick child suffering and crying with pain of Cutting Teeth? If so send at once and get a bottle "Mrs. Winslow's Soothing Syrup" for Children Teething. Its value is incalculable. It will relieve the poor little sufferer immediately. Depend upon it, mothers; there no mistake about it. It cures Dysentery and Diarrhœa, regulates the Stomach and Bowels, cures Wind Colic, softens the Gums reduces Inflamation, and gives tone and energy to the whole sistem. "Mrs. Winslow's Soothing Syrup" for children teething is pleasant to the taste and is the prescription of one of the oldest and best female physicians and nurses in the United States, and is for sale by all druggists throughoutt the world. Price twenty-five cents a bottle. Be sure and ask for "MRS. WINSLOW'S SYRUP," and take no other kind.

THE MARKETS,

FLESHERTON.

Carefully Corrected Each Week.

Flour	$5 00 to 4 [illegible]
Fall Wheat	95 to
Spring Wheat	95 0 9
Barley	0 30 0 40
Oats	0 27 0 2[illegible]
Peas	0 50 0 [illegible]
Butter	0 14 0 15
Eggs, fresh	0 13 0 13
Potatos bush.	0 15 0 16
Pork	6 10 6 10
Hay per ton	9 00 9 00
Hides	3 50 3 50
Sheepskins	0 50 1 00
Geese	0 05 0 [illegible]
Turkeys	0 10 0 10
Chickens per pair	0 25 0 [illegible]
Ducks per lb	0 06 0 06
Wool	0 18 0 20

SIGN
"Big Spex"

Reliable watches in

Gold, filled gold and Coin-silver cases.

Ladies' and Gents' sizes.

Walnut and Nickle Clocks.

I am represented by A 1 watches and clocks, backed up by reliable warrants, in more homes of Central Grey, than any jeweler doing biz. in this section.
If prices are not shed rock every time,

QUALITY Considered.

I would not be able to hold such a large share of Grey Co. trade as I have at present.

"CASH or CREDIT"

will positivily do better by you,

Goods, Work and Warrants Considered.

than you can do elsewhere. Spex artistically fitted.

Work Carefully Done.

Fair Charges

Stock now complete in all lines.

Can save you $ to $3.00 on watches.

Other lines will be held on live and live margins.

W. A. BROWN,
Jeweler and Optici[illegible]
MARKDALE, Ont.

Man's Ideal Wife.

To hear the men a-talkin' in their sweet unself ish style
Bout the way a woman acts, who adores em without guile,
Is enough to make a woman just despair of bein' a wife,
For to satisfy her husband she must give him up her life.

For she mustn't be too handsome, nor particularly plain,
For if pretty she'd be flirtin', and if not, she'd try to gain
(By shriekin' and assertin' through all the days and nights)
Continual truth and justice and other fancied rights.

Then she must have serpent wisdom, yet be harmless as a dove,
Have common sense in plenty, yet be like the saints above—
As innocent and ignorant of all wickedness on earth
And believe the yarns he tells her of his doings from his birth.

Of course she makes her clothing, which must next to nothing cost,
Though the neighbors mustn't see that her dress in style has lost.
She will cook to great perfection and be a thorough nurse,
And tend her babes, and never ask to have a private purse

She'll grieve to see her gracious lord a-workin' long and hard,
And grant he needs a constant change, his precious health to guard;
And many comforts she'll be willin' to always do without,
But they're purchased for his benefit, with great delight, no doubt.

Just fancy, when this ideal wife dies wearily and worn,
How afflicted he will show himself, for weeks be quite forlorn,
And declare to all who knew her she was bounded by his love,
A very perfect woman gone, to wait for him above.

JANET COSSAR.

Chicago Ill., Aug. 12, 1889.

SOUP ON DRAUGHT.

How the Magician of the Kitchen Pleases His Patrons.

How they manage to get up so many different kinds of soups in the small restaurants is puzzling. According to an investigation it is done thus: Here comes a waiter with an order for vegetable soup. The cook lifts the lid of a big boiler of clear soup, made by boiling bones and scraps of beef, mutton, chicken, veal, etc. Out of this boiler the cook dips a bowlful of clear soup, and into it he pops in quick succession a little from each pot of boiled vegetable he is saving for that day. There is your vegetable soup. Is it consommé? From a big pitcher he pours into the clear stock some brown thickening fluid. Is it macaroni? A pot of boiled macaroni is near at hand, and he forks a few strings into the bowl. Is it ox-tail? A big tin of condensed ox tail soup stands on a handy shelf, and a spoonful lends its flavor to the stock. Is it chicken? He thrusts a pair of tongs into the boiler and brings up morsels from the depths until enough scraps of chicken are found to pass muster. Is it tomato? A squirt of weak but thick tomato catsup does the business. Is it rice? Some of the rice pudding is available. Roast lamb and roast mutton come from the same joint at its touch, and, by aid of an unctuous salad and some jelly, so will roast venison at a pinch. Roast rib or roast loin from the same piece of beef depends altogether on his carving. The veal is veal, or it is chicken for salad, or it is turkey for fricassee, or it is rabbit for stew, or it is lamb for pie, just as he desires. The plain old cod, too, if boiled, is turned into boiled halibut, or haddock, or bluefish, and if baked becomes baked halibut, or bluefish or haddock, at his simple touch. With the aid of a few biting sauces they become almost anything one can name in the way of fish. Baltimore News.

The Blood Orange.

The blood orange is a mere variety of the sweet orange, obtained by cultivation, and appears first to have been raised by the Spanish gardeners in the Phillippine islands, from the capital of which—Manila—it together with the well-known cigars formed at one time one of the chief articles of export. On its first appearance in Europe it excited a considerable sensation, and in the last century very high prices were demanded for the trees which bore the wonderful fruit. None, however, now are brought here from Manila, the supply being derived almost entirely from Malta, where great pains and attention are bestowed upon their cultivation. It was for a long time supposed, and the idea is not yet quite extinct, that the blood oranges were produced by the grafting of the orange with pomegranate, but there is not the slightest foundation for this belief.

A Young Sporting Man Leaves $80,000 to His Mother.

Frederick Brown, a well-known sporting man, of Washington, who died in Saratoga on Sunday, made a will leaving his mother $80,000. This amount he has won from the bookmakers in the last year. At the last meeting of the Jockey Club in 1888 here he "went broke," saving from the wreck only a diamond ring, which he pawned for $40. Borrowing $10 he started with this capital and won $6,000 during the spring meeting. He followed the horses to Monmouth, Sheepshead and Saratoga and won right along. He deposited $17,000 of his winnings in a Saratoga bank. Brown was a young man of good habits and well liked.—Capital.

Fully Equipped.

Fond Mere—You are fully prepared to enjoy yourself at the picnic?

Prudent Daughter—Yes, indeed. I have two umbrellas, waterproof and overshoes, and Charley has two lovely new life-preservers.

Optimistic.

Gladys (effusively)—Oh, Uncle Joe, the gypsy who told my fortune says I am to marry a nobleman.

Uncle Joe—Well, let's hope for the best. You may die, you know.

"BRIGHT'S DISEASE has no symptoms of its own," says Dr. Roberts, of the University of New York City. Additional proof why Warner's Safe Cure cures so many disorders which are only symptoms of kidney disease.

"How can you tell a poor cigar without smoking it, Smith?" "By looking at the picture on the box, my friend. If the picture is pretty the cigar is bad." —Blooming. (Ill.) Pantagraph.

GREENNESS IN NEW YORK.

There Are More Trees and Shade Here Than Any Countryman Would Believe.

"If I go home and tell my wife I've been sleeping under blankets ever since I came to New York, she won't believe me," said one man to another on an elevated train yesterday, "but it's a fact, nevertheless. I'm stopping with relations on the west side, between the river and the Park, and maybe that's made it somewhat cooler, but, as far as I can see, almost any part of New York is cooler than up in the State, where I live, especially at night.

"Then there's another thing about New York that would surprise country folks who think the city in summer is just one step this side of the bad place; that's the trees. I remember reading in the story books about the poor city children that never saw green grass or trees from year's end to year's end, and didn't even know that flowers grew anywhere except in shop windows. Well, I've been around New York pretty considerable, and it kind o' strikes me that it would be all-fired hard work to bring up a child in the city and keep it from seeing trees and grass everywhere it went, and flowers, too. I'm goin' to tell my wife the next time she wants to get cooled off, and at the same time not lose sight of trees and grass and green things, to come right to New York. It beats the seashore all hollow."

The countryman was a little enthusiastic, perhaps, but there was a deal of truth in what he said. New Yorkers are so used to it that they never stop to think about it, but to a man coming here with preconceived ideas of the desert nature and terrible heat of city streets, the amount of shade and greenness about the city is surprising. It is hard for a person in New York to find a position upon any street corner from which trees, vines, or green grass are not in sight in one direction or the other. Of course, above Fifty-ninth street there is Central Park always in sight from any corner up to and beyond 110th street on either side of the city. Besides this, there is Riverside Park, from Seventy-second to 125th, Morningside Park, Mt. Morris Park, and other green breathing places below the Harlem, while the beautiful Boulevard, with its park strip in the centre and its four rows of lusty young elms, even now beginning to form a double arch over the street, West End avenue, with rows of young trees doing well on either side, Eighty-sixth street, with its little grassy squares and trees in front of every house, and other shorter stretches of tree-shadowed streets make it certain that even when this part of the city shall be closely built up there will be no lack of greenness and shade.

Below Fifty-ninth street there are nearly a dozen small parks, with more to come, but the singular thing, when noticed for the first time, is the frequency of trees along the built-up streets. It probably won't be believed at first thought, but it is a fact, easily verified by personal inspection, that from Fifty-ninth street to Grand street the Sixth avenue elevated railroad does not cross a single street on which trees are not visible to a passenger. In a few instances there will be only one or two scrubby little trees struggling for existence upon the curb; more frequently the trees are numerous enough and vigorous enough to arch the street. On Fifty-third street they are so near the tracks that passengers can almost reach out and touch them as the train rushes by. Besides the trees along the curbs, there are frequent glimpses of green from the centre of blocks, and sometimes trees tall enough to wave above four-story houses can be seen, showing that in back yards there is abundant greenness for private enjoyment.

There are also thousands of windows where boxes filled with flowering plants and vines are kept, and often there are glimpses of sunflowers and other hardy plants blooming in yards or in boxes upon roofs. Pleasantest of all are the vines that of late years have been freely planted in front of houses on residence streets. These have grown so thriftily that in hundreds of instances they reach a dense mass of vivid green from the sidewalk to the roof, sometimes spreading out so as to cover almost the whole front of the house. Two or three such vines illuminate beautifully a block of dull brown stone fronts.

Below Grand street the rule ceases to hold good that a passenger on the elevated can see trees on every street crossed, but it is largely because the streets are so crooked that often not over a block or two is in sight in any direction from the train. In the dry goods district trees are few, but toward the river, wherever people live, there is generally at least one tree in sight from every corner, and from Chambers street, where the City Hall Park comes into sight, down past St. Paul's and Trinity, Bowling Green and the Battery, there is always something green upon which to rest the eye.

There are fewer trees in proportion to population on the east than on the west side of the city, but even on the east side they grow at frequent intervals, and thrive in the most closely built districts. There will be more of them, too, when the new small parks are made.—New York Sun.

On Time.

Some people are always in a hurry and generally always behind hand. The two go together; for hurry is the child of a state of mind rather than of a train of circumstances. The methodical man is never in a hurry. He moves along in his orbit, as Goethe says the stars do, "without haste and without rest." He knows what is first to be done, what next, and how long each item to be attended to will require. He sees in an exigency what can be omitted or deferred, and what must be done according to the programme he has made. If he is due at a certain train he is there on time with five or ten minutes to spare. If a certain task is to be done by a certain date, the work is ready a little in advance of the date.—Exchange.

Poor Creature.

A.—How is your pretty cousin coming on?

B.—I regret to say that her chances in life are slim.

"Great heavens! Is she so dangerously ill?"

"She is not ill at all. Her chances in life are slim because she is engaged to be married to a dude."

A report is current in Chicago that the Northwestern & Milwaukee Railway systems are to be amalgamated.

SARAH ALTHEA HILL.

The Stormy Career of the Woman Who is Now Judge Terry's Widow.

Sarah Althea Hill, whose stormy career in California has given her national notoriety, was born in this old French town just forty-nine years ago. She comes of good stock, her father being Samuel Hill, a prominent attorney, and her mother Julia Sloan, daughter of a wealthy lumber dealer. She had one brother, Hiram Morgan Hill, and her parents both died in 1854, leaving the two orphans an estate of $40,000. She is related to some of the best families in the country, among them the Wilkins, Sloans and Rodneys. The girl had good opportunities for acquiring an education. She attended school at Danville, Ky., and finally graduated from St. Vincent's Convent in this town. She had a governess in the person of Miss Barral, a sister of ex-Congressman Hatcher. Her grandfather, Hiram Sloan, was her guardian, and he appears to have held a slack rein. The young ward developed a spirited temper, and soon after reaching legal age made her money fly. She grew up to womanhood in much her own way, and was noted for her beauty and temper. Sarah was a girl of more than ordinary personal beauty. She was plump, of medium height and possessed a lovely complexion. She was fair, but not a pronounced blonde. She was scheming and ambitious to excel in personal charms. These traits made her unpopular among her girl companions. It was said of her, too, that though she was a spendthrift in some things, she worshipped money and gave her attention mostly to those who possessed it. She is remembered by her friends here as something of a flirt, and at one time she is said to have had three engagements to marry on her hands. The hero of one of these engagements, Mr. Leanders, is a prominent politician residing in Southeast Missouri, and another resides in St. Louis. Her conquests in that section of the State were numerous during the time she held sway. She was fast, but her name was never tarnished with scandal. In love affairs Miss Hill was tyrannical, and more than one of her lovers had to suffer under her iron rule and eccentric whims. To show how cruel she was to her lovers the case of the one she really loved will suffice. He was then a young man, but is now a Missouri politician of national fame. They were engaged to be married and one night attended a hop. Sarah Althea became angry at her escort, and when the ballroom was entered she went upstairs and never came back until time to return home. The young man was angry and determined to break the engagement. Sarah Althea heard of it, summoned him into her bewitching presence, and the old infatuation returned so strong that he determined to swallow the insults, but Sarah had heard that he had told his friends that he intended to break the engagement. She determined on revenge. She never looked lovelier than on the night her luckless lover answered her call. He was powerless before her and pressed his suit with more energy than ever. She said nothing until he was ready to leave, and as he stopped for a good-night kiss on the threshold she turned her head and, with her eyes blazing, said: "Mr.——, you can go. We will cry quits. I don't want to see you again." The young man almost fell down the steps and never saw her afterwards. Now the story goes that Sarah Althea was really in love with this young man and expected to win him back. In this she failed, and in September, 1870, disgusted and broken-hearted and with only the wreck of her fortune, she started for California. A young uncle, named W. Sloan, accompanied her to the Pacific coast. He was wealthy and took his handsome niece to his mother's home. Sarah and the old lady did not live in harmony, and Mr. Sloan gave his niece a fine suite of rooms in a prominent San Francisco hotel. It was there she met Senator Sharon. Her brother, Hiram Hill, was a reckless youth, and followed her to California, where he married a wealthy woman of Spanish blood. Sarah Althea has never returned to the home of her childhood.—Cape Girardeau (Mo.) Special to Philadelphia Press.

The City of Berlin.

Frederick the Great worked hard to beautify this town of his choice, but it cannot be said that, with all his efforts and all the energy of recent years, it is a town which strikes a stranger familiar with London or Paris as one of grandeur or even of dignity. To begin with, there only exists one church of architectural interest—interest, because the beauty of the Klosterkirche has been destroyed by additions made about the middle of the present century. As for the cathedral, that is a late, domed edifice, no larger than a decent parish church in this country. This poverty is unique. Look where you will over Europe and you will not find a single town of capital importance so void of that crowning ornament to a city, a fine ecclesiastical building. The defect cannot be exaggerated. Such buildings are the durable record of a city's life; each weather-beaten stone has an interest no less human than scientific, no less romantic than artistic. We have our St. Paul's and Westminster Abbey, the Parisians their Notre Dame, Vienna its St. Stephen's, Rome its St. Peter's; but there are no such sermons in stone to be read in Berlin, no building to be admired for its beauty or revered for its age. Conceive Paris without Notre Dame. The effect is nothing short of robbering French literature of Victor Hugo! Nor is Berlin much better off for secular buildings. None of them save an inconsiderable fragment of the old Schloss date earlier than the 17th century, and the bulk of the old Schloss is a decaying plaster faced pile of that unfortunate period. The palaces of the late Emperor William and of the Emperor Frederick as crown prince were built, the former some 50 years ago, the latter 30, and, though both insignificant in size compared with Buckingham palace, may be admitted to compete with it in point of style.—Macmillan's Magazine.

Pedestrian, to big, fat policeman on Broadway—Well, Mr. Officer, how do you stand this hot weather? Policeman—Principally on the shady side.

Wife—"Look at all the things I bought with that little money. You can no longer say I'm extravagant." Hubby—"But all those things are for my use. As soon as you begin to buy things for yourself you'll need a bank."

THE CHERRY.

The Past and Present Culture of this Fruit—Its Classifications.

Downing separates the cherry into two classes—first, the Bigarreaus and Hearts, and second, the Dukes and Morellos. These amount almost or quite to distinct species. The Hearts and Bigarreaus, being strong and vigorous growing trees, are somewhat tender in many sections of country, especially in the level, fertile west, and are therefore not so generally cultivated, though as a rule the fruit is of fine quality. According to Dr. Warder, the Hearts and Bigarreaus are not entirely reliable except on soils where the American chestnut is an indigenous growth, or at least successful when introduced. The Dukes and Morellos are more hardy and fruitful, this class embracing varieties like the Kentish, which are quite universally popular. Although in some sections a profitable fruit, the cherry has scarcely held its own in point of popularity along with other classes of fruits during the last quarter of a century. This is perhaps partly due to the overshadowing popularity of the strawberry and other small fruits coming into competition with it, by reason of their ripening at or near the same season. In some particulars, however, especially for culinary purposes, the cherry is not likely to be entirely superseded by any of its best of rivals. The late Dr. Kirtland, of Cleveland, O., made the improvement of the cherry, which succeeds admirably in that section, the specialty of his life work. In this way he gave to the world a number of valuable varieties. More recently new introductions are being made from abroad, through the energy and perseverance of Professor Budd and others, with encouraging prospects. We may hope from this source to obtain varieties directly and indirectly which will prove more hardy and valuable, especially north of the present limit of cherry culture, as intimated above, very little, if any, effort has yet been put forth in the improvement of our native species, of which Professor Gray mentions at least four. The arts of horticulture, aided by the hand of time, may yet subjugate to the uses of man some or all of these now untamed species. The cherry succeeds well on dry soils. In orchards, where there is ample room for large trees, and in climates where it is not subject to the bursting of the bark, standards with four or five feet of clear trunk are to be preferred. For door yards, where shade and ornament are taken into account, standards of the free growing sorts are the most suitable. For fruit gardens of limited extent, and in localities where the bark of the trunk is liable to burst, the dwarfs or low standards are most appropriate and profitable.

Weariness.

A tramp knows what it is to be leg-weary, a farm laborer to be body-weary, a literary man to be brain-weary, and a sorrowing man to be soul-weary. The sick are often weary, even of life itself. Weariness is generally a physiological "ebb-tide," which time and patience will convert into a "flow." It is never well to whip or spur a worn-out horse, except in the direst straits. If he mends his pace in obedience to the stimulus, every step is a drop drawn from his life-blood. Idleness is not one of the faults of the present age; weariness is one of its commonest experiences. The cheques that many a man draws on his physiological resources are innumerable; and, as these resources are strictly limited, like any other ordinary banking account, it is very easy to bring about a balance on the wrong side. Adequate rest is one kind of repayment to the bank, sound sleep is another, regular eating and good digestion another. One day's holiday in the week and one or two months in the year for those who work exceptionally hard usually bring the credit balance to a highly favorable condition; and thus with care and management physiological solvency is secured and maintained. But a physiological fortune is as good a thing, or even a better thing, than a money fortune. Stored resources, well invested, keep the mind easy and the body youthful. If, however, a man have not these, but only enough of strength to go on steadily from day to day, he should watch carefully against excessive weariness. A feeling of prostration is the dark thunder cloud that portends a change in the atmosphere. Health, like weather, may "break," and when once it is broken nobody knows when the barometer will mark "set fair" again. Weariness, coming on in the ordinary course of work, without any special and temporary cause, is nature's demand for an immediate holiday. The horse is tired. He does not want the whip, but a month's run in a quiet and abundant pasture. As nothing in the world can properly satisfy hunger except food, so no drug or stimulant of any kind except rest can restore the weary to energy and health. The doctor's tonic is a very good thing in its way, but it will no more act as a substitute for rest than a glow worm's light will serve the same purpose as the moon.—Hospital.

He Took a Fit.

A gang of men were at work on a city street when a slight, beardless youth laid down his pick, and approaching the foreman said to him:

"Can I take a fit, sir?"

"Take what?" asked the foreman.

"A fit—I feel one coming on," replied the young man, without emotion.

"Why certainly," said the foreman.

So the young man walked over to a bit of grass under a leafy tree—it was a new street in the suburbs—and had a fit.

Then he went and washed his face, came back to his place in the line, and took up his pick and struck into work. After the day's work was over the young man said to the foreman: "You don't mind my having fits?"

"No—I guess not if you do a fair day's work."

"Well, you see, I used to work for a butcher, an' he wouldn't let me take fits—said it interfered with business—an' I thought you might feel the same way about it."

And that young man works hard with pick and shovel and takes a fit once in a while as you or I might take a drink of water.—Pittsburg Dispatch.

—A physician in New York reports that during an epidemic of diphtheria in that city there were five times as many cases on the shady side of the street as on the sunny side.

THE NET BREAKS.

A Moment of Horror for Monsieur Peynaud and 5,000 People.

Monsieur Baptiste Peynaud, who dives from a tower at Rockaway Beach, L.I., said to be 150 feet high, into a bignet stretched below, broke through the net Friday afternoon. Peynaud started to make the jump at 2 p.m., with the usual formal preparations. More than 5,000 spectators were on the shore and in numerous boats, large and small. The net into which the dive or fall is made is about thirty feet long and fifteen wide, and is made of good, stout cordage. In the centre is a piece of heavy canvas about six feet square. When Peynaud dives he tries to land as near the centre of the canvas as he can. This ensures an equal strain on all parts of the net. The net is stretched eight feet above the shallow water at the shore. It was getting to be low tide at 2 o'clock Friday afternoon, and the water below the net was about eight inches deep. Peynaud mounted the tower as usual and when he got to the top gave the same dramatic look about him. After bending over in the narrow opening in the platform at the top a minute or so, and looking intently at the net to gauge his jump, his body straightened itself and he shot downwards like an arrow. When he had descended 50 or 60 feet the spectators could see that his body was slowly turning, so that he could land in the net on his back, with his head towards the tower. He fell on his back, but his aim had been bad, and his body struck half on the canvas and half on the netting. The cords in the netting parted with a snap, a prolonged rip was heard, and the people turned pale and closed their eyes to shut out a horrible scene. Peynaud rebounded in the air two or three feet, came down again feet first, and slid through the rent in the net. As he did so, however, he grasped the loose shreds of netting on each side, and slowly let himself down into the water, where he stood with a look of blank amazement on his pale face. He stared at the top of the tower, at the hole in the net, and then at his feet, and seemed to wonder what had happened to him. He quickly recovered himself, however, and made his customary graceful bow and wave of the hand.

Facts About Coffee.

The pleasures of coffee are by no means dissipated in the warm season, when "ho coffee is not needed as a means of defying the discomfort of cold weather. Cold coffee is a delicious beverage when well made. Coffee ice made of strong coffee frozen in a freezer and served in cups with whipped cream is a dainty desert, or a convenient part of the afternoon tea menu; coffee soda is a peculiar summer drink, and few people accustomed to the morning cup of coffee make any difference on account of the weather in this most important feature of the breakfast table. An expert in coffee maintains that the best coffee is made in the old-fashioned tin coffee-pot. "Don't give me any new patent arrangement for making coffee," he says, "the old tin pot is the only kind of cooking utensil that preserves the aroma and the full flavor of the coffee."

After the coffee has been boiled and settled pour it in good strength upon a cup half filled with cream and hot milk. Most true coffee epicures have a beverage prepared with full strength that will give a delicious aroma and a true but delicate flavor to a cup of rich cream and boiled milk. Rather peculiarly the average American drinks about the same amount of coffee now that he did eighteen years ago. In 1870 the average consumption for each person was 7½ pounds; in 1888 it was 7⅞ pounds, showing that the taste for coffee neither increases nor decreases.—Boston Journal.

The Care of the Finger Nails.

The half-moon, which is esteemed so great a beauty, if carefully attended to, will increase in time, and even when it has been almost obliterated will grow to be very beautiful, says Medical Classics. Many people think that pushing the skin back from the nail will show it more, and that by this practice the delicate hem, as we call it, which holds the upper and under skins together, is totally destroyed, and the ends of the fingers have an ugly yellow growth encircling the nail instead of the delicate framework which nature intended. Then the way in which the nail is cut can totally change the shape of the fingers. By cutting the nails close at the sides and keeping the corners from adhering to the skin, hang-nails can be avoided. Where the nails are thin and inclined to break, frequent oiling is necessary, and the nails should never be polished except when some oily substance is used beside the powder. This keeps the nails more pliable, and no matter how thin they are, if properly treated they are no more liable to break than thicker ones. Another thing that is bad for the nails is polishing them too roughly. They should be lightly touched and not rubbed until they become heated. This is one cause of white spots coming on the nail and marring its beauty.

A Trick Worth Trying.

Baker Brothers, of Candler, Georgia, have invented a novel way of catching owls or night hawks. They have set up a long pole near the fowl house. The pole is about sixteen feet high with the top end sawed off smooth and a little steel trap is set on top of the post, fastened by a string to the post below. Notches are cut in the post by which it is easy to climb. On a moonlight night the owls when they are around are likely to light on something near the fowl house. The other night an owl was heard not far off and, thinking that he would be likely to come for a chicken during the night, the brothers went out after supper and set the trap on top of the pole. Before they went to bed the family heard a fluttering in that direction and, going out, found that they had trapped an owl that measured four feet five inches from tip to tip.

Brodie to Go Over Niagara Falls.

Steve Brodie has fully decided to attempt what no man has done and lived—float over the American Falls at Niagara. He will leave New York for Niagara to-day and devote some time to making himself familiar with the dangers he must encounter. The falls are 166 feet high. The compensation for the terrible risk Brodie will take in addition to the fame to be won by the undertaking is a purse of $1,500, contributed by hotelmen and railway men.

TELEGRAPHIC SUMMARY.

A San Francisco despatch tells of an Indian, known as Old Gabriel, who is 150 years old.

The strike of dock laborers in London is spreading, and the Socialists are assuming control of the movement.

It is again rumored in Kingston that smelting furnaces will be established by the Rathbun Co., Deseronto.

Cobourg opened its tournament very successfully yesterday with a band competition and a number of games.

Oshawa, Bowmanville, Port Hope, Millbrook, Colborne, Brighton and Trenton hold their civic holidays to-day.

Miss Kittie Cronyn, daughter of Mr. V Cronyn, of London, was married yesterday to Mr. Geo. W. Brown, of that city.

The Governor General and Lady Stanley of Preston have issued cards for a full dress ball at Quebec on Monday, the 26th inst.

The convention of the North American United Caledonian Societies meets to-day in the council chamber of City Hall, Toronto.

Four hundred and fifty persons who have completed the Chautauqua reading course yesterday received their certificates from Chancellor Vincent at Chautauqua.

Another day was spent yesterday on the Welland Canal investigation, which was more prolific than usual in disputes between Senator McCallum and Mr. Rykert.

Mrs. Robert Tufts Hungerford, Kingston, has had an information laid against G. W. Dalton, a merchant of Tweed, on a charge of indecent assault. Both are prominent persons.

Rev. Mr. McKenzie, a Presbyterian missionary in Labrador, writes that there is great destitution there, and urges that a movement be made to transport the inhabitants to the Northwest.

News was received at Ottawa yesterday of the death by drowning at Rockliffe, in the Ottawa River, of James Shea, of South March, Carleton county. Shea was employed by the Upper Ottawa Drive Company.

The death is announced in Montreal of Frank Goulette, probably the oldest railway employee in the Dominion, he having commenced railway work as a switchman in 1836 on the Champlain road, the first in Canada.

Mrs. Webster, whose husband was killed at the Temple building elevator in Montreal some time ago, has taken an action for $11,000 damages against the Methodist Church of Canada and the trustees of the St. James street congregation, who are the owners of the building.

In the case of young Twitchell, of Kingston, charged with burglary, Dr. Wm. A. Hammond, of Washington, the well known authority on nervous diseases, gives it as his opinion that Twitchell was suffering from epilepsy when he committed the act, and that he was entirely irresponsible.

Brown and Hall, the two St. Thomas tramps who "held up' John Bird near Canfield, compelled him to hand over his money at the point of a revolver, and then stole his horse, were yesterday morning found guilty by the Cayuga County Judge of highway robbery and assault with intent to kill, and sentenced to nine years in the Penitentiary.

Emanuel Brooks, Shawneetown, Ill., shot and fatally wounded his wife this morning, and then shot himself twice in the head, but the wounds not killing him, he ran one hundred yards and jumped into the river and was drowned.

Farmers in New York State report that the potato crop is unusually large this year, though the quality is very poor, owing to rot caused by heavy rain. The crop of corn is light. Hay and oats are in abundance, but damaged by wet weather.

A telegram from Trois Pistoles reports that the body of a newly-born infant has been found there which had been born alive and subsequently suffocated. An inquest was held to-day, and a verdict of murder against some unknown party was returned.

A terrific explosion occurred in Scruggs & Whaley's flour mills, Gainesville, Tex., yesterday. All the men had gone home to dinner except Engineer Boosley. The east end of the building and the roof were blown away. Boosley was not seriously hurt.

Mrs. Eldridge, wife of Mr. T. R. B. Eldridge, of the Equitable Life Assurance Society, Toronto, jumped into the lake from the Cibola when that vessel was leaving Niagara yesterday morning. She was rescued and conveyed to her home. It is said that she is suffering from melancholia.

William Sargent, the thief who stole the horse from J. W. Firby's pasture field, near Corinth, Elgin county, about ten days ago, and was afterward caught in Linwood, was brought before Deputy-Judge McLean, St. Thomas, Thursday afternoon, and pleaded guilty to the charge. He was sentenced to three years in Kingston penitentiary.

The wife of Adam McKean, a highly respected farmer of Rogers' Hill, near Pictou, N.S., committed suicide by drowning last night while suffering from a temporary attack of insanity. She retired as usual in the evening, and her husband, wearied with a hard day's harvest, slept undisturbed until he discovered her absence in the morning. Immediate search was made, and the unfortunate woman's remains were found in an adjacent mill pond.

WARNER'S Safe Cure removes defective vision or sight. Why? Because it gets rid of the poisonous kindey acid circulating in the blood. Impaired vision is caused by advanced kidney disease, another name for Bright's disease, which "has no symptoms of its own." Warner's Safe Cure removes the cause, when normal vision returns.

A Very Rare Gift.

Mr. Bald—Al, old boy, what can I give my wife for her birthday? Something very rare.

Al—Give her a look of your hair.

Mrs. Cumso—Wouldn't it be grand if Dr. Brown-Sequard has really discovered the elixir of life? Cumso—Yes, indeed; but don't tell your mother anything about it.

PIGEON FLYING.

Methods of Sending the Birds by Mail—An Important Traffic.

Pigeon flying is one of the delights of the Black country, and a Birmingham (Eng.) paper gives a curious account of it. It is a passion with the workingmen, and it takes some of them completely away from their work. With the majority, however, it is no more than the ordered pastimes of the first day of the week. It has developed quite a new branch of railway traffic in the district. It is the practice of flyers to send their birds in baskets, addressed to the station master at a particular station, with the request that he will release them, mark on the label the time they were released and return the basket. What is most singular is that this is regularly done. An important traffic has grown up in this way, with a tariff for pigeon baskets and returned empties. Railway companies at first set their faces against it, but finally took a more enlightened view of their own interests and of the wants of their customers. They were probably influenced by the consideration that the officials rather liked the work. In cloudy weather porters have been known to feed birds three days before setting them free. The only inconvenience is that, where a bird fails to reach its destination, the obliging official is sometimes accused of being "got at" by a rival flyer. This suggests a certain demoralizing tendency in the pastime, and the suggestion may be confirmed by the revival of a well-worn anecdote. An aged penitent, who had loved pigeon flying not wisely but too well, was assured by his ghostly comforter on his deathbed that they would both meet in a better place with wings to their backs. The dying man suddenly forgot his anxieties in the ribald offer to "fly" the parson for a sovereign when they arrived.

A Clever English Rascal.

The cleverness of an English rascal has excited the envy of all the rascals in Paris, who, with typical Parisian egotism, have long claimed to be the cleverest rascals in the world. The English rascal in question was a professional London pickpocket. Shortly before the French exposition opened he bought a small hotel in Paris on the instalment plan. The purchase price of the hotel was 60,000 francs, and the first and only instalment which the Englishman paid was 2,000 francs. The Englishman bought a few pieces of cheap English furniture for his new house, equipped an English bar, and then advertised far and wide for English boarders during the exposition. His prices were so low that he soon filled his house. Every one of his lodgers was warned by a placard over his bed that the landlord would not be responsible for the loss of any valuables which had not been deposited in the hotel safe. Of course the safe deposits increased with the popularity of the hotel, and both reached high water mark two days before the second instalment of 2,000 francs on the purchase price of the hotel fell due. There was then 35,000 francs' worth of British jewellery and bank notes in the safe. The pickpocket landlord stole every sou of it. He concealed his plunder in his quarters in another part of Paris, dyed his hair, shaved his beard, put on a French suit of clothes and began picking pockets at the exposition. He was caught by the police with his hand in the pocket of an English member of Parliament, and was locked up. A police investigation led to a revelation of his history and the recovery of the jewellery and money which had been given to him for safe keeping.—New York Sun.

Restaurants in Sweden.

A traveller gives the following interesting description of a railroad restaurant service in Sweden: "We entered a little dining-room, around which were arranged little tables covered with snowy linen; in the centre stood a large table, one end spread with the usual diversified collection of the 'smargasbord'; at the other were piles of plates, knives, forks and napkins. The soup is brought in and placed on the central table; each one helps himself, and, taking it to one of the small tables, eats at his leisure. The soup finished, you serve yourself with fish, roast meats, chicken and vegetables in quantity and variety as you choose, and return to your table. The servants replenish the supplies on the large table, remove soiled plates, and bring tea, coffee, beer or wine, as ordered, to the occupants of the small tables, but each one must serve himself from the various courses, ending with pudding and nuts and raisins. There was none of the hurry, bustle and crowding usually encountered in a railway restaurant, but plenty of time was given for a quiet, comfortable meal, with no necessity for bolting your food. For this abundant and well cooked dinner the charge was 40 cents—tea, coffee, beer and wine being extra. Your word was taken without any questioning regarding the extras as you paid for them and your dinner at the table from which the coffee was dispensed."—Exchange.

English as She is Spoke.

Julian Hawthorne's tastes run to the romance about girl's names. He has five daughters, whom he has named respectively Hildegarde, Gwendolin, Gladys, Beatrice and Imogen. The English way of pronouncing these names is unique and not quite so pretty as the spelling way. They are "Hilker," "Gunnell," "Glads," "Beeritch" and "Moken." Queer language, that English, as the English speak it.—Washington Gazette.

He! He!

Rosie—Just hear that Miss Scrawnie titter. All she prays for in this world is to catch a husband.

Josie—Yes, even when she laughs she can't help saying "He! he! he!"

The second charge against Thomas Diamond at Belleville, of being accessory to the mysterious fluid-throwing, has been enlarged for two weeks.

The Virginia Republican Convention has nominated, by acclamation, General William Mahone for Governor and Colonel Campbell C. Slemp for Lieut.-Governor.

—A gentleman, with his card case in hand, rings the bell. "Are Mr. and Mrs. B. at home?" "Yes, sir." "Very well; then I'll call again."

—Mr. Quizitive—Catching anything? All-day fisherman—Yep. Mr. Quizitive—What? All-day fisherman—Darn-fool questions, right in th' neck.

RUMORS OF THE TARIFF.

It Cost Uncle Sam About $15 to Collect Three Cents.

After two days' work by the clerks of three or four departments of the New York Custom House and some incidental labor on the part of the Deputy Collector having charge of dutiable goods coming into the country through the mails, Henry Zimmern, of No. 37 Maiden Lane, New York, was enabled, upon payment of three cents duty and a penalty of like amount, to recover an article of personal adornment that was sent him by a friend in Germany and arrived in New York on Aug. 14th.

That article was a brass ring valued at 12 cents, dutiable under the customs laws for three cents. Why Mr. Zimmern wanted a ring of this material, or whether it was a gage of his early love, or possibly an heirloom in his family, Acting Collector McClelland does not know. The only fact he takes official cognizance of is that the ring came inclosed in a letter, that it owed a duty of three cents to the Government, and that, no matter what might be the result, that amount must be collected.

The amount of red tape through which this innocent brass ring passed before it reached its owner is hard to specify. When the deputy collector at the post-office discovered it in an envelope he and his staff of clerks had to fill out seizure papers in quadruplicate reporting the fact to the Collector. One of the clerks of the latter had to acknowledge the receipt of the documents, send copies to the Surveyor and naval officer for their information, and indorse upon the third an order to the Appraiser to make an examination of the seized article. The fourth copy was carefully filed in the Collector's office for future reference.

This was the work of the Collector's office, but there was more to be done before the Government could get its three cents. The official in the seizure room had to be instructed in writing to turn the ring over to the Appraiser; the Appraiser had to report the result of his examination to the Collector, and the latter had to acknowledge the receipt of the report, and so finally when the owner called for his property and planked down his three cents there had been expended, according to the opinion of experts in the Custom House, at least $15 in clerk hire, stationery, messengers' salary, etc.—Buffalo Courier.

"The Christian Buddha."

The United States Department of State has received from the legation at Pekin China, an account of the death and extraordinary life work of the Rev. J. Crossett, an independent American missionary in China. He died on the steamer "E. Dorado," en route from Shanghai to Tien-Tsin, on June 21st last. In speaking of Mr. Crossett Minister Denby couples his name with that of Father Damien, the Belgian missionary who died on the island of Molokai, and says: "Mr. Crossett's life was devoted to doing good to the poorest classes of Chinese. He would go out on the streets the coldest nights and pick up destitute beggars and convey them to refuge, where he provided them food. He also buried the dead at his own expense. He was known to the Chinese as the Christian Buddha. He was attached to no organization of men. He was a missionary pure and simple, devoted rather to charity than proselytism. He completely sacrificed himself for the good of the poorest of the poor. Let this American, then, be enshrined along with the devoted Belgian in the annals of men who loved their fellowmen."

Absence of Mind.

"Never was so put out in all my life as I was yesterday," remarked Jones at his club the other day. "Just fancy! I returned home at the usual hour, lit the gas, and was about retiring for the night when I took a notion to smoke a cigarette. Hunted high and low, but not the sign of a match could I find. In a rage I put out the light and went to bed."

"But why didn't you light your cigarette by the gas?" asked someone.

"Great heavens!" cried Jones, in comical despair, "if I'd only thought of it."

How to Clean a Baby's Nails.

Every mother knows how difficult it is to clean the baby's finger-nails, says a writer in Medical Classics. By folding some tissue paper into a sharp point, and, when using it, calling the attention of the baby to something else, this simple task can be easily performed. The paper is so soft that it does not hurt the tender flesh, yet it is sufficiently firm to remove every particle of dirt.

The Correct Number.

Jones—I tell you what, Robinson, I have got one wife in a million.

Robinson—That's all right, Jones. If you had more than one we'd run you out of town for a Mormon.

Had Sawed Enough.

Lady of the House—Now, don't you think you could saw a little wood for me?

Tramp (who had just dined)—No, mum; sawing that there steak you just gave me is all the sawing I want to do for one day.

Arthur Gets Credited for Once.

"You didn't squeeze my hand when you left us last night, Arthur."

"How could I? The whole step was covered with girls."

"Well, you got credit for it, anyhow, by shaking hands with the crowd."

Every scrap of iron, wood, and paint work within reach of the hand upon the Eiffel Tower is already completely covered with pencil names and dates. The interiors of the elevators are similarly inscribed, and though the Tower has been opened complete but for a few weeks, there is not a pane of glass that is not scratched all over with the names of visitors.

In the Montreal General Hospital on Wednesday, a dose of ether was administered to a patient upon whom a minor surgical operation was performed, and death resulted.

—Little Dick—I can do something your papa can't do. The Little Thespian twins—What is it Little Dick—Draw a house. My mamma said he never drew one last season.

A severe hailstorm passed over parts of Austin yesterday. Many persons were killed.

EGYPTIAN CHICKENS.

How They Are Hatched by Millions in Rude Incubators.

The Egyptian chickens are smaller than the American variety and the eggs are only about half as large as those laid by the speckled hens on Uncle Sam's farm. The Egyptians are, however, far in advance of us in the science of raising chickens, says Frank G. Carpenter, and the incubating establishments of the country hatch out eggs by the millions every year. At a hatching establishment near the pyramids the farmers trade fresh eggs for young chicks, and the rate is two eggs per chick. Another artificial egg hatchery turns out 500,000 little chickens every season, and the oven crop of chickens in Egypt amounts, according to figures furnished me by the Consul-General, to more than 20,000,000 of chickens a year. We have about $200,000,000 worth of money invested in the fowl industry in the United States, an amount so large that all the money of Jay Gould could not equal it, and still we have to import more than 16,000,000 dozens of eggs every year. If America would adopt the Egyptian hatching system we could sell eggs instead of buying them, and our farmers might buy little chickens to raise at a price of 20 cents a dozen. More than 20,000,000 of little chickens are sold each year in this way in Egypt, and there is an envelope business in chickens just about old enough to walk.

The incubators are rude, one-story buildings, made of undried bricks, so arranged that the eggs are laid upon cut straw in racks in rooms, around the ovens, which are kept fired in during the hatching season. The outside walls are very thick and are built so they retain the heat, and the only thermometer used is the blood of the boy or man who attends the fires. By long practice these men learn just how hot the ovens ought to be kept, and they replenish the fires as the weather demands. A small amount of fuel is needed, and the temperature of the oven is about that of 98 degrees above zero. The fire is built up for eight or ten days before the eggs are put in, to thoroughly warm the hut, and after this time it does not go out during the season, which is from March until May. The eggs are turned four times a day while hatching. The whole outfit of an establishment which hatches over 200,000 chickens a year does not, I am told, cost more than $25, and one man runs the whole machine, keeping the fires, buying and turning the eggs, and selling the chickens. There are, in this incubator, twelve compartments, each 70 feet long, 60 feet wide and 16 feet high, and each of these compartments will hold 7,500 eggs at a time, or 90,000 eggs in all. It produced last year more than 230,000 chickens and did the work of more than 20,000 hens.

By Rail to Jerusalem.

The British consular agent at Jaffa in his last report on the trade of his district states that a concession for a railway from Jaffa to Jerusalem has been granted by the Sultan to Mr. Joseph Navon, an Ottoman subject, for seventy-one years. It is stated that a company has been formed in England and France to carry out the scheme, and that the engineers are soon expected to undertake the work. The carriage road between Jaffa and Jerusalem has been greatly improved. The government sold last year the income from the toll of the road for £2,085, as compared with £1,812 the year before last, which shows an increase in the traffic. The Jewish colonies in Palestine are greatly improving; one of them, which is called Richon le Zion, has planted about 2,000,000 vines, all promising well. The colonists are great laborers; nearly all their land is cultivated. The greater part of them are Turkish subjects, and all subject to the laws of the country.—London Times.

Nothing Like Getting Used to It.

A few years ago the colored brethren established a church near the residence of our good old friend Robert Wolters. At first the noise disturbed the old gentleman much, and thinking the best way out of the trouble would be to buy them out he made a proposition; they hooted at the offer. Time went on and they began to figure up the price offered by Mr. Wolters for the building against the cost of a new edifice elsewhere in town. It was developed that the price offered would build two houses like it. A committee was appointed to wait upon Mr. Wolters and the chairman said: "Mr. Wolters, we have come to accept the offer you made us last year for the church." "Church? Nonsense! I've got used to the fuss now and couldn't sleep a wink without it. No, no, I don't want it. Go on with the meeting."—Schulenberg, Texas, Messenger.

What We Must Wear.

Another threatened innovation is in frock coats. Nobody wears frock coats nowadays but elderly gentlemen and country brethren from way back. But it is not the recent frock coat with which we are threatened—the genteel garment, whose skirts come down well below the middle thigh—but a substitute for it closely resembling the bobby coat which Thomas and James wear when they go out with the coach and the horses. This frock coat is now worn to a considerable extent in England, and that it will at least be offered in New York is a foregone conclusion. Its distinguishing feature, of course, is its short skirts, which reach nearly to mid-thigh, and present an appearance quite devoid of the dignity we are wont to associate with full-skirted garments.—New York Mail and Express.

The Road to Wealth.

"Mr. Jones!" said the old millionaire.

"Yes, sir," answered the private secretary.

"Here are fifty begging letters. Answer them all with a refusal."

"Yes, sir."

"And you will observe that every one has a two-cent stamp inclosed for reply."

"Yes, sir."

"Well, answer them on a postal."

The New West.

Usher (at reception in Chicago, pompously, as Mr. Foot and daughters enter)—Mr. Foot and the Misses Feet!

And yet they say Chicago has no culture.

Jinks—Been to the circus, eh? See anything new? Blinks—Yes, the children who laughed at the clowns were new.

How to "Make Coffee."

Dr. W. Junker, the African traveller, says: "Any European who believed that the decoction of coffee-beans which had been tasted at home deserved the name of 'coffee' is soon convinced of his error after sojourning for a while in Turkey, Egypt or Arabia. He will, indeed, at first be somewhat surprised always to find some sediment in his cup, which he is apt to overlook until he has swallowed some. But he will soon learn to sip the aromatic liquid carefully from off the sediment. The proper way to prepare coffee is as follows: The beans, which should, of course, if possible, be of the very best quality (genuine Mokka), are carefully examined, and all damaged ones picked out, constituting then what is known as el-bunn es-saft. Immediately before use the requisite quantity is freshly roasted and powdered, which latter is preferably done in a wooden mortar. The powder should be quite fine like flour. Water having been brought to a boil in a suitable kettle or vessel, a certain quantity of the powder—a small spoonful for every small cupful of coffee to be drawn from the vessel—is added, the whole stirred, and the vessel replaced on the fire until the liquid boils and foams up. It is then removed and the coffee served."

Nutmegs.

The nutmeg is the innermost kernel of the fruit of a small tree that grows about thirty feet high. It is a native of the East Indies, but it is cultivated in other tropical lands. It has a small yellow flower. The fruit is small and peachlike, but with a smooth surface, and turns yellow when ripe. The exterior, a thick, fleshy husk, dries up and cracks, disclosing the nut. The outer covering of this nut is what we know as mace. It is red at first, but turns to a light brown when dried. Next comes a hard, shining shell, and inside that is the nutmeg. The tree bears about the eighth or ninth year from the seed. The mace is taken off and dried in the sun for one day, and for eight days in the shade, then dampened with sea water and pressed in bags. The remainder of the nut is very thoroughly dried, when the shell is broken and the nutmegs assorted, the best ones being exported. They are first pickled in lime-water, then left to sweat, and finally packed for shipment. The Penang nutmegs, the best, are about an inch long, pale brown, corrugated on the surface, with red streaks in the gray interior.—London Standard.

Watch Screws.

It is asserted that the smallest screws in the world are those used in the production of watches. Thus, the fourth jewel wheel screw is the next thing to be invisible, and to the naked eye it looks like dust: with a glass, however, it is seen to be a small screw, with 260 threads to the inch, and with a very fine glass the threads may be seen quite clearly. These minute screws are 1-1,000th of an inch in diameter, and the heads are double: it is also estimated that an ordinary lady's thimble would hold 100,000 of these screws. No attempt is ever made to count them, the method pursued in determining the number being to place 100 of them on a very delicate balance, and the number of the whole amount is determined by the weight of these. After being cut the screws are hardened and put in frames, about 100 to the frame, heads up, this being done very rapidly by sense of touch instead of by sight, and the heads are then polished in an automatic machine 10,000 at a time. The plate on which the polishing is performed is covered with oil and a grinding compound, and on this the machine moves them rapidly by reversing motion.—New York Star.

The Hebrew Oath.

In the city court this morning in the case of Charles Freeman against Charles Goldman for the recovery of $25, the orthodox Hebrew oath was administered by the Jewish rabbi. To take the oath the witness has to wash his hands and put on a Talith, or prayer cloak, and while swearing to take and hold in his hand a tora, or the five books of Moses, written on parchment, for the use of the house of worship. The party must swear by the name of Jehovah, and, looking at the word, he shall swear: "I swear by Adonai," and concludes his oath, "So help me God to future happiness." A small casket contains the ten commandments and is held in the left hand, a strap attached being bound about the arms, and another such casket is strapped on the temple. The rabbi administered the oath to several witnesses before court adjourned for dinner.—Utica Observer.

She Spat on Her Bait.

We had long since voted her the prettiest girl in the boat. This would have been an offset for poor luck at fishing if she had only known it, but we weren't saying a word for fear of spoiling her, when by and by she looked up to the grizzly old captain and asked: "Captain, shouldn't I spit on my bait to bring luck?" "Guess you should," he replied. "Lemme put on a fresh shrimp and then you can spit." "Real hard?" "Yes." "All the spit I can?" "Yes." She held the hook within three inches of her nose, twisted her tongue three or four times and then gave a "huchoo!" We saw something fly overboard, heard a scream of despair and next moment the prettiest girl fell in a heap in the bottom of the boat. She had thrown both plates of false teeth out of her head into 20 feet of water.—New York Sun.

It is said that Sir Charles Russell's fees in the Maybrick case amounted to 1,100 guineas; 200 guineas was the fee marked on his brief, and he received 300 guineas as a "special retainer, and a daily "refresher" of 100 guineas.

If you marry a girl who is fond of dress,
You'll have a hard row to hoe;
I'm a single man, but I know it's true,
For my mother told me so.

TESTS made in London have shown that the value of coal wasted in smoke from the domestic fireplaces in that city amounts to $11,282,500 annually, while the aggregate waste of unconsumed carbon is $13,000,000 a year, and the damage to property caused by the smoky atmosphere is put down at $10,000,000. The effect upon human life and health of an enormous volume of hydro-carbon and carbonic-oxide gases pouring into the atmosphere daily is fearful to contemplate, and science could do nothing more practical than to bend its energies to the solution of such a great economic problem.

GEO. MITCHELL,

BANKER,

FLESHERTON.

DRAFTS BOUGHT AND SOLD.

Special Attention paid to the collection Notes and Accounts. One door North Revenue Office

The Local News.

What is Happening in Our Own Vicinity.

The minutes of Artemesia Council, which met on Monday, will appear next week.

A new and commodious station is in course of erection by the C. P. R. at Proton Station.

In another column will be found a "pay call" notice to subscribers that will be of interest to all our readers.

Mrs. Levi Hall and Miss Fogarty, of Churchville, paid a short visit to friends in the vicinity of Kimberley lately.

Mr. Chas. Lettau of Toronto, who has been visiting with the editor's family for the past three weeks, returned home on Saturday.

We are crowding out a large number of small advertisements this week. Your immediate attention to them is earnestly requested.

The Messrs. R. and A. Nelson, mill owners, are erecting a new store at Proton Station. They will also enlarge their grain warehouse.

The program of South Grey Teachers' Institute, to be held in Durham on Thursday and Friday, Oct. 3 and 4 next, has just been issued from this office.

We have received a copy of prize list of the Great Northern Exhibition, to be held in Collingwood on Wednesday, Thursday and Friday, Sept. 25, 26 and 27.

Mr. A. H. N. Jenkins, of libel fame, one time editor of the Durham Chronicle and Brussells Budget, has secured a situation as managing editor of the Brantford daily Telegram.

Those of our subscribers who are in arrears on their subscription accounts, will find a notice printed in our local columns that is of interest to them.

Wanted to Purchase!

A good, heavy, 2 year old filly colt. Apply to P. Hannan, Flesherton P.O.

More Honey.

Another large quantity of honey has been left at this office for sale. Twelve cents a pound in small quantities. A reduction will be made on 25 lbs. and over.

"Thoroughbred Ganders."

A pencil-written notice was posted in the Flesherton hotel last Saturday announcing that "seven well-bred geese and two thorough-bred ganders" would be offered at public auction that afternoon. The sale did not come off, however, as the owner put in an appearance and claimed the property.

Advertise Stray Animals.

When an animal or article is lost the quickest way to recover it is by advertising it in the newspaper. A great many people adopt the penny wise and pound foolish policy of tramping the neighborhood over in fruitless search of the missing object, losing more time than would pay for an advertisement many times over.—[Ex.

Unrestriced Reciprocity

may be of inestimable advantage to Canada or it may be a mere "fad" as its opponents call it, but no one can deny that Nasal Balm, has done more for sufferers from catarrh than any other remedy known. Mr. Thomas Roche, Rochefort, Ont, says :—I have suffered severely from catarrh, and never got any relief until I used Nasal Balm. I never thought I could find so sure a cure. It is a pity all afflicted with catarrh do not know of and use this wonderful medicine.

The Crops.

Through information received from various points we learn that throughout the townships of Euphrasia, Artemesia and Osprey, all kinds of grain are yielding well, with oats and peas exceptionally good. In Proton, most of Glenelg and Melancthon the yield is poor, with the exception of oats and peas, which appear to have done well in all sections. Barley in these townships is not of good quality, owing to rains. Harvesting will be well advanced this week, owing to the exceptionally fine weather of the past two weeks.

The Rev. Geo. H. Thayer, of Burbone Ind., says : "Both myself and my wife owe our lives to Shiloh's Consumption Cure. For sale at the Medical Hall.

Keep it in Order.

The school bell once more sheds forth its accents upon the ambient air. The bell rope breaks regularly about once a week, when the bell's melody ceaseth. Could not the rope be replaced with wire? We like to here the lingering, vibrating accents of the aforesaid bell as it hustles the youngsters off to the place of execution (they execute their studies you know), where the rod tireth not, and the muscular development of the master getteth in its handiwork. Keep the bell in order and let us enjoy the memories it awakens.

Fine Plums.

The individual who says this country cannot raise good fruit, frost or no frost, is away off in his calculations. We had a large basket of plums sent us from Kimberley on Monday which was hand some enough to make an epicure's mouth water. They were all extraordinarily large, and luscious to a degree which no other fruit can attain. We measured one which proved to be 6½ inches in circumference one way and 5¾ the other. There were numbers of others equally large, in fact they all appeared to be nearly of a size. The plums were grown by Mr. J. M. Thurston, of Kimberley, and discount anything we have seen for a long time.

Tried to Jump to Death.

The other night while J.W. Henderson, Esq., was coming from Toronto, an intoxicated young man boarded the train at Dundalk with the intention of stealing a ride to Proton Station. He took up a position on the back end of the rear coach, and when approaching Proton Station, while the train was still travelling at the rate of about 30 miles per hour, the individual in question attempted to jump off. Mr. Henderson, who luckily chanced to be standing near him, grabbed his collar but could not pull him upon the steps. However, a brakesman opportunely put in an appearance and caught his legs, and in this way he was held up until the train arrived at the station. Here the conductor made him "whack up" under threats of arrest. It was a pretty close call for Mr. drunk, and as it was his pants were manufactured into ribbons and the cuticle of his legs tickled to an extent that he will not soon forget.

A Dotard.

We neglected noticing last week that while in Markdale on Tuesday we enjoyed a pleasant visit with friend Rutledge, of the Standard. He pronounced business as being quiet. Brother Rutledge is genial and affable. If he would but do his own editorial work, and not allow the addle-pated, hysterical nincompoop who wrote what editorial he had last week, access to his columns, the respect entertained for him by his readers would be more in ratio with the aforesaid qualities than they are at present. The writer referred to likens The Advance to Shakespeare's Dogberry. It is not a character that any person need be ashamed of. On one Occasion Dogberry had to deal with two hypocritical rascals, and the writer of the article referred to strikes us as being at least a fair representation of one of them. He would have us believe that he is the only immaculate seer in christendom, and in this case endeavors to hide it behind scurrility. But in the words of Dogberry, "No thou villian, thou art full of piety, as shall be proved upon thee by good witness."

Personals.

Miss Sarah Smith is visiting in Toronto.

Mrs. Skene, of the Sault, is visiting at Mr. W. P. Crossley's.

Miss Belle Christoe is visiting friends in and east of Toronto.

Mr. A. Munshaw and son took in the Barnum show in Toronto on Monday.

Miss Frances Beecroft has secured the position of head milliner with a large firm in Collingwood.

Dr. T. Henderson, dentist, is about paying a visit to British Columbia and California, and will not visit Flesherton professionally for some months. It will be a well-earned rest for Dr. Henderson.

Mr. Ed. and Miss Lizzie Richardson left for Owen Sound on Monday evening, the former to attend the Collegiate Institute in preparation for a second year at the University, and the latter to attend Model School.

A Strange Disappearance.

A few weeks ago a young man, who gave his name as Plaxton, arrived at Munshaw's hotel, claiming to be a representative of the Globe newspaper. He appeared to be in no haste, and remained nearly two weeks. He was affable and pleasant, and made himself quite at home and a favorite around the hotel. On Monday of last week, however, he suddenly disappeared, leaving no clue as to his destination. In fact no one saw him leave, and it could not be discovered which direction he took. He ate dinner as usual but could not be found at tea time. His room did not present the appearance of anticipated departure, as everything was left as he had used it, even to the case of a costly meerschaum pipe. He left behind him a large quantity of clothing and books sufficient to more than cover the cost of his board several times over. Mr. Munshaw will not entertain the idea that there was anything crooked about the young man, and still expects to hear from him. However, his strange departure appears unexplainable, and if something is not soon learned as to his whereabouts inquiries should be instituted to ascertain where he was from and where he has gone. It is remarkable, to say the least, that he could disappear thus in broad daylight without any person having seen him depart.

Any amount of honey for sale at this office.

Married in Dakota.

The following particulars of the marriage of Mr. Herbert Strain, of Minot, Dakota, (an old Flesherton boy) to Miss Sarah Abrams, of Pembina, appeared in the Pembina Express of date August 2 :

The ceremony was preformed at the residence of the bride's mother, in the presence of a large number of relatives and invited guests. The presents were numerous and beautiful. Many were the artistic handworks of the donors and all were tasteful and appropriate. After the ceremony, the guests sat down to a bountiful repast whose variety was only excelled by its elegance. After some time spent in social converse and merry making, the guests departed at a late hour, wishing the new married pair every blessing known to mortals. The groom is a member of the mercantile firm of Strain Bros. of Minot, N.D., and was formerly connected with the business of Shaw & Charlton of this city. While a citizen here, by his urbane manners, business abilities and good habits, he earned the regard and respect of a large number of friends who will be glad to learn that he has been successful in his Minot venture and will congratulate him on this last addition to his capital. Of the bride we can truly say that her place in church and social circle will be hard to fill. She is a fine musician, both instrumental and vocal, and is possessed of a talent of executive power that made her a leader in social entertainments and gatherings. She was for several years deputy auditor of this county and the public examiner paid her the compliment of having the neatest set of books that he had seen. Very few couples start out in the dual relation with more good wishes from as large a circle of warm friends, for all the pleasures of the wedded state than do this popular and happy pair.

The same paper of date Aug. 22 tells of a farewell gathering in Pembina, of which Mrs. Strain was the heroine. It was given by the Methodist congregation of that place, and during the evening Mrs. Strain was presented with a handsome silver water set valued at $25. The Advance vies with its western confrere in offering the heartiest of well wishes to the happy couple, which will be echoed by very many of Mr. Strain's old friends and acquaintances here.

Special.

It is with pleasure that we announce to our many patrons that we have made arrangements with that wide-awake, illustrated farm magazine, the American farmer, published at Fort Wayne, Ind., and read by nearly 200,000 farmers, by which that great publication will be mailed direct, FREE, to the address of any of our subscribers, who will come in and pay up all arrearages on subscription and one year in advance from date, and to any new subscriber who will pay one year in advance. This is a grand opportunity to obtain a first-class farm journal free. The American Farmer is a large 16-page journal, of national circulation, which ranks among the leading agricultural papers. It treats the question of economy in agriculture and the rights and privileges of that vast body of citizens—American farmers—whose industry is the basis of all material and national prosperity. Its highest purpose is the elevation and ennobling of Agriculture through the higher and broader education of men and women engaged in its pursuits. The regular subscription price of the American Farmer is $1.00 per year. IT COSTS YOU NOTHING. From any one number ideas can be obtained that will be worth thrice the subscription price to you or members of your household, BUT YOU GET IT FREE. Call and see sample copy.

Servant girl wanted :—Apply to Mrs. W. Irwin, Flesherton.

A Narrow Escape.

Geo. Snell, a young man 18 years of age, living on the back line, west, while approaching the cheese factory with a load of milk on Tuesday morning, met with a serious accident which might easily have proved fatal. While descending from the street to the factory his team became unmanageable and started to run. The wagon struck a stone and the collision broke the wagon tongue, letting the horses free. The lines became entangled, drawing Snell from the wagon, and one wheel of the latter passed over his body just above the hips. The injured man was carried to Dr. Carter's office and from thence home. At last accounts he was able to walk around. It was an exceedingly narrow escape.

Many so-called diseases are simply symptoms of Catarrh, such as headache, partial deafness, loss of sense of smell, foul breath, ringing and roaring in the head, general feeling of debility, etc. If you are troubled with any of these or kindred symptoms you have Catarrh, and should lose no time in procuring a bottle of Nasal Balm. The worst cases, when neglected, end in head results in Catarrh, Deafness, Consumption and death. Nasal Balm is sold by all druggists, or will be sent, post paid, on receipt of price 50 cents and $1 00 by addressing

FULFORD & CO., BROCKVILLE, ONT.

Beware of imitations similar in name.

Why will you cough when Shiloh's cure will give immediate relief. Price 10 cts., 50 cts., and $1. For sale at the Medical Hall.

NEW ADVERTISEMENTS

CAME ASTRAY!

Came to the premises of James Fisher, Lot 28, 5th Con. Artemesia, on or about the first of May last, one red steer supposed to be a 2 year old. The owner is requested to prove property, pay expenses and take him away.

JAMES FISHER.

Flesherton, Aug. 5, 1885.

SALESMEN

Wanted for our complete line of NURSERY STOCK. All new, choice and FAST-SELLING SPECIALTIES. I can furnish PAYING POSITIONS to workers. My large experience in the business enables me to offer special advantages to beginners. I CAN MAKE A SUCCESSFUL SALESMAN of any one who will follow my instruction. Permanent employment. Wages paid each week. Outfit free. Apply at once and secure choice of territory.

EDWARD P. SNELL,
Nurseryman, ROCHESTER, N. Y.

MENTION THIS PAPER.

A Complete History of the Johnstown and CONEMAUGH VALLEY FLOOD

embracing also, a history of the floods in Williamsport, Lock Haven, Sunbury, and all the flooded districts in the State of Pennsylvania, also in Washington, D. C., New York, Maryland, Virginia and West Virginia, all of which caused the total loss of over 11,000 lives and the destruction of over $40,000,000 worth of property;

By GEO. T. FERRIS, A. M.

Octavo, 522 pages; Illustrated with Forhty-Eight Full-Page Engravings. Price $1.50. First edition issued August 10th. No pay duty on all books. Agents Wanted. Send 50 cts. for complete outfit.

H. S. GOODSPEED & Co., New York.

NORTHERN BUSINESS COLLEGE.

Owen Sound, Ont.

Re-Opens on Sept. 2nd for Ninth College Year.

BUSINESS DEPARTMENT, SHORTHAND AND TYPEWRITING DEPARTMENT, AND ORNAMENTAL DEPARTMENT.

The most complete and practical College in Canada.

For Annual Announcements giving full Particulars address

C. A. Fleming, Principal.

Medical.

DR. CARTER,

M.C.P. & S., ONT.

PHYSICIAN, SURGEON, &c.

FLESHERTON.

Office, Strain's block. Residence, J. G. Russel's.

J. G. Hutton, M.D.C.M.

Member of the College of Physicians and Surgeons, Ontario.

Enquire at office, one door east of Grier's store or Atkinson's Hotel.

DRS. SPOULE & EGO.

MARKDALE ONT.

Office:—Manley's Drug Store.

T. S. SPROULE, M.D. etc. ANGUS EGO, M.D.

J. P. OTTEWELL,

VETERINARY SURGEON

Graduate of Ontario Veterinary College

TORONTO, ONT.

FLESHERTON.

Dentistry.

J. P. MARSHALL,

L.D.S., DENTIST.

Visits Markdale on the first Monday in each month.

Flesherton every Tuesday following.

Legal.

J. W. FROST,

Barrister, Solicitor, Conveyancer, &c.

FLESHERTON OFFICE, NEXT POST OFFICE. SPROULE'S BUILDING, EVERY THURSDAY.

P. McCULLOUGH,

Barrister, Solicitor, &c.

Office, over McFarland's Store, Markdale. Money to Loan.

Business Cards.

John W. Armstrong,

FLESHERTON, CO. GREY.

DIVISION COURT CLERK, COMMISSIONER, C. E. R., Conveyancer, &c. Agent for approved sale of lands. Appraiser for C. L. C. Co. and F. P. B. & S. Society. Money to Loan on most reasonable terms. Issuer of MARRIAGE LICENSES. NOTARY PUBLIC.

MONEY TO LOAN.

AT LOWEST CURRENT RATES

On Town or Farm Property,

S. DAVIS, JR.,

Flesherton.

Mr. Wm. Karstedt,

Stone Mason, Bricklayer and Plasterer

MATERIAL FURNISHED

Estimates given free. Ornamental Plastering a Specialty.

Residence one door south of Advance Office.

W. J. BELLAMY

TWP. CLERK ARTEMESIA.

CONVEYANCER, COMMISSIONER INSURANCE ACT, &C.

DEEDS, MORTGAGES, LEASES, &c., prepared and properly executed. Insurance effected in first-class companies. Money to lend at lowest rates.

R. J. Sproule,

POSTMASTER, Flesherton, Commissioner in B. R., Licensed Auctioneer, Conveyancer, Appraiser and Money Lender. Real Estate and Insurance Agent. Deeds, Mortgages, Leases and Wills drawn up and Valuations made on shortest notice. Auction Sales attended to in any pary of the County. Money to loan at lowest rates of interest. Collections attended to with promptness and despatch. Charges low. Agent for the Dominion Steamship Company. Cheap tickets from Flesherton to Liverpool, Glasgow, London or any of the British Ports. Parties intending to visit England, Scotland or Ireland, will please ask rates before purchasing their tickets elsewhere.

Hub Thill Spring,

MANUFACTURED BY

Butts & Ordway,

147, Pearl St., Boston.

Pat'd Dec. 1, 1885.

Of Interest to every man who uses a Wagon or Carriage.

THIS ANTI-RATTLER IS the BEST,

Because it is effective, simple, easily adjusted, durable, inexpensive. There are no projecting ends to tear the sponge or wash cloth. It fits any size coupling.

—FOR SALE AT—

Heard's Carriage Shop

Competition Defied!

PRICES CHALLENGED

THE PEOPLE

Wonder!

How we can sell so cheap and at the same time keep up the standard quality.

OUR MOTTO IS

SMALL PROFITS

—AND—

QUICK RETURNS.

And the large trade we are doing proves that our efforts to please and give satisfaction are appreciated by

To speak of our cheap or leading lines would mean to enumerate our whole stock which is in

FURNITURE

PARLOR

CONSISTS OF

Plush & Hair Cloth Suites,
Sofas,
Lounges,
Centre Tables
Sideboards,
Cupboards,
Chairs,
Etc.

—IN—

Bedroom

Furnishings

We have still better values than ever. Whole bedroom suites of beautiful finish and design at remarkable low prices. Spring Matresses and Mixed Wool Matresses lower than ever.

J. E. MOORE

Furniture Dealer and Funeral Director.

1 & 2,
Durham St.,
FLESHERTON

COUNTY & DISTRICT.

A Barrie lad named Smith cut his foot and died of lock jaw.

Kincardine will probably give $700 to bonus a stove manufactory.

Mr. Andrew Shore, Collingwood township, got his shoulder dislocated by being thrown out of a buggy in Meaford.

Neil Campbell, of Bentinck, died recently. He was 87 years old and never knew what sickness was until he experienced the one which took him off.

Early yesterday morning Mr J.C. Shook's saw mill at Corbetton was burned to the ground, together with about 60,000 feet of lumber (mostly hardwood) and 40,000 shingles. The mill was valued at $3000; insured for $1000. The fire is supposed to have been the work of an incendiary, as there had been no fire in the mill since Saturday. The loss is a severe one to Mr. Shook and to the village.—[Shelburne Economist.

The Woodstock Sentinel Review says: A peculiar instance of the tenacity with which some animals cling to life has recently been brought light. Over a month ago Mr John Smith, of South Zorra, lost a steer and no trace of it could be found until a few days ago when some men working in the Mud Branch drain found the animal embedded in the mire. It was alive tho it is tolerable certain that it had been stuck fast in the bog for 30 days. On being liberated it was found that the flesh was laid bare on its back by the flies, hoofs were beginning to rot from its feet. It was still alive a day or two ago, a couple of days after it was removed from the mud.

On Sunday, the 18th, a five-year-old daughter of Mr. Louis Werner, Clifford, was accidently shot by her brother, aged eight years. The parents had gone to a camp-meeting some nine miles distant, and had left a young girl in charge of the children. The revolver, a 32 caliber, was loaded and within reach of the boy who took it and pointing at the girl in charge said he would shoot her. It went off and the ball struck the little girl over the right eye, fracturing the skull and lodging in the brain. Three doctors were soon in attendance and everything possible was done to save the child, although scarcely any hope was entertained of its recovery. This is another of the many warnings parents have received not to leave loaded fire arms within reach of your children.—[Mt. Forest Rep

A very distressing and fatal accident occurred at the farm of Mr. Nicholas Brown, 14th concession of Bro[illegible] on Monday last, by which an active young lad named Timpson met a terrible death. Deceased was driving a self-binder and it seems had just ceased work owing to rain, when the horses took fright at something and prepared to dash off. Timpson jumped to the front in order to seize the animals by the head, but in some manner fell directly in front of the machine, which was pulled over him. The knives tore and cut him in a horrible manner and the fingers of the right-former severated his lungs. The unfortunate fellow lingered in terrible agony until Tuesday morning when death put an end to his sufferings. He was one of Dr. Barnardo's charges and was in every respect a model youth.

George Williams is an Englishman who is too lazy to work and would rather be in jail, where he is sure of three meals a day, than at liberty. He has spent ten years in the British army and ten more in different penitentiaries and prisons of this country. Two years ago he struck Orangeville and the same night the agricultural hall at the exhibition grounds fell a prey to the incendiary's torch. For this crime, which he frankly acknowledged, Williams spent two years in the Central prison at Toronto. On Thursday morning week the little stone building on Prince of Wales' road, known as the "Manc College," was discovered to be on fire, and when the honest farmers of the vicinity gathered to extinguish the blaze they were coolly told by Williams that he was the man who applied the match. Williams, of course, was at once arrested, taken before Police Magistrate Pattullo and committed for trial. He was arraigned before Judge McCarthy on Tuesday of last week, and, as he rather likes his quarters in the "Castle," elected to be tried by a jury at the fall assizes. The prisoner, who is about 45 years of age and of robust appearance, has been pronounced sane by Jail Physician Lewis. He makes a specialty of burning public buildings, his sole object evidently being a desire to end his days in jail. It is a pity that the law does not permit of the addition of the cat-o' nine-tails to his sentence.—[Orangeville Advertiser.

The New Butter Extractor.

An ingenious fellow in Sweden has invented a machine for making butter from milk nearly fresh from the cow and it now looks as though a great revolution in butter making is about to occur, brought about by this wonderful machine The whole process of extracting butter from milk by its use is a mystery to us and we can only stand back in amazement and await further developments. The success of this process, however, is proven beyond doubt, and the following description, taken from Hoards' Dairyman, will throw some light upon the method of making butter by means of the Extractor:

"One month ago, the machine was set up at 90 Wall street, New York, and has since been astonishing every manipulator of milk, cream and butter who has inspected it. It takes sweet milk at a temperature of 62 degrees, runs it through the machine at the rate of 1,500 pounds per hour—the skimmed milk—there is no buttermilk about it—coming out at a point on the periphery of the bowl, and the granulated butter from the center. The machine is much like the Danish-Western separator, as to the main bowl; and it has inside of the said bowl another device called the "disturber," into which the cream enters as it seeks the center, and as we understand it from the cut and the explanation, a secondary separation is effected in the disturber that eliminates all the serum of the milk from the fat, save a little more than 1 per cent. of the caseine matter. As the most charming of the purest cream obtainable, by any of the old processes, leaves one per cent.; and the great bulk of the butter has 2 to to 3 per cent., and some of the poorest from 6 to 7 per cent. it will be seen it turns out butter essentially the same as freedom from the matter that makes butter go rancid, as we get from best churning.

Owen Sound Summer Carnival.

From our Special Correspondent.

Early in the day visitors could be seen wending their way towards our town which was decorated for the occasion. Shortly after noon excursionists began to arrive from Meaford, Wiarton, Collingwood, Brampton and Toronto. These friends were met at the station and the wharf by many of our populace, who were headed by the "Citizens' Own Band." By 3 o'clock over 3,000 persons had assembled on the pleasure grounds to witness the many sports of which our town in this northern region takes the lead. It is unnecessary to say that all were well pleased with the manner in which the boys acquitted themselves. Early in the evening firemen were on the alert. From every point Chinese lanterns could be seen swaying in the breeze while the ear was pleased with the grand music which was furnished by the "Diamond Oil Company" and our three town bands.

From the Patterson House the Citizens' Own led the procession down Poulett street. Then followed the nautical display. Every craft in town appeared to have paid a visit to China for their many quaint illuminations. The fast sailing steam ship, the Cambria, led the way, followed by the Mocking Bird with her fleet of forty sail. Near the dry dock professor Hans stationed his artillery. For hours the sky was one beautiful picture of medleyed stars and whirling meteors while over and anon balloons shot across the northern sky, shedding forth glory on their way. No doubt the numerous visitors bore away many pleasant recollections of the day's enjoyment, and will often think of the stirring enterprise of our people and the grand enlivening scenery that surrounds our fair young city.

Eugenia.

From an Occasional Correspondent.

Mrs. Plembel and her daughter-in-law, Mrs. George Plembel, of Buffalo, have been visiting at William Purvis, near Eugenia, with some other friends. They spent a very pleasant afternoon visiting the caves and the falls. They also went down the Lovers' Walk and got pretty well tired out coming back. Mrs. Plembel has been a resident of Buffalo for forty two years. She was delighted with the scenery around Eugenia, and the pure air and good water. She says if they only had such picnic grounds near Buffalo what a grand pleasure resort would be made of it. Mrs. Plembel hopes to return in the near future and pay a longer visit to this romantic village.

Miss Ballie, of Chicago, is visiting at Mr. Jamison's. She is a very welcome visitor among her many friends around Eugenia, who still look forward with pleasure to her annual visit every summer.

Mr. J.R. Hogg has gone to reside in Toronto. Every one is sorry at his leaving the Falls. May he prosper where ever he goes. He is a good, honest young man.

Feversham.

From our own Correspondent.

There is an excellent crop—one without arrival for many years—in Osprey this year.

Our popular merchant has been able to withstand the commercial opposition he has so often met with. He is here still, and commands a good patronage.

W. McGirr got up at 21 minutes past five Wednesday morning. He must have been in a somnambulistic state. What think ye?

Our hotel is run on a very quiet style. No intruders, not so much as a tiny mouse.

Rev. Mr. McNeil has been away on a visit to his home to see his aged father. He will soon return.

Feversham school house was entirely rejuvenated during vacation, re-raised, newly plastered and neatly painted. The attendance is small caused by the big harvest.

Our saw mill is doing very [illegible] not because the water is low [illegible]

Flesherton Station

From our own Correspondent.

Weather exceedingly hot, fine for harvesting. Farmers start[illegible] success to their operations. Crops promise to be large in quantity and fair in quality, except wheat, some complaint of it, but wheat is not a staple around here. Always the stepping done in wood, pea[illegible] are not coming on, but [illegible] expect that it will be large in supply and profitable to handling this year. Good opening just now at the station for a shoemaker, a tailor, a saddler, and a tinsmith might also live and be useful.

There has been some sickness; one house has run quite a baby farm for the last month, succeeding, however, in the safe bringing through of two infants.

One of our esteemed young ladies was taken ill this week. All wish her a speedy recovery.

Noodlers around the station at the present time, thanks to the good demand of harvest work.

General News.

Mrs. W. E. Christian, the only child of Stonewall Jackson, died of typhoid fever at Charlotte, S.C., Friday.

At Fenelon Falls on Thursday, Percy, the little son of W.E. Ellis, druggist, was drowned while playing about the canal works.

Upon reaching Kingston prison, Mrs. Maybrick was examined by the prison physician, and upon his orders she was placed in the infirmary.

At Chattanooga, Tenn., Ida McLain, a beautiful young woman, burned herself to death, because her relatives had disagreed with her and she was tired of life.

Bail has been refused in the case of Mrs. Hicks, who is charged with having poisoned her brother in Toronto.

The Atlas woollen mills at Whitby were burned Friday.

At the New Hampshire State Fair a young couple were publicly married in a balloon, and immediately after the ceremony ascended on their bridal tour.

Wm. Pile, aged 72, a cripple, wandered away from his home, near St. Thomas, twelve days ago. Wednesday his body was found in a buckwheat patch half a mile from home. His crutches had broken, rendering him powerless, and he had died from starvation. A path through the fields showed where he had pulled himself along by burying his fingers in the ground.

Gus Witherspoon, of Yorkville, S. C., colored, whose capacity for disposing of eggs was well known, wagered a dollar on Wednesday that he could eat seven dozen eggs at one sitting. He stationed himself in a comfortable position at ten o'clock in the morning and four hours later he arose and was the heavier by eighty-four fried eggs, which he had swallowed during that time. He was well satisfied with his meal, but died the next day in great agony.

For dyspepsia and liver complaint you have a printed guarantee on every bottle of Shiloh's vitalizer. It never fails to cure For sale at the Medical Hall.

Shiloh's Cure will immediately relieve croup, whooping cough and bronchitis. For sale at the Medical Hall.

A Kingston man wants to form a syndicate to bore down a thousand feet to find what is under the city.

A woman who lived near St. Thomas was vaccinated and never recovered from the effects.

Gananoque had a $61,000 fire Sunday.

Fall Shows.

Following is a list of the dates of fall fairs in this vicinity:

NAME.	PLACE.	DATE.
East Grey	Flesherton	Sept. 24 and 25
Artemesia	Priceville	Oct. 3rd
Glenelg	Markdale	26 and 27
South Grey	Durham	Sept. 24 and 25
Great Northern	Collingwood	Sept. 25 to 27
Central Ag'l Society	Walters Falls	Sept. 24 and [illegible]
Industrial	Toronto	Sept. 9th [illegible]

The Most Successful Remedy ever discovered as it's certain in its effects and does not blister. Read proof below.

STREETSVILLE, P. Q., May 3, 1889.

DR. B. J. KENDALL CO., Enosburgh Falls, Vt.

Gentlemen:—I have used Kendall's Spavin Cure for Spavins and Stiff Joints and found it a sure cure in every respect. I cordially recommend it to all horsemen.

Very respectfully yours,
CHARLES J. BLACKALL.

KENDALL'S SPAVIN CURE.

ST. THOMAS, P. Q., April 22, 1889.

DR. B. J. KENDALL CO., Enosburgh Falls, Vt.

Gents:—I have used a few bottles of your Kendall's Spavin Cure on my colt, which was suffering from influenza in a very bad form, and can say that your Kendall's Spavin Cure made complete and rapid cure. I can recommend it as the best and most effective liniment I have ever handled. Kindly send me one of your valuable books entitled "A Treatise on the Horse." Yours respectfully,
J. F. WILKINSON.

KENDALL'S SPAVIN CURE.

FORT ELLICE, MAN., May 10, 1889.

DR. B. J. KENDALL Co., Enosburgh Falls, Vt.

Gentlemen:—I always keep your Kendall's Spavin Cure and Blister on hand and they have never failed in what you state they will do. I have cured a bad case of Spavin and also two cases of Ringbone of years standing, on mares which I bought to breed from, and have not seen any signs of disease in their offspring. Yours truly,
D. J. O'KEEFE.

Price $1 per bottle, or six bottles for $5. All druggists have it or can get it for you, or it will be sent to any address on receipt of price by the proprietors,
DR. B. J. KENDALL CO., Enosburgh Falls, Vt.
SOLD BY ALL DRUGGISTS.

$83 Sewing-Machine FREE

At once we will place, free of charge, in all parts of the country, among our customers and others, a few of our high-arm, improved, lock-stitch sewing-machines. In order that you may see what kind of goods we make and where the people can see them, we will send, free of charge, to one person in each locality, the very best sewing-machine made in the world, with all the attachments complete. We will also send, free of charge, to the same person a complete set of the most useful articles in use in every family, and one of our costly and valuable art samples. In return we ask that you show what we send, to those who may call at your home, and after 2 months all shall become your own property. This grand, new machine is made after the Singer patents (which have run out) and is fully warranted for 10 years. It is worth and will sell for $83.50. Best, strongest, most useful machine in the world. All sent free. No capital required. Plain, brief instructions given. Those who write to us at once can secure free the best sewing-machine in the world, and the best line of works of high art ever shown together in America.
TRUE & CO., Box 740, Augusta, Maine.

REMOVAL

I beg to inform the public that I have removed my well known tin shop to

MOORE'S Block, Durham St.

A complete stock of tinware will be found in my new premises.

REPAIRING
EAVETROUGHING

done as heretofore.
I have
secured the agency for
the Celebrated Singer Sewing Machine.

Requesting my old friends to come and see me in my new shop, I remain, etc.,

JAS. SULLIVAN.

D. McTavish,

HORSESHOER AND
GENERAL BLACKSMITH,
Collingwood Street,
FLESHERTON, - ONT.

Manufacturing of Wagons, Sloughs, Buggies, Democrats, etc. Horseshoeing promptly attended to. Special attention given to contracted or tender feet.

Logging and Plow Chains constantly on hand.

FOUR MEN HANGED.

The New York Murderers Meet Their Fate this Morning.

HOW THEY FACED DEATH.

A NEW YORK despatch of last night says: Packenham and Nolan were hanged at 6 55 a. m. on the Franklin street scaffold, and Lewis and Carolin on the Leonard street scaffold at 7.03 a. m. A number of visitors called yesterday to pay their farewell visit. The two faithful Sisters of Mercy, who have been unwearying in their ministrations to the murderers, came in the forenoon at 11 o'clock and remained with them until 7 in the evening. Father Prendergast and Father Galinas arrived at that hour to assume the charge of the men until death should relieve them. Pat Nolan's sister and the two men cousins, who have called on him several times since he was sentenced, were with him yesterday. A young man also came to see him. The women broke down and sobbed hysterically, while Nolan looked at them curiously and puffed a little faster on his cigar, which he chewed nervously. "You don't do any good by crying," he said at last, "for that won't help things any." Later a message was brought to gray-haired Packenham telling him that his children were coming and he stepped briskly up to the wire netting of the cage. His son and daughter entered the corridor. He cut their visit short, telling them not to grieve for him and to take warning by his gloomy fate. Their sobs echoed along the walls of the corridor as they withdrew. In the evening, a little before 10 o'clock, young Robert Packenham, who had come from his farm work to see his father on the vigil of his death, returned to the prison and a still more affecting interview than that of the morning took place between them. Under-Sheriff Sexton was obliged to lead the boy, who was sobbing, away. After supper the condemned men were taken to the yard for a last taste of air and recreation. They ranged themselves along the wall of the prison, and as if they had no connection with the dreadful ordeal of the coming day. By midnight the men were in bed and asleep. At 4.30 o'clock, the men were busy arranging their last toilet. Nolan paid particular attention to the arrangementof his necktie, while Lewis spent most of his time in blacking his boots. Packenhan and Lewis shook hands with night-keeper Orr and bade him good-bye in voices devoid of tremor. At 5 o'clock the march to the chapel was commenced, Father Prendergast leading. For three-quarters of an hour the group remained in the chapel, the priests busy with the religious rites. After mass had been said the men were returned to the cage, where breakfast was served. It was a bountiful meal, and all the men partook. It was arranged that Packenham and Nolan, both being tall and of a size, were to be hanged together on the scaffold which had been erected on the Franklin side of the prison. Carolin and Lewis were to be hung on the gibbet on the Leonard street side of the jail. At 6 54 the condemned men emerged from the jail accompanied by the priests. Father Prendergast supported Packenham and Father Galenas walked alongside of Nolan. The procession brought up with Father VanRenselaer. The arms of the condemned men were pinioned and over the shoulder of each was with its long streaming ribbon flapping in the wind. Packenham's face was of a ghastly pallor, but his step was firm. He looked unflinchingly into the faces around him. Nolan hardly appeared to realize his position. There was a half-defiant look in his countenance, and he cast his eyes up at the cross-beam from which two ropes dangled with something akin to curiosity. The rope around his neck, with the knot pressing against his left ear, seemed to chafe him, for he moved his head uneasily once or twice in his brief walk to death. Nolan took his place under the rope hanging nearest the Franklin street walk. Packenham was four feet away from his companion and next the prison. Both men turned and grasped the priests by the hands, wringing them fervently. The traps were then sprung and the bodies of the murderers were

SMOKED, LAUGHED AND TALKED

THE BLACK CAP

JERKED INTO THE AIR.

With the rebound came the sound of the falling weight plunging to the ground. For an instant there was not a movement, and then a tremor passed through the frame of Nolan. His legs were drawn up slightly and his chest heaved faintly. Packenham remained motionless for fully 30 seconds, and then came a violent trembling from head to foot. His body swayed from the hips downward for half a minute and became still. At the expiration of four minutes there was a mighty throe almost together in the suspended murderers. Packenham's pulse had gone up to 96 and then sank rapidly to 50 beats a minute. Nolan's pulse at the fourth minute was at 70, but it became weaker and weaker, and at the expiration of five minutes was no longer perceptible. There was a slight muscular contraction then in Nolan. As his body swung round a tiny stream of blood could be seen trickling down his neck; the rope had abraised a small sore in his neck. At 7.10 o'clock both men were pronounced dead, but were permitted to hang fifteen minutes longer. While this scene was being enacted preparations were being made for what proved to be the most shocking spectacle that has ever taken place within the walls of the Tombs. The hanging of Carolin and Lewis in several aspects is probably unparalleled. Two minutes after 7 Carolin and Lewis with the priests came through the door. Lewis walked unsteadily the first dozen paces, but quickly recovered himself. Carolin had the butt of a

CIGAR BETWEEN HIS LIPS,

and was puffing vigorously, blowing great clouds of smoke into the faces of the attending priests. He glared at the men of God as he turned around and felt the rope touch his shoulder. Spitting the cigar stump from his mouth he broke out into blasphemy that horrified the spectators. Atkinson had just pinioned his legs when he spoke. Looking sullenly at the three priests he suddenly exclaimed, "I die an innocent man, —— —— it. I didn't do this thing." Lewis, who had then been pinioned, half turned his head, and addressing his companion said: "What's the matter with you anyway? Why don't you die like a man?"

"I WILL DIE LIKE A MAN"

shrieked Carolin, his face turning perfectly livid. "I will die like a man, an innocent—" The words were scarcely out of his mouth before Atkinson had clapped the black cap over the murderer's face. The assistant hangman covered Lewis' face at the same moment. Atkinson gave three deliberate raps with a perceptible interval between them. The sound of a blow came from within the box and the weight fell. Instead of bounding up as Packenham and Nolan had done, the miserable wretches went into the air with so little force that there was scarcely any rebound at all. Lewis immediately began to struggle in the most sickening manner, throwing his legs about so violently as to kick off his slippers, then he began to gurgle and choke, the rasping, wheezing sound came from under the black cap, for fully ten seconds his body turned and swayed, and the contortions were so painful that half a dozen men turned away their heads. The poor creature was slowly strangled. Carolin's body was violently contorted also, but he uttered no sound. The weight fell at 7.03 o'clock, and at 7.10 both men were dead. The four bodies hung for half an hour and were then cut down and put in plain coffins. All the murderers were strangled, but the deaths of Packenham and Nolan were comparatively painless; that of Lewis was agonizing.

ANOTHER GREAT WRECK.

Two Trains Collide, Killing Three and Wounding Twenty Persons.

A Petroleum, W. Va., despatch of Friday night says: A terrible collision occurred about 11 o'clock this morning between Petroleum and Silver Run tunnel, in which three men were killed and over twenty wounded. The accommodation train coming west crashed into a special train occupied by railroad magnates on a tour of inspection. The cause of the wreck is said to have been conflicting telegrams. The one received by the conductor and engineer of the accommodation ordered them to pass the special at Petroleum, while the special train, engineered by Capt. Rowland, is said to have had orders to pass the accommodation at Silver Run. The trains came together with a crash at the curve east of Petroleum. Both trains were running rapidly, and when they collided the special train and the engine, tender, and baggage car of the accommodation went over the cliff in one indescribable mass. James Layman, engineer of the accommodation, one of the oldest engineers of the Baltimore & Ohio Road, was crushed to death. Alex. Bailey, fireman, was also crushed in the wreck of the engines. Cephas Rowland, also one of the oldest engineers of Parkersburg, was caught under the wreck and received injuries from which he connot recover. John Fletcher, fireman on the special, was crushed to death. The special car, occupied by officials on an inspecting tour, was smashed into smithereens. Road-master J. A. Hunter was badly injured, with several others, including George Douglas. In the accommodation train were many passengers, all of whom received a terrible shaking up, and about twenty of them were more or less injured. R. J. Malley, trackmaster of Parkersburg, and a member of the City Council were badly injured. J. Rose, baggage master of the accommodation train, was also seriously hurt. Many of the injured passengers were hurried off on trains going east or west, and it was impossible to get their names.

THE DAILY SMASH.

A Freight Train Crashes Into Another Freight The Casualties.

A last night's Elmira, N. Y., despatch says: As a Lehigh Valley freight train, east-bound, was backing into a switch just west of Big Flats, about 10.30 last night, an Erie west-bound freight crashed into the centre of the train, badly smashing several cars of each train and derailing many others. Both tracks were blocked, and all the passenger trains during the night had to be sent around the wreck over the D. & L. R. The Erie train, No. 2, running at a high rate, crashed into the caboose and made a wood pile of several cars. The engine turned over and slipped partly down a twenty-foot embankment. Andrew Wallace, of Hornellsville, was buried under the wreck, and his scalp was nearly torn off. He was also badly burned and scalded and may die. Fireman Chas. Kimball, of Hornellsville, had an arm broken. His face and arms were badly scalded. The express car overturned and was smashed, but did not go down the embankment. Two expressmen crawled out of the car, slightly injured. The train consisted of a smoker, two day coaches, two empty excursion coaches, and two sleepers, well filled with passengers, who were tumbled about by the shock. Two passenger cars in the middle of the train were partially telescoped, but the passengers escaped with slight bruises. The wreck took fire from the engine, burning freight and wreckage, and consuming the express and baggage cars. The contents were mostly saved.

Swindling Uncle Sam.

A Boston telegram says: The complaints of ill-treatment and swindling upon the part of United States consular officers in the Maritime Provinces practiced upon American sailors who have been unfortunate enough to apply to them for aid or advice have been continually received by the State Department for some time; but it is only recently that the authorities took any action in the matter, the result being the catching of Consul Alfred W. Hart, of Canso, N.S., in a scrape that may interfere materially with his future liberty. Numerous complaints against this man led recently to Inspector Coogan, of the secret service, being sent to investigate, resulting in the discovery of a wholesale system of robbing American sailors and defrauding the Government on bills contracted to supply shipwrecked crews. He will be at least dismissed, if not prosecuted, is the latest from Washington.

The bill conferring the right of suffrage to women on the question of licensing the manufacture and sale of intoxicating liquors in this Commonwealth has passed the Senate on its final stage by a majority of 5. —Boston "Temperance Cause."

A TERRIBLE WRECK.

An Express Train Jumps the Track at a Trestle.

ONLY TWO PERSONS ESCAPE INJURY

A Knoxville, Tenn., despatch of last night says: A horrible wreck occurred on the Knoxville, Cumberland Gap & Louisville Railroad, at Flat Gap Creek, 22 miles from here, at 10.30 this morning. The train was the first to go over the new road, and carried a select excursion of the City Council, the Board of Public Works, representatives of the Chamber of Commerce, and the very flower of the business and professional men of Knoxville. The train of two cars left the track at a crossing, and the rear car went down a trestle. Only one man was uninjured. It was impossible to obtain medical aid for a long time, and until 4.30 p. m., when the train reached Knoxville, scanty attention was rendered. Many had to be brought back on flat cars, and the last part of the journey was made in a driving rain. Three men died from their injuries, and others cannot live. The dead are: Judge George Andrews, the most prominent lawyer in East Tennessee; S. T. Powers, a leading merchant, and former President of the East Tennessee Fire Insurance Company; and Alex. Reeder, a leading politician. The injured are: Alex. A. Arthur, President of the Chamber of Commerce; Isham Young, President, and Peter Keern, member, of the Board of Public Works; John T. Hearn, editor of the Sentinel; W. W. Woodruff, a leading wholesale merchant; Charles Seymour, attorney; Alexander Wilson, assistant chief engineer of the Knoxville, Cumberland Gap & Louisville Road; County Judge Maloney, Aldermen Barry and Hockings, Gen. H. S. Chubert, of the Governor's staff; A. J. Alberts, a wholesale merchant; Rev. R. J. Cook, Professor of U. S. Grant University; City Physician West, Judge H. H. Ingersoll, H. B. Wetsell, W. B. Samuels, C. Abbie, Capt. H. H. Taylor, S. McKelden, Ed. Barker, R. Schmidt, J. F. Kinsella, W. A. Park, one of the train crew, J. B. Hall and Philip Samuels, aged 10. Out of 56 persons on the train 41 were severely injured. The most intense excitement and sadness are apparent here to-night.

A Knoxville, Tenn., despatch of Friday says: When the relief train arrived here last night from the scene of the accident over 100 carriages were in waiting. The scene as the wounded and dead were being taken out on stretchers was a ghastly one. There was a great dearth of doctors, and many of the injured had to wait several hours for attendance. It is feared that this fact, together with a drenching rain, will render the after effects very serious. Seymour and Barker will lose their legs. There is little chance for Ald. Barry. In the wreck he was thrown against the window and his abdomen filled with powdered glass. With this exception all the others may recover, unless the explosion brings on complications. It is believed the wreck can be attributed to the condition of the road. Two years ago Knoxville subscribed $225,000 towards the construction of the road, and the contract expired to-day. It was to show the city authorities that the road was completed that the excursion was given.

A SEAFARING CRANK.

A Venturesome Sailor Rescued Just in Nick of Time.

A Gloucester despatch says: The schooner Martha Bradley arrived to-day from Grand Bank, having on board Capt. Charles T. Rogers, of the boat Nickel Odeon, who was picked up on the western edge of Grand Bank, August 10th, in a helpless condition. Rogers is 39 years old, a native of Duxbury, and a jeweller by trade, although he followed the sea when young. He sailed from Boston for Paris in his eighteen-foot Nickel Odeon on July 3rd, having taken on board all necessary equipments. He enjoyed favorable weather until the 8th, when he struck a gale from the northeast lasting 72 hours. When it abated he found himself on the Georges. By July 28th he had become so blind from the sun's glimmer on the water that he could not see his compass, and steered by the sun for three days. For the last fourteen days his boat drifted around at the mercy of the wind and sea, the mariner being nearly exhausted as well as almost blind, and spent most of his time lying in the bottom of the boat. When found his condition was such that he could have lived but a short time had he not been rescued. He could neither stand nor feed himself. Since then his health has improved, but he is still very weak. His eyesight has been partly restored. He leaves for home to-day.

The Struggle in Hayti.

A special received via New Orleans, dated Port-au-Prince, says the Haytian gunboat Defence has just come in, bringing the body of General Dardignac, Legitime's Commander-in-Chief, and the news that the whole of the south is lost to Legitime. The fight is now entirely between Port-au-Prince and the rest of Hayti, and people engaged in business see some reason to hope that the end is near. The loss of Dardignac is serious, but the loss of all the important cities in the south is disastrous to Legitime. Hippolyte announces that he will not storm Port-au-Prince.

PREVENTION of disease is both rational and scientific. If one knows the causes of most diseases, and can remove that cause, the diseases must disappear. Prof. Wm. H. Thompson of the University of the City of New York, says: "More adults are carried off in this country by chronic kidney disease than by any other one malady except consumption." The majority per cent. of all diseases are caused by unsuspected kidney poisoned blood. The late Dr. Dio Lewis in speaking of Warner's Safe Cure, said over his signature: "If I found myself the victim of a serious kidney trouble, I would use Warner's Safe Cure."

—Two people were talking science the other evening when the germ theory came under discussion. "Just to think we are composed of germs!" he exclaimed. "Why, then, we are all Germanes," said she. "Yes," said he, "except the Irish, and they are Mickrobes." After that the conversation changed.

Kate Claxton has a genuine success in "Bootle's Baby,"

HER SENTENCE COMMUTED.

Mrs. Maybrick will Spend Her Days in a Prison Cell.

PUBLIC OPINION ON THE CASE.

A last night's London cable says: The Queen has commuted the sentence of death against Mrs. Maybrick into one of penal servitude for life. The decision was announced to the unfortunate woman last evening. Sir John Puleston, expressing a natural and kindly interest in the prisoner, endeavored in the House this afternoon to obtain from the Home Secretary an expression of opinion, but Mr. Matthews laid down the principle that the advice tendered to Her Majesty under such circumstances could not be made a matter for question in the House. It is understood that what governed the Home Secretary in recommending the prerogative of mercy to the Crown was the doubt as to whether sufficient arsenic had been administered to Maybrick to cause his death, and as to whether death really came from arsenical poisoning. The opinion of the judges whose advice was sought by Mr. Matthews, and who studied the evidence, was that Mrs. Maybrick had given her husband poison with intent to kill. The result of the trial is, therefore, that Mrs. Maybrick is held by the law of England as guilty of adultery and of having endeavored to poison her husband, and for these crimes she must undergo imprisonment for life. The Home Secretary distinctly states that petitions for release or commutation will not be considered. The Home Secretary has arrived at the conclusion that the trial had been so conducted that as to the guilt of the prisoner the doubt remained which under the law of England made capital punishment impossible. The practical result of the agitation of the Maybrick case will be the creation of a Court of Criminal Appeal.

Touching the Home Secretary's decision in the Maybrick case, the Times says: "We shall hardly be wrong in saying that his decision will be received by the large majority of the public with relief. The case against Mrs. Maybrick was and remains a case of terribly strong suspicion, but suspicion which, after all, it is said, just misses moral certainty."

The News says: "The Home Secretary's decision is avowedly based upon the somewhat singular ground that though Mrs. Maybrick undoubtedly administered arsenic to her husband he may conceivably have died of something else."

The Standard says: "Mr. Matthews has commuted the sentence of death passed upon Mrs. Maybrick at the Liverpool assizes into one of penal servitude for life. The decision will be received with little surprise, and on the whole with a good deal of relief. If for no other reason, we should welcome Mr. Matthews' decision because it removes the faintest shadow of an excuse for the silly and offensive agitation of the last ten days. It would be too much to hope that even now this senseless clamor will be completely silenced. Sentimentalists and busy-bodies, who have so boldly advertised themselves at the expense of the unhappy woman, will be reluctant to retire to their original obscurity."

The Newcastle Chronicle hopes to see Mrs. Maybrick free. One step has been gained.

The Cardiff Western Mail says the commutation will be accepted with a feeling of relief, but it considers the decision a compromise.

The Sheffield Telegraph approves of the commutation, but would have strongly disapproved of the liberation of the prisoner by a free pardon.

The Nottingham Daily Guardian is surprised at the decision, holding that no middle course was open.

The Bradford Observer says that the cry will be that Mr. Matthews is illogical, that Mrs. Maybrick should be hanged or liberated.

The Observer considers the decision just.

The Bristol Times and Mirror considers that decision illogical, and likely to bring trial by jury into discredit.

UNHAPPY CHINA.

Terrible Loss of Life by Earthquakes and Floods.

A Sunday's San Francisco despatch says: The steamer Oceanic, which arrived to-day from Hong Kong and Yokohama, brings advices to August 10th of further details of the bursting of the Yellow river embankments in the Province of Shantung July 22nd. The destruction is widespread. The breach in the river is over 2,000 feet in length, and a swift current swept through, flooding to a depth of twelve feet a large extent of the country lying adjacent. Many houses were washed away, and a despatch from Chefoo states that the number of persons drowned is too great to be counted. Ten districts are already submerged, and it is feared many more in the low-lying country south will suffer a similar fate.

The latest advices concerning the earthquake at Kumamota, July 28th, place the number of killed at eighteen and the wounded at nineteen. Fifty-two dwellings were demolished. A telegram received on the 30th July states that fifty-three shocks had been experienced and that they continued to be felt. The inhabitants were sleeping in the open air. The same earthquake was felt in the Province of Clukugo. Considerable loss of life is reported, but no particulars have been received.

Ocean Parasites.

Everything is said to have its parasite, and the cable at the bottom of the sea is no exception. Cables have been taken up from a depth of a mile and a half with the hemp covering badly eaten away, and at a depth of over half a mile strong currents of the ocean have rasped the armored wires on the rocky bottom. Experience has not yet determined the full lasting qualities of electric cables. Specimens have been taken up which show no signs of deterioration after having been in the water for more than 35 years. Water, and especially salt water, seems to be a preserver of insulating compounds.

"Well, my dear, how would Farmer Brown suit you for a husband? He seems uncommon sweet on you lately." "Perhaps so, father; but his hair is so red that——" "True, true, my child; but you should recollect that he has very little of it."

THE GRASP OF LIGHTNING.

Terrible Experiences of a Lineman in New York.

A New York despatch says: On the west side of Eighth avenue, just above Thirtieth street, a line of eight or nine Brush electric light wires runs through several ailantus trees growing along the curb. The top of one of these trees was killed some time ago by being set on fire by the current. About 8 o'clock to-night Policeman Maginley saw the dead branches again ablaze. He telephoned to the Brush station for a lineman, and Patrick Driscoll and an assistant were sent around. Driscoll had no gloves, and the policeman advised him not to fool with the wires without them. He laughed at the caution, and climbed up the tree, fixing himself in the lower branches and using a small rope to fling over and break off the branches that touched the wires. As he did this, stray flashes of electricity darted about his hand, framing it in fire. McGinley was scared and called to him to come down, but he paid no attention. A few moments later the policeman heard a cry, and looking up saw Driscoll lying on his back upon a number of wires, with both hands reaching up and grasping another wire. Maginley ran to the nearest box and sent out a fire alarm to get a ladder. When he got back to the tree a crowd of people were shaking it as hard as they could, trying to shake down the line-man. Not seeing the wisdom of adding a broken neck to the injuries that Driscoll had already received, the policeman drove the crowd back and told them to leave the tree alone until the firemen came. Driscoll's assistant climbed the tree, and, sitting on a branch, kept hold of Driscoll to see that he did not fall. The line-man was apparently dead. He had not moved or spoken since he received the first shock. When the truck came the firemen pulled him out from among the wires in short order, and by the time they had him on the ground he was conscious. He was taken at once to his home, and the doctor soon reported that he was doing pretty well for a man who had spent fifteen minutes in close communion with a live electric light wire. His worst injuries were on his hands and forearm, which were burned to the bone. His hands may be permanently crippled.

HUSBANDS FOR TWO.

A Queer Scene on Board the Switzerland.

A Philadelphia despatch says: The eight taps by which 4 o'clock was announced upon the bell of the Red Star steamship Switzerland as she lay in the dock yesterday afternoon had hardly died away when the sharp twang of the dinner gong reverberated through the ship, and the steward marched through the vessel fore and aft, crying: "Come to the weddings! Come to the weddings! Come on, everybody! Two weddings in the second cabin!"

There was a rush of stewards and stewardesses, officers and crew and the few straggling passengers who had not yet left the ship, and the cabin was crowded when Magistrate Ladner tied the double nuptial knot and made husbands and wives of two immigrant couples.

Among the 210 immigrants who were shipped at Antwerp by the Switzerland were two young girls who attracted the attention of the stewardess, and at her instance the Immigration Inspectors informed them that they would not be permitted to land unless they should first find husbands for themselves. The girls were Maria Mayer, who came from Elberfield, Germany, and Pauline Volz, whose home was in Friedburg, Germany.

Among the steerage passengers was also Frederick Behle, who came from the home of Miss Mayer and was bound for Detroit, which was the destination of that young woman. Upon finding that she was refused a landing Behle stepped forward and informed the Immigration Inspectors that he was a friend of Miss Mayer and had come with her from her home. He said that he was willing to marry the girl.

Miss Volz was quickly rescued from her embarrassing position in a quite similar manner. Peter Michael, a shoemaker, who lives at No. 39 Washington avenue, presented himself on board the Switzerland, and said he had come to claim Miss Volz as his wife. He came from her native place to New York a few weeks ago.

With this solution of the trouble in sight Immigration Inspector John J. S. Rogers went up to Clerk Bird, of the Orphans' Court, and procured a pair of marriage licenses. When he returned to the steamship Magistrate Ladner was summoned, the double marriage ceremony was performed, and the two couples left the ship rejoicing.

The First English Woman Journalist.

It is related as a curious and interesting fact that Mrs. E. Lynn Linton, the well known novelist, was the first English lady journalist, says the New York Star. It is now many years since she determined to trench upon the province of the male journalist, and began contributing to a monthly paper. Her contributions were gladly accepted, and her example nerved other literary ladies to venture into the journalistic arena. Mrs. Linton lives in a flat at Queen Anne's Mansions, at a giddy height, which commands a very extensive view of London housetops. She is a very industrious writer, but her marvellous facility spares her that painful, anxious toil which with other writers is the first condition of turning out good work. Mrs. Linton's memory of literary personages is remarkable. She still recollects Robert Southey, who was a near neighbor of her father in Cumberland; and bears Walter Savage Landor—who was, it may be said, her literary foster-father—in affectionate remembrance. Singularly enough, Mrs. Linton spent some years of her life in the house at Gadshill, rendered famous by Charles Dickens' association with it. Charles Dickens, by-the-bye, was her editor, and had the very highest opinion both of her literary merits and—no mean thing in writers—her reliability.

—A party of 50 Methodist clergyman sailed from New York the other day bound for Palestine, where they are to enjoy a camping tour for three months, with headquarters near Jerusalem.

—"It's always a relief to me when i. comes time to pay off Bridget," said Mrs Howskeep. "Why?" inquired her husband. "Because that is the only time when I feel positive that she doesn't employ me."

READING FOR THE LADIES.

The Gorgeous Dresses Worn by the Ladies at the Royal Wedding.

WHAT THE QUEEN AND PRINCESS WORE.

The bride wore a dress of white satin, with a train measuring some three yards in length and untrimmed, save for a bordering of satin folds. The front was completely covered with the finest Brussels lace, and a chatelaine of orange-blossoms fell over the folds at one side. In her hair she wore a wreath of orange blossoms, under a veil of finest Brussels, the design of which matched that on her dress. In the front of her bodice she wore one spray of orange blossom and a sprig of heather which the Earl of Fife had taken to her that morning at Marlborough House. Her ornaments were pearls and diamonds. A high collar finished the bodice at the back, but was open V-shape in front, showing a necklace consisting of one row of beautiful pearls under the folds of the bridal veil. Her sleeves were of lace, unlined, through which the beauty of her arms could be discerned. Her bouquet consisted of white moss roses and maidenhair fern. Her eight bridesmaids were in pink of the precise shade of a moss rose, a reposeful and quiet tint. The materials of their dresses were silk and crepe-de-chine. The bodices were V-shaped, both in front and at the back. Sashes of pink moire ribbon were brought from under the right arm and tied at the back, where they fell to the very edge of the dresses. These were made with short trains. A small cluster of pink moss-roses was fastened in each bridesmaid's hair, at the left side. They carried bouquets of pink moss-roses, wore pink stockings, and shoes with paste buckles. The bridesmaids were: The Princesses Victoria and Maud of Wales, the Princesses Victoria and Louise of Schleswig-Holstein, Princess Victoria Mary of Teck, and the Countesses Victoria, Feodore and Helena Gleichen.

Her Majesty marked the occasion by introducing more white into her invariably sombre toilet than she has ever done before. The Queen's train and bodice were of the richest black brocade, opening on a front of a black silk grenadine, embroidered in a design of flowers in white silk. Her veil was of magnificent white lace, edged with a deep hem embroidered with a thicker version of the design, and some white tulle was also used to trim the bodice. Looking exceedingly bright, happy and well pleased, the Princess of Wales wore a dress of gray satin, the color of the feathers of a dove's breast. The bodice and train were backed and brocaded with silver, the design being oxeyed daisies and marguerite foliage. The front of the skirt was draped with flatly sitting folds of grey tulle wrought with silver in a closely-woven, most effective design. The bodice was made with a high collar softly faced with silver-wrought tulle, which was carried in folds down either side of the open front, and caught with a series of diamond stars, getting gradually smaller towards the basque. Her Royal Highness wore a splendid diamond tiara in three divisions, in the centre of each of which was one immense deep-colored sapphire, the largest in the front of the tiara, and those at each side of scarcely less proportion. A collar of diamonds and three rows of loosely-hanging single stones with pendants completed her jewels. She carried a small bunch of dark red roses. The shoes were of satin, matching the dress, with high Louis Quinze bows. Princess Christian wore a dress of exceedingly handsome silver grey brocade, the design raised in satin from a silk surface, and the edges of each flower outlined with embroidery. The front of the dress was of satin, with flowers wrought with grey pearls and a faint tracery of silver. Chains of pearls were used to trim the front and stomacher, and Her Royal Highness wore many magnificent diamond ornaments. Princess Louise (Marchioness of Lorne) wore a gown of white brocade, the design outlined and mixed with silver and gold. The front was of silk, with silver and gold ornaments. In her hair were many diamond ornaments and a high white osprey aigrette, in which sparkled many brilliants. Princess Henry, of Battenberg, wore a most effective dress of the prettiest and most becoming shade of heliotrope, the front of a paler hue, with diamond ornaments. The Princess Mary (Duchess of Teck), was gowned in bodice and train of brocaded velvet, the velvet design being raised in the deepest tint of mauve from a ground of satin many shades paler. The front of her dress was made of alternate stripes of puffed satin and of shimmering cut-steel and bronze fringe. The bodice was cut square, and trimmed with China crepe of the pale mauve shade, caught with passementerie of cut steel and bronze. The Duchess wore in her hair two bands of single stone diamonds and several stars. She also wore a collar of brilliants, from which hung several pendants. The Princess Frederica of Hanover's costume was of white silk strapped in a peculiarly effective way with bronze-green velvet. It was made with a high collar, beneath which two straps of velvet were brought to a point and fastened with a quaint device in brilliants. The elbow sleeves were also strapped with velvet, as was the front of the dress, each strap having a diamond ornament, for which it formed a most effective background. The Marchioness of Salisbury wore a dress of olive-green velvet, with a tablier of exquisite old point lace. The elbow sleeves were faced with lace and the open bodice bordered by folds of the palest blue and the palest pink satin, both softened by intervening frills of lace. Lady Salisbury had no ornaments in her hair, which looked wonderfully picturesque, arranged in silvery simplicity. She carried a bouquet of pink roses. Maria, Marchioness of Ailesbury wore a perfectly-cut bodice and train of purple velvet. The sleeves were slashed and the front trimmed with silk of a curious shade of pink, which harmonized in a subtle sort of way with the concealed pink of the purple. The Marchioness wore few diamonds, but those of perfect shape and color. Madame de Falbe's jewels were wonderful, her necklace of large single stones being supplemented by collars and pendents not easily surpassed. Her dress was of white corded silk, the skirt turned back with broad revers of pale peach-blossom color overlaid with some unique Flemish point lace. Peach blossom ribbons tied at one side of the waist fell carelessly to the hem, one or two being veiled with lace to match that on the revers. In her hair Madame de Falbe wore a peach-aigrette, with one large diamond and several smaller ones around it. Countess Spencer's dress was of cream-colored satin, richly embossed in a quaint way, giving it the semblance of thickly executed silk embroidery. The bodice was made with a high collar, the back of which was thickly embroidered with gold, the design being continued in points down the side seams below the shoulders. The front of the gown was a mass of gold embroidery. Lady Spencer wore a high tiara of diamonds and many magnificent diamond ornaments. Lady Randolph Churchill's dress was of cream-colored silk, with a full frill of yellow lisse crossing the front from the right shoulder to the left side of the skirt hem. Her one ornament was a diamond star, which was arranged most effectively just in front of her head above the forehead, her hair being dressed low. The Duchess of Manchester wore a beautiful yellow silk trimmed softly with deep folds of chiffon. Her tiara was one of the most imposing worn, although closely rivalled by that of her daughter, Lady Gosford. The ladies in attendance on the Princess of Wales could not have arranged their costumes to tone better with her lovely one of dove-grey and silver had they given the matter more thought than is probable at so occupied a time. Miss Knollys' dress was of robin's egg-tinted satin, draped with silken gauze the same shade. In the bodice were arrange a few pink and dark red carnations with their own grey leaves, a bunch of which Miss Knollys carried. Her companion wore a Princess dress of dark biscuit color, brocaded with sprays of pink roses opening over a front of pleated rose pink silk. Miss Knollys had diamond stars in her hair.

An Indian Hospital.

Lady Roberts' officers' hospital in India is progressing very favorably. It was opened on the 15th April, 1888, and from that time until the end of the season it was fully occupied, as it has been since it was opened this year. The house at Murree was originally bought for a "home in the hills" for the lady nurses of the Punjab circle, who required change and rest. Fortunately, it is large enough to admit of its being used in part as an officers' hospital; four rooms have been set aside for this purpose, and are most thoroughly appreciated. At Kasauli a "home" has been built for the lady nurses of the Sirhind circle, but as nurses have not yet been provided, and it is not therefore required for this purpose, it has been prepared for the reception of sick officers, and is under the charge of a qualified lady nurse, Miss James. The proposed increase in the number of nurses has been postponed by the India Office authorities for a time, a very short time only, it is to be hoped. Meanwhile Lady Roberts trusts to be able to supplement the Government nurses by employing two or three more qualified nurses at stations where they are much needed. Lady Roberts has been appealed to constantly to send nurses for work in hospitals, and to take care of sick officers, and also to open hospitals in other hill stations, but want of funds prevents anything more being done at present.

A Queer Canal.

The strangest canal in the world is one I never saw mentioned in any book or newspaper. It is a canal sixteen miles long between Worsley and St. Helens, in the North of England, and is underground from end to end. In Lancashire the coal mines are very extensive, half the country being undermined, and many years ago the Duke of Bridgewater's managers thought they could save money by transporting the coal underground instead of on the surface. So the canal was constructed, the mines connected and drained at the same time. Ordinary canal boats are used, but the power is furnished by men. On the roof of the tunnel arch are cross pieces, and the men who do the work of propulsion lie on their backs on the coal and push with their feet against the cross-bars on the roof. Six or eight men will draw a train of four or five boats, and as there are two divisions in the tunnel boats pass each other without difficulty.—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

New Terrors to War.

With smokeless and noiseless powder, such as it is claimed has been invented in England, in the wars that are to be death will take on still more terrors. The first notice of the presence of an enemy will be in the sudden sinking down of men as though smitten by a pestilence. The sentry will die at his post and give no sign. The sun will shine down serenely while the battle rages, and no canopy will obscure the butchery. Battles will be silent executions, save when trumpets sound and furious men shout or wounded men moan. There will be nothing to kindle the battle ecstacy; no booming of hotly worked guns will give notice where the battle is sorest. With the battle clamors and the battle canopy driven away, it will require more nerve to be a valiant soldier than ever before. The soldier will not only have to face the danger in sight, but also to contend with the terrors that his imagination will paint him. —Salt Lake Tribune.

R. A. GUNN, M.D., Dean and Professor of Surgery, of the United States Medical College, editor of Medical Tribune, author of "Gunn's New and Improved Hand-book of Hygiene and Domestic Medicine," speaking with reference to Warner's Safe Cure, said over his own signature: "I prescribed it in full doses in both acute and chronic Bright's disease, with the most satisfactory results. * * * I am willing to acknowledge and commend thus frankly the value of Warner's Safe Cure." If you are gradually losing your strength, have extreme pallor of face, puffiness under the eyes, persistent swelling of the joints, abdomen and legs, unaccountable sharp pain in the heart, shortness of breath, begin taking Warner's Safe Cure without delay.

Five hundred veterinary surgeons in Great Britain have signed a paper condemning overhead check reins as painful to horses and productive of disease. It distorts the windpipe, and is liable to cause paralysis of the muscles of the face, apoplexy, coma and inflammation of the brain, all these resulting in shortening the life of the horse.

THE RUSSIAN EMANCIPATION.

Effects on the Country of Setting the Serfs Free.

After a trial of a quarter of a century, the Emancipation art is now acknowledged to have utterly failed. The reports of Russia officials, of statistical professors at Moscow, such as Jansen, and the Nihilists with Stepniak at their head, all alike agree that the misery of the rural class is greater than even in days of serfdom; cultivation is at the lowest ebb, the yield is wretched and less than in any other European country. Each peasant must plow, sow and reap as his neighbors do. The three-field system of corn, green crops and fallow, which was abandoned in all good agriculture long ago, goes on with disastrous results. As the lots are changed by the Mir at their pleasure, after every year, the temporary owner does not care to manure, etc., or in any way to improve his land. Although the rent is sometimes as low as 2s. an acre, yet the peasant cannot live. Agriculture is a business requiring capital, knowledge, and a sufficient amount of land to enable different crops to be grown, so that if one fails it does not mean starvation, for another may succeed. The Russian peasant has none of these qualifications. The peasant proprietors can neither pay the money owing to the Government for their land, nor even the State and communal taxes, and are flogged by the hundreds for non-payment. In one district of Novgorod fifteen hundred peasants were thus condemned in 1887. Five hundred and fifty had already been flogged, when the inspector interceded for the remainder. Widespread famine is found over a great part of the country; usurers, the bane of peasant proprietors in all countries, are in possession of the situation; the Koulaks and Jew "mir-eaters" supply money on mortgage, then foreclose, and when the land is in their own possession get the work done for nothing as interest. These "bondage laborers," as they are called, are in fact slaves, and are nearly starved, while the small pieces of land are often reunited into considerable estates, and their new owners consider they have only rights and no duties. Meanwhile, as forced labor is at an end and free labor is of the worst possible kind, the old landowners can get nothing done; thay have tried to employ machines, bought by borrowing from the banks, and are now unable to repay the money. The upper class has been ruined with no advantage to the peasant. "The wasteful culture of the cottier," as Stepniak calls it, "on these small plots is so bad that the general welfare of the country," says Prof. Jansen, "is in danger by the small yield of the soil." In spite of the philanthropic intentions of the Czar, he is believed to have aimed at diminishing the power of the nobles as much as of improving the condition of the peasants. He succeeded; the nobles in many distaicts are entirely ruined, and there is nothing now between the unlimited power of the autocrat and his 90,000,000 subjects, five-sixths of whom are peasants. —The Nineteenth Century.

Fruit Eating.

Some people are afraid to eat fruit, thinking that fruit and diarrhœa are always associated, when, if they understand the true cause of diarrhœa they would know that it was caused by eating meat. In hot weather meat putrefies very quickly, and during this process alkaloids are formed which are very poisonous, acting as emetics and purgatives It is true that fruit eaten green or between meals will interfere with digestion and cause bowel troubles; but use fruit that is perfectly ripe at meal-time, and only beneficial results will follow. Acids prevent calcareous degenerations, keeping the bones elastic, as well as preventing the accumulation of earthly matters. Fruit is a perfect food when fully ripe, and if it were in daily use from youth to age there would be less gout, gall-stones and stone in the bladder.

A John L. Sullivan Cure.

For "Black Eye," according to the N. Y. Medical Times, there is nothing to compare with the tincture or a strong infusion of capsicum annuum mixed with an equal bulk of mucilage of gum arabic and with the addition of a few drops of glycerine. This should be painted all over the bruised surface with a camel's hair pencil and allowed to dry on, a second or third coating being applied as soon as the first is dry. If done as soon as the injury is inflicted, this treatment will invariably prevent the blackening of the bruised tissue. The same remedy has no equal in rheumatic, sore or stiff neck.

Who Brown-Sequard Is.

Dr. Brown-Sequard is an American. His father, Capt. Edward Brown, of the American navy, was a Philadelphian and married a French woman on the Island of Mauritius named Sequard. He and his descendants took the name Brown-Sequard. The distinguished scientist, whose elixir of youth is making a sensation, was their eldest child. He was educated in France, but was afterwards a professor at Harvard and practiced medicine in New York for some years subsequent to 1873. He married twice, his first wife being Miss Fletcher, of Boston, a relative of Daniel Webster.

Equivocal.

"Augustus," said Mrs. Henpeck, severely, "I see a woman down in New Jersey has been convicted of being a common scold. I should like to see any brute of a man try that on me!"

"But you are no common scold, Maria," responded Mr. Henpeck with a sigh. And Mrs. Henpeck is still wondering what he meant.

Higher Yet.

Mrs. Cadsby Soads—Sig. Robustino is going to sing at our reception.

Mrs. Waverly Plaice—He's a tenor, is he not?

Mrs. Cadsby Soads—Oh, no, indeed. We couldn't get him for a cent less than fifty dollars.

Harry Lindley has written a play called "Ben Hur," which he proposes to put on the boards in the United States. His company is engaged to play at several fairs in the State of Pennsyvania. Harry says he dropped money on his last visit to Canada.

The rate of taxation in Galt this year is slightly over 20 mills on the dollar.

THE MESSENGER BOY.

A Word for a Much-Ridiculed and Useful Individual.

The district messenger boy long since took his place in the repertoire of the paragrapher, with the bannana peel, the mother-in-law and the stovepipe, says the Omaha World-Herald. Ever since he came into existence he has been a favorite butt of the comic writers and artists. He is represented as the embodiment of laziness, and they portray him as stopping to play games or read dime novels on his way to deliver messages marked "important." It is all so. The messenger boy will admit the testimony and waive examination. But hear his defence. How would you like to be taken from school at the age of 10 or 12 years and made to run errands every day in the year? How much would you hurry on a day like Monday, for instance, if they sent you with a letter from a silly clerk to his sweetheart? If you were 14 years old and had to run errands all day would you not stop to look in a window at papers you never otherwise had a chance to read? If the only words ever spoken to you all the long day were words of undeserved reproach or injunctions to "hurry," would not the independence of your American boyhood resent such treatment? Would you feel like hurrying if a sudden breeze brought to you the glorious scents of the country? Would you hurry if passing an old beech tree you heard the sharp staccato "ponk, ponk" of Mr. Red-Headed Woodpecker? Now, wouldn't you stuff the message into your pocket and go out into the street in search of a sizable pebble to chuck at him just for luck? Of course you would if you ever were a real American boy. And dawdling along a paved street you come across some boys on their bicycles. You haven't one yourself, but what more natural than that you should stop and wonder if you ever will own one of the shining spinners? Your run may, perchance, take you off through Hanscom Park. There are cool, delightful dells and soft mossy banks there, and you may loll around and watch the white clouds go kiting overhead, and away out westward you can see a drove of cows knee deep in a rain pond, peacefully chewing the cud and crackling their tails at the bothersome flies. And for a moment or two you actually forget that you are boy number steen-eleven, and are carrying a message from a love-stricken clerk to his dulcinea. But you come back to a realization that top time and kite time have vanished for you. You are not 14, you are 40, as far as the pleasures of boyhood are concerned. You are working to help the family out of the hole, and the fun of youth is as far past you as it is past the crusty lawyer who scolded you for carrying a story paper in your pocket. You merchant, lawyer, agent, who are reading this, how does it strike your case? Were you made to work while other boys played? Put it to yourself, and the next time you call a messenger boy, look him squarely in the face and try to imagine yourself forced into the daily grind of work and robbed of the treasures which should be the heritage of American boyhood.

A Cure for Sleeplessness.

The abuse of the eye is the crime of the age. I am prepared to demonstrate that at least nine-tenths of the prevailing sleeplessness of which we hear so much is due to nervousness directly traceable to the optic nerve. We are wearing our eyes over books and desks and types, and the effect shows itself not only in the appearance of the organ itself, but in its retroactive effect on nerve and brain. I have discovered a remedy for sleeplessness, and for the reason that I have never known it to fail I am fortified in my opinion that the whole trouble arises from overstrain of the eyes. Take a soft cloth—say a piece of napped towel—and fold in it two small pieces of ice at a proper distance apart to exactly cover the eyes when the cloth is laid across them. Theh lie down, adjust the cloth with the ice over the closed eyes, and you will be asleep in a very short while.—Cor. St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

Death from Tight Lacing.

A verdict of death from tight lacing is, perhaps, still to be sought among the curiousities of law. But a Birmingham jury have come near it in a verdict of death from pressure round the waist. The victim was a poor servant girl who died after a fright, and her death was attributed by medical witnesses to the fact that she was too tightly belted to enable her to stand the wear and tear of any sudden emotion. She was a notorious tight lacer; her collar fitted so closely that it was impossible to loosen it at the critical moment, and under her stays she wore a belt so remorsely buckled as to prevent the free circulation of the blood.—St. James' Gazette.

Kingston people confidently expect to see Hon. G. A. Kirkpatrick become Minister of Militia.

BEWARE.

To flirt with her may seem no sin,
One's apt such follies to defend:
It's funny how such things begin,
But often funnier how they end.

—Snaggs—What are you doing with all those maps? Raggs—I'm getting ready to go on my vacation. Snaggs—Oh, I see; so you got those maps to see where to go? Raggs—No; to see where not to go.

"We will give you a two-seated carriage, the seats facing each other," said the learned liveryman of the summer resort—a vis-a-vis carriage. Maybe you don't understand. Well, its French for vice versa."

Customer—"How do you sell sugar this morning, Mr. Scales?" Grocer—"By the pound, sir, same as always." Customer—"Well, as I want two pounds this morning, I guess I'll go across the way to Mr. Counter's."

Indiana girl—"No; I don't believe in these isms. I once knew a man who was sent to prison for devoting his time to one of them." Boston girl—"What terrible laws you must have out in Indiana! What was the ism?" Indiana girl—"Incendiarism, I believe."

"Promise me, Mary," the dying man said,
"You will see that my grave is kept green."
"Why, I can't promise that," was the sobbing reply,
As sadly she wiped her roriferous eye,
"But I'll see, John, your urn is kept clean."

—First little boy—Is your father fond of fish? Second little boy—Yes, very; he has C. O. D. printed on his business cards.

PAPER PENCILS.

A Process by Which Pulp May be Substituted for Wood.

One of the difficulties which have stood in the way of the substitution of paper pulp for wood in the manufacture of pencils has been the toughness of the paper covering, and its consequent resistance to the action of a knife. By a new process, which has recently been patented, the molecular cohesion of the paper is modified in such a manner that it can be cut as easily as cedar wood. The paper is first of all made into tubes and a number of them are placed in a frame at the lower end of a cylinder. The substance which is to be used as a marking material is placed in the cylinder while in a plastic condition, and sufficient pressure is then applied to force it into the hollow centres of the paper tubes. After the completion of the process the pencils are gradually dried at increasing temperatures during a period of six days, and they are then plunged into a vessel of molten paraffin wax, which has the effect of modifying the texture of paper pulp as described.—Manufactures and Industries.

Intellectual Women.

"I do believe those women,
Who for years and years and years,
Keep polishing their intellects,
To ornament their biers"— should again call the attention of their sex to the remedy especially provided for the correction of their physical ailments by Dr. R. V. Pierce, of Buffalo. It is called "Favorite Prescription." Women of intellect for years and years and years have used it and pronounced it the best corrective of all "female weaknesses" that can be had anywhere. Ask your druggists for it. Full directions for using. Guaranteed to give satisfaction or money refunded.

No Camel-Drivers Wanted.

The law that prohibits the landing of certain kinds of undesirable immigrants at our ports is apt to work harshly at times in New York. For example a few days ago two Arabs were found at Castle Garden, one of them named Ben Josef and the other Mohammed Ben Abdel Hirmir, who had come here to seek employment as camel-drivers. The penniless Arabs were in despair when told that we have no such industry as camel-driving in New York, and that they were unwelcome guests in the land of the star-spangled banner. The collector gave orders that they should be sent back across the ocean in the ship which brought them here. Surely this was hard upon the Arab camel-drivers.—New York Sun.

A Lesson in Grammar.

"I cough! He coughs! They cough!" And why need they cough! Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery will cure coughs colds, and all lung diseases.

Buy it and try it, there's virtue and worth
In the bottle whose contents are pure;
'Twill extinguish the germs of consumption at its birth,
And more acute symptoms will cure.

A Safe Cordial.

The Rhode Island State Board of Health Bulletin says: No one who, fatigued by over-exertion of body and mind, has ever experienced the reviving influence of a tumbler of milk, heated as warm as it can be sipped, and with or without a teaspoonful of sugar, will willingly forego a resort to it. The promptness with which its cordial influence is felt is indeed surprising. Some portion of it seems to be digested and appropriated almost immediately, and many who now fancy they need alcoholic stimulants when exhausted by fatigue will find in this simple draught an equivalent that will be abundantly satisfying and far more enduring in its effects.

$500 Reward.

So confident are the manufacturers of Dr. Sage Catarrh Remedy in their ability to cure chronic nasal catarrh no matter how bad or of how long standing, that they offer, in good faith, the above reward for a case which they cannot cure Remedy sold by druggists at 50 cents.

It is announced that a saving of $40,000 a year in interest has been effected for Quebec city by the conversion of the civic debt, which the city's delegates have negotiated in England.

DCNL 36 89.

WEBSTER

THE BEST INVESTMENT

For the Family, School, or Professional Library.

Has been for many years Standard Authority in the Gov't Printing Office and U. S. Supreme Court.

It is Highly Recommended by 38 State Sup'ts of Schools and the leading College Presidents.

Nearly all the School Books published in this country are based upon Webster, as attested by the leading School Book Publishers.

3000 more Words and nearly 2000 more Engravings than any other American Dictionary.

GET THE BEST.

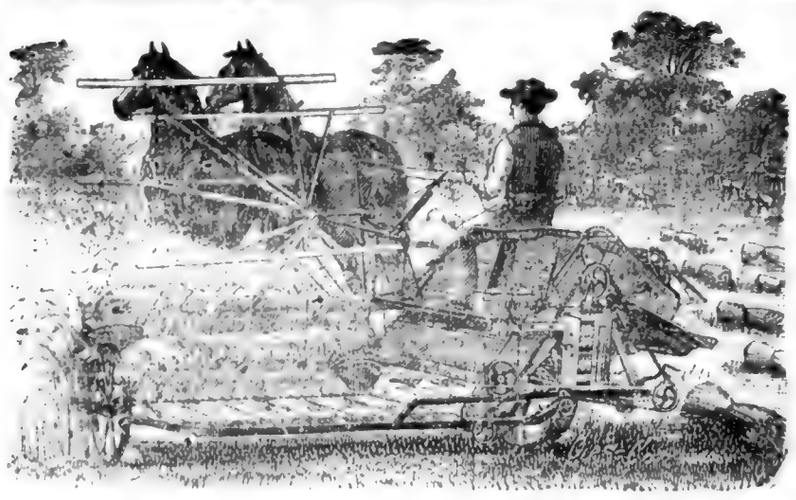
Sold by all Booksellers. Illustrated Pamphlet with specimen pages, etc., sent free.

G. & C. MERRIAM & CO., Pub'rs, Springfield, Mass.

AGENTS MAKE $100 A MONTH with us. Send 20c. for terms. A colored rug pattern and 50 colored designs. W. & F. BUSH, St. Thomas, Ont.

DUNN'S BAKING POWDER

THE COOK'S BEST FRIEND



THE BRANTFORD LIGHT STEEL BINDER!

Over Four Thousand Sold in Season 1888. Being More Than Half of all Other Binders made in Canada.

In placing their orders for 1889, we respectfully request the farmers to:
1st. Carefully examine the "Brantford Machines" and faithfully compare with others.
2nd. Enquire of your neighbors who have used "Brantford Machines" and get their opinion of their working and lasting qualities.
If you will follow the above advice, you will be convinced of these two facts:
1st. "Brantford Machines" are possessed of more improvements and are better made than any other machines in Canada.
2nd. "Brantford Machines" are more popular, give better satisfaction, and are more durable than any other machine in Canada.
Therefore 1st. Give your order EARLY for a Brantford Binder and Mower.
2nd. And you will be sure to be perfectly satisfied with the machine you get.

THOS. A. BLAKELY,
FLESHERTON

Heard's Carriage Works.

MANUFACTURER OF

Carriages, Buggies, Wagons, Sleighs, Cutters, &c., &c.

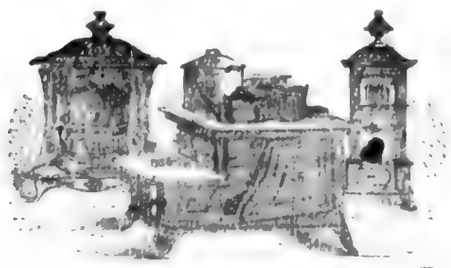
HEARD'S IMPROVED HARROWS AND GATES.

Special Attention given to PAINTING, TRIMMING, HORSE-SHOEING and all kinds of JOB WORK. Nothing but first-class material used throughout and satisfaction guaranteed. We have for sale

——Lumber, Lath and Shingles.——

Also Agent for Dick's Rollers, Mowers and Binders, Dick's Champion, Royal Rob Roy, Granger and Standard Plows. Two and Three-Furrow Gang Plows. Horse Powers for 4 Horses. Straw Cutters, Scufflers and Turnip Drills.

JOHN H. HEARD, Durham Street, Flesherton.



FLESHERTON
STOVE
EMPORIUM

A large assortment of STOVES of makes: STOVE FURNISHINGS, TIN WARE, COPPERSMITH GOODS

EAVETROUGHING A SPECIALITY.

F. G. Karstedt, Strain's old Stand Flesherton.

FLOUR, FLOUR, STONE FLOUR!

MR. P LOUCKS

Is prepared to do your Grinding on short notice and grinds on the old terms of every twelfth bushel. Seven cents per bag of two bushels for Chopping done every day. The Little Mill is King in the estimation of the public.

Satisfaction Guaranteed.

P LOUCKS, Proprietor

Good stabling for horses.

BLACKBURN'S

is the place for choice goods and fair prices.

Choice Roller Flour, Bran and Shorts, at rockbottom prices.

Cured Meats, Bologona.
Mixed bird seed
Pure prepared Corn.
General assortment of canned goods.

CHOICE HONEY.

CONFECTIONERY of all kinds
ICE CREAM

and cooling summer drinks. Choice Fruits a specialty

OAT MEAL, CORN MEAL, CRACKED WHEAT and GRAHAM FLOUR,

always on hand.

Remember the place, next door to M. Richardson & Co's.

Shiloh's cough and Consumption Cure is sold by us on a guarantee. It cures Consumption. For sale at the Medical Hall

Shiloh's catarrh remedy--a positive cure for catarrh, diptheria and canker-mouth. For sale at the Medical Hall.

A nasal injector free with each bottle of Shiloh's catarrh remedy. Price 50cts. For sale at the Medical Hall.

For Sale

Steam flour mill for sale at Flesherton Station 2 run stone double reel bolt, smut mill, duster and purifier. Will be sold cheap and on easy terms. This is a bargain. Apply to

ROGER LEVER
Flesherton P O

Monthly Fairs.

Orangeville—The second Thursday in each month.
Dundalk—Tuesday before Orangeville.
Flesherton—Monday before Orangeville.
Markdale—Saturday before Orangeville.
Durham—Third Tuesday in each month.
Chatsworth—Monday before Durham.
Holland Centre—Saturday before Chatsworth
Priceville—Monday before Durham
Hanover—Monday before Durham

This Year's

MYRTLE

CUT and PLUG

SMOKING TOBACCO

FINER THAN EVER.

See

T & B

in bronze on
EACH PLUG and PACKAGE

Improved Farm for Sale.

Lots 148, 149 and 150, 3rd range east, T. and S. R., containing 100 acres, 80 cleared, good clay loam, well improved, good frame house and log barn, frame stable, good orchard, etc. This farm is well watered and improved, and is considered one of the best in this section. It is one mile and a half from the village Flesherton. Will be sold on very easy terms. For further particulars apply to

JAS. BEECROFT,
Flesherton P.O

A Legend o' Blair.

ALEX. MCLACHLAN IN "THE WEEK."

My lord is to the wars awa';
While a' nicht through a freet
My leddie walks the castle ha',
Or sits her doun to greet,

A fearfu' throbbin's in her breast,
Nor will her hert keep still,
A' crowns she'd gie but to get free
Frae thoughts o' coming ill—

And aye she says, while tears doun fa',
"Oh I was sair to blame!
To drive my loving lord awa'
To risk a death o' shame.

"He'd stayed at hame only for me,
And yet I urged him sair,
And oh but he was wae to lea'
The bonny woods o' Blair,

"His mither in my dreams I see
Come from her grassy lair
And sadly she does look on me
Foreboding dool and care

"I'll seek the seer fate's book to read
And learn what's written there,
For O this fear, this doubt and dread
Are more than I can bear."

And she has mounted on her steed—
A bay o' beauty rare,
And leaves behin I her at full speed,
The bonny woods o' Blair

She rode till she cam to the Gryffe,
And passed the Brig o' Weir,
And roused, as if for death or life,
The spirit-haunted seer.

"Learn by your mystic art" said she,
"What fate may have in store
For one more dear than life to me,
The husband I adore."

The old man bowed his hoary head,
And closed his weird-like e'en,
And in a mournful voice he said,
"I see a waefu' scene"—

And to her question he replies,
"I see the head man there,
And one, a noble captive, dies
Far frae the woods o' Blair."

One long, deep sigh her bosom rent,
Which struggled long to come,
And not a single word found vent,
For she was stricken dumb.

Then unto her ain castle ha,'
They sorrowing brought her back.
Yet a' the way nae tear did fa'
And not a word she spak;

Nor did she recognize the place,
But there both day and night
Sat wi' that silent woeful face,
For she was clean gaen gyte!

Not till three days and nights had passed
And sleep ne'er bowed her e'e,
That death in pity cam at last
And kindly set her free.

Yet often 'mong the dews o' e'en,
When shadows fill the air,
A weeping wandering lady's seen
Among the woods o' Blair.

ALEXANDER MCLACHLAN.
Amaranth Station, Aug. 9, 1890.

Things Amusing and Strange.

NOT ORIGINAL, BUT WORTHY OF PERUSAL.

A book,
A book,
A shady nook.
A fish,
A sudden swish
A sigh But why?
Next day a he

The only thing which beats a good wife is a bad husband.

The waiter girl is different from a poet. She is not born; she is maid to order.

The Lord Mayor of London, who started life as a commercial traveller, is to be presented with a bust of himself by the travellers of the Kingdom.

There are two reasons why some people do not mind their own business. One is they haven't any business; and the other is they haven't any mind.

A Mohammedan mosque has been built in Woking, England, and a Buddhist temple has been opened in Paris. There are about 300 Buddhists in Paris.

Canada (in great wrath to John Bull)—Why don't you bring your iron-clads over here and teach these impudent Yankees a lesson? John Bull—Sit down, child, sit down. I can't afford to quarrel with them. Got too much money invesed in their blawsted kentry.—[Chicago Tribune.

There is a lady in Milwaukee who is the mother of nine children. None of them was named until it was twelve years old. They were simply called by their nicknames and their numbers, "One" "Two," etc. When they were twelve years old each one chose his own name and was baptised.

The ways of auctioneers in different parts of the world vary greatly. In England and America the seller bears the expense of the sale, but in France the purchaser bears the cost, five per cent. being added to his purchase. In Holland it is still worse, the buyer being required to pay ten per cent. additional for the expenses of the sale.

One of the most suprising features of the modern business world is the large use of cotton seed, formerly considered worthless. Over 800,000 tons of these seeds are now pressed for their oil; from thirty-six to forty pounds being obtained from each ton. The consumption of cotton-seed oil is increasing both in this country and in Europe, and new uses for the oil are constantly being discovered.

Worth, the famous man-dressmaker of Paris, is a native-born Englishman of striking appearance, looking like a Scotchman, and adding to the likeness by wearing always a Scotch cap. His father meant to make a printer of him, but he did'nt like the work and managed to get into the dry goods trade in London. Thence he went to Paris, where he found favor with the Empress Eugene and his fortune was made. He has a fine chateau near Paris.

BOOTS & SHOES.

I have a very large supply on and and

Selling very Cheap.

IN LADIES WEAR. Prunella, Kid, Polish calf and Buff Dongola, Lace and Button.

Misse's, Youth's and Children's

A large assortment, all sorts and sizes.

MEN'S WEAR

Fine Calf and Dongola, Balmorals and Gaiters, also Heavy Boots and Shoes. Prices and Material cannot be beat.

W. CLAYTON.

Photos, Photos, Photos.

We are now turning out work far superior in style and finish to any ever produced in Flesherton.

COPYING and ENLARGING at MODERATE RATES.

PICTURE FRAMING

done in all its branches. A good stock of FRAMES and MOULDINGS kept constantly on hand. Will also introduce the new BROMIDE PORTRAIT, a picture that is giving entire satisfaction wherever introduced. SAMPLES can be seen at my Gallery where all particulars as to Price, Style &c., can be ascertained.

MRS. BULMER,
FLESHERTON.

HEALTH FOR ALL.

HOLLOWAY'S PILLS & OINTMENT

THE PILLS

Purify the Blood, correct all Disorders of

Liver, Stomach, Kidneys, and Bowels.

They invigorate and restore to health Debilitated Constitutions, and are invaluable in all Complaints incidental to Females of all ages. For Children and the aged they are priceless

THE OINTMENT

is an infallible remedy for Bad Legs, Bad Breasts, Old Wounds, Sores and Ulcers. It is famous for Gout and Rheumatism. For disorders of the Chest it has no equa

For SORE THROAT, BRONCHITIS, COUGHS, COLDS

Glandular Swellings, and all Skin Diseases it has no rival; and for contracted and stiff joints it acts like a charm.

Manufactured only at Professor HOLLOWAY'S Establishment,
78, New Oxford Street (late 533, Oxford Street), London,
and are sold at 1s. 1½d., 2s. 9d., 4s. 6d., 11s., 22s., and 33s. each Box or Pot, and may be had of all Medicine Vendors throughout the World.

☞ Purchasers should look to the Label on the Pots and Boxes. If the address is not 533, Oxford Street, London, they are spurious.

PRICEVILLE BAKERY.

A. WATSON!

Desires to inform the public that he can furnish

CAKES AND PIES
To Order.

FIRST CLAS BREAD ALWAYS ON HAND.

will visit Flesherton twice a week—on TUESDAYS and FRIDAYS, with a full supply of goods.

DROP A CARD IF YOU DESIRE ME TO CALL.

WEDDING and FANCY cakes a specialty

A. WATSON,
Priceville.

Situation.

with steady employment and good pay all the year round, to reliable men furnishing satisfactory references. S.A. McOMBER & Co.,
Nurserymen, Rochester, N. Y

FLESHERTON
PLANING MILLS

Having purchased the Flesherton Planing Mills from R. J. Sproule, Esq., I now desire to inform the

PUBLIC

that I am in a position to do

ALL KINDS

—OF—

General planing mill work,

such as

SASH, DOORS, DOOR FRAMES
Planing and Matching, re-sawing, etc.

Good Workmanship Guaranteed.

A large quantity of good dry pine lumber on hand.

W. J. HOWARD,
Flesherton.

LOOK!

HAVING done business in Canada for years our reputation is established. We want three men in your vicinity to represent us, to whom exclusive territory will be given. Handsome outfit free. Salary and expenses paid weekly. Previous experience not required. Write at once for terms. Hardy stock for Canada a specialty. MAY BROTHERS,
Nurserymen, Rochester, N Y

FLESHERTON ADVANCE.

"TRUTH BEFORE FAVOR."—"PRINCIPLES, NOT MEN."

VOL. VIII., NO 428. FLESHERTON, ONT., THURSDAY, SEPTEMBER 12, 1889. W. H. THURSTON, EDITOR & PROPRIETOR

WATCHES,
Clocks, ● Jewelry.
STUDY
Your Own Interests
by buying your Watches, Clocks, Jewelry Spectacles and Silverware, at Russell's Noted
JEWELRY STORE,
FLESHERTON.

In watches we have a very large stock of Elgin, Waltham, Illinois Springfield, Columbus and Swiss Levers, in Ladies' and Gents' sizes. Gold, Silver and Silver ore cases. Brooches and Barpins, of the latest design. Fine Gold and Rolled Gold Earings, Cuff Buttons, Charms, Chains, and beautiful stock of Ladies' Gem Engagemen Rings. A full supply of 18 K. Wedding Rings always on hand. Also a large and well-assorted stock of Silverware and Spectacles at very low prices, and remember the place to get your Watches, Clocks, Jewelry, etc, repaired is at

RUSSELL'S, FLESHERTON.

All work personally attended to by J. G. Russell

ONE PRICE
CASH STORE.

As fall is approaching the topic for conversation is where can we get the Best Value for the Least Money!

We cannot do without the necessary woollens to keep us warm during the long winter months.

WHERE CAN WE GO, THEN,

The CASH STORE offers you a free inspection of their stock in all lines of WOOLLENS. A lot of flannels now on hand.

A New Department.

We have just opened a choice lot of CROCKERY, GLASSWARE, LAMPS, etc, see our prices.

Special lines in Men's Long Boots in the fall.

Highest cash price paid for butter and eggs.

McDONALD & EVANS,
Wright's Old Stand.

Pumps! Pumps!

J. McCullough,
Markdale,

manufacturer of pumps, desires to inform the public that he is prepared to furnish pumps for

Deep wells, gravel wells, etc.

parties who have heretofore had difficulty with their wells are

Guaranteed Satisfaction

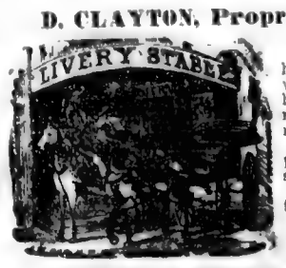
using my articles. I learned my business with the late J. Fear, of Meaford, the superiority of whose pumps was a household word in Grey a few years ago.
Be sure and call on me if you desire anything in the pump line.

J. McCullough.

FARM FOR SALE CHEAP, AND ON EASY terms, lot 7, con. 4, township of Euphrasia containing 200 acres. This is a splendid valuable timber farm. Well timbered with mixed hardwood, hemlock and cedar. Splendid soil. 1½ miles from the beautiful village of Kimberley in Queen's Valley where there are mills, stores, post office and church, and 11 miles from Flesherton on the C. P. R., where there is a splendid market for all kinds of produce, stock, lumber and timber. Apply to R. J. Sproule, auctioneer and real estate agent, Flesherton.

Flesherton Livery Stables.

D. CLAYTON, Proprietor.



First class horses and vehicles for hire at reasonable rates.
Stables opposite Munshaw's hotel.
Special attention paid to commercial business

THE ADVANCE.

Is published

Every Thursday,

FROM THE OFFICE,

Sydenham Street, - - Flesherton, Ont.

TERMS OF SUBSCRIPTION:

$1 per annum when paid strictly in advance $1.50 per annum when not so paid.

ADVERTISING RATES.

One column, 1 year, $50; half col., do., $27; quarter col. do., $15.

Transient advertisements charged at the rate of 8cts. per line for first insertion and 3cts. per line each subsequent insertion.

W. H. THURSTON,
Editor and Proprietor.

ANNOUNCEMENT.

The Canadian Pacific Railway company intend, after the close of the Toronto, London and Ottawa exhibitions, to send Northwest exhibits to several of the larger fall fairs, and we are happy to state that Flesherton has secured this exhibit for our fair to be held here on Sept. 23 and 24.

The Toronto Week is generally conceded to be the most independent and best-informed paper of its class published in Canada. Its editorial opinion is unbiased, and though it may not always deal with political matters in a mode which we admire, still its utterances are weighty, and well worthy of a respectful hearing. It has lately been delivering some valuable opinions upon the French schools of Ontario, to which we referred in these columns last week. Its calm and logical criticisms of the facts brought to light carry with them convincing truths of more than ordinary weight, and show conclusively that the state of affairs in our educational department is not at all perfect. The Week says:

The reports of the Commissioners appointed by the Minister of Education to inquire into the teaching of English in the Schools in the French districts of certain counties in Ontario, show the facts of the case to be very much what those who are accustomed to strike a balance between the contentions of the opposing political factions had supposed them to be. Some attempt at teaching English is made in every school. In a few it is as yet little more than the merest pretence. In a considerable number the knowledge of English possessed by the teacher himself is very defective, and the teaching, as a matter of course, inefficient. In many of the schools in which English is taught more or less passably, a large percentage of the pupils were not studying it at the date of the Commissioners' visit. This fact looks bad in statistics, but its aspect is materially altered by the explanation that in the summer season the schools are largely made up of very young pupils, and the teachers, sensibly as we think, do not as a rule put English books into their hands until they have made a little progress in learning to read in their own language. Next to the serious lack of proper qualifications on the part of the teachers, the worst feature of the case brought out by the report is, in our opinion, the use of textbooks which are not merely unauthorized but seriously objectionable. Such are those which "contain teachings peculiar to the Church of Rome," and those which "are written in a spirit unfriendly to the British Empire, and the development of a partriotism embracing the whole Dominion of Canada." These last are faults which can be and should be promptly corrected.

The latest marvel evolved from the busy brain of the inventor is a "bicycle railway," or a system of running trains on a single track, with a guiding rail overhead to retain the equilibrium. The cars will be two stories high. It is designed by this form of construction to save greatly in weight and friction. The new bicycle railway has been experimentally tried and appears to work very satisfactorily. The prospectus of the company promises nothing less than a revolution in the railway business of the country as a result of the introduction of this system.

The Hamilton Times tells of the theft of two holes from the Hamilton postoffice clock tower. The authorities had to telegraph to Montreal for two new holes. It strikes us that they might have been supplied much nearer home. The Spectator man's abnormal cranium could supply at least one large vacuum, which would no doubt answer all purposes which the two stolen holes served. Insist upon the patronage of home industries, Mr. Times.

Eugenia

From our own Correspondent.

Mr. Thomas Crowe, whose dwelling and a great part of its contents was destroyed by fire last winter, has just moved into his new house, which is built almost on the site of the old one. The new house is quite a commodious dwelling and was built principally by Mr. John Bowerman, of Toronto, who seems to have done his contract in a substantial and workmanlike manner. On Friday evening the young folks held a surprise party in the new house in honor of the event, a goodly number was present and quite a pleasant time was spent.

A severe accident happened Mr. Hopper a few days ago, whereby he cut a severe gash in his leg with a scythe so that he will be confined to the house for several days.

The recent fine weather has been very favorable for harvesting, and farmers have made good use of their time so there is now very little outstanding grain. The wheat has suffered somewhat from rust, but on the whole the crops are excellent.

We hear now and then of Mr. Bruin making predatory excursions into the fields adjacent to the swamps and some attempts have been made to capture his bearship, but generally to no purpose. I hear however that Mr. Latimer while out hunting a short time ago managed to get a shot at bruin, but the ball did not seem to take effect and the bear bounded away into the woods, and Mr. Latimer was unable to trace him. However, a few days after while crossing within a short distance of the place he came suddenly upon his bearship lying dead but so far decomposed by the weather as to be utterly useless.

We are glad to learn that Mr. Solmon Turner, who a short time ago was run over by the wagon and so severely injured, has now so far recovered as to be able to superintend his work again.

Meaford Road.

From our own Correspondent.

The population still increasing, young girls having arrived at Mr. R Smith's, C. Jones' and S. Gilbert's.

The day school opened again at the usual time with our former teacher, Miss Ford, at the helm.

Mr. Pritchard, our village blacksmith, is putting up a fine new picket fence in front of his place making a most decided improvement in its looks.

Harvest work for this year is getting pretty well through with, a few more dry days will finish up and then threshing will be the order of the day.

General News.

Pere Hyachinthe, the celebrated French divine and orator, is said to be almost in absolute want, and an appeal is being made for his support.

The schooner Lewis Ross, of Port Hope, stone laden for Toronto, was driven ashore in a gale Friday at Rondeau harbor and is a total wreck. Crew saved.

Mr. Gladstone has ascended to Eiffel tower.

The German sailors who were wrecked at Samoa last March are back at the Fatherland.

Searle defeated O'Conner on the Thames course Monday by ten lengths; time, 22 42.

A brakeman ran off a C. P. R. car near Peterboro' on Saturday morning and was run over and killed.

A Woodstock grocer could not convince the Police Magistrate that he consumed two dozen bottles of ale per week and paid a fine of $50 and costs.

Shiloh's cough and Consumption Cure is sold by us on a guarantee. It cures Consumption. For sale at the Medical Hall

Sleepless nights, made miserable by that terrible cough. Shiloh's Cure is the Remedy for you. For sale at the Medical Hall.

ADVICE TO MOTHER.—Are you disturbed at night and broken of your rest by a sick child suffering and crying with pain of Cutting Teeth? If so send at once and get a bottle "Mrs. Winslow's Soothing Syrup" for Children Teething. Its value is incalculable. It will relieve the poor little sufferer immediately. Depend upon it, mothers, there no mistake about it. It cures Dysentery and Diarrhœa, regulates the Stomach and Bowels, cures Wind Colic, softens the Gums, reduces Inflamation, and gives tone and energy to the whole sistem. "Mrs. Winslow's Soothing Syrup" for children teething is pleasant to the taste and is the prescription of one of the oldest and best female physicians and nurses in the United States, and is for sale by all druggists throughoutt the world. Price twenty-five cents a bottle. Be sure and ask for "Mrs. Winslow Syrup," and take no other kind

THE MARKETS.

FLESHERTON.

Carefully Corrected Each Week

Flour	$5 00 to
Fall Wheat	85 to
Spring Wheat	85
Barley	1 00
Oats	0 37
Peas	1 00
Butter	0 15
Eggs, fresh	0 16
Potatos bush.	0 15
Pork	6 10
Hay per ton	9 00
Hides	4 50
Sheepskins	0 50
Geese	0 05
Turkeys	0 10
Chickens per pair	0 25
Ducks per lb	0 05
Wool	0 18

SIGN
"Big Spe

Reliable watches in Gold, filled go and Coin-silver cases.

Ladies' and Gents' siz
Walnut and Nickle Cases

I am represented by A 1 watches and backed up by reliable warran homes of Central Grey, than doing biz. in this section.
If prices are not bad

QUALITY Considered.

I would not be able t share of Grey Co. trade as

"CASH or C will positivily do be

Goods, Wo

Warrants Co

than you can do elsewhe cally fitted.

Work Carefully
Fair C

Stock now complete i
Can save to $3.C on watc

Other lines will be h live margins.

W. A. BR
Jewele
MARKDALE, Ont.

EGGS 16c a DOZEN at R. Trimble's, Flesh

FRENCH IN THE SCHOOLS.

The Ontario Government Commissioners Make Their Report.

GENERAL RECOMMENDATIONS.

The Commissioners appointed by the Minister of Education to inquire into the teaching of English in the schools in the French districts in the counties of Prescott, Russell, Essex, Kent and Simcoe have completed their work and handed in their report to the Minister of Education. The following are extracts from the report:

Before speaking in detail of what are commonly known as the French schools in these counties, it may not be out of place to speak of the immigration of the French people, and of the circumstances under which these schools were established.

The first settlers, who were English-speaking people, settled chiefly upon the high lands, and left unoccupied the low or swamp lands, of which there were large areas that could be reclaimed only by very great labor.

The first French Canadian settlers went into this part of the Province as lumbermen, and finding the soil good, they purchased these unoccupied lands at a low price and settled upon them in large numbers.

The increase in the French-speaking population during the past thirty-eight or forty years has been very marked, as is shown by the following census returns for the years 1851, 1861, 1871 and 1881:

	Total popl'n.	French popl'n.
1851	13,857	4 195
1861	22,393	9,447
1871	35,991	15,223
1881	47,939	24,223
Increase pr cent from 1851 to 1861.	67	121
" " " 1861 to 1871.	61	61
" " " 1871 to 1881.	33	60

During the past twenty years many of the English-speaking people have removed to other parts of the country and very few of that class have moved into the counties. The result is that the increase of the English population has been less than that of the French

While unoccupied lands could be obtained the immigration of French Canadians continued; but as nearly all these lands have now been purchased and brought under cultivation, this immigration has of late been very much reduced. Several of the old settlers told us that during the past four or five years it had almost entirely ceased. They also stated that many French settlers had recently sold their farms and removed to Manitoba or the Western States.

FRENCH LANGUAGE IN THE SCHOOLS.

As the French Canadian people and the English-speaking people, on coming into the district, settled in separate communities, the school sections became, to a great extent, essentially French or essentially English. The boundary lines are not always distinctly drawn, yet, in most cases, the early distinctive racial character of neighborhoods still remains. As an evidence of this, we found that in no less than thirty schools every child whose name was entered on the roll was of French-speaking parents. As whole sections were settled by the French, or as a majority of the people in a section became French, teachers who could speak French were employed, and French became the language of many schools, as it was already the language of the sections. The present English schools have always been English since they were first established, and most of the French schools have always been French, yet in a few cases schools which were formerly English and in which English teachers were employed are now taught by French-speaking teachers. This is due to the greater increase of the French population. In all cases where English children attend French schools, inspectors and trustees make special efforts to secure the services of teachers who can speak both English and French. In this, however, they are sometimes not very successful, and many English parents complain that their children are imperfectly taught by French teachers, whose knowledge of English is too limited to enable them to impart instruction properly in that language. For this reason some have taken their children from their own school which is taught by a French teacher, and have sent them to an English school in another section. French ratepayers also contend that their children sometimes receive but scant justice from teachers who cannot speak French.

OFFICIAL RECOGNITION OF FRENCH LANGUAGE.

We find that as far back as 1851 it was ordered by the Council of Public Instruction "In regard to teachers of French, that a knowledge of French grammar be substituted for a knowledge of English grammar, and that the certificate to the teacher be expressly limited accordingly."

By resolution of the Council of Public Instruction, dated April 20th, 1868, the following French text-books were authorized for use in French schools in Ontario:

"Cours d'Arithmetique Commerciale."
"Abrege de la Geographie Moderne."
"La Geographie Moderne."
"Grammaire pratique de la Langue Anglaise."
"Traite Elementaire d'Arithmetique."
"Le Premier Livre de l'Enfance."
"Cours de Versions Anglaises."
"Grammaire Francaise Elementaire."
"Traite de Calcul Mental."

It does not appear that this continued use of French text-books arises from a desire on the part of the French to exclude the English language from the schools. We conversed with all classes of the French people, and they invariably expressed themselves not only as willing, but as desirous that their children should learn the English language. They are also desirous that they shall learn to read and write in French—their mother tongue.

TEACHERS.

As already stated, French-speaking teachers are usually employed in schools where the majority of the pupils are French, and, although four English-speaking teachers are employed in such schools, yet these teachers speak French fluently.

The supply of teachers has been obtained in the past almost entirely (1) from the Public Schools within the counties, and (2) from various educational institutions in Ottawa and in the Province of Quebec. Of the sixty-nine teachers employed in the French Schools inspected by us, only three had attended a High School, and only two had received any training in either a Normal or a Model School in Ontario. One had a second-class certificate, one had a third-class certificate, two had County Board certificates, forty-seven had district certificates and eighteen (of whom five were assistants) had permits granted by the Inspectors. Taking the proficiency of the French teachers in the use of the English language as the basis of classification, twenty-six may be classed as good, twenty as fair, and nineteen as not competent to teach English with any degree of efficiency.

SCHOOLS.

Before speaking of the work done in the schools, it should be mentioned:

(1) That the schools in the several counties were inspected at a time of the year (May and June) when the attendance in rural schools consists chiefly of the younger pupils.

(2) That the teaching of little children in two languages necessarily adds to the work of the teacher, and for a time renders the progress of the pupil slower than it would be in a school in which only one language is taught.

With reference to the instructions contained in your circular just quoted we find:

(1) That some English is taught in every school.

(2) That the Ontario Readers have been introduced into every school.

(3) That the pupils are usually well supplied with English reading books.

(4) That in at least twelve schools the work done in English is much beyond the amount prescribed.

(5) That in 24 schools more time is given to English than that prescribed in the circular; in 6 the time prescribed is given and in 23 less than the time prescribed is given.

(6) That in very few schools has sufficient attention been given to colloquial exercises.

In several schools only young children were present, and classes were therefore confined to pupils in the First Reader. It should be mentioned, however, that, whenever the teacher was at all proficient in speaking English, and when the school contained pupils who had been attending some time, these pupils were almost invariably in the third or fourth class in English, showing that progress was being made in this subject. In 17 schools the results were very satisfactory indeed, and in several cases quite equal to the work done in good English schools. In 21 schools fair progress was being made, and in 18 the pupils knew very little English. The backward condition of these last mentioned schools must be attributed, we believe, mainly to the inability of the teachers to speak English freely. If the children are to learn to speak the English language their teachers must be able to speak it. The teacher who finds it difficult to express his thoughts in English, to pupils who know even less of English than himself, naturally uses the language which both he and they understand.

The lack of progress is not, however, the result of this cause only. We found in two schools, in which English-speaking teachers were employed, that the standing of the pupils was quite below that of the French pupils in several schools whose teachers could speak comparatively little English. In the one case the teachers had taught by good methods and had labored faithfully; in the other teaching of English had evidently been neglected. As many of the teachers have attended only the Public Schools in the district, and have received no professional training, they are not proficient in approved methods of teaching, and the method usually followed in teaching the children to speak English is very defective. A child learns first to speak a language, then to read it. We never teach him the spoken language through the written. He may learn from books to pronounce, and to translate from one language into another, but he will learn to speak the language only by the practice of speaking. The general principle that we learn to do mainly by doing, holds true in this case as in all others.

The method usually followed is to teach the children to read the first French book, and in some cases a part of the second book, before they learn any English. The first English book is then placed in their hands, and they are taught to read or rather to pronounce, as their first exercise in English. The teacher gives the meaning of the words by translating into French, and as the pupils advance they are required to spell the words, and to translate regularly from English into French, and sometimes from French into English. This is the method practised in a majority of the schools. The pupils are taught to read and translate in the hope that they will thereby learn to speak English. We need not say that the hope in most cases is still deferred. The pupils usually translate freely and correctly, and spelled nearly, if not quite, as well as the English pupils present in the schools; but only those who had been taught orally, and who had been trained to give their answers directly in spoken English, showed any readiness in speaking the language.

This defect in the system of teaching has become apparent to the French people themselves. Some parents complain that their children are making very slow progress, and in many cases are learning to read words and sentences which they do not understand.

PUPILS NOT LEARNING ENGLISH.

At least 90 per cent. of the pupils reported as not learning English were in the first French reader, or had been recently promoted to the second class. Very few were found in higher classes who were not learning English.

There is difference of opinion as to the time at which it is best for a pupil to enter upon the study of the English language, but the practice followed in the schools appears to commend itself to a majority of the teachers, and is in accord with the wishes of the parents. What we have to recommend on this subject will be found under the heading of recommendations.

COUNTY OF ESSEX.

About the year 1700, French Canadian pioneers from the Province of Quebec began to settle along the south side of Lake St. Clair and the Detroit River, in what is now the county of Essex. From the census returns since 1851, we find the population of the county and the French population to be as follows:

	1851.	1861.	1871.	1881.
Total population.....	15,617	25,211	32,607	46,962
French population...	5,421	8,736	10,580	14,659

From these figures it will be seen that the total population and the French population have increased at about the same rate. From 1851 to 1881 the increase of the former was 179 per cent. and of the latter 172 per cent. The returns of the French for 1861 are evidently incorrect. Surrounded as the French people are in this county by English-speaking people, they are constantly brought in contact with the English language, and, in consequence of this, they usually understand English and speak it with some fluency, though French is the language of their homes. Their language, their religion and their love of nationality have been fully preserved.

Although racial identity is still distinctly marked, yet the English-speaking and the French-speaking people live side by side in harmony with each other. The French schools, with three exceptions are in North Essex, and are under the supervision of Mr. Girardot, Public School Inspector. From the testimony of persons occupying prominent positions in this county, and from our own observation, we believe that the prudent and impartial manner in which the school law and regulations have been administered by that gentleman for so many years has exerted a beneficial influence in preventing race prejudice, and in furthering the educational interests of all classes alike.

SCHOOLS.

There are thirty schools in the county of Essex in which French is taught, and all were inspected by us. Many of these could scarcely be distinguished from English schools. In twelve schools English is mainly the language of the school; in fourteen, French and English are taught about equally; and in four, French is the language of the school, the teaching in English being limited to reading and translation. The work done in these schools is about equal to what is done in the ordinary English rural school. The school houses and grounds usually show neatness and taste, and the schools are very well supplied with desks and other requisites. Taking the standing of the pupils in English as the basis of classification, seventeen schools may be classed as good, six as fair and seven as poor and unsatisfactory. The practice referred to, in connection with the schools in Prescott and Russell, of teaching the children to acquire some proficiency in reading French before they begin to learn English, is the practice adopted in the County of Essex also. Teachers claim that the French child learns to read English more readily after he has learned to read a little in his own language. The schedule, in which the statistics are given for each school, shows a large number of pupils who are not learning English, but these, with very few exceptions, are either in the First French Book or in the First Part of the Second Book. We believe, however, that the numbers are too large in many schools, and that some teachers are not so prompt as they should be in beginning to teach English to their pupils. The method usually followed in teaching English to the French children is the same as that practiced in Prescott and Russell, viz., reading, spelling and translation. Scarcely any attention has been given to colloquial exercises or oral instruction in the junior classes. As many of the pupils, however, had learned to speak English by associating with English children, this defect in the teaching was not so noticeable as it would be in schools entirely French.

RELIGIOUS EXERCISES IN THE SCHOOLS.

Your Commissioners found that religious exercises occupy a prominent place in the schools inspected by us. In 57 schools religious instruction is given during school hours, in 22 it is given either before or after school, and in 18 no religious instruction is given. This instruction is given by the teachers from a catechism prepared for children of the Roman Catholic Church, and it is to the teaching from this catechism that reference is made in the schedule and summary when religious instruction is spoken of.

In some of the schools special instruction is given from this book, for a certain portion of the year, to children who are preparing for their first communion.

The prayers in use, in addition to the Lord's Prayer, which is used in almost every school, are taken from the Roman Catholic books of devotion. These prayers are, in some schools, used at the opening and close of the school, both in the forenoon and afternoon. In some of the French text books in use, which are elsewhere referred to in this report, the tenets peculiar to the Roman Catholic Church are more or less prominently introduced.

In addition to these methods of inculcating religion, there were found, in many of the schools in the county of Essex, pictures of a religious character, the crucifix and small statues or images of saints. In two instances in the county of Prescott altars were found in the schools. It was stated that these were erected during the month of May for services of a special nature for the people of the neighborhood, who assembled in the school houses for evening prayers, as the churches were at a considerable distance from these localities.

The prominence given to the Roman Catholic religion in these schools is objectionable to the English-speaking Protestants generally. The regulations provided by law on this question are ample to give protection to the religious convictions of all classes of people. They allow sufficient liberty to Protestant and Roman Catholic alike for imparting religious instruction without infringing on the ordinary work of the school. In order, therefore to remove all ground of complaint against the existing state of things, it is only necessary that the schools be brought into harmony with the law.

RECOMMENDATIONS—TRAINING OF TEACHERS.

In the counties of Prescott and Russell the French candidates for teachers' certificates have, in most cases, only an imperfect knowledge of English—too imperfect to enable them to take with advantage the prescribed course as given in English in our High Schools and Model Schools. They do not, therefore, attend these schools to prepare for teachers' examinations.

To provide competent teachers of English for the French schools, and to meet some of the difficulties mentioned in this report, we have to recommend:

(I.) That a special school be established for the training of French teachers in the English language.

The school shall be placed under teachers who can speak both English and French, and who are thoroughly competent to give instruction in these languages.

It should provide the ordinary non-professional course, and should also furnish facilities for professional training as given in County Model Schools.

Candidates on completing their course in this school should be prepared to take the regular examinations in English prescribed for teachers' certificates; and only those who have passed such examinations should receive a license to teach.

(II.) That special institutes be held for the immediate benefit of the teachers now employed in the French schools.

(III.) That the attention of the teachers be called at once to the necessity of making greater use of the oral or conversational method in teaching English.

TEXT-BOOKS.

(IV.) That a bi-lingual series of Readers—French and English—be provided for the French schools in Ontario.

If this were done parents would be saved the expense of purchasing two sets of books, of which many now complain.

The work of both teachers and pupil would be simplified, and there would be placed in the hands of the pupils books that would aid them materially in acquiring a knowledge of both languages.

Under competent teachers, with such books, the pupil should, on completing the Second Book, be sufficiently familiar with English to enable him to receive instruction in this language in the various subjects prescribed. We recognize the difficulties inseparable from the introduction of another series of Readers, but we believe they would be more than counterbalanced by the advantages to be derived therefrom.

(V.) That the use of unauthorized text-books in these schools be discontinued.

RELIGIOUS EXERCISES AND INSTRUCTIONS.

(VI.) That the attention of trustees and teachers be called to the provisions of the law governing religious instruction in Public Schools, as there seems to be a general lack of information on this subject.

GENERAL REMARKS.

The object aimed at in the Public Schools of the Province is to give to the youth attending them such an education in the common branches of knowledge as will fit them to occupy creditably the positions in life they may be called to fill, and this education should be imparted in the English language. Any departure from this rule should be only partial and in accommodation to the peculiar circumstances of certain sections of the country, in order that the end sought may thereby be more fully attained.

There can be no question as to the fact that in all the French schools in the several counties visited, notwithstanding particular cases of backwardness or inefficiency, an effort is being made to impart a knowledge of the English language; and not only so, but this work is receiving a larger amount of attention at present than in former years. There are some of the schools in which English has been well taught for many years, so that they are practically English schools. There are also some, as will be seen from the statistical statement forming part of this report, in which the English language is largely used in the work of the school. This is the case more particularly in the counties of Essex and Kent.

There are some schools in which the time given to English and the use of that language in the school are too limited; but, even in these, more attention is paid to English than formerly, and the use made of it in the work of instruction is greater than it was a few years ago.

In dealing with these schools, in order to raise them to a higher standard, and to secure a satisfactory teaching of the English language in them, time must be allowed, and patience must be exercised. For many years, the French people were allowed to conduct their schools in their own way, no exception being taken either by the Education Department or by the public. Special provision was made to secure French teachers for them and French text-books were authorized for their schools. They have lived for a long period in the localities where they are found, enjoying the use of their native language. They are strongly attached to it. It is the language of their fathers, and the language used in their homes and spoken by their children. It is natural that they should cherish it with affection and desire their children to acquire a knowledge of it. If the schools are dealt with justly, and with due consideration for the feelings of the people, and if the recommendations made in this report are adopted, we believe these schools, within a reasonable time, will be raised to a degree of efficiency that will be satisfactory to both the English and French people.

We have reason also to believe that whatever changes may be necessary to render these schools more efficient and to advance the children more rapidly and intelligently in the knowledge of English, will be welcomed by the French people themselves. We have found that on the whole the people take a deep interest in the education of their children. In many of the rural sections in Prescott and Russell the school houses are inferior and poorly equipped and the salaries very small, yet in some sections and villages the people have manifested their appreciation of the importance of education by providing excellent buildings and paying fairly liberal salaries to the teachers.

While many of the teachers, as already stated, do not speak the English language fluently, we know that teachers may give instruction in languages in which they cannot converse. At the same time it is necessary that all the teachers of our Public Schools should be familiar with the English language, and be able to speak it fluently. And it is found generally that in those schools in which teachers are able to use that language with freedom, they have brought their schools to a very creditable degree of proficiency.

English teachers say that they find their inability to speak French a serious hindrance in teaching French children who do not understand English. The teachers employed in these French schools should be able to speak French as well as English. A sufficient supply of English students willing to undergo the labor and expense necessary to fit themselves for teaching in these French schools, could not be obtained for the small salaries paid. Hence the necessity for providing such means as are recommended in this report, by which French-speaking students can be trained both in the knowledge of English and in the theory and practice of their profession.

It must be remembered also that the teachers in these French schools have to carry on their work in the face of difficulties not met with in an exclusively English school. Especially is this the case in those districts which are wholly French, or in which there are only a few English-speaking residents. The pupils hear no language out of school but French. They have no occasion to make use of the English language, and their progress in learning it is necessarily slow.

It will be observed that this report bears exclusively on the schools among the French people and in which the French language is used. It has to do with the progress of the English language in French districts. There has not, therefore, been any special reference made to the English minority. Their situation is, in not a few cases, one of difficulty. The schools as now conducted are not satisfactory to them. Their children come in contact with views of religious and national questions with which they are not in sympathy. The question should, therefore, be considered with special reference to these difficulties. Whatever text-books are used should be such as Protestants can put with satisfaction into the hands of their children, and whatever in any Public School prevents or renders undesirable the attendance of those children should be removed. Interviews were had with many of the older residents in the districts visited, and with those interested in the questions under investigation. It was found that while there were complaints made by the English-speaking minority in some sections, on the grounds already referred to, yet in other sections people similarly situated had no complaints to make. Some of the people spoken with seemed to think that there had been in recent years an increased determination on the part of the French people to give prominence to their language to the exclusion of the English. They believe they see evidence of this in the social and educational tendencies in their localities. While this may be the case in some places, residents in other districts had observed no tendency in that direction.

Before leaving the subject of these schools it is only just to teachers and pupils to state that your Commissioners were much pleased with the politeness and good conduct of the children, both in and out of school. We have also to thank teachers, trustees and inspectors for their uniform courtesy and for the valuable assistance rendered us in conducting this investigation. We have pleasure also in recognizing the kindness with which we were received by the people in the districts visited. All of which is respectfully submitted.

ALFRED H. REYNAR, M. A.,
D. D. McLEOD,
J. J. TILLEY.

Toronto, Aug. 22nd, 1889.

A Hard Road to Travel.

It is very difficult to see why anyone who believes in his Bible should have much smypathy for characters of the Maybrick kind even when they come near the scaffold. Many a long day has passed since the good book said, "Be sure your sins will find you out." Centuries have rolled away since it was announced that, "The way of transgressors is hard." Why should there be any surprise when a noted and flagrant transgressor finds the way hard? Why should not the Maybricks find the way hard? If they always found it easy there would be grave reasons for doubting the truth of God's word. Indeed if a woman of the Maybrick type found life as happy and pleasant as the best wives and mothers often find it, many people would doubt the very existence of God. God has said that the way of transgressors must always be hard and no transgressor has a right to expect it otherwise. Why should people always raise a howl when they merely see God's word verified?—Canada Presbyterian.

The Business of the Eiffel Tower.

An item in the World states that the business of the Eiffel Tower turns out to be immense. M. Eiffel calculated that when everything was in working order the gate money would be $5,000 a day. Since the elevators have been in operation it is thought to have averaged more than this. On any of the ordinary full-price days more than twenty thousand people have paid admission, and, with the increased prices for those using the elevator, the entire receipts exceed $10,000. The original cost of the Eiffel Tower was a little less than $1,000,000. The proprietor has to keep it in repair, and hand over one-fourth of his gate-money to the Exhibition. It is estimated that it will be half paid for when the Exhibition closes, and then it will remain certainly three years more and perhaps ten.

He Couldn't Enthuse.

Branch—Tree, congratulate me, and come right along and take something. Yes, you've got to. It's a ten-pound boy. My first, you know.

Tree—Really, Branch, you must excuse me this morning, for I cannot enter into the spirit of the occasion. Do not insist now. I am in no mood for it.

Branch—What's the matter, old man?

Tree—It's a boy at our house, too. My eighth, you know.

FREDERICK T. ROBERTS, M.D., Professor in University College, London, Eng., Examiner in Medicines, Royal College of Surgeons, says, in reference to advanced kidney disease: "Complications are met, such as consumption, heart disease, morbid conditions, liver affections. Warner's Safe Cure cures these affections by putting the kidneys in a healty condition, thereby enabling them to expel the waste or poisonous matter from the system.

Doing His Prettiest.

Mr. Budworthy—Rather clever fellow that young Dudelong, don't you think?

Miss Tewstules—I really couldn't tell. He uttered scarcely a word the whole time he was here.

Mr. Budworthy—Sly dog! He knows when he is at his best.—Puck.

Wifely Care—John, do tie a knot in your handkerchief before you go to bed so as not to forget to get up to-morrow at 4 o'clock.

—The Duchess of Portland has promised a ton of toys to the children of an English village.

Granddaddy Greybeard.

(By Mrs. Haney.

Granddaddy Greybeard, how do you do?
'Tis ever so long since I parted from you.
Now you have come, with your long spindle shanks,
Accept a warm welcome and many kind thanks.
Drive with your bicycle over my nose,
Down my long skirts till you come to my toes,
As I lie in my hammock, swayed by the breeze,
Screened from the light by the leaves of the trees;
Do as you like, only stay here with me,
While I dream of the past as it once used to be

Granddaddy Greybeard, so long, long ago,
When a wee girl, we met often, you know.
I held you up lightly—I thought you were wise—
And asked the old question, with wonder-wide eyes:
"Granddaddy Greybeard, tell me, I pray,
Where are my cows? or I'll kill you to-day."
With so many legs, no wonder you held
One, two or more towards the old pasture-field;
But I thought some old man's soul, all withered and dried,
Must be crowded and cramped in your little grey hide,
As up the long pathway, with a slow pace,
Came old "Lineback" and "Pink" and young "Brockleface," Nipping the herbage and switching their tails,
To where mother stood, with the bright milking-pails.
Oh! those were the days, when all nature could please;
My friends were the butterflies, birds and the bees;
Some old-fashioned flowers, now ruled out of style,
That looked in my face with a glad, sunny smile.

Granddaddy Greybeard, sure something is wrong;
The world changes so as it gallops along:
They say times are better, but how can that be?
It has stolen so much that was pleasant from me;
It has scattered my hopes, upset my best joys,
Turned the girls into women, made men of the boys,
And those who laughed loudest and joined in the fun
Are buried away from the light of the sun.

Granddaddy Greybeard, when early to-day,
Oppress'd with sad thoughts in my hammock I lay,
You brought to my mind such a soul-soothing train!
Granddaddy Greybeard, come back soon again

Caistorville, Ont.

The Banner of the Sea.

(By Homer Greene.)

[This is the song for which John Boyle O'Reilly awarded the prize of $100 offered by the Scranton, Pa., Truth, for the best American sea song. The Scranton Truth now offers a prize of $100 for the best musical setting of the words offered before November 1, 1889. Harrison Millard will be the judge in the contest.]

By wind and wave the sailor brave has fared
To shores of every sea;
But, never yet have seamen met or dared
Grim death for victory
In braver mood than they who died
On drifting decks, in Apia's tide,
While cheering every sailor's pride,
The Banner of the Free!

Columbia's men were they who then went down,
Not knight nor kings of old,
But brighter far their laurels are than crown
Or coronet of gold;
Our sailor true, of any crew,
Would give the last long breath he drew
To cheer the old red, white and blue,
The Baner of the Bold!

With hearts of oak, through storm and smoke and flame,
Columbia's seamen long
Have bravely fought and nobly wrought that shame
Might never dull their song.
They sing the country of the free,
The glory of the rolling sea,
The starry flag of liberty,
The Banner of the Strong!

We ask but this, and not amiss the claim,
A fleet to ride the wave,
A navy great to crown the State with fame,
Though foes or tempests rave;
Then as our fathers did of yore,
We'll sail our ships to ev'ry shore,
On every ocean wind will soar
The Banner of the Brave!

Oh! this we claim, that never shame may ride
On any wave with thee.
Then ship of State whose timbers great abide
The home of liberty;
For so our gallant Yankee tars,
Of daring deeds and honored scars,
Will make the Banner of the Stars
The Banner of the Sea!

Dr. Barnardo Sent to Jail.

In the Court of Appeal on Tuesday, Dr. Barnardo appealed against the decision of Queen's Bench granting attachment for contempt of court in not producing a child named Martha Tigh, who had been taken from her mother's home at Bristol, and placed in one of the appellant's homes. Dr. Barnardo made arrangements for sending the child to Canada, and when the mother demanded its return he handed it over to a lady who took it to France. Steps having been taken in the English Courts to obtain the return of the child, Dr. Barnardo wrote to the lady, who refused to return it because she believed that it had been ill-treated by its natural guardians. The Master of the Rolls in delivering judgment said Dr. Barnardo, in his zeal for his own benevolent objects, had overlooked the rights of the people and the law of the country. Having done so he must take the consequences, and he was accordingly committed to prison.—Altringham Advertiser.

Fond of Sunflowers.

It is said that rats are so fond of sunflower seeds that they will, if plenty, flock into the wire cage kind of a trap in such quantity as to nearly fill it. But they should be fed awhile on the seed before introducing the trap.

Talking Shop.

Miss Chiff—Would you believe it? Old Mr. Grump, who is thought so reserved, told me last night that he was a believer in first impressions.

Miss Keenan—Why, don't you know, he's a dealer in etchings.

Miss Rose Coughlan has made a genuine success at the Baldwin Theatre in San Francisco in "Jocelyn."

The friends of temperance in Ireland have formed a resolution worthy alike o themselves, of father Mathew and of the cause. It is to erect in the Irish metropolis a public statue of that apostle of temperance and a total abstinence hall in every city and town in Ireland.

—An exchange makes a note of the fact that the 9 in our date has come to stay. No man or woman now living will ever date a document without using a 9. It now stands at the extreme right, 1889. Next year it will move up a peg—1890—and there it will stay for ten years. It will then move up to the third place—1900—and rest there for 100 years.

Mr. Benson, Collector of Customs at Windsor, is gradually sinking.

The Cornwall Canal was opened for traffic at 6 o'clock Sunday evening.

Advices from Honolulu state affairs there have been quiet since the recent insurrection.

MANITOBA MATTERS.

Brazier, the Montana murderer, has gone back to stand his trial, having consented to waive extradition proceedings.

It is said Attorney-General Martin will be Minister of Education under the new system.

The buildings of the Williams Manufacturing Company, located on the Canadian Pacific track, were destroyed by fire to-day. The loss will principally fall on Mr. J. H. Ashdown, the owner of the building, as there was not much stock on the premises at the time.

J. Buchanan, of Selkirk, has gone to the States. It is said financial troubles caused his sudden departure.

Mr. Somerset, Superintendent of Education for Manitoba, in an address takes ground against the abolition of the Separate Schools on the ground of expediency, although he admits he is opposed to their principle. He thinks they should be brought to a higher standard. He also opposes, from experience elsewhere, the proposal to do away with the Board of Education. He regards this address as a valedictory, as he expects to be legislated out of office.

The first car of new wheat was shipped from Cartier by railway for Winnipeg to-day.

Winnipeg's death rate during August was 15.43 per 1,000 inhabitants.

Geo. Strevel has been awarded the contract for the construction of 30 miles on the Long Lake & Regina Railway.

The weather to-day and during the past two weeks has been most favorable for harvesting, and in consequence nearly all the grain has been cut and over one-half stacked. In most districts threshing has commenced. New wheat has been marketed at several points and is a splendid sample. In Morden district, where the crop suffered most from want of rain in June, it is now estimated the yield will be 25 bushels to the acre. At Portage la Prairie 28 bushels per acre is a careful estimate. One farmer at the latter place from 11 bushels of wheat sown threshed 235 bushels, and many fields will yield from 40 to 50 bushels per acre. Samples show that this season's grain is by far the best ever raised in Manitoba. The kernel being very plump and the color bright, it is now pretty certain that estimates of over a month will be fully realized, viz., that the wheat crop in Manitoba and Assinaboia together will be 12,000,000 bushels.

Convict No. 34 escaped from Stoney Mountain Penitentiary last night and has not yet been captured.

The regular train service will be inaugurated over the Northern Pacific to Portage la Prairie on Monday.

A separator was burned yesterday while threshing on Mann Bros'. farm at Portage la Prairie; loss, $1,000.

Rourke & Cass have received the contract for the construction of the new Northern Pacific roundhouse at a cost of $45,000.

The Northern Pacific, having failed to purchase the Northwest Central or make arrangements with the Manitoba Northwestern, has decided, under the General Railway Act of the Province, to build immediately 50 miles of road from Portage la Prairie westward, tapping the section of country lying between Brandon and Rapid City.

The railway mail clerks of this country have organized a branch association with Mr. J. G. Moore as President.

The daughter of Lord Selkirk, of Rupert's Land fame, will visit Manitoba next month, and a garden party will be held in her honor.

The market for new wheat opened at 60 cents per bushel. There was a considerable quantity of wheat, grade number one hard.

"Have you had a pleasant vacation this summer?" "Yes; enjoyed myself hugely." "How did you spend it?" "By sending my wife to the country for six weeks."

The marriage festivities at Copenhagen will bring a large gathering. It is estimated that forty members of the Imperial and Royal families will be present, the assembling of whom gives rise to numerous betrothal rumors.

—Miss Crimple (to clerk of the Snake Creek House)—Will you please send the porter to our room, Mr. Bigstud? Clerk—Yes, ma'am; anything wrong? Miss Crimple—Papa just shot a musquito, and we would like Patrick to carry it out.

—Jubilant remarks in a dyspepsia doctor's office on Vine street: "Well, doctor, I took your advice about plain, wholesome food. I had a plain deviled crab before I went to bed last night, and I had a splendid night. I dreamt I had a fight with a party I despise, and I nearly knocked the life out of him!"—Philadelphia Record.

—Rider Haggard has agreed, says London World, to write a book, to appear in 1891, about Queen Esther. In order to explore Assyria in search of topographical and archæological lore, he will leave England before the end of autumn.

It is not many years since the post-card came into use, yet it has become all over Europe and this continent a very common means of communication. On the other side of the line it is said over 100,000,000 cards are used a year. Each country has a style of card peculiar to itself, and each has a particular formula where the address is to be written. This has given rise at times to a good deal of discussion among grammarians and newspaper writers. As a matter of curiosity, the various legends may here be noted: Canada: "The address to be written on this side." United States: "Nothing but the address to be on this side." England: "The address only to be written on this side." France: "This side is exclusively reserved for the address." "Germany: "Only for the address." Spain: "On this side is written only the address (foreign). What is to be written will be done on the opposite side, and will go signed by the sender (home), Switzerland: "Only for the address (in German). Side reserved for the address in Italian and French)." Italy: "N. B. On this side nothing is to be written save the address only." Sweden: "This side reserved for the address." Denmark: "On this side write only the address." Russia: "This side reserved specially for the address." Holland: "Side reserved for address." Hungary, Belgium and a few other countries make no specifications, but throw out unequivocal hints that you "must write only the address on this side."

WAR ON CHINESE.

St. Louis Working Girls Begin a Crusade Against Ah Sin.

The Mongolian shirt manipulator and the American working girls are engaged in deadly war in St. Louis. The Chinese population has increased so rapidly and their laundries have increased so continuously, that the American laundry business has been almost ruined. The Americans formed a combination, and by agitation and newspaper aid have drawn the population of the city into the fight. There was a big parade of the Americans the other night, and the transparencies carried were designed to make a Chinaman blush. One that was cheered along the route had this: "American girls first; Chinamen never." Another had this startling piece of information: "What was found at the Chinese laundry, No. 16 North Ninth street. Ask the police and they will tell you. A white woman stupefied by opium." Further down was this statement: "Those who patronize Chinese laundries keep honest girls from work." Oliver H. C. Ross, the president of the association, in speaking about the warfare about to be inaugurated against the celestials, said: "We are confident of the success of the movement because of our faith in the American people's sense of justice. I am sure the people of St. Louis do not realize fully what they are doing when they patronize Chinese laundries, and I believe that when the matter is fairly presented to them, as we propose to do, that the Chinese will find no profit in the laundry business in St. Louis, and that 2,500 honest girls, who are anxious to secure employment, but who cannot get it, will be able to get work at which they can earn good wages. There are in St. Louis 900 Chinamen, and each one does about the work of three girls. That means that if there were no Chinese laundries in St. Louis 2,500 girls would be earning $7 and $8 a week in the laundry business."

It has been decided that a big parade of the laundry girls will be the most effective way of winning over the young men from the heathen. The girls will put on their best, and in the whitest linen will carry their transparencies and show their countrymen the error of their ways.

MEERN IS A HERO.

His Courage Saved Forty-five Men from Probable Death.

A Cumberland, Md., despatch says: Even yet there are echoes to the cries of rejoicing which went up yesterday when forty-five men emerged safely from a dark earth prison in which death had seemed their certain lot. The Allegheny and the Ætna mines are located thirteen miles from here. Yesterday a thin wall between them collapsed with a crash and a volume of water from the Ætna, or the Boston Mine, rushed into the Allegheny mine and flooded it. Forty-five miners were at work when the rush of water came between them and the shaft through which they went up and down to and from the surface. Their lamps went out and they were left in utter darkness. The water swirled around them, rose to their waists, and then to their necks, and they began climbing the wall of the mine. Perched about like birds they waited. Meanwhile, up above, in the light of day, a heart-rending scene was being enacted. News of the disaster had spread rapidly, and within a few minutes a crowd of weeping women and children, who had husbands and fathers in the submerged mine, gathered about and prayed aloud to heaven to save their loved ones. Men were there, too, weeping with the women; but they could suggest no means of finding out the condition of the men in the mine. Unable to endure the suspense any longer one man finally volunteered to go down into the mine and find out, if possible, whether the men were alive or dead. This man's name is H. P. Meern, and he is a mining engineer. He found the water up to his neck, but he swam through the darkness until he came to the miner's retreat, where they were perched about in every position. They seemed dazed, and looked for nothing but death. Placing a boy on his shoulders, Mr. Meern shouted encouraging words to the others and induced them to swim after him to the mouth of the shaft. They followed him and every one of them got out in safety. Then came the scene of rejoicing which no pen can describe.

The Shah's Fast Ride.

The Shah of Persia was given the experience of very fast running on English railways recently; for example, the run from Leeds to York over the Great Northern Railway, a distance of 185¾ miles, being made in 3 hours and 41 minutes, giving a running average, exclusive of stops, of 56¼ miles an hour, a tremendous pace for so long a run. From Liverpool to Manchester he was taken over the Cheshire line in 33 minutes, the distance being 34 miles. It is doubtful whether His Majesty enjoyed the tremendous contrast to Oriental ways which such a pace involved.

Began to Doubt Him.

"You doubt me!" he exclaimed. "Have I not told you over and over again that I loved you and you only; and did I ever tell you an untruth, Katherine?"

"I would that I could have absolute faith in you," she replied, stifling a sob; "but—but I heard you tell uncle that you once caught a brook trout that weighed three pounds and six ounces"; and the tears flowed down her fair young face, while he tapped the ground with his foot and solemnly gazed o'er the wide blue sea.

Commencing to-day there is an advance in Western Union Telegraph rates.

—"I have," cried the rampaging orator, "in my tongue a rapier with which to kill all fools." "Take it away from him!" yelled a man in the hall. "He's going to commit suicide!"

"Mr. McClintock," shouted his better half, "I want you to take your feet off the parlor table." "Mrs. McClintock," he said, in a fixed determined voice, "I allow only one person to talk to me that way." "And who is that?" she demanded. "You, my dear," he replied softly, as he removed the pedes.

Farmer's wife—I suppose you will be soon leaving the country for the city, won't you? Tramp—Yes, ma'am; it's allus about this time of the year that the actors begin crowdin' us off the road.

TELEGRAPHIC SUMMARY.

Will Carleton is rusticating at Thousand Island Park.

On Friday evening a little Kingston lad fell into a lime vat and was sadly burned.

Mr. Wm. McMillan, Magistrate at Brucefield, Ont., dropped dead yesterday afternoon.

Thirteen persons at Iroquois were poisoned by eating ice cream. None of them died.

Prairie fires are raging at Regina, Maple Creek, and other adjacent points, which are doing a great deal of damage.

Under Count Tolstoi's scheme Jewish advocates will not be allowed to plead in the tribunals of the Baltic Provinces.

A little Toronto girl accidentally fell upon a moving emery wheel, and the moving wheel made a deep gash in her throat.

The Ottawa Ministerial Association condemn some of the attractions advertised for the Central Fair as immoral and appealing to the lowest tastes.

A Gananoque forger, who sold W. N. Rogers, Kingston, a cheque for $500, has been arrested in the United States, whither he absconded. He was ran down at Bancroft, Iowa.

George Campbell, London, was yesterday committed for trial at the Quarterly Sessions, on a charge of slashing Henry Moorehead with a razor after church the other Sunday night.

Many parts of Essex county are threatened with a water famine as a result of the protracted dry weather. The farmers have to draw water for miles, both for their stock and household use.

Early Sunday morning Mr. E. S. White, Welland, was awakened by some one in his bedroom. He gave the alarm and the intruders beat a hasty retreat, taking Mr. White's pants, containing $5.50 in cash.

Dr. Johnston, of the Dominion Department of Agriculture, who is at present in Paris, has been instructed to make inquiry with reference to the discovery of M. Pasteur in connection with the inoculation of animals as a prophylactic of pneumonia.

Mr. Joseph Chamberlain, in a speech at Birmingham to-day, advised the Government before introducing their Irish Land Bill to submit to Parliament a resolution declaring that Ireland, equally with England and Scotland, is entitled to a denominational endowment for educational purposes.

Samuel C. Shovalter, aged 60, of Dayton, O., submitted to an injection of elixir of life three weeks ago, hoping for relief from rheumatism, and died yesterday. After the injection his limbs swelled and his whole system was permeated with blood poison. Gangrene set in, the flesh chipped off in flakes large as a man's hand, and he became a horrible object.

The body of the young man recently found dead on the Grand Trunk track near Glencoe proves to have been that of Wm. B. Jaynes, aged 24 years, eldest son of Mr. Wm. Jaynes, of Askin street, London South. The young man was on his way home from Detroit and is supposed to have fallen from the cars while sitting on the steps asleep.

Mrs. Henry White, of Newtonbrook, was standing at the corner of Queen and James streets, Toronto, yesterday morning looking at the circus, when a man at her side, in turning hastily, struck her in the breast with his elbow, knocking her down. In falling she broke her arm, and had to be conveyed in the ambulance to her friends at 51 Teraulay street.

Shortly after 8 o'clock last evening Alfred Jones, a brakesman on an auxiliary train, while passing between the auxiliary car and van at Port Hope, fell between the cars and was cut in two. Death was instantaneous. Jones was an unmarried man, about 30 years of age. His mother lives near Belleville. The body was sent down by express to-night.

It is rumored that the Czar will meet Emperor William at Potsdam during the present week.

It is rumored in St. Petersburg that Russia is likely to abandon the present severe system of industrial protection.

Regent Gruics declares the Servian Government earnestly desire to maintain friendly relations with Bulgaria.

Each side in the Cronin case is so anxious and particular that it is expected the task of selecting jurors will occupy some weeks.

Sir Edwin Arnold, the author of "The Light of Asia," was among the passengers of the Vancouver, which arrived at Quebec on Saturday.

Grimsby Park closed for the season with yesterday's services, when Dr. Searles, of New York, and Rev. Dr. W. S. Griffin conducted the services.

About 300 representatives of the United States Editorial Association were in London on Saturday en route to Niagara Falls, and were tendered a reception.

The Dominion Trades and Labor Council will meet in Montreal to-morrow. To-day there will be an imposing demonstration of workingmen in that city.

Mr. VanHorne, President of the Canadian Pacific Railway, says the extension to Windsor will be completed so that freight can be carried within two months.

The Berlin Post declares the only way to turn the attention of Russia from war is for the European Powers to agree to give her a free hand in Asia and the Balkans.

The Georgetown paper mill last week erected a 60 horse electric motor, the power for which is generated by damming the River Credit a short distance below the mill.

It is said the Russian Government have discharged the debts owed by the Prince of Montenegro to various Austrian banking firms. The debts amounted to over 1,000,000 roubles.

An engine and four freight cars went through a burning bridge near Rock Creek, Wyoming Ter., on the Union Pacific yesterday. The fireman jumped, but the engineer went down with the mass.

Mrs. Maybrick is permitted by the prison authorities to take exercise in the prison yard. Her health is improving. She still maintains her cool demeanor, and seems to be settling into the routine of convict life.

The Sultan of Zanzibar has signed a concession giving the British East Africa Company the Lamu Island and the Beragir coast line from Kipini northward, including Kismayu-Brawa, Merka, Magadish and Mruti.

The French Government have declined to accede to the request of the people of the New Hebrides for the annexation of the islands by France. France does not wish to infringe upon her convention with England relative to the New Hebrides.

This week's proceedings in Mont Martre and Belleville seem to indicate that there is a great deal of Boulangist sentiment in the rougher districts of Paris. But the opinion here now is very decided that the Republic will hold, if not its own, still a clear majority in the new Chamber

The body of a man was found in Bertrand's fishing net in Lake Erie, near Colchester, Thursday. From his clothes it is supposed he was a sailor. He was 5 feet 8 inches in height, red hair and moustache, barefooted and tattooed on both arms. From the appearance of the body he could not have been long in the water. The body was buried on the beach.

Albert Brierly, the Liverpool merchant who has gained notoriety through his connection with the Maybrick case, arrived at Boston Sunday. He admitted paying the costs of the trial, £6,500, but said he had figured more prominently in the case in print than any real connection with it warranted, and he came to America to escape notoriety. After he left the steamer all trace of him was lost.

SECRET OF LIFE.

Brain Workers Must Spare the Body—Realize When Old Age Comes.

Bacon says: "Discern of the coming on of years, and think not to do the same things still, for age will not be defied." Half the secret of life, we are persuaded, is to know when we are grown old; and it is the half most hardly learned. It is more hardly learned, moreover, in the matter of exercise than in the matter of diet. There is no advice so commonly given to the ailing man of middle age as the advice to take more exercise, and there is perhaps none which leads him into so many pitfalls. This is particularly the case with the brain workers. The man who labors with his brain must spare his body. He cannot burn the candle on both ends, and the attempt to do so will almost inevitably result in his lighting it in the middle to boot: the waste of tissue will be so great that he will be tempted to repair it by the use of a too generous diet. Most men who use their brains much soon learn for themselves that the sense of physical exaltation, the glow of exuberant health which comes from a body strung to its full powers by continuous and severe exercise is not favorable to study. The exercise such men need is the exercise that rests, not that which tires. They need to wash their brains with the fresh air of heaven, to bring into gentle play the muscles that have been lying idle while the head worked. Nor is it only to this class of laboring humanity that the advice to take exercise needs reservations. The time of violent delights soon passes, and the effort to protract it beyond its natural span is as dangerous as it is ridiculous. Some men, through nature or the accident of fortune, will of course be able to keep touch of it longer than others; but when once the touch has been lost, the struggle to regain it can add but sorrow to the labor. Of this our doctor makes a cardinal point: but pertinent as his warning may be to the old, for whom, indeed, he has primarily compounded his elixir vitæ, it is yet more pertinent to men of middle age, and probably it is more necessary. It is in the latter period that most of the mischief is done. The old are commonly resigned to their lot: but few men will consent without a struggle to own that they are no longer young.—Macmillan's Magazine.

The Astrologers Forbid.

It is said that the Emperor of China is anxious to encourage the building of railways in his kingdom, but he is surrounded by many obstacles. His priests, astrologers, and advisers of various kinds are afraid of Western civilization, and they employ all manner of devices to keep the young potentate from acting in a progressive way. The astrologers never find the stars favorable to the granting of a railway franchise. The Emperor is not more superstitious than other educated Chinamen, but he is obliged to conform to certain ancient customs or stand in danger of a rebellion. But the railways in the end will be built.—Boston Star.

A Growing City.

The city of Vancouver, B.C., is springing up like an Alladin's palace. In 1886 it had 600 inhabitants and in January of 1889, about 11,000. It possesses 38 miles of streets, 16 miles of sidewalks, 12 churches, a paid fire department, electric light and two magnificent parks. Less than five years ago the site was a wilderness.

Had to Take the Lot.

Jones' better-half presented him with twins.

When nurse brought them into the room for inspection the poor man was so bewildered at the multitudinous character of his happiness that he asked:

"Am I to choose?"

A Mother's Love.

Indignant Mother—You haven't given the child any prize.

Teacher—Alas, he has been persistently lazy.

Indignant Mother—Well, then, why don't you give him a medal for his persistency?—Texas Siftings.

A Strange Question.

Cora—I really must be careful not to give Mr. Smythe any more encouragement, for I do not want to hurt his feelings.

Edith—He has not proposed, has he?

Cora—No, but he has been asking me if I thought I could keep house on $10 a week.

—P. T. Barnum's wealth is estimated at $10,000,000, and the number of houses he owns in Bridgeport about three hundred and fifty. He has made and lost several fortunes, but would appear to be so comfortably fixed just now as to have no fear of any further financial disaster. He is one of the few editors that have made a large amount of money.

GEO. MITCHELL,

BANKER,

FLESHERTON.

DRAFTS BOUGHT AND SOLD.

Special Attention paid to the collection Notes and Accounts, 2nd door North Richardson & Co's.

The Local News.

What is Happening in Our Own Vicinity.

Read our special offer on this page.

A Sunday School convention was held in Markdale on Tuesday.

Any amount of honey for sale at this office.

The cattle fair on Monday was very poorly attended, only about half a dozen animals being offered.

Men's and boys' SHIRTS and DRAWERS, all wool, very cheap this season at M. Richardson & Co's.

Mr. Chas. Leitch says he has plums which beat the ones we noticed last week for size, one of which measured six inches one way.

The fall show bills have just been issued from this office, and we have received much praise for the manner in which they were executed.

If your watch or clock needs repairing, be sure and take it to Russell's, Flesherton, for a perfect job.

M. Richardson & Co's fall millinery opening next week, come early and see the new and pretty designs for fall.

Mr. Wm. Elder has leased his hotel at Proton Station to Mr. John Sheehy, of Durham, and returned this week to reside in Flesherton

When visiting the Flesherton fair be sure and call at Russell's noted jewelry store and see their grand display of watches, clocks, jewelry, etc.

We have received from the secretary a copy of Proton Agricultural society's prize list. The exhibition will be held at Dundalk on Tuesday and Wednesday, Oct. 1 and 2.

M. Richardson & Co are now showing a very attractive stock of new and PRETTY DRESS GOODS and dress trimmings in latest novelties at astonishingly low prices.

A district meeting of the Methodist Church was held in Markdale on Tuesday. No very important business was transacted. Two or three members were absent owing to sickness.

Several parties from Flesherton attended a corn supper and dance at the residence of Mr. Simon McCallum, Meaford Road, one evening last week, and say they had a magnificent time

Mr. Bishop, proprietor of the Kimberley grist mill, returned from a trip to the eastern Province on Monday. Mr. Bishop pronounces the hay and grain crop of the east as being good, but root crops are not up to the average.

A man who never told a lie, a woman whose tongue never got the better of her judgment and a man who can publish a newspaper to please everybody, are the three social white elephants which would be leading cards in the circus of the world.

A full range of fine Henriettas beautiful finish, leading colors, just opened at M. Richardson & Co's.

We would impress upon our business men the necessity of getting their show printing done early, so as to avoid the rush which always occurs previous to the show. Posters, dodgers, advertising cards, letter heads, bill heads, circulars, and any kind of plain or colored printing artistically executed at The Advance office. Fair prices and first class workmanship.

An exchange makes a note of the fact that the nine in our date has come to stay. No man or woman now living will ever date a document without using a nine. It now stands at the extreme right, 1889. Next year it will move up a peg—1890—and there it will stay for ten years. It will then move up to the third place—1900—and rest there for 100 years.

If your watch or clock needs repairing, be sure and take it to Russell's, Flesherton, for a perfect job.

Mrs. Wm. Wright has placed a new roof on her store.

Mr J.E. Moore has lately plastered and otherwise improved his furniture store.

The Ladies' Aid of the Presbyterian Church intend holding a public entertainment on the evening of the second day of our fall show.

Fine all wool blankets, all wool and union factory flannels, choice patterns, at very close prices at M. Richardson & Co.

Shooting.

Hunters have already been bagging rabbits in this vicinity. Partridge shooting is on, but the partridge themelves appear to be off. They are said to be scarce.

Runaways.

On Friday last a horse attached to a bread wagon, and belonging to Mr. Watson, of Priceville, ran away from opposite Mr. Treadgold's, and during its peregrinations ran foul of Munshaw's hay scales, upsetting and smashing the cart badly. Earlier in the day F. G. Karstedt's horse started off with a wagon loaded with scraps of tin, and was only stopped when it tried to jump through Mr. Trimble's window. Mr. Trimble "drew the line at that" and the horse stopped.

Too Close for Comfort.

One day last week a man hailing from Dundalk, whose name we did not learn, was standing on the station platform when the express came in. He was under the influence of liquor, and standing so close to the edge of the platform that a car struck and rolled him over upon the ground. He fell between two cars with both legs across the rail, and when the train came to a standstill one wheel was within an inch of his leg. An extra half turn of the wheel would have amputated his limb. That was about as close a call as the most fastidious could wish for.

Card Playing.

There are some young men in Flesherton who are quite liable to get themselves or their parents into severe trouble. Card playing on Sunday is an offence in the eyes of the law made punishable by a fine not to exceed twenty dollars, yet that is what these intelligent youngsters have been guilty of. We tell them candidly, it is not safe for them to allow themselves to be caught at it again. The names of the offenders have all been handed in to this office, but we withold the publishing of them in hopes that it will not occur again.

He Rode Far and Free.

The other day a farmer hailing from the vicinity of Priceville came out to the station with the intention of going to Markdale. A single engine and tender was just ready to start for Owen Sound, and the farmer thought it a good chance to steal a ride as far as Markdale, so he mounted the draw-head at the stern and away he went. It chanced, though, that the engine did not stop at Markdale, and Mr. farmer was carried on to the next station, from whence he walked back to Markdale and came down on the evening train, paying his fare like a little gentleman.

Merely Sarcasm.

The following from a Flesherton correspondent appeared in Tuesday's Empire. It explains itself.

PIE FOR FLESHERTON

To the Sporting Editor of THE EMPIRE

SIR,—I have been requested by the Flesherton baseball club to enquire upon what terms a match could be arranged between themselves and the Toronto International baseball team, said match to be played at any time and on any grounds which the latter may name. Of course ours is only a "one horse" country club, but these late exhibitions of playing which the Tortons have been indulging in have added courage to our other good qualities, and we simply think that Flesherton can hold them down without difficulty. Yours etc.

Flesherton, September 6.

[Write to Manager Cushman, Elliot house.]

Personals.

Miss Bella Lennox, of Barrie, is visiting relatives in this vicinity.

Miss Ada Sproule is spending a fortnight with her aunt at Pine Grove.

J.W. Armstrong, Esq., and Mrs. Armstrong, are visiting London this week.

Miss Sutherland, of Durham, is visiting at Mr. Bradley's.

Master Geo. Legard is home for a short time visiting his parents and friends.

Medical Visitors.

The ozone-saturated air of Flesherton has been filled with the cry of quacks during the past week. Dr. Laird, the lightning long-haired tooth destroyer, held forth for four nights on the street, doing clever slight-of-hand tricks, and as a favor allowing people to buy his medicines for two minutes only each evening. Then on Friday evening Dr. Gardiner, who was known to the people here four years ago as the Wizard Oil talking machine, opened out on Trimble's corner with a select trio of musicians, some glassware, his medicines, and several diamond rings, one of which he gave away on Saturday evening to mine host McInnis of Flesherton Station. Whether it was because Angus was the best looking man in the crowd, or simply that it was just his luck, has not yet been decided. The music furnished by the company was first class and attracted large crowds.

U. C. Bible Society Meeting.

The annual meeting of the Upper Canada Bible and Tract Society was held in the Methodist Church on Wednesday evening of last week. The attendance was very small. Rev. Dr. Moffat, secretary of the society, addressed the meeting at some length, giving a most interesting description of the work accomplished by the society during the past year. The society has been in existence 56 years. Last year there were $11.35 collected at this appointment. The following officers were elected for the current year: Rev. Mr. Shilton, president; Rev. Mr. Watson and Rev. Mr. Emes, vice-presidents; J.T. Moore, secretary. Miss Armstrong, Miss Damude, Miss Annie Richardson, Miss Vandusen, Miss Woods and Miss Stafford were appointed collectors.

Artemesia Council.

Artemesia Council meet on Monday, Sept. 3, the reeve in the chair. All the members present. Minutes of last meeting read and confirmed. The following accounts were passed and ordered to be paid. John Boland, overseeing road jobs, $4, and monthly indigent account. Bylay No. 452, to levy school rates was read a third time.

It was moved by Messrs. McArthur and Sharp that this Council grant fifty dollars to be expended on the gravel road—twenty-five west of station and twenty-five east of station. Carried.

Moved by Messrs. Cairns and Sharp, that the sum of $140 be advanced to pay workmen on stone culvert, Boyle's creek. Carried.

Moved by Messrs. Cairns and Sharp, that John Porteous be allowed five dollars remuneration for gravel taken off his place for use of road. Carried.

Moved by Messrs. Cairns and Boland, that this Council expend five dollars on town line, Artemesia and Euphrasia, providing Euphrasia expend the same. Carried.

Moved by Messrs. McArthur and Sharp, that the reeve issue his order for this day's session of Council. Carried.

This finished the business and Council adjourned.

Special.

It is with pleasure that we announce to our many patrons that we have made arrangements with that wide-awake, illustrated farm magazine, the American Farmer, published at Fort Wayne, Ind., and read by nearly 200,000 farmers, by which that great publication will be mailed direct, FREE, to the address of any of our subscribers who will come in and pay up all arrearages on subscription and one year in advance from date, and to any new subscriber who will pay one year in advance. This is a grand opportunity to obtain a first class farm journal free. The American Farmer is a large 16-page journal, of national circulation, which ranks among the leading agricultural papers. It treats the question of economy in agriculture and the rights and privileges of that vast body of citizens—American farmers—whose industry is the basis of all material and national prosperity. Its highest purpose is the elevation and ennobling of Agriculture through the higher and broader education of men and women engaged in its pursuits. The regular subscription price of the American Farmer is $1.00 per year. IT COSTS YOU NOTHING. From any one number, ideas can be obtained that will be worth thrice the subscription price to you or members of your household, YET YOU GET IT FREE. Call and see sample copy

For a new fall suit in TWEED or WORSTED you cannot do better than select from M. Richardson & Co's full and very choice stock of new SUITINGS.

Honor Roll.

S. S. NO. 6, ARTEMESIA. MARKS FOR AUGUST, 1889.

Fourth Class.—Nettie Stone 76, Ida Stone 75.

Third Class.—John Wright 52, Roy McLeod 38, Alfred Stone 36.

Second Class.—Lizzie McArthur 75. Meda Whittaker 74, Susie Gee 68, Florence Stone 65, Bella Harrow 67, Ulric Stone 61, Henry Patterson 57, Norman Fletcher 53, Alex. McLeod 41, Malcolm Baxter 16.

Part Second Class.—John Gibson 37, Tamar Gibson 16.

First Class.—Margaret A McArthur 64, Laura Whittaker 63, John McLeod 52.

Sell your Eggs now, 16c a dozen at M. Richardson & Co's.

NEW ADVERTISEMENTS

Dr. Sinclair

M.D. M.A., L.C.P.S.O., M.C.P.S.M.

The Great Scottish Specialist

—OF—

TORONTO.

Specialist for the Treatment of

All Chronic Diseases, Private Diseases, Diseases of the Brain & Nerve, Diseases of the Heart and Lungs, and diseases of Women positively treated successfully.

Consultation Free.

Dr. Sinclair will be at Flesherton on Saturday, 5th day of October.

EAST GREY

FALL EXHIBITION

FLESHERTON

September 23 and 24, 1889.

$600 IN PRIZES!

OPEN TO THE WORLD!

FIRST DAY: Grand base ball competition, open to the county; silver cup valued at $15 as prize; clubs to employ no outside players; game to commence at 1 p.m. sharp. Foot race once around the track, at 3 p.m.; 1st prize $3 and prize $2, entrance fee to be 10 per cent. of first money, to be added to 1st prize. Judging in hall. Doors open at 4 o'clock p.m.

SECOND DAY: Grand trial of speed, open only to horses belonging to the members of the society, three times around the track—walk, trot and go-as-you-please; 1st prize, $5, 2nd, $3. Campbell Highland Dancers, of London, accompanied by the bagpipes. These children have exhibited in all the large cities of Ontario, and are marvellously clever. Judging of horses, cattle, sheep, swine and poultry. Doors open to the general public at 9.30 a.m.

NOTICE!

☞ See the Northwest exhibit of cereals.

Arrangements have been made with the railway to carry passengers from Orangeville, Owen sound and intermediate stations at one and one-third fare on first day of show, and single fare on second day, good to return on Wednesday, September 25.

FLESHERTON BRASS BAND IN ATTENDANCE.

Gen'l Admission 15c., Children 10c.

GEO. Stewart, President. R. J. SPROULE, 1st Vice President. S. DAMUDE, Sec.

SEALED TENDERS addressed to the undersigned, and endorsed, "Tender for Owen Sound Work," will be received until Wednesday the 18th day of September next inclusively, for works for the improvement of the Harbour of Owen Sound, Grey County, Ontario, according to plans and a specification to been seen at the office of the Town Clerk, Owen Sound, and at the Department of Public Works, Ottawa

Tenders will not be considered unless made on the form supplied and signed with the actual signatures of tenders

An accepted bank cheque, payable to the order of the Minister of Public Works, for the sum of three thousand dollars ($3,000) must accompany each tender. This cheque will be forfeited if the party decline the contract, or fail to complete the work contracted for, and will be returned in case of non-acceptance of tender.

The Department does not bind itself to accept the lowest or any tender.

By order,

A. GOBEIL, Secretary.

Department of Public Works, Ottawa, 3rd Sept. 1889.

Executors Notice!

PURSUANT to section 36, Cap. 110, of R.S.O., 1887, the creditors and all others having claims against the estate of Susan Pedlar, deceased, in her lifetime, of the Township of Artemesia, in the county of Grey, who died on or about 1st of July, 1889, are hereby notified to send by post prepaid or deliver to W. S. Christoe, one of the executors of deceased, Fleherton P.O. on or before the first day of November Next, their christian and surnames, addresses and description, the full particulars of their claims, a statement of their assets and a statement of the securities (if any) held by them, or on default thereof and immediately after such last named date the assets of the said estate will be distributed among the parties entitled thereto, regard being had only to the claims of which notice shall have been given as above required; and the executors will not be liable for the said assets or any part thereof to any person of whose claim notice shall not have been received as aforesaid at the time of such distribution.

W. S. CHRISTOE, SAMUEL PEDLAR, Executors.

Dated Sept. 5, 1889.

Medical.

DR. CARTER,

M.C.P. & S., ONT.

PHYSICIAN, SURGEON, &c.

FLESHERTON.

Office, Strain's block. Residence, J. G. Russel's

J. G Hatton, M.D.C.M.

Member of the College of Physicians and Surgeons, Ontario.

Enquire at office, one door east of Grier's store or Atkinson's Hotel.

Priceville, Nov. 19, 1888.

DRS. SPOULE & EGO.

MARKDALE ONT.

Office:—Manley's Drug Store.

T.S. SPROULE, M.D., etc. ANGUS EGO, M.D., etc. late of Tottenham, Ont.

Dr. Ego will be found at Markdale House at night

J. P. OTTEWELL,

VETERINARY SURGEON.

Graduate of Ontario Vet. College.

RESIDENCE ON COLLINGWOOD STREET Sixth Door East of Presbyterian Church.

FLESHERTON.

Dentistry.

J. P. MARSHALL,

L. D. S., DENTIST.

Visits Markdale the 1st and 3rd Wednesday of each month.

Flesherton each trip on the day following

Legal.

J. W. FROST,

Barrister, Solicitor, Conveyancer, Etc,

FLESHERTON OFFICE, NEXT POST OFFICE. SPROULE'S BUILDING, ON THURSDAYS.

OWEN SOUND OFFICE, FROST'S BUILDING

P. McCULLOUGH,

Barrister, Solicitor, &c.

Office, over McFarland's Store Markdale. Money to Loan.

Business Cards.

John W. Armstrong,

FLESHERTON, CO. GREY.

DIVISION COURT CLERK, COMMISSIONER in B. R., Conveyancer, &c. Agent for purchased sale of lands. Appraiser for C. L. C. C. and F. P. B. & S. Society. Money to Loan on most reasonable terms. ISSUER OF MARRIAGE LICENSES. NOTARY PUBLIC

MONEY TO LOAN.

AT LOWEST CURRENT RATES

on Town or Farm Property.

S. DAMUDE, Flesherton

Mr. Wm. Karstedt,

Stone Mason, Bricklayer and Plasterer

MATERIAL FURNISHED

Estimates given free. Ornamental Plastering a Specialty.

dence one door south of Advance Office

W. J. BELLAMY

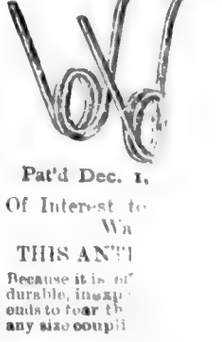
TWP. CLERK ARTEMESIA.

CONVEYANCER, COMMISSIONER, INSURANCE AGT, &C

DEEDS, MORTGAGES, LEASES, &c., prepared and properly executed. Insurance effected in first class companies. Money to lend at lowest rates

R. J. Sproule,

POSTMASTER, Flesherton, Commissioner in B. R., Licensed Auctioneer, Conveyancer, Appraiser and Money Lender Real Estate and Insurance Agent. Deeds, Mortgages, Leases and Wills wound up and Valuations made on shortest notice. Auction Sales attended to in County. Money to loan at lowest rates of interest. Collections promptness and despatch to with Agent for the Dominion Steamship Company Cheap tickets from Flesherton to Liverpool, Glasgow, London or other British Ports. Parties intending to England, Scotland or Ireland, will find it to their advantage before purchasing their tickets



Pat'd Dec. 1,

Of Interest to Wa

THIS AN'

Because it is of durable, inexpensive to fear th any size coupli

Heard'

ge Shop

EGGS 16c A DOZ. AT M. RICHARDSON & CO'S.

The Most Successful Remedy ever discovered, as it is certain in its effects and does not blister. Read proof below.

STREETSVILLE, P. Q., May 3, 1888.

DR. B. J. KENDALL CO., Enosburgh Falls, Vt.

Gentlemen—I have used Kendall's Spavin Cure for Spavins, Splints, Lameness and Stiff Joints and found it a sure cure in every respect. I cordially recommend it to all horsemen.

Very respectfully yours,

CHARLES J. BRACKETT.

KENDALL'S SPAVIN CURE.

ST. THOMAS, P. Q., April 22, 1889.

DR. B. J. KENDALL CO., Enosburgh Falls, Vt.

Gents:—I have used a few bottles of your Kendall's Spavin Cure on my colt, which was suffering from Influenza in a very bad form, and can say that your Kendall's Spavin Cure made complete and rapid cure. I can recommend it as the best and most effective liniment I have ever handled. Kindly send me one of your volume books entitled "A Treatise on the Horse." Yours respectfully,

C. F. WILKINSON.

KENDALL'S SPAVIN CURE.

FORT ELLICE, MAN., May 10, 1889.

DR. B. J. KENDALL CO., Enosburgh Falls, Vt.

Gentlemen—I always keep your Kendall's Spavin Cure and Buster on hand, and they have never failed in every case and state they will do. I have cured a bad case of Spavin, also two cases of Ringbone and several standing, on mares which I wished to breed from, and have not seen any signs of disease in the colts of spring. Yours truly,

D. J. O'KEEFFE.

Price $1 per bottle, or six bottles for $5. All druggists have it or can get it for you, or it will be sent by any address on receipt of price by the proprietors,

DR. B. J. KENDALL CO., Enosburgh Falls, Vt.

SOLD BY ALL DRUGGISTS.

D. McTavish,

HORSESHOER AND

GENERAL BLACKSMITH,

Collingwood Street,

FLESHERTON, - ONT.

Manufacturing of Wagons, Sleighs, Buggies Democrats, etc. Horseshoeing promptly attended to. Special attention given to contract and tender feet.

Logging and Plow Chains constantly on hand.

REMOVAL

I desire to inform the public that I have removed my well known tin shop to

MOORE'S Block, Durham St.

A complete stock of tinware will be found in my new premises.

REPAIRING,

EAVETROUGHING

Etc.

done as heretofore.

I have

secured the agency for

the Celebrated Singer Sewing Machine.

Requesting my old friends to come and see me in my new shop, I remain, etc.,

JAS. SULLIVAN.

A Complete History of the Johnstown

and CONEMAUGH VALLEY FLOOD

embracing also, a history of the floods in Williamsport, Lock Haven, Sunbury, and all the flooded districts in the State of Pennsylvania, also in Washington, D. C., New York, Maryland, Virginia and West Virginia, all of which caused the total loss of over 11,000 lives and the destruction of over $40,000,000 worth of property;

By GEO. T. FERRIS, A. M.

Octavo, 522 pages: Illustrated with Forhty-Eight Full-Page Engravings. Price $1.50. First edition issued August 10th. We pay duty on all books.

Agents Wanted. Send 50 cts. for complete outfit.

H. S. GOODSPEED & Co., New York.

SALESMEN

Wanted for our complete line of NURSERY STOCK. All new, choice and FAST-SELLING SPECIALTIES. I can furnish PAYING POSITIONS to workers. My large experience in the business enables me to offer special advantages to beginners. I CAN MAKE A SUCCESSFUL SALESMAN of any one who will follow my instruction. Permanent employment. Wages paid each week. Outfit free. Apply at once and secure choice of territory.

EDWARD P. SNELL,

Nurseryman, ROCHESTER, N. Y.

MENTION THIS PAPER.

That hacking cough can be so quickly cured by Shiloh's Cure. We guarantee it. For sale at the Medical Hall.

Will you suffer with Dyspepsia and Liver Complaint? Shiloh's Vitalizer is guaranteed to cure you. For sale at the Medical Hall.

Mr. Higginbotham's Catastrophe.

A young fellow, a tobacco peddler by trade, was on his way from Morriston to the village of Parker's Falls, on Salmon River. He had a neat little cart, painted green, with a box of cigars depicted on each side panel and an Indian chief, holding a pipe and a golden tobacco-stock on the rear. The peddler drove a smart little mare, and was a young man of excellent character keen at a bargain, but none the worse liked by the Yankees, who, as I have heard them say, would rather be shaved with a sharp razor than a dull one. Moreover, as will be seen in the course of my story, the peddlar was inquisitive and somewhat of a tattler, always itching to hear news and anxious to tell it again.

After an early breakfast at Morriston, the tobtacco peddler, whose name was Dominicus Pike, had travelled seven miles through a solitary piece of woods, without speaking a word to anybody but himself and his little gray mare. It being nearly seven o'clock, he was as eager to hold a morning gossip as a city shop-keeper to read the morning paper. An opportunity seemed at hand, when, after lighting a cigar with a sunglass, he looked up and perceived a man coming over the brow of the hill, at the foot of which the peddler had stopped his green cart. Dominicus watched him as he descended, and noticed that he carried a bundle over his shoulder on the end of a stick, and travelled with a weary yet determined pace. He did not look as if he had started in the freshness of the morning, but had footed it all night and meant to do the same all day.

"Good-morning, Mister," said Dominicus, when within speaking distance. "You go a pretty good jog! What's the latest news at Parker's Falls?

The man pulled the broad brim of a gray hat over his eyes and answered rather sullenly that he did not come from Parker's Falls.

"Well, then," rejoined Dominicus Pike, "let's have the latest news where you did come from. I'm not particular about Parker's Falls.

Being thus importuned, the traveller—who was as ill-looking a fellow as one would desire to meet in a solitary piece of woods—appeared to hesitate a little, as if he were either searching his memory for news or weighing the expediency of telling it. At last mounting on the step of the cart, he whispered in the ear of Dominicus, though he might have shouted aloud and no other mortal would have heard him:

"I do remember a little trifle of news," said he. "Old Mr. Higginbotham, of Kimballton, was murdered in his orchard at eight o'clock, last night, by an Irishman and a nigger. They strung him up to a branch of a large old St. Michael's pear tree where nobody would find him till the morning."

As soon as this horrible intelligence was communicated, the stranger betook himself to his journey again with more speed than ever. The peddler whistled to his mare and went up the hill, pondering on the fate of Mr. Higginbotham—whom he had known in the way of trade—having sold him many a bunch of long nines and a great deal of pig-tail, lady's twist, and fig tobacco. He was rather astonished at the rapidity with which the news had spread. Kimballton was nearly sixty miles distant in a straight line: the murder had been perpetrated only at eight o'clock the preceding night; yet Dominicus had heard of it at seven in the morning, when, in all probability, poor Mr. Higginbotham's own family had but just discovered his corpse, hanging on the St. Michael's pear-tree. The stranger on foot must surely have worn seven-league boots!

"Ill news flies fast, they say!" thought Dominicus.

The difficulty was solved by supposing that the narrator had made a mistake of one day in the date of the occurence; so that our friend did not hesitate to introduce the story at every tavern and country store along the road. He found himself invariably the first bearer of the intelligence and was so pestered with questions that he could not avoid filling up the outline, till it became quite a respectable narrative. He met with one piece of corroborative evidence. Mr. Higginbotham was a trader, and a former clerk of his, to whom Dominicus related the facts, testified that the old gentleman was accostumed to return home, through the orchard about night-fall, with money and valuable papers of the store in his pocket. His property would descend to a pretty niece, now keeping school in Kimballton.

What with telling the news for the public good, and driving bargains for his own, Dominicus was so much delayed on the road that he chose to put up at a tavern about five miles short of Parker's Falls. After supper, lighting one of his prime cigars, he seated himself in the bar-room and went through the story of the murder which had grown so fast that it took him half an hour to tell. There were as many as twenty people in the room, nineteen of whom received it all for gospel. But the twentieth was an elderly farmer who had arrived on horseback, a short time before and was now seated in a corner, smoking his pipe. When the story was completed he rose up very deliberately, brought his chair in front of Dominicus and stared him full in the face.

"Will you make affidavit," demanded he, in the tone of a country justice taking an examination, "that old Squire Higginbotham, of Kimballton, was murdered in his orchard the night before last and was found hanging on his pear tree, yesterday morning?"

"I tell the story as I heard it, Mister," answered Dominicus. "I don't say that I saw the thing done—so I can't swear he was murdered exactly in that way!"

"But I can take mine," said the farmer, "that if Squire Higginbotham was murdered night before last, I drank a glass of bitters with his ghost this morning!"

"Then it can't be a fact!" exclaimed Dominicus.

"I guess he'd likely have mentioned it to me, if it was," said the old farmer.

Here was a sad resurrection of old Mr. Higginbotham! The peddler had no heart to mingle in the conversation any more, but comforted himself with a glass of gin and water and went to bed, where all night long he dreamed of hanging on the St. Michael's pear-tree. To avoid the old farmer, Dominicus arose in the gray of the morning, put the little mare into the green cart and trotted swiftly away towards Parker's Falls. The fresh breeze, the dewy road, and the pleasant summer dawn revived his spirits and might have encouraged him to repeat the old story, had there been anybody awake to hear it. But he met neither ox-team, light wagon, chaise, horseman or foot traveller till just as he crossed the Salmon river, a man came trudging down to the bridge, with a bundle on a stick over his shoulder.

"Good-morning Mister," said the peddler, reining in his mare. "If you come from Kimballton or that neighborhood, may be you can tell me the real fact about this affair of old Mr. Higginbotham. Was the old fellow actually murdered two or three nights ago by an Irishman and a nigger?"

Dominicus had spoken in too great a hurry to observe, at first, that the stranger himself had a deep tinge of negro blood. On hearing this sudden question, the Ethiopian appeared to change his skin, its yellow hue becoming a ghastly white, while, shaking and stammering he thus replied—

"No! No! There was no colored man! It was an Irishman that hanged him last night, at eight o'clock. I came away at seven! His folks can't have looked for him in the orchard yet."

Scarcely had the yellow man spoken, when he interrupted himself, and though he seemed weary enough before, continued his journey at a pace which would have kept the peddler's mare on a sharp trot. Dominicus stared after him in great perplexity. If the murder had not been committed until Tuesday night, who was the prophet that had foretold it, in all its circumstances on Tuesday morning? If Mr. Higginbotham's corpse were not yet discovered by his own family, how came the mulatto, at above thirty miles' distance, to know that he was hanging in the orchard, especially as he had left Kimballton before the unfortunate man was hanged at all? These ambigious circumstances, with the stranger's surprise and terror, made Dominicus think of raising a hue and cry after him, as an accomplice in the murder—since a murder, it seemed, had really been perpetrated.

"But let the poor devil go!" thought the peddler. "I don't want his black blood on my head and hanging the nigger would'nt unhang Mr. Higginbotham. Unhang him! It's a sin, I know, but I should hate to have him come to life the second time and give me the lie!"

With these meditations, Dominicus Pike drove into the street of Parker's Falls. But a few of the shop doors were unbarred, when he alighted in the stable-yard of the tavern and made it his first business to order the mare four quarts of oats. His second duty of course was to impart Mr. Higginbotham's catastrophe to the 'ostler. He deemed it advisable, however, not to be too positive as to the date of the direful fact and also to be uncertain as to whether it were perpetrated by an Irishman and a mulatto or by the son of Erin alone Neither did he profess to relate it on his own authority or that of any one person, but mentioned it as a report, generally diffused through the neighborhood.

The story ran through the town like fire among girdled trees. Mr. Higginbotham was as well known at Parker's Falls as any citizen of the place. Such was the excitement that the Parker's Falls' Gazette anticipated its regular day of publication and came out with half a form of blank paper and a column of double pica emphasized with capitals and headed:

HORRID MURDER OF MR. HIGGINBOTHAM!

Among other dreadful details, the printed account described the mark of the cord around the dead man's neck, and stated the number of thousand dollars of which he had been robbed. There was such pathos, also, about the affliction of his niece who had gone from one fainting fit to another ever since her uncle had been found hanging on the St. Michael's pear-tree, with his pockets turned inside out.

Concluded next week.

COUNTY & DISTRICT.

Last Thursday evening about nine o'clock Benjamin Oliver, a young man about eighteen years of age, who has been working for Mr. John Laybourne, near Riverview, while returning home from a neighbor's place, carrying two scythes under one arm and a small pig under the other, made a misstep in attempting to cross a ditch, and fell with his right leg on the scythes, cutting the fleeh, arteries and tendons to the bone. The wound was a serious one and bled profusely. Mr. Laybourne heard the young man's cries and went to his assistance, and after tying a bandage above the wound, which partially stopped the flow of blood, carried him to his house. Drs. Norton and Rooney attended to his injuries, and Oliver is now doing nicely.—[Shelburne Economist.

LARGE TOOTH.—Messrs. W. B. and John Jelly had a gang of men at work all last week searching for more bones belonging to the mammoth skeleton On Thursday they found three ribs and on Friday an immense tooth which weighs 16½ lbs. It measures 17 inches around the bottom and 33 inches around it in length. The proprietors will exhibit the skeleton at the London Exhibition, commencing on the 9th September. It will also be exhibited during the second week of the Toronto Industrial Exhibition.—[Shelburne Free Press.

TERRIBLE ACCIDENT.—A terrible accident occurred at Laurel on Monday last by which Mr. Patrick McGarvey is crippled for life. Mr. McGarvey lives on lot 10, con. 5, Amaranth, and was engaged cutting grain with a reaping machine. While standing in front of the machine making some repairs the horses became frightened and ran away. The first jump the horses made the sickle came in contact with Mr. McGarvey's legs, cutting off both below the knee. He received other severe injuries. Drs. Lewis and Henry, of Orangeville, were sent for. The injuries are of such a nature that the wounded man may not recover.—[Shelburne Free Press.

The Streetsville Review tells of a gentleman who was fishing for eels in the Credit. He felt an elastic tug at his line, and upon pulling his hook from the water found adhering to it a turtle one foot in length.

Meaford has electric light.

One day last week, a five-year-old son of Mr. McNabb's got some sand in one of his eyes. The little fellow went to bed without having the sand removed, and in the night his eye burst, coming out on his cheek. He loses the sight of the eye entirely.—[Collingwood Enterprise.

John Smith the World Over.

In Latin he is Johannas Smithus, the Italians smooth him off with Giovanni Smith; the Spaniards render him Juan Smithus; the Hollanders adopt him as Hans Schmidt; the French flatten him out as Jean Smeet; the Russian sneezes and barks as he says Ivan Smittowski. In China he is known as Jovan Shmunit; in Iceland as Johne Smithson, in Tuscaroras you forget all about Pocahontas and Powhatan when you hear them call Ton Qua Smittia. In Wales they speak of him as Jihon Scmidd; in Mexico he is Jantli F'Smitti; among the Greek ruins the guide speaks of him as Ion Smikton, and in Turkey he is utterly disguised as Voe Self.—St. Louis Republic.

Mormonism.

To the Editor of The Advance.

DEAR SIR,—I will now give a few more quotations from the Book of D.C. as they find fault with me for calling them Mormons. I will give my reasons for calling them by that name. They claim to be followers of Joe Smith, the founder of Mormonism. Joe claims to have found plates in a stone vault on Cumorah hill in Ontario county, in the state of New York, and that there were hieroglyphics on these plates engraven, and that no one could translate them but him, for no one was to receive translations but Joe. P. 113, B.D.C., and again on p. 102, Joe was to be seer and translator of these plates. He claims to have translated the Book of Mormon, which they claim contains the fulness of the gospel, and now as they believe in this book which I am able to prove why they object to being called Mormons. When they also say on p. 335 of B.D.C. concerning Joe and Hiram Smith when shot in Carthage jail, that their innocent blood on floor of said jail is a broad seal affixed to Mormonism that cannot be rejected by any court on earth. And again on p. 94, B.D.C., but those who harden their hearts in unbelief and reject it (the Book of Mormon) it shall turn to their own condemnation, for the Lord hath spoken it. That's my reason for calling them Mormons. I will here give your readers a quotation from the Book of Mormon which will show your readers the contradiction of Mormon teaching. On p. 540, "behold I say to you that he that supposeth that little children need baptism is in the gall of bitterness and in the bond of iniquity. Wherefore such for they are in danger of hell and endless torment. Yet the law of the Mormon church is that the children should be baptised when eight years old. 2 o. B.D.C. for this shall be a law unto the inhabitants of Zion, or any of her stakes which are organized, and their children shall be baptised for the remission of their sins when 8 years old and receive the laying of the hands. The laying on of their hands is that they may receive the gift of the Holy Spirit. This is sufficient to show the reader that they are impostors when they claim to be able to impart the Holy Spirit as the apostles did. I will now give another quotation from B.D.C. to show that they are polytheists. "And all saints shall be filled with his glory and receive their inheritance and be made equal with him that is, Christ." I will now give you a few verses of their Hymns to show this to be.

Praise to the Lord for the great work begun
Brought by the angel to Joseph's listening ear
Blessed to open the last dispensation
The time to establish the Kingdom of God

Hail to the prophet ascended to heaven
Traitors and tyrants now fight against God
Pleading with God on behalf of his people
Death cannot conquer that hero of God

Great is his memory, he died as a martyr
Honored and blessed be his ever dear name
Millions will love him and gather with joy
The martyr will rise with his Savior to reign

Great was his calling and great was his power
Ever and ever the keys he will hold
Faithful and true he will enter the portal
Crowned in the midst of the prophets of old

I will now give a quotation from Stenhouse book p. 297 concerning Mormonism. She says that it was only that could be entrusted with the secrets of the church leaders, and that them was taught in Joe's time as will show.

Unchanged in death with a Savior
He pleads their cause in the courts above
His home is in the sky, he dwells with God
Far from the furious rage of mobs
He died, he died for those he loved
He reigns, he reigns in realms above

Now Mr. Editor, I think that to show that these people are not believe that Joe Smith is now [illegible] God for them, which is a fact of Scripture. See 1 Tim. 2 [illegible] which I will here quote, [illegible] one God and one mediator [illegible] men, the man Christ Jesus. [illegible] conclusion I will say [illegible] selves, study the perfect [illegible] be guided by it, for it [illegible] unto salvation, and will [illegible] you unto all good works [illegible] a fraud, it was begot[illegible] Skeptical back-slidden [illegible] Rydon, another [illegible] inquisity, and brought [illegible] a skeptical admirer of [illegible] ished in fraud and [illegible] culminated in Utah [illegible] MORMONS.

Fall Sh[illegible]

Following is a [illegible] dates of fall fairs in this vicin[illegible]

NAME.	PLACE	DATE
East Grey	Flesh[illegible]	Sept. 27 and 28
Artemesia	Pi[illegible]	Oct. 3rd
Glenelg	Mar[illegible]	[illegible]
South Grey	[illegible]	Sept. 24 and 25
Great Northern	Co[illegible]	Sept. 25 to 27
Central Ag'l Soc'ty.	Wal[illegible]	Sept. 24 and 25
Industrial	To[illegible]	Sept. 9 to 21
Proton	Dun[illegible]	Oct. 1 and 2

THE LONDON STRIKE.

The Conference Leaves Matters Much as They Were.

WHARFINGERS AND DOCK COMPANIES.

A last Thursday night's London cable says: The London and India docks Joint Committee, after being in consultation the greater part of the afternoon, declined to concede the one remaining point at issue with regard to the strikers' pay, 6d. instead of 5d. per hour, and issued the following manifesto, which was immediately posted up on each side of the dock-house entrance and despatched to the strikers' headquarters, and also to the general managers of railroads, shipping companies and others specially interested: "The Joint Committee have decided to adopt the following conditions for extra labor at the docks under their control, the 5d. rate per hour, with 6d. per hour overtime, to apply to all labor not piecework, but men taken on before noon, if discharged by the Dock Company, to receive not less than 2s. The present contract work to be converted into piecework as far and as soon as practicable, under which the men will be paid not less than 6d. per hour, with 8d. an hour overtime, and divide the surplus, if any, between them all, the payments being made to the men under supervision of the dock officials. The hours of overtime shall be at the docks and uptown warehouses from 8 p.m. to 8 a.m. The committee will use their best endeavors to obtain from the Government a prolongation of the Customs hours, which, if granted, will have the effect of extending the time during which payment may be earned."

The large crowd of strikers, shippers and others who were congregated in front of the dock-house made a grand rush to read this manifesto the instant the copies were posted, and for a while great confusion occurred. It was evident that the general expectation was that the notice was an announcement that the directors had capitulated, and great disappointment was expressed as soon as it was discovered that such was not the case. One striker was so angry that he reached out and with an oath tore down the notice he had just read. Hot words followed, and a free fight seemed imminent.

As the crowd learned the contents of the manifesto, many expressions of disgust and indignation were uttered. One striker voiced the general sentiment when he said: "That is not as good as we had before. It means fourpence less per day."

John Burns, head of the strikers, said: "Those are not concessions. They are nominal. If the men accepted they would find themselves in the old hole."

The dock companies and wharfingers do not pull together. The representatives of the wharfingers who attended the conference did not endorse the issuing of the manifesto. On the contrary, they opposed its terms. Mr. Lafore and another wharfinger withdrew from the conference because of the action taken. The wharfingers, as has been stated, have practically endorsed the strikers in their demands, and to-day they brought pressure to bear on the dock directors to induce them to settle the strike as quickly as possible. They represented that their business and that of the entire shipping interests of London were being paralyzed and permanently injured, and immense losses were being suffered. They further made it known that unless the strike was ended at once they would attempt to operate their wharves independently of the dock companies, and, as far as possible, would handle ship cargoes from the river. The wharfingers, at a largely attended meeting, decided upon a compromise which was submitted to the dock committee. It was rejected. The difference between the dock companies and the wharfingers is as follows: The latter load and unload vessels in mid-stream or at the wharves. The former unload ships at the docks and place return cargoes on the docks, but do not load. The ships' strikers have intimated their willingness to agree to the terms proposed by the wharfingers, but are apparently determined not to knuckle under to the dock companies.

A last night's London cable says: The dock strikers played what they consider their trump card to-day. They issued an appeal for a general strike in London on Monday, unless the dock directors end the strike at noon to-morrow by yielding all the demands of the strikers. The committees of the strikers have placed copies of the appeal in possession of the employees of all large establishments. The dock directors have also been furnished with a copy. One of the dock directors, who had read the copy, said there was nothing for the directors to do. They would not pay sixpence an hour, and if a general strike were inaugurated that was the lookout of the strikers.

Both sides were surprised to-day by the action of Cardinal Manning. He called upon the dock directors when they were in session. He said afterwards he supposed the subject of conversation would be made public, but if the dock directors refused to state what was said he could not do so. He gave the impression that he was on the side of the strikers, and it seems reasonable that the dock directors would quickly make public his remarks if he were on their side. There is also an impression that he may cause an appeal for peaceful methods to be made to the strikers from the Catholic pulpits on Sunday.

A prominent shipowner said: "I understand that Cardinal Manning addressed the directorate at some length, representing how greatly the commerce of London was being interfered with, and how much the peace of the metropolis was being threatened, and ended by urging them to submit to the strikers' demands, which he believed were not extravagant."

Meanwhile the shipping interests are suffering greatly.

The Seaman's and Wharf Laborers' Union at Brisbane, Australia, sent a cable despatch here to-day, saying employment would be furnished there to 250 of the striking London dockmen.

—Lord Salisbury's growing obesity is becoming very troublesome to himself and a scource of anxiety to his friends. It is understood that he intends to consult Prince Bismarck's physician immediately after the rising of parliament.

HUNGER AND DISEASE

In the Illinois Mining District Among the Strikers.

A Chicago despatch says: The Rev. Jos. Huntington arrived here to-day en route from the Illinois mining district to his home in New York. He said: The situation in the mining district is unspeakably distressing. Hunger and disease are abroad, and death is desolating the homes of the hopeless victims of this unnatural struggle. It would be hard to exaggerate the horrors which I have witnessed during my week's trip through the coal region. It is bad enough everywhere I went, but it is worse at Spring Valley than elsewhere. But even there the poverty-stricken inhabitants are not like the poor I am used to seeing in New York. There is no whining. People show intelligence and pride. Even hunger has not debased their feelings as one might expect. I am used to scenes of want, but what I saw at Spring Valley was more pitiful than anything I ever witnessed before. The cottages are nice and are surrounded by pretty lawns and gardens, but the awful poverty within was shocking.

Sickness is increasing and the doctor told me the people were so enfeebled by long privation and anxiety that an epidemic might break out at any moment. Business is utterly dead. Merchants are giving their goods away. The people go to the drug stores for medicines and the druggists supply them as far as may be, but take no account of the purchases on their books. Despair is written everywhere, but there is determination also in the faces of the hungry men and they will not yield. The award of the Arbitration Committee was a clean endorsement of the strikers' refusal to accept the terms of the operators. The outlook is black enough. The mine owners profit whether the mines are operated or not. When production is lively and values rise, they sell lots at a handsome advance. The miners build houses, and then hard times come, wages are cut, a strike or lockout results, the operators repossess themselves of the miners' homes, and in due time another wave of prosperity rolls up, and again the operators reap a rich reward in advancing land values."

A HORRIBLE DEATH.

A Farmer Fires His Barn and Then Leaps Into the Burning Mass.

A New York despatch says: The town of Paradise, near the Blue Mountain, in New Jersey, has been the scene of a dreadful tragedy which has excited the horror of the country people for many miles around. The town is a remote one and the news travelled slowly. Philip Heinickle, a well-to-do German farmer, has for some time past made threats that he would burn the town, but little heed was paid to him, as it was not believed he would carry out his threat. The other day he went to his large barn, in which was stored all his summer harvest, so that it was filled to bursting, and kindled a fire at the four corners. The barn was soon blazing and roaring, while the flames and smoke shot high in the air, showing for miles around. Some of his neighbors wanted to put out the fire, but with a gesture he refused their aid and they could do nothing but stand idly gazing at a distance, for the flames were so intense that a close view of the fire was uncomfortable. Suddenly they were horrified at seeing Heinickle deliberately throw himself into the flames when they were at their height. Nothing could be done to prevent his terrible act as no one was near enough. When the flames went down and the embers had cooled, so that a search among the ruins was possible, his charred and half consumed body was found among the embers several hours later.

A ROMANTIC MATCH.

One of Barnum's Arabs Falls a Victim to Charms of the Snake Charmer.

An Ottawa despatch of Thursday night says: Ali Bin Debe, the volatile Arab who twirls the rifle with such vim and dexterity in Barnum's show besides showing an aptitude for other entertaining feats of skill, has fallen a victim to the magnetism of Miss Nellie Hamilton, the snake charmer, in the same aggregation. Ali knows as much about English as the Prescott county school children do, and Miss Hamilton's knowledge of Arabic is equally slender, but love has an universal language, and the two try its agency to understand each other. The result was that Rev. Mr. Wingfield, of this city, had two singularly mated callers yesterday. The dress of one was chiefly noticeable for a showy turban and baggy trousers, while his fair companion was attired in a sweet Broadway hat and tailor-made gown. The rev. gentleman knew no obstacle why the ceremony should not be performed. Nobody forbade the banns, and the rite was accordingly proceeded with. An interpreter was present to explain to the love-stricken Moor the important parts of the ceremony. Ali professed to be a Christian.

Leather Butchers on Strike.

A last Wednesday night's North Adams, Mass., despatch says: The cutters in the shoe shops of W. D. Cady & Co., the Sampson Manufacturing Co., Whitman, Canody & Co., and N. L. Millard are on strike, claiming the prices are not uniform. The strikers have caused much trouble in the shops during the last six months. As all the other help are supplied with stock from the cutters' rooms the result of this strike will be disastrous unless soon settled. There are 1,500 hands employed in the shoe industry here.

R. A. Gunn, M.D., Dean, and Professor of Surgery of the United States Medical College; Editor of "Medical Tribune"; Author of "Gunn's New Improved Hand-Book of Hygiene and Domestic Medicine," in referring to the use of Warner's Safe Cure in a case of Bright's disease, said over his own signature: "I was greatly surprises to observe a decided improvement within a month. Within four months, no tube casts could be found, and only a trace of albumen; and, as he expressed it, he felt perfectly well. After this demonstration of its power, I prescribed it in full doses in both acute and chronic Bright's disease, with the most satisfactory results."

—Princess Victoria is the most original and thoughtful of the Prince of Wales' daughters. Princess Maude acts as her mother's amanuensis. Princess Louise has been her father's favorite.

JIM McDERMOTT.

The Irish Informer Said to Have Been in London.

A London cable says: Jim McDermott, who made his home in Brooklyn for many years, who has been denounced as an informer by Irishmen all over the world, whose death in various shapes has been announced nearly a dozen times, and for the information of whose whereabouts Mr. Henry Labouchere offered £50 during the sitting of the Parnell Commission, left London to-day on an early morning train. He had been in London a week. He took no pains to seclude himself, and last night informed your correspondent that he was afraid of no one, and that the heaviest weapon he carried was a latch key. This he carried in his trousers pocket attached to a silver chain, after the English fashion.

McDermott never looked more prosperous nor more contented than last night, while he sat at one of the small tables with which the smoking room of one of London's principal hotels is lavishly furnished. He was one of a party of six, five of whom were Americans.

The sixth might have been a native of Scotland or the North of Ireland, but he had very little brogue. Excepting his upper lip, his face was smoothly shaven. He wore a small sandy mustache. His hair, also sandy, was cut reasonably close and was plentiful. His face was fresh-colored rather than florid. His attire smacked of the world of sport. It was of Scotch goods, a rather biggish check, and was fashionably made. In his scarf he wore a large cameo pin; on his head a brown Derby. His age would be guessed at from 40 to 45. His movements were quick and his air youthful rather than middle-aged, though his manner was perfectly composed. This is Jim McDermott. He was perfectly at home, though he had known only one of the party for more than thirty minutes, and to only one was he known as Jim McDermott; for his single acquaintance, a New Yorker, had introduced him to the others of the party under an assumed name. This, it should be said, was done without McDermott's connivance, and Red Jim informed me afterwards that it would not have bothered him at all had he been introduced as McDermott, as he thought many had forgotten him, while many more believed him dead.

A BRIDEGROOM AGED 83.

Isaac Amsden, of Cuba, Who is a Great-Grandfather and was Recently Married for the Fourth Time.

A Friendship, N. Y., despatch says: Matrimony has apparently no terrors for Isaac Amsden, who lives near Cuba, Allegany county, this State. He is an octogenarian bridegroom. He is nearly 83 years of age and has recently married for the fourth time. Mr. Amsden is a fine-looking, well-preserved old gentleman. His bride is Miss Victoria Renwick, who is barely half his age and becomes by marriage at one step a great-grandmother. Mr. Amsden was born at Corning, Mass., on September 20th, 1806. He was one of the pioneers of Allegany county, having settled near Cuba while yet a young man. Industry brought wealth, and his bride will rank among the richest women in the country. He is a Republican, and all his sons and grandsons belong to the same party. While yet a young man Mr. Amsden was married to Cynthia Webster, by whom he had four children. After her death he was married to Mary Ann McIntosh, and two children were the fruit of their union. His third wife was Louisa Bishop, by whom he had three children, making nine children in all—five sons and four daughters. He has thirteen grandchildren and five great-grandchildren. One of his daughters was murdered some years ago and the family name became much more widely known in consequence. To each one of his sons Mr. Amsden gave $1,000 to start them in business for themselves, and all are living and doing well. Miss Renwick, the bride, was born in Cuba, this State. She is a fine-looking woman and has many friends.

A RELIC OF DARK DAYS.

Enforcing an Old Statute Against the Jewish Religion.

A Thursday's Montreal despatch says A rather curious point has arisen before the Montreal courts over the refusal of Judge Pagnuelo, a Superior Court judge, to grant a petition from Louis Aronson, a Jewish citizen, for leave to establish a new Jewish synagogue in this city. It appears that under a statute of King George III., distinguishing between the Jews and Gentiles, which has never been repealed, Jews are required, in order to have a legally recognized corporation, to secure authority from the courts on the application of ten Jewish British subjects. There is, however, another modus operandi, which is to obtain a special charter from the Provincial Legislature. Of the two ways the latter is the more expensive. The congregation which has asked for legal authority is a branch of a Jewish order known as the "Sons of Benjamin," and has been in existence about four years. It numbers about 75 members. It has a burying lot for deceased members, and as registration books cannot be issued to them until it is a legally constituted corporation it labors under certain disadvantages. There are three other Jewish congregations in the city recognized by law, the Portuguese, the German, and "Temple Emanuel." The first two are under the old British statute, the last named under a Provincial charter.

Chinese Typhoons and Floods.

A Shanghi cable says: North China and Japan have been visited by a series of typhoons of almost unprecedented violence. The number of junks and lives that have been lost through inundations at Wengchow and Ningpo is enormous. According to the latest intelligence from Japan too, the number of persons who have lost their lives by drowning in consequence of floods is at the lowest estimate five thousand.

A Serious Case.

Mrs. Briske—Johnny, d the doctor call while I was out?

Little Johnny (stopping his play)—Yes'm. He felt my pulse an' looked at my tongue, and shook his head and said it was a very serious case, and he left this prescription and said he'd call again before night.

Mrs. Briske—Gracious me! It wasn't you I sent him to see; it was the baby.

ANOTHER RACE RIOT.

Five Hundred Shots Fired in Fifteen Minutes—A Large Number of Persons Wounded.

A New Orleans despatch says: Between 2 and 3 o'clock yesterday morning a train carrying a colored excursion arrived at the Gouldsboro depot from Baton Rouge. A large number of colored men and women were near the depot waiting for the train. As the train neared the depot one of the excursionists attempted to get off and fell to the ground. Some unknown person said "Look at the black ——," when the negro drew a pistol and fired four or five shots in rapid succession, one of which struck a white man, William Mills, a brother of one of the Gretna police, in the nose and lodged in the back of the neck. Then the shooting became general, some four or five hundred shots being fired in less than fifteen minutes. The above account of the trouble is from the police of Gretna.

A terrible panic occurred. Women and children ran in all directions, shouting and screaming, leaving dishes, baskets, hats, and shoes, etc. Ed. Levy, a colored man, living in Algiers, was shot in the left arm and a colored woman named Fleming was fatally shot in the back. John Rainy, the superintendent of the Algiers & Gretna Railroad, who was about two squares away with two cars waiting for the excursion, states the panic caused by the rapid discharge of firearms was dreadful. He did not know what caused the trouble, but the cars on their way down to Algiers were fired into, and one of the bullets passed through a dashboard. Mr. Rainy stated that several times he and his drivers were in imminent danger of losing their lives.

Ben Watkins, colored, aged 70, residing in Gouldsboro, was shot while lying in his bed at his home this morning by some unknown party, who fired through the window. The ball struck him on the right arm, hand and breast, and left hand, inflicting severe wounds. Watkins says he knows nothing of the trouble.

The Algiers fire department was called out at 4.30 a.m. by an alarm of fire. They found a large number of men armed with muskets, etc., and a negro church on fire. There was no water at hand and the church was consumed.

BALFOUR'S COUP.

The University Scheme Intended to Weaken Parnell.

A Dublin cable says: United Ireland in a leading editorial informs the Radicals that the position of the Irish party regarding the project for the endowment of a Catholic College is the same as when it squelched the scheme for an underhand treaty with Rome sought to be negotiated by Lord Salisbury and the Irish Union Bishops, who now stood ready to sell Ireland to Balfour for a mess of pottage if they only had the country to sell. The Nationalists would welcome any genuine effort to settle the Irish question made by Parliament above board, and would try to make it genuine. There their position ends. They do not ask, nor do they expect, assistance from the Radicals. They fight for a great principle which the Radicals also endorse. The question is one which should be settled by an Irish Parliament, but wanting that, the Nationalists must be content in the meantime to take what reforms an English Parliament offers.

A London cable says: It is understood that the Government and the Catholic Hierarchy were in negotiation for some time with reference to the University scheme. Mr. Parnell was cognizant of the project, but the Ulster members of Parliament were completely surprised by the announcement of the scheme. The latter assert that the Government intended to ignore them.

Mr. Chamberlain says there is nothing between the Unionists and the Government beyond a general feeling that the question of higher education in Ireland ought to be dealt with. He is not aware that any details of the scheme have been settled.

Another Manifesto.

A Paris cable says: The Comte de Paris has issued an electoral manifesto. He declares his object to snatch the power from the hands of an oppressive faction. He counsels the union of the Conservatives and tolerance of the Boulangists, whose programme of revision, he says, will release France from servitude and restore religious peace. He expresses the belief that the Imperialists will not refuse to support a strong Republic, and appeals for assistance of all those who wish to found an honest Republic.

Uncle Sam Courts Their Acquaintance.

A Friday night's Washington special says: In consequence of frequent armed attacks made by highway robbers upon the United States mail in the Western States and Territories, the Postmaster-General has offered a reward of $1,000 for the arrest and conviction of any person found guilty of making an armed attack upon any stage coach or any railway train having the mail in transit.

The Coal Oil Can Scores.

A Thursday night's Denver despatch says: At Sopris last night Jas. Danochy's 8-year-old daughter started to kindle a fire with oil. The can exploded, burning the girl to death and fatally burning the mother, who attempted to save her child. This makes fifteen lives lost in this State during the past month by explosion of oil cans.

T. Granger Stewart, M. D., F. R. S. E., Ordinary Physician to H. M., the Queen, in Scotland, Professor of Practice of Physic in the University of Edinburgh, writes: "The arteries are sclerosed and atheromatous in the advanced stages of the inflammatory and in the cirrhotic but not so small in the waxy disease. In that affection the small vessels in other parts are frequently the seat of waxy degeneration." From this it will be seen that in the three forms of kidney disease classed Bright's disease, the arteries suffer changes, and it matters not whether they undergo sclerotic, atheromatous or waxy change, they are so weakened as to endanger rupture under any increased pressure. This explains the frequency of appoplexy and paralysis, and as clearly demonstrates that the only preventive of these disastrous ruptures of the blood vessels is the timely use of Warner's Safe Cure to keep the kidneys in a healthy condition.

UNDER THE GUILLOTINE.

Execution of a Murderer at St. Pierre-Miquelon.

A private despatch was received in the city yesterday from St. Pierre de Miquelon giving an account of the execution of one Noel, a French fisherman, who was condemned to death some months ago for the atrocious murder of an elderly man named Coupart, whom he cut to pieces after the style of Jack the Ripper. There was no guillotine and no executioner in the place, and the authorities were much embarrassed as to how the execution was to be carried out. The Privy Council had decided that justice must take its course as an example was deemed necessary, but the Governor was unable to find a contractor who would undertake the erection of a guillotine or a man to work it and was obliged to telegraph to the French Government. A guillotine was sent out by way of New York. Saturday last was fixed for the execution, and at 3 a.m. on that day Noel was aroused and told to prepare for death. One hour afterwards the condemned man was carried out, bound hand and foot, and driven in a carriage to Courbet square, where the execution was to take place.

In spite of the early hour there were about 2,000 people on the square besides the authorities whose duty it was to see the execution carried out. While the executioner was making his arrangements Noel recognized him and said, "Ah! well, Jean Marie, you are going to kill me. You will have another to kill before long. You ought to offer me a last drink before I die. I will be the first man to die in this way here; would to God I were the last." The executioner was more nervous than the condemned man, and placed the latter too far forward on the block. "My neck is too far forward," said Noel, "you will strike my shoulders. I beg of you don't be long, and above all don't miss your stroke." The executioner was over a minute getting the man in the proper position, and Noel was about to speak once more when the executioner touched the lever and the knife came down on Noel's neck. The head was severed from the neck but remained hanging by a piece of skin, which the executioner had to cut with his pocket knife. When the head fell in the basket convulsive contractions were noticed for a moment.—Montreal Gazette.

Scottish News Notes.

In the tournament for the Scottish chess championship Mr. James Marshall, a native of Crieff, has proved the victor.

The death is announced of Judge Gillies, of New Zealand. He was the eldest son of Mr. John Gillies, of Rothesay.

The Town Council of Linlithgow have resolved to present the freedom of the burgh to Lord Hopetoun prior to his departure for Victoria.

Mr. George Rutherford, a prominent Berwickshire agriculturist, died at Printonan farm, Coldstream, on the 7th inst., at the age of 51 years.

It has been decided at the British War Office that the 2nd Battalion of the King's Own Scottish Borderers, which has been in Egypt a little more than a year, shall be sent on to India.

Seven natives of Scotland are among the framers of the Constitution of the new State of Washington. They outnumber all the other foreign-born members of the Constitution Committee combined.

The Duchess of Portland was on the 8th inst. presented with her husband's portrait by the tenantry on the Portland estates in Ayrshire. About 500 persons were entertained at luncheon at Fullerton House.

By an accident which occurred on the 9th inst. in the malt store of Robert Hutchison & Co., flour millers and maltsters, Kirkcaldy, Fifeshire, two men, named Edward Kinsman and William Steel, were killed, and another, named George Ritchie, had a narrow escape.

A tablet of white marble has been erected in St. Mary's Cathedral, Huntly street, Aberdeen, to the memory of the late Right Rev. John Macdonald, Bishop of Aberdeen. The Very Rev. Dean Stopani, V. G., purposes placing a similar monument to the Right Rev. James Kyle, D. D., the predecessor of Bishop Macdonald.

The Loch Katrine works, which have supplied Glasgow with water for more than thirty years, are now found to be inadequate to the wants of the city, so they are being duplicated, at a cost of about two millions sterling, and when the work is complete one hundred millions of gallons will be drawn from the lake every day.

Sir James Watson, ex-Provost of Glasgow, died on the 14th inst., at the advanced age of 89. He was the first to introduce stockbroking into Glasgow, took an active part in the railway movement, and was an energetic philanthropist. He entered the Town Council in 1863, was made Provost in 1866, and was knighted for his services to the city in 1874.

Ten Tons of Molten Metal Explode.

A last Friday night's Pittsburg despatch says: An explosion of hot metal occurred in the Homestead steel works of Carnegie, Phipps & Co. this afternnon, killing Andrew Kebbler and another workman, and seriously injuring seven others, two, it is thought, fatally. The explosion was caused by the upsetting of a ladle containing ten tons of hot metal.

Death from Nicotine.

An inveterate tobacco smoker, of Newburgh, New York, died last week from the effects of nicotine poisoning, a post-mortem examination revealing the fact that so thoroughly had his system become impregnated with the poison that the stomach and other organs were unable to perform their functions.

The Roman Catholic Bishop of Derry died yesterday.

—Doctor—How would you like some animal food? Invalid—Animal food? Well, I don't care for any hay or grass, but I guess if I could worry down a little rye I'd feel better.

A postal telegraph scheme is being discussed by the President of the Western Union and Postmaster-General Wannamaker.

—Mrs. Brief (who has been reading an article on sleep, in a health paper)—John is it best to lie on the right side or the left? John (a lawyer)—If you are on the right side, it usually isn't necessary to lie at all.

SELDOM USED, NEVER ABUSED

The Pardoning Power in Britain—An American Tribute.

In England the pardoning power is seldom used and never abused. The authorities take no thought of the convict except to keep him fast. The protection of the community is the governing influence with them. Punishment being imposed as a deterrent, they work on the theory that, in lessening its terrors, you impair its power to restrain. In the grim old days, when many offences now lightly punished were capital crimes, a poor wretch who was about to be sentenced to the gallows complained that it was hard to be hanged merely for stealing a duck off a common. "Prisoner," said the judge, "you are not to be hanged for stealing a duck, but that ducks may not be stolen." Since then, in England, the law has become more merciful in its penalties, but the theory that the protection of the community is the paramount consideration still survives in full force. Mrs. Maybrick, having been convicted of poisoning her husband, and sentenced in commutation to penal servitude for life, passes inside of prison doors, and nothing but evidence of her innocence will ever unbar them for her release.—Boston Herald.

List of Fall Fairs.

Following is a list of the dates of fall fairs so far as at present obtainable:

NAME.	PLACE.	DATE.
Industrial	Toronto	Sept. 9 to 21
Midland Central	Kingston	Sept. 2, to Sept. 7
Eastern Tps. A...	Sherbrooke, Que	Sept. 3 to 5
Port Hope Ex...	Port Hope	" 3 to 5
Central Canada	Ottawa	" 9 to 14
Provincial	London	" 9 to 14
Prince Edward	Picton	" 10 and 11
Southern	Brantford	" 10 to 12
Lanark Village	Lanark Vil...	" 11 and 13
Caledonia Fair		" 10 and 11
South Renfrew...	Renfrew	" 17 and 18
N. and W. Ox'ford...	Ingersoll	" 17 and 18
Arnprior	Arnprior	" 18 and 19
Carlton County...	Balls Corners	" 18 and 19
Malahide	Aylmer	" 20 and 21
East Grey	Flesherton	" 33 and 34
Northwestern	Goderich	" 17 to 19
Peninsular	Chatham	" 17 to 20
Listowel	Listowel	" 18 to 20
Lincoln County...	St. Catharines.	" 23 to 25
Great Central	Hamilton	" 23 to 27
Wellesley and Easthope	Wellesley	" 24 and 25
S. Perth	St. Mary's	" 24 and 25
Dereham	Tilsonburg	" 24 and 25
Packenham Tp	Packenham	" 24
N. Leeds	Merrickville	" 24 and 25
S. Leeds	Delta	" 24 and 25
Peterboro Central	Peterboro	" 24 to 27
C. Simcoe	Barrie	" 24 to 27
E. Muskoka	Huntsvill	" 24 and 25
Walter Falls...	Walter Falls	" 24 and 25
South Grey	Durham	" 24 and 25
Woodstock	Woodstock	" 24 and 25
North Lanark	Almonte	" 24 to 26
Lindsay Central	Lindsay	" 24 to 26
Ontario and Durham	Whitby	" 24 to 26
Centre Bruce	Paisley	" 24 to 26
Huron Central	Clinton	" 24 to 26
Southern Counties	St. Thomas	" 24 to 27
Central	Peterboro	" 24 to 27
B. of Quinte Dist.	Belleville	" 24 to 27
Gt. Northern	Collingwood	" 25 to 27
Guelph Central	Guelph	" 25 to 27
Moss and Elfrid...	Glencoe	" 25 and 26
North Union	Orangeville	" 25 and 26
Central	Guelph	" 25 to 2
Great Northern	Collingwood	" 26 to 27
Central Agricul.	Walters Falls	" 26 and 27
Orangeville	Orangeville	" 26 and 27
Welland	Welland	" 26 and 27
Mitchell	Mitchell	" 26 and 27
W. Dur. & Darlingt'n	Bowanville	" 26 and 27
N Waterloo	Berlin	" 26 and 27
Central Agl	Water Falls	" 26 and 27
Dunwich and Southwould	Iona	" 27
London Township	Ilderton	" 27
N. Norwich	Norwich	" 27 and 28
Montague	Smith Falls	" 27 and 28
Dunwich	Southwould	" 27
Bertie	Ridgeway	" 27
Central Exhib'n.	Cannington	" 27 and 28
Northumberland East	Campbellford	Sept. 30 to Oct. 1
Waindeet	Marshville	" 28
Westminster	Lambeth	" 30
West Branch Co. Monck	Dunville	Sept. 30 and Oct. 1
North Brant	Paris	Oct. 1 and 2
County of Haldimand	Cayuga	" 1 and 2
Netherby Union	Netherby	" 1 and 2
W. Elgin	Wallacetown	" 1 and 2
Mornington	Milverton	" 1 and 2
Arthur Union	Arthur	" 1 and 2
Gt. S. Western	Essex Centre	" 1 to 3
Brampton	Brampton	" 1 to 3
North Simcoe	Stayner	" 1 to 3
The Northern	Walkerton	" 1
Huntley Township	Carp	" 1 and 2
S. Simcoe & Essex	Cookstown	" 1 and 2
E. Simcoe	Orillia	" 1 and 2
Euphrasia	Rocklyn	" 2
Dalhousie	McDonald's Cor.	" 2
N. Hastings	Stirling	" 2 and 3
C. Saskatchewan	Saskatoon	" 2
East Hastings	Roslyn	" 2
N. Walsingham	Langton	" 2
Cardwell	Beeton	" 3 to 4
East York	Markham	" 3 to 4
Ontario Central	Port Perry	" 3 to 4
Trenton Union	Trenton	" 3 to 4
Freelton Central	Freelton	" 3
Yorkton	Assa, N. W. T.	" 3
W. Middlesex	Strathroy	" 3 and 4
Smith, Ennismore and Lakefield	Lakefield	" 3 and 4
Port Hope	Port Hope	" 3 to 5
Lanark Township	Middleville	" 3 and 4
Eramose	Rockwood	" 3 and 4
Blanchard	Kirkton	" 3 and 4
Buffalo International	Buffalo	" 3 to 13
North Perth	Stratford	" 3 and
North Renfrew	Beachburg	" 3 and 4
E. Luther	Grand Valley	" 3 and 4
Stephenson	Parkersville	" 4 and 5
South Grimsby	Smithville	" 3 and 4
South Waterloo	Galt	" 3 and 4
South Oxford	Otterville	" 4 and 5
E. Kent	Thamesville	" 4 and 5
W. Zorra and Embro	Embro	" 4
Pelham	Fenwick	" 7 and 8
Acton Union	Acton	" 8 and 9
Cramahe	Castleton	" 8
N. York	Newmarket	" 8 and 9
W. Garafraxa	Bellwood	" 8 and 9
Windham	Windham Con.	" 8
Howard Branch	Ridgetown	" 8 to 10
Melancthon	Shelburne	" 8 and 9
E. Algoma	Sault Ste. Marie	" 9
West York and Vaughan	Woodbrige	" 9 and 10
Simcoe Union	Elmvale	" 9 and 10
Elmvale	Elmvale	" 9 and 10
Alliston	Alliston	" 10 and 11
Caledonia	Caledonia	" 10 and 11
C. Wellington	Fergus	" 10 and 11
Halton	Milton	" 10 and 11
Percy Tp	Warkworth	" 10 and 11
Blenheim	Drumbo	" 10 and 11
Scarboro'	Danforth	" 10
Aldborough	Rodney	" 12
Norfolk Union	Simcoe	" 15 and 16
King	Schomburg	" 16 and 17
Bradford	Bradford	" 18 and 19

Almost Strangers.

Mr. Newkomer—Mr. Lamb, I have been recommended by Mr. Wells, the broker, to purchase my meat from you. He says you act very liberally with him and give him good meat. You are acquainted with him, are you not?

Mr. Lamb—Oh, yes, but not as intimately as I once was.

"How is that?"

'Because I don't see him as often as when he paid me cash."

—Eastern Man—I do business in New York, but I live in the suburbs. Do you live in the suburbs, too? Chicago Man—The suburbs of Chicago? Great snakes! Do you take me for a frontiersman?

OCEAN RACERS.

Enormous Amounts of Coal Consumed by the Big Steamships.

"The big steamship business is being overdone," said Superintendent Charles G. West, of the French line, recently. "The size and number of the steamers are increasing out of all proportion to the increase in travel. This year the lines will get along all right on account of the Exposition, but next year they will have trouble. Either the big racers will have to be withdrawn, some of them, or rates will go down. You see, they are built for passengers, and they've got to run full, or nearly so, or they won't pay expenses. And as to laying them off, except in the rush of the season, why, it would be like laying millions of dollars idle in a safe deposit vault ten months out of the twelve. The interest in the investment in these boats is too big an item to be thrown away.

"You see, the trouble about the racing boats is that to get a comparatively small increase in speed and power, a terrible amount of room must be sacrificed and a great increase made in running expenses. Look at the fast Cunarders, burning some 350 tons of coal a day to get across in six days. I believe some of the other racers eat up even more fuel, especially at this season of the year, when they have to be in racing trim all the time. I went over to see the Columbia when she was on inspection after her maiden passage, and I found that not only were the bunkers full of coal but some of the steerage compartments had also been closed up and filled with coal. They were bound, you see, to get every possible pound of power out of the engines. It isn't the cost of the coal alone, though that will average $5 a ton, but it's the room the extra coal takes up, and the extra men necessary to handle it, and the room they take up. It takes a regiment of stokers to shovel 400 tons of coal a day into furnaces. Every man costs from 90 cents to $1 a day, besides his board and lodging.

"When it comes to freight the racers don't get in. After the Cuñe sails there's no transatlantic freight to speak of left here, anyhow. The Cuñe burns, they say, only 135 tons of coal a day, and she makes the passage in 10 days or so. You can imagine the profit there is in a boat like that. Then the old Adriatic of the same line gets along with 85 tons a day and makes the passage plenty fast enough for freight. She's a regular gold mine beside these new racers."

All the same, Mr. West's own line is going to have its twin-screw boat. "Our new vessel will be ready next season," Mr. West said. "We've been waiting until the other lines had showed what they could do, and now we're going to take our turn. Will she be a racer? Well, we're not saying anything about that yet, you know; we don't want to boast prematurely. I don't mind saying, though, that personally I shan't be a bit disappointed if she slides through the water just a little faster than anything else afloat.—New York Sun.

Methodist Dancing and Card Playing.

Sometimes our young people, who are drifting into some form of conformity to the world, excuse themselves by saying that they have seen members of other churches dance, play cards, attend the theatre and drink wine, without losing religious caste because of so doing. This seems to us a very weak plea. We are certainly not justified in assuming that it is right for us to do everything which members of other churches may do. We should go to the Bible and the Discipline of our own Church to learn what we should do—not to the example of others, whom it may not be safe to follow. We are not their judges; but it may be that the people who are held up as a proof that certain worldly amusements are innocent, are doing wrong and losing ground religiously in doing these very things. One thing is certain, it is not dancing, card-playing Christians that are successfully working and witnessing for Christ. It is equally certain that the spirit that circulates in connection with these practices is not helpful to growth in holiness. Among Methodists such practices are signs of religious declension. It is not wise to try how near we can drive to the edge of the precipice.—Christian Guardian.

Semi-Royal Marriage.

Rumor in England leads to the conclusion that Princess Mary of Teck, daughter of the popular Princess Mary of Cambridge, is about to be married to the heir of a wealthy English peer. It is said that the Hon. John Baring is the bridegroom expectant. The Princess Mary is more generally known as the Princess Victoria of Teck. She is nearly of the age of the Princess Louise of Wales, who was married to the Duke of Fife the other day. She was 22 last May. The Hon. John Baring, if he be the suitor for her hand, is not yet 26. He is the son of Lord Revelstoke, the head of the great firm of Baring. So far as wealth goes, the match is of the most promising kind. Lord Revelstoke is immensely wealthy, and uses his riches admirably. The parish church he built at Nos is probably as complete a specimen of ecclesiastical architecture as can be shown amongst any of our modern country churches. The Hon. John Baring is said to be of his father's generous and and thoughtful disposition, and though he has exhibited no signs of great genius, he is described as being intellectually of great promise.

A Good Investment.

"Can you lend me $5?"

"Can't do it."

"Why not?"

"I never lent you any money, so I don't know whether you would pay me or not."

"Well, great Scott! isn't it worth $5 to find out what kind of a man I am? I might strike you for a hundred some day."

Fred. Brown, just released from the Kingston Penitentiary, robbed a man in the Ottawa hotel on Saturday night, and was soon after arrested. He afterwards escaped from the cells while the door was open and the officers were subduing a lunatic. He was chased around for an hour and recaptured.

The immense sum of $16,000 was spent for the single item of wine at the Centennial banquet in New York city. Richard Busse, the chief steward of the Hoffman House, said that not since the feast of Belshazzar has so much wine been drunk as on the occasion of the Centennial hall and banquet.

THREE HAPPY GIRLS.

Released From an Obligation to Marry or Lose an Inheritance.

The court this morning removed an incubus from three pretty, intelligent and amiable young ladies who reside on the north side of Barr street, between Custer and Linn, says the Cincinnati Times-Star. The young women are known as the Courtney sisters, Jane, Julia and Anna, daughters of good old Mrs. Mary Courtney, who died some time ago. The obligation imposed upon the girls by their mother was to get married if they would derive certain privileges on her estate. Evidently she believed it is not good to live alone, but as her daughters never manifested any desire to enter matrimony, she, on her death bed, devised this unique way of bringing about the wish of her heart. She called a lawyer to her bedside and dictated to him a will he would never have allowed had he not been in his cups. The property, real and personal, she left in equal parts to the girls; but provided that neither or all jointly should be able to give a title to any part or the entirety unless all were married. In case of any marriage the remaining one or two could enjoy all the privileges of the home and remain in it. The will was contradictory and showed unsteady heads of the testator and the scrivener. The court construed the will by giving a fee simple title to the young ladies, and now they may pass a title whether unmarried or married. Father Quinn witnessed the will, but he did not read it. A queer fact is that originally the property belonged to the girls, and they deeded it to their mother, so in case of their demise she would be provided for. Had the paper held good as the old lady intended, the queer fact would have been presented of young ladies being obliged to marry to gain their own estate.

In the House of a Rich Japanese.

The wealthy Japanese make no display either in the architecture of their houses or in the display of ornaments. In the way of furnishing, their pride is in the delicacy of their mats and the richness of the satin cushions. The chief room in the house of a rich Japanese is thus described: "The salon was about 25 feet long by 15 wide. At one end, in the corner, was a small raised platform in a little niche and on it a fine Imari vase three feet high, holding flowering branches of the cherry tree. Behind, upon the wall, hung a very valuable but very ugly kakamono of a god. Twelve blue satin foutons lay in two rows upon the floor and three standing lamps stood in a line between. A folding screen was placed to protect us from draught—and that was the entire furniture of the millionaire's drawing room. The 'mats' upon the floor were of the whitest and finest straw. The screen was a gorgeous one, with a battle scene painted upon a gold background." The Japanese keep their bric-a-brac in fire proof buildings, to be taken out one at a time and admired, and then replaced by another.—Chicago Times.

The Omaha Onion Game.

The Omaha onion game is not intricate nor hard to learn. Six young ladies stand in a row. The hostess gives a "silver-skinned" onion to the head of the row, who passes it along the line. Some one takes a bite and then the young men, who have been rigidly excluded from the drawing room and imprisoned somewhere in the vicinity of the front hall hat rack, are called upon to guess who bit the onion. The young man who guesses correctly is allowed to kiss the fair biter of the tender vegetable.—Omaha Herald.

Porridge all the Rage.

According to the Sun the keeper of a large and stylish boarding-house in Lexington avenue, New York, has oatmeal porridge put on the table for all the boarders at Breakfast every morning, and he says it is regularly eaten by every boarder of both sexes in the house. A very large number of the boarding-houses of the city now provide oatmeal porridge as a breakfast dish, and find that it is favored by all hands, young and old. Yet it would have been a curiosity for most of the boarders 20 years ago.

The Steel Pen.

The steel pen trade at Birmingham is reported as buoyant, the average weekly production exceeding 160,000 gross, something that would give an aggregate annual product of 1,198,080,000 steel pens. In Her Majesty's stationery office, one year, the consumption of steel pens was about two millions, as against half a million of quill ones. In the London clubs the proportion of quill pens used is larger than that in the Government offices.

With Little Affection.

Fanny—The Browns are still lovers, although married ten years.

Frank—Oh, don't talk that kind of rot!

Fanny (indignantly)—Rot, indeed! I saw her run down the steps last night and kiss Mr. Brown when he came home.

Frank—Pshaw! She wanted to find out what he'd been drinking.

A Parliamentary Ruling.

A citizen of this place was presiding some years ago, over the deliberations of a Democratic meeting, and things were not going to suit him. He finally delivered the following opinion: "According to parliamentary law, it requires a two-thirds vote to carry that motion, and the chair decides that there are not that many here." The meeting at once adjourned. That settled it.—Atchison (Kan.) Champion.

By the Booming Sea.

An old lady who imagined the sea must be very dirty because so many people bathed in it, was consoled on being informed that it was washed upon the beach every morning.

The Baseball Maiden.

"No, Mr. Brown, I cannot marry you. You score a gooser this time."

"Can't tell yet," said Mr. Brown, rising from his knees. "I've got to third, and I haven't had an answer from the other two yet."

—News comes from Berlin that Count Von Moltke's brother Louis, an ex-Postmaster of Denmark, is dead, aged 85 years.

—Of the English Bench of Bishops twelve are pledged abstainers.

WHO LOST THE MONEY?

A Conundrum Which Sent One Man to His Grave.

Once there was a man who had misfortune. The further he went the worse he fared. When he struck El Paso he had just one round white silver dollar left to his name, and he went and bought a drink with it.

The barkeeper took his American dollar and handed him a Mexican dollar in change. A Mexican dollar at that time was worth only 85 cents in United States money. There were rumors of trouble between the two republics, growing out of Indian raids, and the pursuit of the robbers from one country into the other. A Mexican dollar was only worth 85 cents in Texas, and the United States dollar was worth but 85 cents in Mexico. It was early in the morning. He had nothing to do with the rest of the day, or with the rest of his life for that matter. The Mexican eagle on his last remaining coin suggested something to his desperate fancy, and he wandered across to El Paso del Norte on the Mexican side. He bought a drink of mescal there for 15 cents, laid down his Mexican dollar and received an American dollar in change, equivalent to 85 cents in Mexican money. He looked at the coin and an idea struck him. It appealed to his speculative humor. He retraced his steps to the American side, walked into a saloon, called for a drink of whiskey, paid for it with his solitary American dollar, which he had received in change on the other side and got a Mexican dollar in change. This he promptly carried over the line, bought a drink of mescal and got a United States dollar in change. Then he got to thinking. Here was the situation. He had precisely the same capital he started with an hour before and had distributed 60 cents' worth of liquor through his system in the way of dividends. The whiskey and mescal was gone. It was no further use to anybody. The visible supply of exhilarating beverage had been absolutely diminished to that extent. As had bought it at the market price. He had paid for it in cash. He had all his original capital still in his pocket. True, he had contributed the labor of walking back and forth from the Mexican to the Texan side, and vice versa, but that, as he shrewdly decided, was non-productive labor, so far as the interests of the public were concerned. It earned nothing, for it added nothing to the supply of anything. He might have walked back and forth until the river ran dry without anybody being the better off. Here was a chance to get even with the section of the country which had indirectly been the cause of his bankruptcy. He walked back to the Texan side, bought another drink, got a Mexican dollar in change, went back to the Mexican town, got another drink and a United States dollar in change. He kept it up all day. He picked up a stick and cut a notch in it for every drink, as the old Indian fighters used to keep a score of the scalps they took. He kept it up pretty steadily all that day until closing-up time, and set at it again the next day as soon as he could see. He waxed enthusiastic over his speculation, giving a war-whoop at every notch in the stick. But at length he got to wondering who was losing all this money. Apparently not the bar-keepers. They were getting the market rate for their liquors. Surely not he, for he was holding his own. The problem bothered him. He was naturally a curious man. The more he thought of it the more he drank, the more his head swam around with perplexity and the more the subject in question became complicated with extraordinary things which reminded him of the menagerie he had gone to see when he was a boy. At length, when he had consumed $5.05 worth of Texas whiskey, and $5 worth of Mexican mescal, he died in front of the saloon where he got the first drink and with a silver dollar in United States coin in his pocket—died of wondering who had lost the $10.05 worth of two kinds of liquor which he had consumed, although the local coroner said it was delirium tremens. But neither the coroner nor his jury explained who lost the $10.05, and that's what I want to know.—Pittsburg Times.

They All Do It.

Billings (to his tailor)—I must have that suit to-night. Can't possibly get along without it. Don't fail me now.

Tailor (wearily)—You'll have it, sir, if I have to put on an extra man.

Mrs. Billings (five hours later at home)—Your suit has just come, dear.

Billings—All right. Hang it up in the closet. I won't need it until fall.

R. A. Gunn, M. D., Dean and Professor of Surgery, of the United States Medical College, said: "I am willing to acknowledge and commend thus frankly the value of Warner's Safe Cure." The late Dr. Dio Lewis, writing to the proprietors of Warner's Safe Cure, said, over his own signature: "If I found myself the victim of a serious kidney trouble, I would use Warner's Safe Cure."

—"Oh, I am the flower that blooms in the spring," sang an intoxicated individual, as he lay on the sidewalk. "You don't seem to possess the self-raising qualities," said the cop who gathered him in.

Why is it that in our courts of justice we cling to the old custom of swearing witnesses on the Bible? Does the fact of kissing the sacred volume add to the solemnity of the oath? Would not the raising of the right hand be just as binding as kissing the dirty covers of a book that has done service in our court rooms from time immemorial? Drop into our Police Court any morning and see the motley crew that handle the Bible and press it to their lips, and then think of a respectable man or woman having to follow a vagrant on the witness stand and kissing the same book on which the foul breath of some diseased wretch still hangs like a vapor. Who would think of pressing to their lips the cover of a book that had just been handled by one afflicted with a loathsome disease? and yet it is done every day in our Police Courts. Reform is necessary. This would be a good subject for a physician to discuss.

—The Russian Punch abounds in comic pictures, printed in gorgeous colors.

—At Orchard Beach, Me., they have a sea serpent six feet long. That isn't very long, but it is getting late in the season and most of the first class serpents have signed.

A WEDDING POSTPONED,

Because the Groom Overslept Himself and Didn't Turn up.

Considerable interest was manifest early yesterday morning at St. Jean Baptiste Church on Primrose hill, where a young couple whose names are Joseph Potvin and Mary Arneau respectively, the former from Mechanicsville and the latter from Rochesterville, were to have been united in matrimony. The bride and all her friends were on hand punctually, and so was the priest, but the groom did not present himself. This put all the parties concerned in a flutter, and the greatest anxiety prevailed. A delegation was afterwards sent to the residence of the groom to inquire into his mysterious non-appearance. They were received by Potvin, who was as cool as a cucumber, and who met their queries by saying "he had slept it out." The marriage, the supper and the dance in the evening were all consequently postponed.—Ottawa Free Press.

Will Be Goosey, Next.

Mr. Nuwed (tenderly, but inflexibly)—It seems to me that "Lovey" and "Sweetie" and "Dearie" ought to afford you scope enough. It makes a man blush to be called "Darling" at every other word, particularly in the presence of strangers. But I draw the line at "Duckey." I won't be called "Duckey" by any one!"

Mrs. Nuwed (tearfully)—All righ Birdie," I wont. But I love you so much Dolly," that it's hard not to. Don't you understand, "Baby"?

Her Face was Her Fortune.

She was as pretty as a picture and so animated and lively that it did one good to look at her. She was all this but she is not now. Poor soul, the roses linger no more in her cheeks, the former luster of her eyes is gone. She is a woe-begone looking piece of humanity now. She has one of those troubles so common to women and needs Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription. It recuperates the wasted strength, puts the whole system right, restores the roses and the luster, and makes the woman what she once was, bright, well and happy. "Favorite Prescription" is the only medicine for women, sold by druggists, under a positive guarantee, from the manufacturers, that it will give satisfaction in every case, or money will be refunded. This guarantee has been printed on the bottle-wrapper, and faithfully carried out for many years.

Superior to Dynamite.

Experiments first made in London with carbo-dynamite, one of the latest explosives, would seem to show that it possesses some important advantages over ordinary dynamite, among others that of considerably greater power, and the generation of much less noxious vapor when exploded in confined places. It is composed of nitro-glycerine absorbed by ten parts of a variety of carbon, and is claimed to be entirely unaffected by water.—New York Telegram.

"O. K."

The origin of the expression "It is all O. K." is thus told: An ignorant official endorsed each account that he audited and found correct—O.K—meaning to intimate that the bill was all correct, or as he pronounced and spelt it, Oll Kreet. Whatever the origin, the expression is used in a variety of connections, as for instance, when Robson told Tomkins that his wife's health had been O.K. ever since she used a few bottles of Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription. It is the great cure for all the painful and distressing ailments and weaknesses peculiar to women. It is the only guaranteed cure for these ailments, sold by druggists. Money paid for it will be promptly returned if it don't give satisfaction. See guarantee printed on the bottle-wrapper.

That Boy Again.

Tommy—Say, Mr. Dryleigh, you can try it on me if you like.

Rev. Mr. D.—I don't understand you, my child. Try what?

"Why, ma says you can put anybody to sleep in five minutes." (Tableau.)—Grip.

$500 Reward.

For many years the manufacturers of Dr. Sage's Catarrh Remedy have offered, in good faith, a standing reward of $500 for a case of chronic nasal catarrh which they cannot cure. No matter how bad the disease has become, or of how many years standing, it yields, in due time, to their skill. This famous remedy is sold by druggists at 50 cents.

A Strong Appeal.

Van Setmeup (fils)—Come, father, be generous. Let me have a thousand and I'll make it last a month, 'pon honor.

Van Setmeup (pere)—My dear boy, consider. If you go on spending at this rate you'll be as poor as I am before long.

—Victoria Morosini, the daughter of the millionaire, who married her father's coachman several years ago and starred on the stage, has done satisfactory penance for her social sin, and is again with her father as a modest but attractive belle at Saratoga.

Gen. Russell A. Alger has been elected National Commander-in-Chief of the Grand Army of Republic.

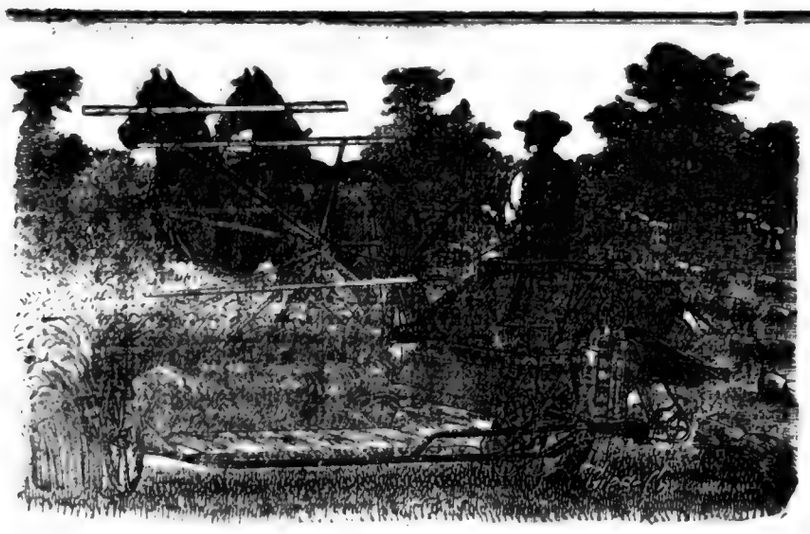
Looking at the matter from a philosophical point of view, what an easy thing it is for other people to be mistaken!

—The best horse is made to lose a race by being pulled; but the best boat only wins by it.

DONL 3789.

AGENTS MAKE $100 A MONTH with us. Send 20c. for terms. A colored rug pattern and 50 colored designs. W. & F. BUSH, St. Thomas, Ont.

DUNN'S BAKING POWDER
THE COOK'S BEST FRIEND



THE BRANTFORD LIGHT STEEL BINDER!

Over Four Thousand Sold in Season 1888. Being More Than Half of all Other Binders made in Canada.

Before placing their orders for 1889, we respectfully request the farmers to:
1st. Carefully examine the "Brantford Machines" and faithfully compare with others.
2nd. Enquire of your neighbors who have used "Brantford Machines" and get their opinion of their working and lasting qualities.
If you will follow the above advice, you will be convinced of these two facts:
1st. "Brantford Machines" are possessed of more improvements and are better made than any other machines in Canada.
2nd. "Brantford Machines" are more popular, give better satisfaction, and are more durable than any other machine in Canada.
Therefore 1st. Give your order EARLY for a Brantford Binder and Mower.
2nd. And you will be sure to be perfectly satisfied with the machine you get.

THOS. A. BLAKELY,
FLESHERTON

Heard's Carriage Works.

—:— MANUFACTURER OF —:—

Carriages, Buggies, Wagons, Sleighs, Cutters, &c., &c.

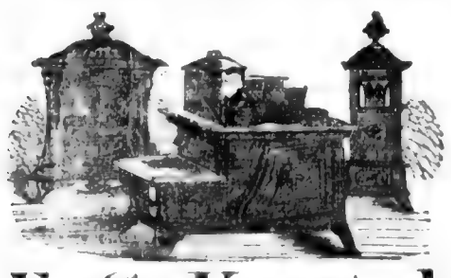
HEARD'S IMPROVED HARROWS AND GATES.

Special Attention given to PAINTING, TRIMMING, HORSE-SHOEING and all kinds of JOB WORK. Nothing but first-class material used throughout and satisfaction guaranteed. We have for sale

——Lumber, Lath and Shingles.——

Also Agent for Dick's Rollers, Mowers and Binders, Dick's Champion, Royal Rob Roy, Granger and Standard Plows. Two and Three-Furrow Gang Plows. Horse Powers for 4 Horses. Straw Cutters, Scufflers and Turnip Drills.

JOHN H. HEARD, Durham Street, Flesherton.



FLESHERTON STOVE EMPORIUM

A large assortment of STOVES, (a makes) STOVE FURNISHINGS, TIN WARE, COPPERWARE, LAMP GOODS etc, constantly on hand.

EVETROUGHING A SPECIALITY.

F. G. Karstedt, Strain's old Stand Flesherton.

FLOUR, FLOUR, STONE FLOUR!

MR. P LOUCKS

Is prepared to do your Gristing on short notice and grinds on the old terms of every twelfth bushel. Seven cents per bag of two bushels for Chopping done every day The Little Mill is big in the estimation of the public.

Satisfaction Guaranteed.

P. LOUCKS, Proprietor.

Good stabling for horses.

BLACKBURN'S

is the place for choice goods and fair prices.

Choice Roller Flour, Bran and Shorts, at rockbottom prices.
Cured Meats, Bologona,
Mixed bird seed
Pure prepared Corn,
General assortment of canned goods.

CHOICE HONEY,
CONFECTIONERY of all kinds
ICE CREAM

and cooling summer drinks. Choice Fruits a specialty.

OAT MEAL, CORN MEAL, CRACKED WHEAT and GRAHAM FLOUR, always on hand.

Remember the place, next door to M. Richardson & Co's.

Croup, whooping cough and Bronchitis immediately relieved by Shiloh's Cure. For sale at the Medical Hall.

For lame back, side or chest, use Shiloh's Porous Plaster. Price 25 cents. For sale at the Medical Hall.

Catarrh cured, health and sweet breath secured, by Shiloh's Catarrh Remedy Price 50 cents. Nasal Injector free. For sale at the Medical Hall

For Sale

Steam flour mill for sale at Flesherton Station 2 run stone, double reel bolt, smut mill, duster and purifier. Will be sold cheap and on easy terms. This is a bargain. Apply to
ROGER LEVER
Flesherton P.O

Monthly Fairs.

Orangeville—The second Thursday in each month.
Dundalk—Tuesday before Orangevie.
Flesherton—Monday before Orangevie.
Markdale—Saturday before Orangeville.
Durham—Third Tuesday in each month.
Chatsworth—Monday before Durham
Holland Center—Saturday before Chatsworth
Priceville—Monday before Durham.
Hanover—Monday before Durham.

This Year's

MYRTLE

CUT and PLUG

SMOKING TOBACCO

FINER THAN EVER.

See

T & B

in bronze on EACH PLUG and PACKAGE

Improved Farm for Sale.

Lots 148, 149 and 150, 3rd range east, T. and S. R., containing 100 acres, 80 cleared, good clay loam, well improved, good frame house and log barn, frame stable, good orchard, etc. This farm is well watered and improved, and is considered one of the best in this section. It is one mile and a half from the village Flesherton. Will be sold on very easy terms. For further particulars apply to

JAS. BEECROFT,
Flesherton P.O

Things Amusing and Strange.

NOT ORIGINAL, BUT WORTHY OF PERUSAL.

It's odd how much food a horse can go without and still be no faster.

Among the remarkable men who were born in 1809 may be mentioned Dr. Holmes, Abraham Lincoln, Charles Darwin, Alfred Tennyson, Mr. Gladstone, Edgar A. Poe and Lord Houghton.

The cost of the Paris Exhibition is roughly estimated to be £6,000,000. This includes the expenditure by France and by foreign Governments. To go against this there will be the money spent by those numerous visitors who will go away declaring that they went to the top of the Eiffel tower when they didn't.

The library of a Manchester collector contains a copy of what is probably the smallest volume ever engraved, printed, and bound. It measures 1.1 inch in height by .75 inch in width, contains 32 leaves or 64 plates, is covered in crimson and gilt roan, and has gilt edges. It was published in "Paris at the Black Cat, 82 Saint Denis street." The contents of the book are entirely in French, and consist of eight chansonettes, each illustrated by a vignette.

Dr. Buckly tells a story in The Christian Advocate about his following Tennyson some years ago through the South Kensington Museum, hoping to hear him speak. For two mortal hours and a half he did this without success. "At last he made sign as if he were about to do so. Hoping to hear some criticism of a painting we listened intently, and these memorable words fell from the lips of England's Poet Laureate: 'You take care of the children while I go and get some beer.'"

The Mexican wasp is built entirely for business. He is over two inches long when he is of age, and is about the color of a bay horse. His plunger is a full inch long, and as fine as a spider's web. Unlike the stinger of a common bee, the stinger of the Mexican wasp is non-forfeitable. He doesn't give up after one lunge, but has it always ready for an all-day job if necessary. The mission of the Mexican wasp seems to be merely to hunt up people and run that stinger of his into them. The natives say he will go ten miles out of his way to get a hack at a person. The natives seem to get fat on snake bites, centipede bites and scorpion stings, but if they discover one of these wasps in their neighborhood they hunt for cover without delay.

A HORNED HORSE.—Mr. W. McArthur, of Woodstock, owns a black horse, which has been distinguishing himself by drawing loads of brick and stone heavy enough for an ordinary team, and is likely to acquire additional celebrity as the possessor of a pair of horns, which have lately commenced to sprout from his forehead, about three inches apart, slightly above the level of his eyes. Mr. McArthur assures us that he has been repeatedly told that his horse's sire, a black Percheron, had a pair of veritable horns about four inches long, that did not make their appearance until he was seven years old. Percheron junior (whose christian name is Fred) is now just that age; and while a short time ago his forehead was as smooth as any muley horse's in the province, there are now two bony protuberances large enough to be seen almost from one side of the road to the other, and slowly but steadily growing. A horse with bona fide horns is a decided novelty.

Mrs. Harriet Beecher Stowe lives a peculiar existence at present. She eats very little, confining her diet almost altogether to bread and butter and fruit. She sleeps well in the daytime but is apt to be wakeful at night. At times she seems to have a momentary return of her old brilliancy, but as a general thing is mentally apathetic. She is fond of being in the open air, and can walk about a mile with a cane. Her tenure of life is considered remarkable by her physicians, who say she has the strongest vitality of any woman they have ever known.

IT PAYS TO

Go to THE BEST

AND THAT IS THE

Northern Business College,

OF OWEN SOUND.

The best and most practical course of study
The best teaching talent
The best accommodation for students.
The best methods of instruction.
The best results from that instruction after students graduate.

For annual announcements giving particulars regarding the course of study, terms, etc, adress
C. A. FLEMING, PRINCIPAL.

BOOTS & SHOES.

I have a very large supply on and and

Selling very Cheap.

IN LADIES WEAR. Prunlela, Kid, Polish calf and Buff Dongola, Lace and Button.

Misse's, Youth's and Children's

A large assortment, all sorts and sizes.

MEN'S WEAR

Fine Calf and Dongola, Balmorals and Gaiters, also Heavy Boots and Shoes. Prices and Material cannot be beat.

W. CLAYTON.

Photos, Photos, Photos.

We are now turning out work far superior in style and finish to any ever produced in Flesherton.

COPYING and ENLARGING at MODERATE RATES.

PICTURE FRAMING

done in all its branches. A good stock of FRAMES and MOULDINGS kept constantly on hand. Will also introduce the new BROMIDE PORTRAIT, a picture that is giving entire satisfaction wherever introduced. SAMPLES can be seen at my Gallery where all particulars as to Price, Style &c., can be ascertained.

MRS. BULMER,
FLESHERTON

HEALTH FOR ALL.

HOLLOWAY'S PILLS & OINTMENT

THE PILS

Purify the Blood, correct all Disorders of

Liver, Stomach, Kidn'ys, and Bowels.

They invigorate and restore to health Debilitated Constitutions, and are invaluable in all Complaints incidental to Females of all ages. For Children and the aged they are priceless.

THE OINTMENT

Is an infallible remedy for Bad Legs, Bad Breasts, Old Wounds, Sores and Ulcers. It is famous for Gout and Rheumatism. For disorders of the Chest it has no equa

For SORE THROAT, BRONCHITIS, COUGHS, COLDS

Glandular Swellings, and all Skin Diseases it has no rival; and for contracted and stiff joints it acts like a charm.

Manufactured only at Professor HOLLOWAY's Establishment,
78, New Oxford Street (late 533, Oxford Street), London,
and are sold at 1s. 1½d., 2s. 9d., 4s. 6d., 11s., 22s., and 33s. each Box or Pot, and may be had of all Medicine Vendors throughout the World.

☞ Purchasers should look to the Label on the Pots and Boxes. If the address is not 533, Oxford Street, London, they are spurious.

PRICEVILLE BAKERY.

A. WATSON!

Desires to inform the public that he can furnish

CAKES AND PIES

To Order.

FIRST CLAS BREAD ALWAYS ON HAND,

will visit Flesherton twice a week—o TUESDAYS and FRIDAYS, with a full supply of goods

DROP A CARD IF YOU DESIRE ME TO CALL.

WEDDING and FANCY cakes a specialty

A. WATSON,
Priceville.

Situation.

with steady employment and good pay all the year round, to reliable men furnishing satisfactory references. S.A. McCOMBER & Co.,
Nurserymen, Rochester, N.Y

FLESHERTON
PLANING MILLS

Having purchased the Flesherton Planing Mills from R. J. Sproule, Esq., I now desire to inform the PUBLIC
that I am in a position to do
ALL KINDS
OF—
General planing mill work,
such as
SASH, DOORS, DOOR FRAMES
Planing and Matching, re sawing, etc.

Good Workmanship Guaranteed.

A large quantity of good dry pine lumber on hand.

W. J. HOWARD,
Flesherton.

LOOK!

HAVING done business in Canada for years our reputation is established W... want three men in ... us, to whom exclusive ... Handsome outfit ... paid weekly. Prevent ... Write at once for ... ada a specialty

...nity to represent ...ry will be given ...y and expenses ...ence not required. ...ly stock for Can... BROTHERS Rochester, N.Y.

FLESHERTON ADVANCE.

"TRUTH BEFORE FAVOR."—"PRINCIPLES, NOT MEN."

VOL. VIII., NO 429. FLESHERTON, ONT., THURSDAY, SEPTEMBER 19, 1889. W. H. THURSTON, [illegible]

Visitors to Flesherton

Exhibition should not fail to call and examine the fine stock of Watches, Clocks, Jewelry, Silverware, Spectacles, etc.,

—AT—

Russell's Noted Jewelry Store, Flesherton,

which has just arrived, consisting of Gold and Silver Watches, Ladies' and Gents' sizes, Rings, Cuffbuttons, Charms, Gents' and Ladies' Gold Chains, Diamond Rings, etc. We expect to do the trade this fall and winter and have a very fine selection of Goods on hand, call and examine, no trouble to show goods.

And always take your watches, etc to Russell to repair, if you want a perfect job.

Russell's Jewelery Store, Flesherton

TO WHOM IT MAY CONCERN.

The CASH STORE is offering special lines in all departments.

Our DRY GOODS DEPARTMENT

has lately been filled to overflowing, with as choice a line of goods as ever shown. In making our selections we realize that to the quality of the goods sold, we must look to the building up of that confidence between buyer and seller, so essential to a commercial success and permanence. Customers will find that in respect to quality, our stock has no superior.

DRESS GOODS

in leading shades, plain and durable. Prices ranging from 10c. to 50c. with trimmings to match. In Braids, Gimp, Plushes and Velvets, Gray, White, Navy Blue and Red Flannels, second to none for QUALITY and PRICE. It would take too much space to mention all our lines in this department separately. But we would request an inspection, guaranteeing satisfactory results.

Our BOOT and SHOE Assortment Larger Than Ever.

Special lines of women's high Laced Boots at $1 14 Men's long Boots from $1.75 up. Misses and Children's in all sizes Groceries, Crockery and general merchandise.

Persons visiting the fair would do well to give us a call.

McDONALD & EVANS,

Wright's Old Stand.

Pumps! Pumps!

J. McCullough, Markdale.

manufacturer of pumps, desires to inform the public that he is prepared to furnish pumps for

Deep wells, gravel wells, etc.

Parties who have heretofore had difficulty with their wells are

Guaranteed Satisfaction

using my articles. I learned my business with the late J. Fear of Meaford, the superiority of whose pumps was a household word in Grey a few years ago.

Be sure and call on me if you desire anything in the pump line.

J. McCullough.

FARM FOR SALE CHEAP AND ON EASY terms lot 7, con 2, township of Euphrasia containing 200 acres. This is a splendid valuable timber farm. Well timbered with mixed hardwood, hemlock and cedar. Splendid soil. 1½ miles from the beautiful village of Kimberley, in Queen's Valley where there are mills, stores, post office and church, and 11 miles from Flesherton on the C. P. R. where there is a splendid market for all kinds of produce, stock, lumber and timber. Apply to R. J. Sproule, auctioneer and real estate agent, Flesherton.

Flesherton Livery Stables.

D. CLAYTON, Proprietor.

First class horses and vehicles for hire at reasonable rates. Stables opposite Munshaw's hotel. Special attention paid to commercial business.

THE ADVANCE.

Is published

Every Thursday,

FROM THE OFFICE,

[illegible] Street, [illegible], Ont.

TERMS OF SUBSCRIPTION:

$1 per annum when paid strictly in advance. $1.50 per annum when not so paid.

ADVERTISING RATES.

[illegible]

W. H THURSTON

Editor and Proprietor.

EDITORIAL MELANGE.

Poor see-saw Haldimand! The other end of the plank is up now. Mr Colter, the Reform member, has been unseated through bribery by agents. These Haldimand "agents" appear to be a bad lot—unscrupulous and plentiful. It is very nearly time they took the lesson to heart and employed their perverse natures in some occupation which would not bring odium upon the party which they profess to serve. The man who will place his party in a perilous position by such small acts as treating and paying insignificant bribes is a barnacle, attached to either party. He would steal sheep. "Them's our sentiments."

Toronto's great and only exhibition is attracting curious humanity by the thousand. The receipts for last week fell $1000 short of those during the corresponding period last year, and up to Monday evening were more than $2,000 short. Does this demonstrate that the show has reached its apex of popularity, or is it accounted for by the fact that Canadians are waiting for the East Grey fall show, to be held in Flesherton on Monday and Tuesday next? We have consulted Secretary Damude on this weighty subject, and find him strongly inclined to the latter belief.

On Friday evening last there died in Toronto one of "nature's noblemen," in the person of Wm. Gooderham. He was a wealthy man, but his charity was unbounded, and many a struggling charitable institution will miss his ready purse; many a poor family and invalid will miss his kindly smile and words of counsel. He was one of the few kings of christianity, and spent the later years of his life in uninterrupted work for the Master, dying of heart disease while at his post. He was conducting a prayer meeting when the summons came. Mr. Gooderham was 65 years of age.

Here is a sad warning to ladies. The wife of a prominent citizen of Reading, Pa., laughed herself into spasms, and then swallowed her teeth, after which she died. The moral is, don't laugh if you wear teeth that will float. Some women laugh simply to show their pretty pearls, which, of course, are always of the floating kind. It is a dangerous practice and cannot be too strongly condemned. When a woman must laugh she should carefully remove her portable teeth before doing so, and then, in case of spasmodic jerks overtaking her, the husband would not be held liable for murder in furnishing her with such a deadly weapon. That will be the outcome of this pernicious practice if women will persist in swallowing their false teeth at the present rate.

London, Eng., has lately had a little strike experience which it will remember for some time. It is said to have cost the city $10,000,000, and the shrinkage of dock securities amounted to another $5,000,000. The strike lasted for a month, and ended in a victory for justice. In other words, the striking dockmen gained the points they aimed at.

HANDCUFFS ILLEGAL.

Mr. Justice Rose, who is presiding at the Middlesex Assizes in London this week, has just given a very important [illegible] of a police officer [illegible] a prisoner. A man was arrested and taken before a magistrate [illegible] [illegible] was nothing wrong in [illegible] severely reprimanded the detective who made the arrest for using the handcuffs. To handcuff an untried prisoner, unless he resists arrest, is trespass, according to the law, and in this case the detective will have to pay the handcuffed man $200 damages and the cost of the suit. Police officers would do well to overhaul their rules of conduct, and when found "make a note on't." They will be protected in the performance of their duty, but the law is very jealous of the liberty of the subject, and will not permit injustice to be committed in the name of law, as Judge Rose has ably pointed out.—London Advertiser.

To the Editor of The Advance.

DEAR SIR,—While Mr George Turner was at Eugenia a few evenings ago, he unhitched his horses from the rig to take them to water, and on returning to where he left his rig it was gone. On looking around he at last found it, but a valuable whip had been taken therefrom, and while he was quietly hitching his horses to the rig some person or persons started to throw stones at him. Some of the stones were quite a size. Had they hit Mr. Turner they might have done serious harm. Such rascally tricks ought to be looked into, and the villains punished as they deserve. It is the opinion of the people that Eugenia ought to have a policeman and lockup.

R.

General News.

Many farmers in Quebec province have such abundant crops that their barns will not hold them.

The Hamilton papers exultingly announces that the C. P. R. will be running trains into that city in a short time.

Grand Rapids, Mich., offered a bounty for the killing of English sparrows, and up to this date boys have slaughtered over 10,000 of the pests. In addition the boys have filled a horse with bird shot, punctured the leg of one of their number with the same, and put out the eye of another.

The Rev. Geo. H. Thayer, of Burbone Ind., says: "Both myself and my wife owe our lives to Shiloh's Consumption Cure. For sale at the Medical Hall.

Deputy Nagle, who shot ex-Judge Terry, in California, has been released on a habeas corpus.

Are you made miserable by indigestion, constipation, dizziness, loss of appetite, yellow skin? Shiloh's Vitalizer is a positive cure. For Sale at the Medical Hall.

Thomas Howson, an old resident of Milton, was killed at a crossing there by a C.P.R. train Monday evening.

The trial of the four men arrested on suspicion of complicity in the tarring and feathering of Charles Hambly is in progress at Owen Sound.

Wm. Watson was shot dead near Lanark Village on Friday night by Benjamin Cameron, who fired off a gun to frighten Watson and a number of drunken companions from a house where they were illtreating an imbecile girl.

For dyspepsia and liver complaint you have a printed guarantee on every bottle of Shiloh's vitalizer. It never fails to cure. For sale at the Medical Hall.

The balloon which ascended from the International Fair at Buffalo Friday dropped into the Niagara river at the head of Strawberry Island.

[illegible]

THE MARKET

FLESHERTON.

Carefully Corrected Each Week.

Fall Wheat	[illegible]
Spring Wheat	[illegible]
Barley	[illegible]
Oats	[illegible]
[illegible]	[illegible]
Butter	[illegible]
Eggs, fresh	[illegible]
Potatoes, bu	[illegible]
Pork	[illegible]
Hay per ton	[illegible]
[illegible]	[illegible]
[illegible]	[illegible]
[illegible]	[illegible]
Turkeys	[illegible]
Chickens per pair	[illegible]
Ducks per lb	[illegible]
Wool	[illegible]

SIGN

"Big Sp[illegible]

Reliable wat[illegible]

Gold, filled [illegible] and Coin-sil[illegible] cases.

[illegible]

Walnut and Nickle

[illegible]

QUALITY Conside[illegible]

[illegible]

"CASH or C[illegible]

Goods, Wor[illegible]

Warrants Con[illegible]

[illegible]

Work Carefully [illegible]

Fair C[illegible]

Stock now complete [illegible]

Can save [illegible] to $3.0[illegible] watc[illegible]

[illegible]

W. A. BR[illegible]

Jewele[illegible]

MARKDALE [illegible]

Grand Millinery Opening next week. MRS. W. TRIM[illegible]

AN AMERICAN GIRL.

CHAPTER I.

MISS OCTAVIA BASSETT.

Slowbridge had been shaken to its foundations.

It may as well be explained, however, at the outset, that it would not take much of a sensation to give Slowbridge a great shock. In the first place, Sloworidge was not used to sensations and was used to going on the even and respectable tenor of its way, regarding the outside world with private distrust, if not with open disfavor. The new mills had been a trial to Slowbridge—a sore trial. On being told of the owner's plan of building them, old Lady Theobald, who was the corner-stone of the social edifice of Slowbridge, was said, by a spectator, to have turned deathly pale with rage, and on the first day of their being opened in working order, she had taken to her bed, and remained shut up in her darkened room for a week, refusing to see anybody, and even going so far as to send a scathing message to the curate of St. James, who called in fear and trembling because he was afraid to stay away.

"With mills and mill-hands,' her ladyship announced to Mr. Laurence, the mill owner, when chance threw them together, —"with mills and mill-hands come murder, massacre, and mob law." And she said it so loud, and with so stern an air of conviction, that the two Misses Briarton, who were of a timorous and fearful nature, dropped their buttered muffins (it was at one of the tea-parties which were Slowbridge's only dissipation), and shuddered hysterically, feeling that their fate was sealed, and that they might, any night, find three masculine mill-hands secreted under their beds, with bludgeons. But as no massacres took place, and the mill-hands were pretty regular in their habits, and even went so far as to send their children to Lady Theobald's free school, and accepted the tracts left weekly at their doors, whether they could read or not, Slowbridge gradually recovered from the shock of finding itself forced to exist in close proximity to mills, and was just settling itself to sleep—the sleep of the just—again, when, as I have said, it was shaken to its foundations.

It was Miss Belinda Bassett who received the first shock. Miss Belinda Bassett was a decorous little maiden lady, who lived in a decorous little house on High street (which was considered a very genteel street in Slowbridge). She had lived in the same house all her life, her father had lived in it, and so also had her grandfather. She had gone out, to take tea, from its doors two or three times a week, ever since she had been twenty, and she had had her little tea-parties in its front parlor as often as any other genteel Slowbridge entertainer. She had risen at seven, breakfasted at eight, dined at two, taken tea at five, and gone to bed at ten, with such regularity for fifty years, that to rise at eight, breakfast at nine, dine at three, and take tea at six, and go to bed at eleven, would, she was firmly convinced, be but "to fly in the face of Providence," as she put it, and sign her own death-warrant. Consequently, it is easy to imagine what a tremor of excitement seized her when, one afternoon, as she sat waiting for her tea a coach from the Blue Lion dashed—or, at least, almost dashed up to the front door, a young lady got out, and the next minute the handmaiden, Mary Anne, threw open the door of the parlor, announcing, without the least preface:

"Your neice, mum, from 'Meriker."

Miss Belinda got up, feeling that her knees really trembled beneath her.

In Slowbridge, America was not approved of in fact, was almost entirely ignored, as a country where, to quote Lady Theobald, "the laws were loose, and the prevailing sentiments revolutionary." It was not considered good taste to know Americans, —which was not unfortunate, as there was none to know,—and Miss Belinda Bassett had always felt a difficulty in mentioning her only brother, who had emigrated to the United States in his youth, having first disgraced himself by the utterance of a blasphemous remark that "he wanted to get to a place where a fellow could stretch himself and not be bullied by a lot of old tabbies." From he day of his departure, when he had left Miss Belinda bathed in tears of anguish, she had heard nothing of him, and here upon the threshold stood Mary Anne, with delighted eagerness in her countenance, repeating:

"Your neice, mum, from 'Meriker!"

And, with the words, her neice entered.

Miss Belinda put her hand to her heart.

The young lady, thus announced, was the prettiest, and at the same time the most extraordinary-looking, young lady she had ever seen in her life. Slowbridge contained nothing approaching this neice. Her dress was so very stylish that it was quite startling in its effect, her forehead was covered, down to her large, pretty eyes themselves, with curls of yellow-brown hair, and her slender throat was swathed round and round with a grand scarf of black lace.

She made a step forward, and then stopped, looking at Miss Belinda. Her eyes suddenly, to Miss Belinda's amazement, filled with tears.

"Didn't you," she said,—"Oh dear, didn't you get the letter?"

"The—the letter!" faltered Miss Belinda. "What letter, my—my dear?"

"Pa's," was the answer. "Oh, I see you didn't."

And she sank into the nearest chair, putting her hands up to her face, and beginning to cry outright.

"I—am Octavia B-bassett," she said. "We were coming to surp-prise you, and travel in Europe, but the mines went wrong, and p-pa was obliged to go back to Nevada."

"The mines?" gasped Miss Belinda.

"S-silver mines," wept Octavia. "And we had scarcely landed when Piper cabled, and pa had to turn back. It was something about shares, and he may have lost his last dollar!"

Miss Belinda sank into a chair herself.

"Mary Anne," she said, faintly, "bring me a glass of water."

Her tone was such that Octavia removed her handkerchief from her eyes, and sat up to examine her.

"Are you frightened?" she asked, in some alarm.

Miss Belinda took a sip of the water brought by her handmaiden, replaced the glass upon the salver, and shook her head deprecatingly.

"Not exactly frightened, my dear," she said, "but so amazed that I find it difficult to—to collect myself."

Octavia put up her handkerchief again to wipe away a sudden new gush of tears.

"If shares intended to go down," she said, "I don't see why they couldn't go down before we started, instead of waiting until we got over here, and then spoiling everything."

"Providence, my dear,——" began Miss Belinda.

But she was interrupted by the re-entrance of Mary Anne.

"The man from the Lion, mum, wants to know what's to be done with the trunks. There's six of 'em, an' they're all that 'eavy as he says he wouldn't lift one alone for ten shillings."

"Six!" exclaimed Miss Belinda. "Whose are they?"

"Mine," replied Octavia. "Wait a minute. I'll go out to him."

Miss Belinda was astonished afresh by the alacrity with which her neice seemed to forget her troubles and rise to the occasion. The girl ran to the front door as if she was quite used to directing her own affairs, and began to issue her orders

"You will have to get another man," she said. "You might have known that. Go and get one somewhere."

And when the man went off, grumbling a little, and evidently rather at a loss before such peremptory coolness, she turned to Miss Belinda.

"Where must he put them?" she asked.

It did not seem to have occurred to her once that her indentity might be doubted, and some slight obstacle arise before her.

"I am afraid," faltered Miss Belinda, "that five of them will have to be put in the attic."

And, in fifteen minutes, five of them were put into the attic, and the sixth—the biggest of all stood in the trim spare chamber, and pretty Miss Octavia had sunk into a puffy little chintz-covered easy-chair, while her newly found relative stood before her, making the most laudable efforts to recover her equilibrium, and not to feel as if her head was spinning round and round.

CHAPTER II.

"AN INVESTMENT, ANYWAY."

The natural results of these efforts was that Miss Belinda was moved to shed a few tears.

"I hope you will excuse my being too startled to say I was glad to see you," she said. "I have not seen my brother for thirty years, and I was very fond of him."

"He said you were," answered Octavia, "and he was very fond of you, too. He didn't write to you, because he made up his mind not to let you hear from him until he was a rich man, and then he thought he would wait until he could come home, and surprise you. He was awfully disappointed when he had to go back without seeing you."

"Poor dear Martin," wept Miss Belinda, gently. "Such a journey!"

Octavia opened her charming eyes in surprise.

"Oh, he'll come back again!" she said. "And he doesn't mind the journey. The journey is nothing, you know."

"Nothing!" echoed Miss Belinda. "A voyage across the Atlantic nothing? When one thinks of the danger, my dear.——"

Octavia's eyes opened a shade wider.

"We have made the trip to the States, across the Isthmus, twelve times, and that takes a month," she remarked. "So we don't think ten days much."

"Twelve times!" said Miss Belinda, quite appalled. "Dear, dear, dear!"

And, for some moments, she could do nothing but look at her young relative in doubtful wonder, shaking her head with actual sadness.

But she finally recovered herself with a little start.

"What am I thinking of," she exclaimed, remorsefully, "to let you sit here in this way? Pray, excuse me, my dear. You see I am so upset."

She left her chair in a great hurry, and proceeded to embrace her young guest, tenderly, though with a little timorousness. The young lady submitted to the caress with much composure.

"Did I upset you?" she inquired, calmly.

The fact was that she could not see why the simple advent of a relative from Nevada should seem to have the effect of an earthquake, and result in tremor, confusion and tears. It was true she herself had shed a tear or so, but then her troubles had been accumulating for several days; and she had not felt confused yet.

When Miss Belinda went down-stairs to superintend Mary Anne in the tea-making, and left her guest alone, that young person glanced about her with a rather dubious expression.

"It is a queer, nice little place," she said. "But I don't wonder that pa emigrated, if they always get into such a flurry about little things. I might have been a ghost."

Then she proceeded to unlock the big trunk and attire herself.

Down-stairs Miss Belinda was wavering between the kitchen and the parlor, in a kindly flutter.

"Toast some muffins, Mary Anne, and bring in the cold roast fowl," she said. "And I will put out some strawberry jam, and some of the preserved ginger. Dear me! Just to think how fond of preserved ginger poor Martin was, and how little of it he was allow to eat! There really seems a special Providence in my having such a nice stock of it in the house when his daughter comes home."

In the course of half an hour everything was in readiness, and then Mary Anne, who had been sent upstairs to announce the fact, came down in a most remarkable state of delighted agitation, suppressed ecstacy and amazement exclaiming aloud in every feature.

"She's dressed, mum," she announced, "an' 'll be down immediate," and retired to a shadowy corner of the kitchen passage, that she might lay in wait unobserved.

Miss Belinda sitting behind the tea-service, heard a soft, flowing, silken rustle sweeping down the stair-case and across the hall, and then her neice entered.

"Don't you think I have dressed pretty quick?" she said, and swept across the little parlor and sat down in her place, with the calmest and most unconscious air in the world.

There was in Slowbridge but one dress-making establishment. The head of the establishment—Miss Letitia Chickie, designed the costumes of every woman in Slowbridge, from Lady Theobald down. There was legends that she received her patterns from London, and modified them to suit the Slowbridge taste. Possibly this was true, but, in that case, her labors as modifier must have been severe indeed, since they were so far modified as to be altogether unrecognizable when they left Miss Chickie's establishment and were borne home in triumph to the houses of her patrons. The taste of Slowbridge was quiet—upon this Slowbridge prided itself especially—and, at the same time, tended toward economy. When gores came into fashion, Slowbridge clung firmly, and with some pride, to substantial breadths, which did not cut good silk into useless strips which could not be utilized in after time, and it was only when, after a visit to London, Lady Theobald walked into St. James' one Sunday, with two gores on each side, that Miss Chickie regretfully put scissors into her first breadth. Each matronly member of good society possessed a substantial silk gown of some sober colour, which gown, having done duty at two years' tea-parties, descended to the grade of "second-best," and so descended, year by year, until it disappeared into the dim distance of the past. The young ladies had their white muslins and natural flowers, which latter decorations invariably collasped in the course of the evening, and were worn during the latter half of any festive occasion in a flabby and hopeless condition. Miss Chickie made the muslins, festooning and adorning them after designs emanating from her fertile imagination. If they were a little short in the body and not very generously proportioned in the matter of train, there was no rival establishment to sneer, and Miss Chickie had it all her own way; and, at least, it could never be said that Slowbridge was vulgar or overdressed.

Judge, then, of Miss Belinda Bassett's condition of mind when her fair relative took her seat before her.

What the material of her neice's dress was, Miss Belinda could not have told. It was a silken and soft fabric of a pale blue colour; it clung to the slender, lissome young figure like a glove; a fan-like train of great length almost covered the hearth-rug; there were plaitings and frillings all over it, and yards of delicate satin ribbon cut into loops in the most recklessly extravagant manner.

Miss Belinda saw all this at the first glance, as Mary Anne had seen it, and, like Mary Anne lost her breath; but on her second glance, she saw something more. On the pretty, slight hands were three wonderful, sparkling rings, composed of diamonds set in clusters; there were great solitaires in the neat little ears, and the thickly plaited lace at the throat was fastened by a diamond clasp.

"My dear," said Miss Belinda, clutching helplessly at the tea-pot, "are you—surely it is a—a little dangerous to wear such—such priceless ornaments on ordinary occasions."

Octavia stared at her for a moment, uncomprehendingly.

"Your jewels, I mean, my love," fluttered Miss Belinda. "Surely you don't wear them often. I declare it quite frightens me to think of having such things in the house."

"Does it?" said Octavia. "That's queer."

And she looked puzzled for a moment again.

Then she glanced down at her rings.

"I nearly always wear these," she remarked. "Father gave them to me. He gave me one each birthday for three years. He says diamonds are an investment, any way, and I might as well have them. These," touching the ear-rings and clasp, "were given to my mother when she was on the stage. A lot of people clubbed together and bought them for her. She was a great favourite."

Miss Belinda made another clutch at the handle of the tea-pot.

"Your mother!" she exclaimed, faintly. "On the—did you say on the——"

"Stage," answered Octavia. "San Francisco. Father married her there. She was awfully pretty. I don't remember her. She died when I was born. She was only nineteen."

The utter calmness and freedom from embarrassment with which these announcements were made almost shook Miss Belinda's faith in her own indentity. Strange to say, until this moment she had scarcely given a thought to her brother's wife, and to find herself sitting in her own genteel little parlor, behind her own tea-service, with her hand upon her own tea-pot, hearing that this wife had been a young person who had been "a great favourite" upon the stage, in a region peopled, as she had been led to suppose, by gold-diggers and escaped convicts, was almost too much for her to support herself under. But she did support herself bravely, when she had time to rally.

"Help yourself to some fowl, my dear," she said, hospitably, even though very faintly indeed, "and take a muffin."

Octavia did so, her over-splendid hands flashing in the light, as she moved them.

"American girls always have more things than English girls," she observed, with admirable coolness. "They dress more. I have been told so by girls who have been in Europe. And I have more things than most American girls. Father had more money than most people; that was one reason, and he spoiled me, I suppose. He had no one else to give things to, and he said I should have everything I took a fancy to. He often laughed at me for buying things, but he never said I shouldn't buy them."

"He was always generous," sighed Miss Belinda. "Poor, dear Martin!"

Octavia scarcely entered into the spirit of this mournful sympathy. She was fond of her father, but her recollections of him were not pathetic or sentimental.

"He took me with him wherever he went," she proceeded. "And we had a teacher from the States, who travelled with us sometimes. He never sent me away from him. I wouldn't have gone if he had wanted to send me—and he didn't want to," she added, with a satisfied little laugh.

(To be Continued).

Col. Rhodes, Commissioner of Agriculture in Mr. Mercier's Cabinet, was insulted at the Sherbrooke Fair yesterday, which he attended to open in his official capacity.

The town of Szegedin, Hungary, is again threatened with inundation. It is reported that the protective quays built after the town was destroyed in 1879 are crumbling away.

A HARD LIFE OF IT.

A Montreal Breadmaker's Week as it is Now and as it Might Be.

"Home? Why, the baker doesn't know what home is," said a night baker yesterday to a Witness reporter. "He don't know what home is. How should he? Why, look here, this is a kind of plan of the night baker's week: Sunday, Monday, Tuesday, Wednesday, Thursday and Friday nights he works twelve hours. Then on Saturday morning he goes home. He's got to sleep eight hours, at least, and more because he doesn't get to sleep right away I can tell you. Well, then he gets up about 3 or 4 and he isn't all rested yet. Then, maybe, he takes his wife out for a walk, and, after supper, perhaps, he gets a little time to read the Saturday Witness and some book. But he never feels fresh. He's always tired out with his unnatural night work. Sunday morning, of course, he sleeps late, as he must get rest for Sunday night's work, and having slept on Saturday morning and afternoon he can't sleep soundly all Saturday night—it stands to reason. Well, he may get up Sunday noon, unrefreshed from his series of naps, and this afternoon is the only time to speak of he has with his people. Then, after his tea at half-past 4 or so, he feels happiest of any time in the week. This doesn't last for long, because he must go to the shop at 6 or 7 o'clock. The night baker's life is one long fight for sleep. He gets home say at half-past 6 or 7, goes to bed in the family bedroom that his people have just got through with, tosses about in perspiration for perhaps an hour, and then sleeps—after a fashion. What with the flies, the close atmosphere, the noise of the children and the sewing machine, not to speak of the street noises, outraged nature is still more outraged. She gets her pay, though, in undermining the health. It is, as I said, a fight for sleep, and the time for culture and pleasure in life is comparatively nil. Look at the average working man—he sleeps and works naturally; he knows what it is to get a good sleep."

Take Our Advice and

Wear a small neat pin in your knotted scarf; wear a larger one with a puff.

Wear a low-crowned hat with a sack coat.

Wear pearl-gray gloves with black or white stitching on the backs for full dress.

Wear half-hose supporters with low-cut shoes.

Wear only the best qualities in black hosiery.

Wear light colored flannel shirts at the seaside and dark colored ones in the mountains.

Wear your trousers easy at the hips, and pull them up a little about the knees whenever you sit down.—Men's Outfitter.

Italians as Barbers.

The rapid growth of Italian barber shops in New York city is alarming the old-time barbers. The Italian five cent shops are now to be found not only in "Little Italy" and the other quarters in which swarms of Italians have taken up their abode, but also in other localities up town, down town and on both sides of the city. For many years a great part of the trade has been in the hands of German philosophers, who now find it hard to compete with the Italians even when they charge a dime for using the lather, brush and razor.

On Advertising.

"Advertising is to a genuine article what manure is to land—it largely increases the product. Thousands of persons may be reading your advertisement while you are eating or sleeping or attending to your business; hence, public attention is attracted, new customers come to you, and if you render them satisfactory equivalent for their money they continue to patronize you and recommend you to their friends."—P. T. Barnum.

"It is a fact that many of the best proprietary medicines of the day," said the late Dr. J. G. Holland in "Scribner's Magazine," "are more successful than many physicians, and most of them were first discovered or used in actual medical practice. When, however, any shrewd person, knowing their virtue and foreseeing their popularity, secures and advertises them, in the opinion of the bigoted, all virtue went out of them." Failure of eyesight, fickle appetite, headache, extreme wakefulness, frequent desire to urinate, especially at night, gradual failure of strength and dropsical swelling—these are symptoms of kidney disease. If you neglect the symptoms you will eventually have Bright's Disease. Warner's Safe Cure is the only specific which has ever been discovered for this disease. The late Dr. Dio Lewis, over his own signature said: "If I found myself the victim of a serious kidney trouble I would use Warner's Safe Cure."

The Man of It.

Wife—John, don't you want some of these plums for lunch? They're some I put up.

Husband—No, I don't like plums with the pits in.

Wife—But, John, these plums have no pits.

Husband—Oh, that's so; they haven't. I knew there was something about them I didn't like.

Bad For His Business.

First Stranger (at the theatre)—That was a short wait between those acts, wasn't it?

Second Stranger—Yes; too short.

First Stranger—Don't you like short waits?

Second Stranger—No; I keep the saloon under the theatre.

But They Have Talent.

Theatrical Manager—You surely don't expect to succeed on the stage solely on account of your beauty?

English Society Woman—Yes, but I do. I know of scores of actresses who succeed and they aren't one bit good looking.

According to a French physiologist the wing of the ordinary housefly makes 330 strokes in one second; the wing of the bumble bee, 240; the wing of the honey bee, 190; the wing of the wasp, 110; the wing of the dragon fly, 28; the wing of the sparrow, 13; the wing of the wild duck, 9; the wing of the house pigeon, 8; the wing of the osprey, 6.

THE DELIGHTS OF BATHING.

Some Practical Advice for Those Summering at the Seashore.

It is from the pen of a well-known writer that the following valuable advice comes from Harpers Bazar:

River bathing and sea bathing are the forms in which cold bathing is most frequently practiced, at least by those who do not dwell in cities; but the temperature both of sea and river, during the summer and autumn months, are as often those of the temperature bath in its lower ranges (68 to 75 degrees Fahrenheit) as of the cold bath. The sensation of chill on entering, often distressing even at the higher temperature just mentioned, is soon succeeded by a warm glow; the water that felt so cold on entering it seems much warmer, and the reaction of the blood to the surface, especially if the bather take active exercise by swimming or diving, produces such a feeling of comfort that the temptation is often to overdo the bath and to risk its tonic effect by remaining in the water too long. It is far better to enter a cold bath when you are well warmed than to cool off according to the dull routine prescription of the books. To cool off before you enter the water is simply to reduce your power of resisting the cold. For a cold swimming bath such as I have defined it fifteen minutes in stream or sea will generally be enough, though persons of strong constitution may remain in twice as long, or more than twice. Practiced swimmers or bathers are a rule for themselves in such matters. A cold bath indoors should not generally last over five or ten minutes, because the active exercise of swimming is wanting. The bath should be followed immediately by strong frictions with coarse towels, and a prompt resumption of one's clothing. The best time of the day for a cold bath is about three hours after either the morning or mid-day meal. The aged, delicate and the very young should not use cold baths, nor should those affected with heart disease, nor the anæmic, except with great care and moderation. They are essentially a tonic for strong and a stimulant curative for sluggish temperaments.

A Transformation Scene.

A recent visitor to the top of Pike's Peak found the signal service officer melting snow for his water supply, the only one he gets. The officer said: "Sometimes I stand at the window with my telescope. The wind without is keen and cutting as a knife. I can see the houses of Colorado Springs, twenty miles away, the visitors sitting in their shirt sleeves, sipping iced drinks to keep cool, and ladies walking about in white summer robes. I lower the glass; the summer scene is gone. Green trees, animal life, men and women fade away like creatures in a dream, and I am the only living thing in a world of eternal ice, and snow, and silence."

Vice and Liberty.

"Our vices are digging the grave of our liberties" is a sentence which has passed into a proverb. Vice clamors for license; but the "good alone are free." That which is vicious will never go free without making attack upon the very foundations of our freedom. We may never fail to make distinction between tolerating an error and tolerating a vice. Man has rights of belief with which the community has no concern, but his actions are public property. Actions that tend to individual or social degeneracy are criminal, and crime may neither be ignored nor sanctioned, for vice so permitted becomes powerful, and finally omnipotent over the rights and liberties of the people.—Canada Citizen.

The Better Half.

There is no justice in hanging women, for no woman has ever had a fair trial in Canada, in England or in the United States, because women are not tried by a jury of their own sex, but by a jury of men. It is an outrage and a crime and ought not to be committed against a woman any more than a man. A man has to be tried by his peers. Men are not the peers of women.—Ex.

In the Early Dawn.

Proprietor of Museum—I am glad to see that you are looking out for my interests so well. That last freak—the girl who hasn't slept for fourteen years—is a dandy ——

Manager—Sh-h! Not so loud. She has just gone into the next room, and she told me not to wake her until half an hour before show time.

Not Disturbed.

Railway Official—M'sieu, your valet has has been run over and cut into a dozen pieces!

Languid Englishman—Haw Be good enough, please, to bring me the piece that—haw—contains the key of my hat-box—haw!

About the Size of It.

Small Boy——Papa, why do the newspapers make such fun of John Wanamaker?

Papa (a great statesman)—Oh, its because he's such a queer Dick—always goes to church regularly, and never gets tight or has any fun.—New York Weekly.

A New Species.

Tramp—Please, mum, won't you let me have——

Housekeeper—You git out, or I'll call the dog.

"Have a piece of soap?"

"Sakes alive! Come in and stay to dinner."

The Swiss Federal Council states that it has learned with great dissatisfaction that an illegal arrest of five American citizens had been made by the police at Berne. It added that measures have been taken to prevent the recurrence of such cases.

Governor Lowry, of Mississippi, has issued warrants for the arrest of Muldoon, Wakely and several other individuals who were prominently connected with the Sullivan-Kilrain fight. Governor Lowry's intended victims will sternly resist extradition.

Mr. Wm. O'Brien, who was removed yesterday to Galway jail, is seriously ill. He requested the attendance of his own physician, which was refused, and the prison doctor was given charge of his case. The prison officials have telegraphed to the prison board that his condition is critical.

TELEGRAPHIC SUMMARY.

Prince Bismarck is suffering from inflammation of the veins.

The Bow Park cattle at the Buffalo Exhibition were very successful.

Mr. Gladstone thinks the Irish Catholic University will die before it is born.

The Third party tendered a reception to Rev. Dr. Sutherland last night at Toronto.

It is reported that the bank of the Murray Canal is in danger of caving in some places.

Mr. Justice Sicotte, who had been ill for some months, died yesterday at St. Hyacinthe.

Brant, Oxford and Waterloo millers met in Galt yesterday and talked over their grievances.

East Elgin Liberals will choose a standard-bearer for the Local House at Aylmer on the 15th October.

Right Hon. Henry Chaplin has been appointed Secretary for Agriculture with a seat in the Cabinet.

Selby Grundy Allen, bookkeeper, Toronto, was arrested yesterday for stealing $1,600 from his employers.

Mrs. Maybrick has been removed from the infirmary in the Woking prison, and now occupies a solitary cell.

Mr. Robert Fleck has been chosen by the Conservatives of West Lambton as their candidate for the Legislature.

Five thousand steelworkers in Wales threaten to strike. They demand an advance of 10 per cent. in wages.

A resolution to establish a teacher's superannuation fund was carried at a meeting of the Toronto School Trustees last night.

Desertions are numerous from the British war ships since they came up the St. Lawrence; 22 were from the Bellerophon at Quebec.

Jean Rouillard, a pilgrim on his way to St. Anne from Maine, was choked to death with a piece of meat while eating his dinner at Levis yesterday.

Theodore Veuilleux, an Ottawa cab-driver, has been jailed charged with committing an indecent assault on Delina Quirons, a 17-year-old girl.

Marshall Norris went up on the elevato at Swift's wharf, Kingston, yesterday, and fell off. His leg was broken and other internal injuries were received.

Pere Hyacinthe, the celebrated French divine and orator, is said to be almost in absolute want, and an appeal is being made for his support.

The schooner Lewis Ross, of Port Hope, stone laden for Toronto, was driven ashore in a gale yesterday at Rondeau harbor and is a total wreck. Crew saved.

After the 13,000 mayors had departed from President Carnot's banquet in Paris, 18,000 empty champagne bottles were counted. Other liquors were also consumed.

A census of hotels and registered lodging houses in Paris for a given night last week revealed the fact that 59,000 foreigners and 174,000 provincials slept in those places.

The French Government has sent a circular to the bishops throughout the country warning them that all ecclesiastics taking part in the elections will be vigorously proceeded against.

The regents have warned ex-Queen Natalie not to attempt to carry out her scheme of establishing a residence in Bulgaria as a private person.

Lieut. Laurie, of the Royal Military College, Kingston, with the British troops in Egypt, is down with the smallpox at Assouan, but is recovering.

One hundred and forty-four designs for a national memorial to Emperor William have already been submitted. The Jury of Award will meet Sept. 30th.

Shocks of earthquake were felt yesterday throughout Western France. The oscillations were specially strong at Angers and Nantes. No damage was done.

It is complained that the band of "A" Battery, Kingston, in uniform were refused the Orangemen on the 12th of July by the Government, but they were allowed to walk in the I. C. B. U. parade the other day.

A convict named Adams, undergoing a ten years' sentence for burglary, escaped from St. Vincent de Paul Penitentiary last night. He is an old jail-bird. No traces of his whereabouts have yet been discovered.

Mr. Badenoch, D.G.C. of the Orangemen of England, has issued a manifesto inviting Orangemen throughout the kingdom to unite in opposing Mr. Balfour's scheme for establishing a Catholic university in Ireland.

The Railway Committee of the Privy Council will give no decision on the Toronto Esplanade question until after the Government Engineer has consulted with the engineers of the interested railways and the city of Toronto.

A young Torontonian named George J. Foote was yesterday sentenced to four months in the Central Prison on pleading guilty to feloniously wounding his mother, Catharine Stewart, and James Montgomery, a man who was living with her at 18 Duchess street.

Last Sunday as Mr. James Henderson and family, of Nassagaweya, were on their way home from church their horse ran away, upsetting all the occupants of the rig. None were fatally injured, but all were more or less severely bruised.

Henry Canning, charged with assaulting John Howe at the G.T.R. depot on Sunday night, July 11th, by throwing, it is alleged, carbolic acid on him, was arrested in Kingston Wednesday night by Officer Hayes. At the Police Court yesterday the Magistrate adjourned the case until to-morrow.

An explosion occurred to-day in the ironstone pit of the Maurice Wood colliery, Midlothian, Scotland, which threatens disastrous consequences. Sixty miners are entombed. Four bodies have been recovered. It is believed the sixty miners still in the pit are dead.

The residence of Mrs. Lewis, South Westminster, has been burglarized four times within the past month. Two buggy robes, a quantity of clothing, a silk umbrella and a woollen shawl have been taken at different times, and last night a spare bed was stripped. The thief lost a pillow at the gate as he was getting off with his booty.

Miss Jennie Chamberlain, second daughter of Mrs. Chamberlain of Cleveland, Ohio, was married to-day in St. George's Church, Hanover Square, to Capt. Herbert Naylor Leyland. The bride wore white satin, with silver and pearl ornaments. Her sister, Josephine, was bridesmaid. The presents were numerous, and included a brooch in the shape of a horseshoe studded with diamonds and pearls to the bride and a diamond and ruby pin to the groom from the Prince of Wales.

The Teutonic, City of New York and City of Rome, which sailed from Liverpool yesterday for New York, carried nearly four thousand passengers, the largest number ever carried by three steamers sailing on the same day. The Teutonic carried 1,300; the City of Rome, 1,152; the City of New York, 1,114. The rush is not over yet.

A. F. Wood, M.P.P., states that there will be over 200 witnesses examined in the Welland Canal investigation. Books covering eight years' administration will be gone into. Mr. Wood draws $5 a day for his services besides assistants, etc.

The young woman who suicided at Niagara Falls yesterday morning is believed to be Anna Mead, of Binghamton, N. Y. Miss Mead left home, at 32 South Water street, Wednesday morning at 9 o'clock, ostensibly to take a walk. That was the last time she was seen by her parents. The description of the suicide tallies with the missing girl.

Prof. Ruskin is ill.

The Prince of Monaco is dying.

Midland Central Fair is proving successful.

President Harrison and Mr. Wanamaker are in Philadelphia.

The Dervishes have won an engagement with "friendly" natives.

Turkish troops are advancing in Crete without meeting resistance.

Several desertions from "D" School of Infantry, London, are reported.

Fifteen mills is the rate of taxation this year for St. Thomas.

Gold has been discovered seven miles from Halifax, N.S.

The Labor Congress at Dundee rejected the eight-hour day principle.

Archbishop Cleary, addressing the I.C.B.U., denounced the Masonic Order.

Serious drought about London, Ont., was broken by yesterday's storm.

Typhoid fever is very prevalent in South Dorchester, in the vicinity of Belmont.

Mr. Firth, M. P. for Dundee (Gladstonian), is dead.

Graham says he can prove that he went over Niagara Falls in his barrel. He is on exhibition in Buffalo.

The Legislative Assembly of New South Wales has approved the continuance for one year of the San Francisco mail contract.

The United Cotton Spinners' Society, of Manchester, Eng., has resolved to work on half-time for a month, commencing the 9th instant.

The Paris Temps says that the French Government will ignore the demand of Gen. Boulanger to be tried by court-martial.

The police yesterday fired upon a crowd of London dock strikers who were obstructing the work of loading steamers, fatally wounding one man.

Mr Charles McKerlie, of Westminster who shot himself three weeks ago by the accidental discharge of a revolver and who was reported dead, is in a fair way for recovery. The ball passed through the right lung and is lodged near the spine.

A Galt despatch says public interest in the strike is beginning to subside. This week Goldie & McCulloch took on another non-union moulder, and McGregor, Gourlay & Co. three. All the shops have now very nearly their complement of men, and are working full time.

A movement is now on foot to construct a branch line of the M. C. R. to leave the main line about Kingsmill, two and a half miles west of Aylmer. It is to run through the towns of Aylmer and Vienna and terminate at Port Burwell, making the latter a water resort in summer.

The Countess of Selkirk was to have left Newport at the end of August, to remain a week in Burlington, Vt., whence she would arrive in Montreal about the 8th inst., and leave there for Winnipeg about the 14th or 16th inst. In a letter to the Lieutenant-Governor she intimates her deep interest in and a desire to meet the descendants of the early settlers whom her father-in-law, Thomas, Earl of Selkirk, established in Manitoba.

The Nihilists recently arrested at Kief and Kharkoff are all Poles.

The Odd-fellows made a very successful parade in Montreal yesterday.

It is stated that King Leopold of Belgium contemplates a trip to the Congo.

A Brockville man deserted his wife and then came back and kidnapped his child.

Sandwich, Mass., yesterday celebrated the 250th anniversary of its incorporation.

Mr. Gladstone, who arrived in Paris last evening, was presented with bouquets by a number of friends.

Port Hope's Industrial Exhibtition opened yesterday, but it will be formally declared open to-morrow.

T. B. Musgrave, a prominent New York stock operator on the bear side, has failed, with liabilities of $100,000.

The municipality of Elton, immediately north of Brandon, Man., has paid for 140,000 gopher tails this summer.

The twenty-first annual convention of the Irish Catholic Benevolent Union of America will be opened to-day at Kingston.

Lord Zetland will be sworn in as Lord-Lieutenant of Ireland on October 1st, and will make his State entry into Dublin on December 3rd.

The editor of the Cocarde, Boulangist organ, has been fined and imprisoned for purloining Court documents.

Yesterday afternoon Mrs. Laylor, the second cook in Braun's restaurant, Toronto, was sitting in the back window of the second story getting a breath of cool air. For some unaccountable reason she lost her balance and fell heavily to the street, a distance of about twelve feet. She struck her head on the sidewalk and sustained a severe scalp wound. When picked up she was unconscious, but she recovered in a short time, and was removed to the hospital in the ambulance. Her wound is not considered dangerous.

An unfortunate Ottawa lad named Trepanier had his leg taken off at Hull station yesterday by a Canadian Pacific Railway train. He was playing with some companions on the tracks when a freight train knocked him down.

The G.T.R. express ran from Brockville to Kingston yesterday morning in 80 minutes. The distance is 60 miles.

An inspired article in the Vienna Vaterland announces that Empress Augusta Victoria of Germany has joined the Catholic Church.

Henry Parry, Toronto, was arrested last evening charged with being implicated in the misdemeanor of performing an abortion on the body of Mrs. Elliott, now supposed to be dying at the Hospital there.

The trial of Robert Murray, formerly of London, charged with killing John Young, at Port Huron, which was to have taken place on the 8th inst., at Lapeer, Mich., is postponed, the chief witness being ill.

Judge Wilkinson, revising officer for Kingston, has completed the inspection of the Dominion voters' lists. Between 2,000 and 3,000 names were added. The court at which other names may be added will not be convened before November.

It is reported that Mr. William McGirr, private secretary to Mr. Dewdney, is to be made chief Indian agent for British Columbia. This position is worth about $3,000 a year, and was until recently filled by Mr. Powell, brother of the Adjutant-General of Militia.

Geo. W. Dean, Toronto, who abducted a 15-year-old girl and ran off with her as far as Newmarket, was yesterday arrested there on a charge of seduction. He was brought back last night along with the girl, who returned to the home of her parents. Dean spent the night in the cells.

There are heavy floods at Tetecal, State of Morelos, Mexico. A large portion has been washed away and several lives have been lost. There is danger of a greater rise. Tampeca is also flooded, and the people have been driven from their homes. They are in a starving condition and appeal for help.

As Phileas Plouffee, a stonecutter, of Bord a Plouffe, near Montreal, was driving home from church with his wife last Sunday, his horse ran away and a spark fell out of Plouffe's pipe, setting fire to his wife's dress. Before he could stop his horse his wife was so badly burned on her legs and body that her recovery is despaired of.

Dr. Peters has been recalled from East Africa. The expedition for the relief of Emin Bey has been abandoned.

Mr. Gladstone has ascended the Eiffel tower.

Three people dropped dead at Quebec on Saturday.

Lord Hartington does not favor a fusion of Unionists and Conservatives.

Last week closed without a single juror being selected in the Cronin trial.

William Davidson, a prominent resident of Ridgetown, dropped dead on Saturday.

Heavy storms are reported throughout Switzerland and much damage has resulted.

A Zanzibar despatch says the Germans have blockaded Suadani, and fighting is expected.

The German sailors who were wrecked at Samoa last March are back at the Fatherland.

Inventor Thomas A. Edison is attempting to bring Canada under the patent convention of 1883.

Williamsburg, N.Y., had a $2,000,000 fire on Saturday. A number of men were killed and many injured.

In the investigation into the books of Essex County Treasurer Wright nothing wrong has yet been discovered.

The effort of the French Government to restore harmony by concesions to General Boulanger may result disastrously to it.

Fifty persons were seriously poisoned by eating cheese at the village of Bettaville, Ohio, on Friday, and it is feared some may die.

The rumors that ex-Empress Augusta has joined the Roman Catholic Church or contemplates doing so are pronounced baseless.

Emperor William was serenaded at Dresden yesterday by 12,000 citizens. The enthusiasm manifested by the people was remarkable.

Ontario and London.

The population of Ontario, according to the census of 1881, was 1,923,228. The population of London, England, in 1881, is thus stated in Whitaker's Almanac: Within the Registrar-General's Tables of Mortality, 3,816,483; within the limits of Metropolis Local Management Act, 3,834,354; London School Board District, 3,834,354; City of London within the Municipal and Parliamentary Limits, 50,632; Central Criminal Court District, 4,457,102; Metropolitan Parliamentary Boroughs (exclusive of the City of London), 3,403,973; Metropolitan Parliamentary Boroughs (including the City of London), 3,454,625; Metropolitan Police District (not including the City of London), 4,716,009; Metropolitan and City Police Districts, 4,766,661.

FORGOT THE IMPORTANT PART.

He asked fair Maud to marry;
By letter she replied.
He read it; she refused him;
He shot himself and died.

He might have been alive now
And she his happy bride,
If he had read the postcript
Upon the other side.

GEN BOULANGER, like a great many other men, is superstitious. He is careful not to get out of bed on the left side, and if his path is crossed by a black cat he does nothing of political importance for twenty-four hours. His followers recall that on the day of his sentence he recklessly went under a ladder in front of his house in Portland place. It is rumored that he is a firm believer in palmistry and takes stock in the words of a gypsy who examined his hand and told him that his chief ambition would one day be satisfied.

CURRENT TOPICS.

JOHN L. SULLIVAN is out in Boston as a Democratic candidate for nomination to Congress for the next election. In a published letter he says:

As to my fitness for the place I can prove that in few words: A man is elected to Congress to look out for the interests of those who sent him there; that will be my motto, and living up to it will be my business. I know what is wanted by my friends and the citizens of Boston generally and I'll try to get it. In my travels about this country and Europe I have had as much experience in public speaking as most people. I'll have no trouble about getting a hearing in Congress or in making people pay attention to what I say.

As actions speak louder than words most people will agree that John will be able to command attention if he lays himself out for that kind of thing.

IVAN STEPANOFF, of Tobolsk, Siberia, is making an extensive tour of this country. He was at one time Governor of one of the Siberian provinces. After resigning this position he made a large fortune in business. He is about 5 feet 9 inches in height and weighs 150 pounds. He tells many startling tales of life in Siberian prisons, and has a nervous way of looking over his shoulder, as though afraid of an attack from a desperate convict. He will visit Canada and the extreme west. He says he is astonished at the advance of civilization in this country.

ONE can hardly conceive the magnitude of the amount of money spent by the United States in the form of pensions to her old soldiers who "fit" in the war. It is stated that there are on the pension rolls very nearly half a million names. The amount spent for all purposes last year by the Pension Bureau was in round numbers $82,000,000, and the total expenditures of the Government for the same time were $267,000,000. This shows that the amount spent on pensions was over 30 per cent. of the entire expenditure. $1,000,000,000 has been appropriated one way or another for the support of the pensioners since 1861.

DR. BRIAND, the young medico who, with Dr. Vallon, has made the Villejuif Hospital famous for its cures, has discovered or invented a new cure for consumption. We have had the cold water cure, and now we are going to have the cold fresh air cure! Slowly accustoming the patient to the action of air, Dr. Briand first opens the window, then moves the bed on which the "subject" is lying every day a little nearer to it. The last stage of the cure consists in sleeping in the open air, regardless of wind, rain, or snow. It is said that the four patients who submitted to the kill-or-cure treatment last winter have gone home to their families rejoicing, every consumptive symptom having disappeared. This way of curing consumption is not absolutely new, having been tried some years ago at Falkestein. The treatment is composed of 80 centigr. of creosote, 8 of iodoform, 30 of glycerine, air, rain and snow ad libitum.—Pall Mall Gazette.

A POINT GAINED.

The London Strikers Come to Terms with the Warfingers.

A early morning cable from London says: "The first nail has been driven into the coffin of the dock companies by the decision of the Striking Committee given at 2 o'clock this morning. The wharf-owners have expressed a willingness to grant every item in the laborers' demands, provided they return to work at once. These terms were considered for six hours by the leaders of the men, who agreed to accept and allow the men employed by the warfingers to return to work to-day. This will enable the latter to unload and load their cargoes alongside their own wharves and in the river, and pursue their business as heretofore. Naturally the shippers will send their goods to the wharves, where immediate handling is assured, in preference to the docks, where the strike will be continued. The inevitable effect of this policy will be that the dock companies, finding the business of their competitors on the river front going on as usual, will be forced to submit to the demands of the men or drive their customers to those who are able to deal with their goods. The complete victory of the laborers is therefore probable."

A London cable says: Lord Randolph Churchill, speaking at Newton, said that the strike was the natural outcome of the excesses into which employers had fallen in the effort to extract an undue amount of labor and an inadequate rate of wages.

Cardinal Manning, the Lord Mayor, the Bishop of London and Sir John Lubbock are conferring with the officials of the dock companies and merchants. The Steam Navigation Company has conceded the strikers' terms. An increased number of wharf laborers are at work to-day. The shipwrights in the employ of the Williamsons, at Workington, in Cumberland, have struck for an advance of four shillings a week.

A London cable of Thursday night says: The dock companies have again called upon the police to protect the men at work. The ship-owners made another appeal for permission to unload ships themselves, but met with a refusal. It is estimated 2,000 men are now at work on the wharves. An attempt which was made to organize a general strike of builders, engineers and other mechanics in South London has collapsed. Mr. Donald Currie has announced his intention to ask Parliament to deal with the privileges of dock proprietors and ship-owners and settle disputed rights regarding the unloading of vessels.

The overtures made for a resumption of work in the Milwall and Commercial docks proved fruitless.

The Bishop of London conferred with Burns yesterday on the subject of mediation.

A tidal wave struck Rockaway Beach, L.I., yesterday, drenching several thousand persons.

The United States Treasury Department has decided that paintings by Reynolds and Gainsborough cannot be admitted free under the head of old masters.

It is announced Mr. Harford Ashley, Clerk of the Division Court, Belleville, and ex-Warden, will apply for a divorce from his wife on the ground of adult y.

An Order-in-Council has appointed a board to fix the grain standards for west of Port Arthur in place of the Toronto standards which have hitherto been used.

THE GREAT NORTHWEST.

Several Portage la Prairie farmers are shipping their wheat over the Northern Pacific & Manitoba to Duluth, on the advice of an agent sent out by that company. There were 58 teams hauling grain to the Northern Pacific cars yesterday.

The Northern Pacific Road will enter Brandon from the south instead of the east, as originally intended.

Part of the Canadian Pacific Railway's exhibit went last night on a tea train and will reach Toronto by Saturday.

A big sale of farm lands has just been made by Mr. George Broughall. He has disposed of 14,000 acres to an Ontario syndicate for $40,000.

Dr. Thornton, of Deloraine, who has been in ill-health, died at Banff this week.

Mr. G. W. Bourne, of Portage la Prairie, lost three children this week from whooping cough.

Mr. Thomas Anderson, factor for the Hudson Bay Company in the far off Peace River country, has arrived from the north. He says the summer has been very dry in the Peace River district and against the growth of the crops. There has also been frost, injuring crops everywhere but at Dunvegan. The woods are being destroyed along the south side of the Peace by the fires, which have never ceased all summer. The fires have driven out the game and destroyed the berries, which are an important source of food supply to the Indians, both in summer and winter, from the burnt district, so there is likely to be more hunger than ever this coming winter. Unless rain falls area will be still more destructive before the winter sets in. The Beaver Indians, the natives of the country, are dying out very fast, but the Crees, who are coming in from the Lesser Slave Lake and Edmonton, are increasing.

It is thought Lord Stanley, on his western trip, will go as far as Alaska.

Mr. Gordon Brown is out over the line projected by the Winnipeg & Southwestern, examining the country in anticipation of the arrival of Duluth capitalists who are to finance the scheme.

The actual work of construction will be commenced on the Port Arthur, Duluth & Western Railway on Saturday. The contract for the first twelve miles has been sub-let by the contractor.

The building used as the Northwest Mounted Police stable at Edmonton was destroyed by fire last night and fourteen horses were burned to death. Loss, $4,000.

Sir William P. Howland is here.

The hum of the thresher is now heard all over the country and farmers are seen busily engaged ploughing the ground for next season's crop. Neither moth nor rust has done damage to the wheat and it will all grade No. 1 hard. New wheat is being brought to market, but not yet in any great quantity. Several cars have already been shipped east. Grain merchants have completed arrangements for handling their crops, and in a week or two the grain business for the season will have fairly commenced. At the present time there are twenty elevators in course of construction in Manitoba alone, several of capacity of from forty to sixty thousand bushels. There is a general feeling of satisfaction and confidence among farmers and business men all over the country.

Mrs. John Mason, of this city, who left here yesterday for Omemee, Ont., died on the train this morning east of Rat Portage. She had been an invalid for some time.

The regatta of the Rowing Club, which was to have been held on the 14th inst., has been postponed until the date of Lord Stanley's visit, which is expected to be about the 20th inst.

Arrangements are being made for the erection of a monument to mark the site of the battle of Sevenoaks, which took place between the employees of the North-west Trading Company and the Hudson's Bay Company.

An attempt at murder was made at the international boundary near Gretna last night. A German settler named Fischer shot another settler named Kane, with whom he had a disagreement, on the door step of the latter, and followed it up with an assault with an axe. Fischer was arrested. Kane is living, but in a precarious condition. An ante-mortem statement has been taken.

STYLE OF CLERGYMEN'S DRESS.

The Dominie's Straight-Cut Coat Passing Into Oblivion.

The question as to whether clergymen ought to wear a distinctive dress is an interesting one. It is being discussed among the preachers themselves. In Chicago there is among the divines a tendency to drop the conventional garb and adopt for ordinary wear the styles in vogue among men in general, and in Brooklyn, the City of Churches, the clergymen are by no means a unit on the subject of straight-cut coats, high-buttoned vests and several formal cravats.

Now, there is that far-famed preacher, Rev. T. DeWitt Talmage, for instance. He holds that out of the church clergymen should not wear "sacredotal vestments, because a minister who indicates by his dress in ordinary everyday life that he is one of the clergy loses the opportunity of seeing the world as it really is. People are put on their guard and say: 'Look out' Here comes a minister.'

Justice in India.

The district judge at Kalatura, Ceylon, had before him recently three persons, including a village headman, charged with causing "grievous hurt" to four others by requiring them to plunge their right hands into a cauldron of boiling oil. A woman in the village had had some plumbago and rice stolen from her; a headman made inquiry, and, failing to obtain a clue to the theft, announced that it would be necessary on the third day to hold an ordeal by boiling oil. This appears to be not an uncommon custom in remote parts of the country. Any exclamation of pain on the part of the suspected person is construed into an admission of guilt. The judge took the fact that it was a custom into account, but fined the prisoners 100 rupees each.

Henri Rochefort, the fiery French editor, is now in his 59th year. He has a small but exceedingly choice collection of valuable paintings, and is known as a lover of fine arts. He appears often in society and is always faultlessly dressed and agreeable.

GEO. MITCHELL,

BANKER,

FLESHERTON.

DRAFTS BOUGHT AND SOLD.

Special Attention paid to the collection Notes and Accounts, 2nd door North Richardson & Co's.

Vicinity Chips.

Characteristics of the Past Week Carefully Culled for the Curious.

The Dundalk Herald takes a holiday this week.

Any amount of honey for sale at this office.

Diamond Blood Purifier for sale at W. Richardson's.

Mr and Mrs. Anderson, of Oshawa, are visiting at Mr. E. Vanzant's.

Choicest fruit sold by C. Treadgold. Plums, apples, crab apples, etc.

If you want a first class watch at a low price, go to Russell's, Flesherton.

Take your clock and jewelry repairs to Russell if you want a perfect job.

If your watch needs reparing, take it to Russell, Flesherton. It will pay you.

Meals served by Mrs. Treadgold at all hours in town hall, on Tuesday, show fair day.

If your watch or clock needs repairing, be sure and take it to Russell's, Flesherton, for a perfect job.

If your watch or clock needs repairing be sure and take it to Russell's, Flesherton, for a perfect job.

Mr. Fall weather put in an appearance this week. He is cold and heartless as ever.

The Ladies' Aid of the Presbyterian Church intend holding a public entertainment on the evening of the second day of our fall show.

When visiting the Flesherton fair be sure and call at Russell's noted jewelry store and see their grand display of watches, clocks, jewelry, etc.

Mrs. Treadgold will give meals at all hours on Tuesday, show fair day, in town hall, Flesherton.

Osprey Agricultural society will hold their fall exhibition at Maxwell on Friday, Oct 4

Our thanks are tendered for a badge from S.G. Agricultural society and ticket from the Great Northern.

Rev. Mr. Buggin, of Markdale, will occupy the pulpit of the Flesherton Methodist Church on Sunday morning and evening next.

Farmers should read our special offer in these columns, and profit thereby. Such another chance to get two papers for the price of one will not be given again for many a day.

Mr. T. Carruthers, jr., of Kimberley, poked his hand into the mouth of a threshing machine, which closed its jaws on him just once. He is now feeding his finger with salve and rags.

Flesherton, during this week, would fairly represent Goldsmith's "Deserted Village." Everybody, with their brothers and sisters, have been visiting the big show in Toronto.

The congregation at church on Sunday evening was "small but select." Heavy rain at service hour kept a large number at home. There was something wrong with the choir in the morning, but we will not "give them away."

He sat in his door at noonday, lonely and glum and sad; the flies were buzzing about him, led by a "blue winged gad." Not a person darkened his portal; not a sign of business was there, but the flies kept on buzzing about the old man's hair. At last in misery he shouted: "Great Scott! I'm covered with flies," and the zephyr that toyed with his whiskers, whispered: "Why don't you advertise?" -Ex.

That thin-skinned individual who is strutting around in the editorial shoes of the Markdale Standard evolved a funny little item last week. He says there are no dotards on the editorial staff of that paper. Of course The Advance did not hope to make the said writer believe himself a dotard, but as he is the only pronounced individual of that description airing himself through the Markdale press, his decision as to whether he is a dotard or not will scarcely be accepted as final. His effusions have created considerable amusement at his own expense in this neighborhood. His owlish advice to The Advance to "preserve better temper" is the richest of all. Ha, ha! ho, ho!

A despatch from Owen Sound says: Miss Chambers, housekeeper for Mr. H. H. O'Reilly, while doing some housework on Saturday, fell from a chair against the end of a carpet-sweeper handle and received injuries which resulted in her death about two o'clock on Sunday afternoon. The deceased was born in the Isle of Jersey, and intended shortly to pay a visit to her native home, expecting to spend Christmas there. Mr. O'Reilly was absent in Stratford when the fatality occurred.

Boots.

Cheaper than ever for fall and winter. R. Trimble.

New Fall Goods.

Piles of new goods arriving daily for fall trade. R. Trimble.

Woollens.

Flannel blankets, rugs, fur caps, robes, etc., just received, and lower than ever. R. Trimble.

Millinery Opening.

Mrs. W. Trimble having just returned from the city with a beautiful stock of fall millinery, will be prepared to receive her many customers on Monday, Sept. 23. All the newest designs in hats, bonnets, etc.

Terrible Accident.

On Sunday last a son of Mr. Guy Orr, living about three miles south of Flesherton, received a kick from a horse which broke in his skull above the left temple, causing the brain to protrude. Dr. Carter was at once summoned and is now caring for the lad, who is quite sensible, but recovery is extremely doubtful

The Best Yet.

R. Trimble, Esq., walked into our den on Monday with something which, at first glance, appeared to be a toy balloon. Closer examination identified it as a huge plum, measuring seven inches in circumference by 6½ inches.

Not to be Removed.

Some time ago it was announced that Father Feeny would sever his connection with the Irish Lake charge and take up his residence in Hamilton. This order was lately countermanded, owing to other changes in the diocese, and Father Feeny will still remain where he has labored so satisfactorily in the past. This will be agreeable information to his many friends.

The Show.

Great preparations are being made for the fall exhibition to be held here next Monday. Entries are coming in at a lively rate, the secretary registering 30 from one individual on Monday. A new officers' headquarters is being erected, a dancing platform, etc. We are going to have a very successful show this year, with Old Probs' permission. Don't you forget to come and see it.

Concert.

The concert to be held on Tuesday evening next (second day of the fall show) is expected to be something exceptionally fine. Outside talent of more than ordinary excellence has been secured, including Mr. Dorrington of Meaford. Come to the exhibition prepared to stay and enjoy the evening concert under the auspices of the Presbyterian Ladies' Aid.

Hard Trials.

Two stout ladies of our town had quite an adventure the other day. They started out to pay a visit to a friend in the country, and took the railway track for it. Just as they reached a high narrow embankment with water on each side, the steamboat express came thundering along. Of course they ran, and though their gait was not according to the rules of racers, they kept ahead of the express until they reached a turning out place, puffing and panting like old war-horses. But their trials were not ended. They left the track and tried the fields, and, to make matters worse a pouring rain set in. All at once they made the horrible discovery that they were lost. After climbing fences by the dozen, they arrived at the friend's house, with their skirts gathered around them in the style of 1756, their shoes going flipity-flop, and looking very little like two stylish ladies of the artistocratic village of Markdale.—Markdale Standard,

The Power of the Press.

From one end of the country to the other the press is making known the wonderful curative properties of Nasal Balm, for catarrh and cold in the head. P.H. Munroe, Parry Sound says:—Nasal Balm has no equal as a remedy for cold in the head. It is both speedy and effective in its results.

Owen Sound's New Church.

Owen Sound has grown to such an extent of late that is was found necessary to form a new congregation of the Methodist Church in that place. Accordingly a site was purchased and a building erected, costing, all included, $2,000. The new church was opened on Sunday last. The service was conducted by Rev. J.E. Howell at 11 a.m., Rev. Mr. Holmes, the newly stationed minister, at 3 p.m., and Rev. Mr. Laird in the evening. On Monday evening a very successful sacred concert was held. Subscriptions, collections and proceeds of the concert amounted to $2,200, leaving a balance of only $700 indebtedness on the church. Special services will shortly be commenced.—Com.

A Magnificent Stone.

Mr. Vanzant succeeded last week in placing in position in Flesherton cemetery a grand specimen of the stonework-er's art. It was a granite monument bearing on its second base the one word "Wright" and on the column the following inscription:

Geo Low Wright,
born in Dublin, Ireland,
Nov. 3, 1808, died at his home near this place.
June 30, 1868
Fran es M. Thorp
Born at Grange Ford,
Co. Carlow, Ireland,
Nov. 12, 1819, died at Kirkwood, Missouri,
U. S. A., Mar. 14, 1887
At her son's home.
Married in Dublin,
Ireland, Dec. 10, 1850
Emigrated to Canada 1852.
To their sacred memory
This stone was erected
By their loving
Children in 1889

The monument is set on a large limestone base with a second base of red granite partially polished, and a cap stone of gray granite, from which rises a square coloumn of polished red granite, the whole surmounded by a large urn. The monument presents an imposing aspect, and is a credit to the builder.

Special.

It is with pleasure that we announce to our many patrons that we have made arrangements with that wide-awake, illustrated farm magazine, the American Farmer, published at Fort Wayne, Ind., and read by nearly 200,000 farmers, by which that great publication will be mailed direct, FREE, to the address of any of our subscribers who will come in and pay up all arrearages on subscription and one year in advance from date, and to any new subscriber who will pay one year in advance. This is a grand opportunity to obtain a first class farm journal free. The American Farmer is a large 16-page journal, of national circulation, which ranks among the leading agricultural papers. It treats the question of economy in agriculture and the rights and privileges of that vast body of citizens--American farmers—whose industry is the basis of all material and national prosperity. Its highest purpose is the elevation and ennobling of Agriculture through the higher and broader education of men and women engaged in its pursuits. The regular subscription price of the American Farmer is $1.00 per year. IT COSTS YOU NOTHING. From any one number, ideas can be obtained that will be worth thrice the subscription price to you or members of your household, YET YOU GET IT FREE. Call and see sample copy

Chinese Sacred Narcissus--Oriental Lily, or Joss Flower.—This beautiful variety is grown by the Chinese, according to their ancient custom, to bloom at the advent of their New Year. It is highly prized and called by them "Joss Flower," or "Flower of the Gods." The buds are specially grown by a method known only to themselves, whereby they attain great size and strength, insuring luxuriant growth and remarkable profusion of bloom, in a very short period. They are generally flowered in shallow ornamental bowls containing water, the bulbs being surrounded by bright colored pebbles to prevent them from topping over when in bloom. The flowers, which are borne in clusters or tall spikes, are white with a golden yellow center, and deliciously fragrant. The bulbs bloom in six to eight weeks after planting.—The Stelle Bros. Co'y, Toronto, Bulb Catalogue.

Help Your Town.

Towns and cities are not built by one man. It takes a good many to do that. They must work together, and not selfishly, each for himself. If you want business to come along, encourage those who want to come. Don't try to sit on them, asking double prices for your building sites or by telling them that there are already more engaged in that line of trade that the situation will justify. Do not show them that you are jealous and prefer that they should stay away. Welcome a wide-awake, progressive man, whenever one comes along. Show that you appreciate his energy and pluck, and lend him a helping hand when occasion offers. Do not discourage him by relating the failures of other men. Let him alone. If he is the right kind of a man he will be able to take care of himself. Don't be eternally discussing why your town is so slow. Better take off your coat and do a little something toward making it otherwise. It takes a number of people to make a town prosperous. Be one of these yourself, instead of watching how your neighbor is going to accomplish it. It can't be done by sitting down. It can't be done by keeping out of new enterprises, but by taking a hand in them yourself. When you have to buy anything do not go to a larger city to buy it, and then denounce home dealers for not having it on hand; they know your ways, and are not going to invest in things which you and others go elsewhere to buy. No, sir; don't wait for strangers to build up your town. Get right to work and help to do it yourself. Shake off your sleepiness and go to work!

BORN.

In Artemesia, on Sunday, Sept. 15th, the wife of W.J. Talbot, of a daughter

NEW ADVERTISEMENTS

CAME ASTRAY.

One black sow came into the enclosure of D. Madill's, about the first of August. The owner is requested to prove property, pay expenses and take her away.

D. MADILL.

Maxwell, Sept. 14, 1889

W. BARNHOUSE,

BOOT AND SHOE MAKER,
FLESHERTON, ONT.

Desires to thank his numerous customers for the very liberal patronage extended in the past, and is now prepared to fill all orders with promptness. Satisfaction guaranteed. Eleven years in business in Flesherton, and honest dealings, with good workmanship, have made his name well known throughout this vicinity. Sewed work a specialty. Get your boots made by Wm. Barnhouse, Flesherton

Executors' Notice!

PURSUANT to section 37, Cap 110, of R.S.O. 1887, the creditors and all others having claims against the estate of Charles Irwin, deceased, in his lifetime of the township of Artemesia, in the county of Grey, who died on or about the 14th day of July, are hereby notified to send by post prepaid or deliver to the undersigned one of the executors of deceased, Flesherton P.O., on or before the first day of November Next, their christian and surnames addresses and description, the full particulars of their claims, a statement of their assets and a statement of the securities (if any) held by them, or on default thereof and immediately after such last named date the assets of the said estate will be distributed among the parties entitled thereto, regard being had only to the claims of which notice shall have been given as above required and the executors will not be liable for the said assets or any part thereof to any persons of whose claim notice shall not have been received as aforesaid at the time of such distribution.

CHARLES IRWIN,)
SAMUEL IRWIN, - Executors.
EFFIE IRWIN,)

Dated Sept 11, 1889

EAST GREY

FALL  EXHIBITION

FLESHERTON

September 23 and 24, 1889.

$600 IN PRIZES!

OPEN TO THE WORLD!

FIRST DAY: Grand base ball competition, open to the county; silver cup valued at $15 as prize, clubs to employ no outside players; game to commence at 1 p.m. sharp. Foot race once around the track, at 3 p.m., 1st prize $3 and prize $2, entrance fee to be 10 per cent. of first money, to be added to 1st prize. Judging in hall. Doors open at 4 o'clock p.m.

SECOND DAY: Grand trial of speed, open only to horses belonging to the members of the society, three times around the track, walk, trot and go as you please. 1st prize, $5, 2nd, $3. Campbell Highland Dancers, of London, accompanied by the bagpipes. These children have exhibited in all the large cities of Ontario, and are marvellously clever. Judging of horses, cattle, sheep, swine and poultry. Doors open to the general public at 9.30 a.m.

NOTICE!

See the Northwest exhibit of cereals.

Arrangements have been made with the railway to carry passengers from Orangeville, Owen sound and intermediate stations at one and one-third fare on first day of show, and single fare on second day, good to return on Wednesday, September 25.

Flesherton Brass Band in Attendance.

Gen'l Admission 15c., Children 10c.

Geo. Stewart, President. R. J. Sproule, 1st Vice President. S. Dampier, Sec.

Medical.

DR. CARTER,

M.C.P. & S., Ont.

PHYSICIAN, SURGEON, &c.

FLESHERTON.

Office, Strain's block. Residence J. G. Russell's

J. G Hutton, M.D.C.M.

Member of the College of Physicians an Surgeons, Ontario.

Enquire at office, one door east of Grier's tor or Atkinson's Hotel.

Priceville, Nov. 19, 1888.

DRS. SPOULE & EGO.

MARKDALE ONT

Office:—Manley's Drug Store.

T. S. SPROULE M.D. etc. ANGUS EGO, M.D., etc late of Tottenham, Ont

Dr Ego will be from 1st Markdale House at night

J. P. OTTEWELL,

VETERINARY SURGEON,

Graduate of Ontario Vet. College.

RESIDENCE ON COLLINGWOOD STREET Sixth Door East of Presbyterian Church

FLESHERTON.

Dentistry.

J. P. MARSHALL,

L. D. S., DENTIST.

Visits Markdale the 1st and 3rd Wednesday of each month.

Flesherton each trip on the day following

Legal.

J. W. FROST,

Barrister, Solicitor, Conveyancer, Etc.

Flesherton Office, next Post Office, Sproule's Building, on Thursdays

Owen Sound Office, Frost's Building.

P. McCULLOUGH,

Barrister, Solicitor, &c.

Office, over McFarland's Store Markdale. Money to Loan.

Business Cards.

John W. Armstrong,

Flesherton, C. Grey.

Division Court Clerk, Commissioner R.R., Conveyancer, Ins. Agent for purchased sale of lands. Agent for C.L.C. Co. and F.P.B.A.S. Society. Money to Loan on most reasonable terms. Issuer of Marria Licenses. Notary P.

MONEY TO LOAN.

AT LOWEST CURRENT RATES.

on Town or Farm Property

S. DAMUDE,
Flesherton

Mr. Wm. Karstedt,

Stone Mason, Bricklayer and Plasterer

MATERIAL FURNISHED

Estimates given free. Ornamental Plastering a Specialty.

Residence one door south of Advance Office

W. J. BELLAMY

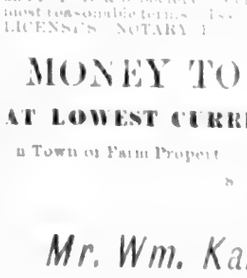
TWP. CLERK ARTEMESIA.

CONVEYANCER, COMMISSIONER, INSURANCE AGT. &C

Deeds, Mortgages, Leases, &c., prepared and properly executed. Insurance effected in first-class companies. Money to lend at lowest rates

R. J. Sproule,

Postmaster, Flesherton, Commissioner in B. R., Licensed Auctioneer, Conveyancer, Appraiser and Money Lender. Real Estate and Insurance Agent. Deeds, Mortgages, Leases and Wills drawn up and Valuations made on shortest notice. Auction Sales attended to in any part of the County. Money to Loan at lowest rates of interest. Collections attended to with promptness and despatch. Charges low. Agent for the Dominion Steamship Company. Cheap tickets from Flesherton to Liverpool, Glasgow, London or any other British Ports. Parties intending to visit England, Scotland or Ireland, will please ask rates before purchasing their tickets elsewhere.



Pat'd Dec. 1, 1885.

Of Interest to every Waggon

THIS ANTI-RATTLER

Because it is effective, durable, inexpensive, easily adjusted, no projecting ends to tear the sp... cloth. It fits any else coupling

FOR SALE BY—

Heard's Carriage Shop.

hill ring,

...URED BY

s & Ordway.

...rl St., Boston

who uses a ...ge.

the BEST.

FALL ANNOUNCEMENT, 1889.

J. E. MOORE.

Flesherton Furniture Warerooms

Begs to tender his sincere thanks for the very liberal share of patronage received during the past two years. We have tried to please, and from the steady growth and increase in our sales, we feel that we have succeeded in giving very general satisfaction to all who have patronized us in any way, either by purchase or recommending others to us. We again offer our hearty thanks with the assurance that with the experience gained in the past two years and a better knowledge of the needs of our patrons, we shall redouble our exertion to meet your wants and retain the confidence we have so largely enjoyed. In entering on our third year of being the people's House Furnisher and Undertaker, it is perhaps well again as at the first to speak of some of our leading lines, feeling it is unnecessary to quote prices as the fact is established beyond controversy that we sell cheaper than any other house in the county. We are enabled to do this, having no rent to pay and doing business on a small profit (Cash principles). Thus doing away with the two heaviest items most business men have to contend with, big rent and bad debts. Our stock at present consists of Bedroom Furniture of every description, Bedsteads all prices and styles, Woven wire Springs and cott bedsteads, Mattresses of wool and seagrass, dressing cases, Bureaus, Wash stands and Mirrors of all sizes and kinds. In parlor furniture we carry suites in Plush and Hair cloth, Sofas and Lounges in Rame, Tapestry, Silk and Hair Cloth Cane, perforated, Rattan and Plush, sitting and rocking chairs, Whatnots, Center and Side Tables, Pictures, Music Racks, Picture Easels and the celebrated Karn or Thomas Organs. For the Dining room we have tables of every description calling attention to our cheap extension tables at $6.00, dining chairs in cane, perforated and wood seats and a special line of lounges for dining room use, Sideboards in a variety of styles. For the kitchen we have chairs to suit everybody. Cupboards for the rich and for the poor, and tables made on short notice just to suit you. Again thanking you for past patronage, we invite you to call again, assuring you that we are in better position than ever to supply your needs in house furnishings, or in undertaking, in which department we have a full line and good hearse. Our prices in this as in other branches of our large business, are on a fair living basis, and as we give this our best personal attention, by promptness, by neatness and cleanliness in all our departments, we feel that the wants of this growing country in this department are fully met.

J. E. Moore,

The Flesherton Furniture Warerooms, Durham St. Flesherton.

Mr. Higginbotham's Catastrophe.

Meanwhile the whole population of Parker's Falls, consisting of shopkeepers, mistresses of boarding houses, factory girls, mill-men, and schoolboys rushed into the street. Had Mr. Higginbotham cared about posthumous renown, his untimely ghost would have exulted in this tumult. Our friend Dominicus, in his vanity of heart, forgot his intended precautions and mounting on the town pump, announced himself as the bearer of this authentic intelligence which had caused so wonderful a sensation. He immediately became the great man of the moment and had just begun a new edition of the narrative with a voice like a fleet preacher when the mail stage drove into the village street. It had hastened all night, and must have startled horses at full gallop at three in the morning.

"Now we shall hear particulars" shouted the crowd.

The coach rumbled up to the piazza of the tavern, followed by a thousand people. Every man had been minding his own business this hour, he now left it at sixes and sevens to hear the news. The postboy, foremost in the race, discovered two passengers—both of whom had been startled from a comfortable nap to find themselves in the centre of a mob. Every man assailing them with separate questions, all propounded at once, the couple were struck speechless—although one was a lawyer and the other a young lady.

"Mr. Higginbotham! Mr. Higginbotham! Tell us the particulars about old Mr. Higginbotham!" brawled the mob. "What is the coroner's verdict? Are the murderers apprehended? Is Mr. Higginbotham's niece come out of her fainting fits? Mr. Higginbotham!"

The coachman said not a word except to swear awfully at the ostler for not bringing him a fresh team of horses. The lawyer inside had generally his wits about him even when asleep, and the first thing he did after learning the cause of the excitement, was to produce a large red pocket-book. Meantime, Dominicus Pike, being an extremely polite young man, and also suspecting that a female tongue would tell the story as glibly as a lawyer's, had handed the lady out of the coach. She was a fine, smart girl, and had such a sweet, pretty mouth, that Dominicus would almost as lief have heard a love-tale from it as a tale of murder.

"Gentlemen and ladies," said the lawyer, "I can assure you that some unaccountable mistake, or more probably a wilful falsehood, maliciously contrived to injure Mr. Higginbotham's credit, has excited this singular uproar. We passed through Kimballton at three o'clock this morning, and most certainly should have been informed of the murder, had any been perpetrated, but I have proof nearly as strong as Mr. Higginbotham's own oral testimony in the negative. Here is a note relating to a suit of his in the Connecticut Courts, which was delivered me from that gentleman himself. I find it dated at ten o'clock last evening."

So saying, the lawyer exhibited the date and signature of the note, which irrefragably proved either that this perverse Mr. Higginbotham was alive when he wrote it or—as some deemed the more probable case—that he was so absorbed in worldly business as to continue to transact it even after his death. But unexpected evidence was forthcoming. The young lady, after listening to the peddler's explanation, merely seized a moment to smooth her gown and put her curls in order and then appeared at the tavern door, making a modest signal to the crowd to listen to her.

"Good people, I am Mr. Higginbotham's niece."

A wondering murmur passed through the crowd on beholding her so rosy and bright.

"You see," continued Miss Higginbotham, with a smile, "that this strange story is quite unfounded. I left Kimballton this morning to spend the vacation of Commencement week with a friend about five miles from Parker's Falls. My generous uncle, when he heard me on the stairs, called me to his bedside and gave me two dollars and fifty cents to pay my stage fare and another dollar for my extra expenses. He then laid his pocket-book under his pillow, shook hands and advised me to take some biscuit in my bag instead of breakfasting on the road. I feel confident, therefore, that I left my beloved relative alive, and trust that I shall find him so on my return."

The young lady courtesied at the close of her speech, which was so sensible and delivered with grace and propriety. But a stranger would have supposed that Mr. Higginbotham was an object of abhorrence at Parker's Falls, so excessive was the wrath of the inhabitants on hearing their mistake. Nothing saved Dominicus Pike, either from mob law or a court of justice, but an eloquent appeal made by the young lady in his behalf. Addressing a few words of heart-felt gratitude to his benefactress, he mounted the green cart and rode out of town under a discharge of artillery from the schoolboys, who found plenty of ammunition in the neighboring clay-pits and mud-holes.

However, the sun shone bright on poor Dominicus, and the mud, an emblem of all stains of undeserved opprobrium, was easily brushed off when dry. Being a funny rogue, his heart soon cheered up, nor could he refrain from a hearty laugh at the uproar which his story had excited. The paragraph in the Parker's Falls Gazette would be reprinted from Maine to Florida and, perhaps, form an item in the London newspapers, and many a miser would tremble for his money-bags and life on learning the catastrophe of Mr. Higginbotham.

Dominicus was now on the Kimballton turnpike, having all along determined to visit that place, though business had drawn him out of the most direct road from Morristown. As he approached the seat of the supposed murder, he continued to revolve the circumstances in his mind and was astonished at the aspect which the whole case assumed. Had nothing occured to corroborate the story of the first traveller, it might now have been considered a hoax but the yellow man was evidently acquainted either with the report or with the fact and there was a mystery in his dismayed and guilty look on being abruptly questioned. When to this singular combination of incidents it was added that the rumor tallied exactly with Mr. Higginbotham's character of habits and life and that he had an orchard and a St. Michael's pear-tree, near which he always passed at nightfall—the circumstantial evidence appeared so strong that Dominicus doubted whether the autograph produced by the lawyer or even the niece's direct testimony ought to be equivalent. Making cautious inquiries along the road, the peddler further learned that Mr. Higginbotham had in his service an Irishman of doubtful character whom he had hired without a recommendation on the score of economy.

"May I be hanged myself," exclaimed Dominicus Pike aloud, on reaching the top of a breezy hill, "if I'll believe old Mr. Higginbotham is unhanged till I see him with my own eyes and hear it from his own mouth!"

It was growing dusk when he reached the toll house on Kimballton turnpike about a quarter of a mile from the village of this name. His little mare was fast bringing him up with a man on horseback who trotted through the gate a few yards in advance of him, nodded to the toll-gatherer and kept on towards the village. Dominicus was acquainted with the toll-man and while making change, passed the usual remarks on the weather.

"I suppose," said the peddler, throwing back his whip lash to bring it down like a feather on the mare's flank, "you have not seen anything of old Mr. Higginbotham within a day or two?"

"Yes," answered the toll-gatherer. "He passed the gate just before you drove up, and yonder he rides now, if you can see him through the dusk. The old man generally shakes hands and has a little chat with me, but tonight he nodded and jogged on, for wherever he goes, he must always be home at eight o'clock."

"So they tell me," said Dominicus. The peddler strained his eyes through the twilight and could just discern the horseman, now far ahead on the village road. He seemed to recognize the rear of Mr. Higginbotham, but through the evening shadows and amid the dust from the horse's feet, the figure appeared dim and unsubstantial—as if the shape of the mysterious old man were faintly moulded of darkness and gray light. Dominicus shivered at the sight.

"Mr. Higginbotham has come back from the other world by Kimballton turnpike," thought he.

He shook the reins and rode forward, keeping about the same distance in the rear of the gray old shadow till the latter was concealed by a bend in the road. On reaching this point the peddler no longer saw the man on horseback, but found himself at the head of the village street. On his left were a stone wall and a gate beyond which lay an orchard. These were the premises of Mr. Higginbotham. Dominicus knew the place and the little mare stopped short by instinct.

"For the soul of me I can't get by this gate!" said he, trembling. "I never shall be my own man again till I see whether Mr. Higginbotham is hanging on his St. Michael's pear-tree!"

He leaped from the cart, gave the rein a turn round the gate-post, and ran along the green path of the wood lot, as if Old Nick were chasing behind. Just then the village clock told eight, and as each deep stroke fell, Dominicus gave a fresh bound and flew faster than before till dim in the solitary centre of the orchard, he saw the fated pear-tree. One great branch stretched from the old, contorted trunk across the path, and threw the darkest shadow in that one spot. But something seemed to struggle beneath the branch!

The peddler had never pretended to more courage than belongs to a man of tolerable composition, or could he account for his valor in this awful emergency. Certain it is, however, that he rushed forward, grasped a stout Irishman with the heart out of his wicked and female body and the St. Michael's pear-tree trembling beneath it, with a halter around his neck—the old, identical Mr. Higginbotham!

"Mr. Higginbotham," said Dominicus, tremulously, "you're an honest man and I'll take your word for it. Have you been hanged or not?"

If the riddle be not already guessed a few words will explain the simple machinery by which this coming event was made to cast its shadow before. Three men had plotted the robbery and murder of Mr Higginbotham, two of them, successively, lost courage and fled—each delaying the crime one night by his disappearance. The third was in the act of perpetration, when a champion blindly obeying the call of fate, like the heroes of old romance, appeared, in the person of the gossiping, good-natured young peddler, Dominicus Pike.

THE END.

Priceville.

Mr. Alex Brown and daughter returned on Thursday last from a trip to the old country. They are both much improved in health, and enjoyed the trip very much.

Mr. Riley has purchased a new trotting sulky for his Maud S. trotting mare, and proposes taking in some sweepstakes this fall. She is a good one. Michael's colt has scarcely enough feet under her.

Priceville has been the scene of several fisticuff encounters during the past week. Nothing serious.

Dr. Hutton's practice is enlarging every day. He is popular and successful.

Mr. James has just returned from London, where he took in the Provincial exhibition.

The pulpit of our Presbyterian Church is still vacant. There has been no call made as yet.

Dr. Hutton visited the Toronto exhibition on Farmers' day.

Mr. John McArthur is overseeing a gang of men between Flesherton and Priceville mending the gravel road. It needed it badly, but is sure to be much improved when "our John" gets through with it. He always makes his labor tell.

Mr. J. Brown, merchant, pays 16 cents for eggs.

Priceville baseball club is somewhat demoralized, but we intend to try to scrape together a team strong enough to wipe Flesherton out for the silver cup on Monday next. See if we don't. ZIP.

Maxwell

[illegible]

On Sunday evening a very heavy wind storm struck town which was followed later by a very heavy rain.

Some of the young people visited Eugenia a Sunday last.

Mr. E. M. Heron has [illegible] Collingwood and is [illegible] lately occupied by C. H. [illegible].

C. E. Nash is being [illegible] store. Mr. Anders has taken stock [illegible] him.

Miss Annie Killoran [illegible] visiting friends in the village.

The annual thanksgiving of St. Mary's Church will be held next Sunday morning. The church will be decorated this week.

It is announced from Ottawa that Junior County Judge Lane has been appointed judge of the County Court of Grey, vice Judge Macpherson, deceased.

Dr. Sinclair

M.D., M.A., L.C.P.S.O., M.C.P.S.M.

The Great Scottish Specialist

—OF—

TORONTO.

Specialist for the Treatment of

All Chronic Diseases, Private Diseases, Diseases of the Brain & Nerve, Diseases of the Heart and Lungs, and diseases of Women positively treated successfully.

Consultation Free

Dr. Sinclair will be at Flesherton on Saturday, 5th day of October.

Executors Notice!

PURSUANT to section 38, Cap. 110, R.S. [illegible] the creditors and all others having claims against the estate of Susan Pedlar, deceased, late of the Township of Artemesia, County of Grey, who died on or about [illegible] are hereby notified to send by post, and or deliver to W. S. Christie, the [illegible] on or before the first day of November next, their christian and surnames, addresses and [illegible] full particulars of their claims, a statement of their accounts and a statement of the securities held by them, if any, [illegible] after the said first day of November next, the executors will proceed to distribute the assets of the said estate among the parties entitled thereto, having regard only to the claims of which they shall then have had notice, and will not be liable for the assets or any part thereof so distributed to any person or persons of whose claim they shall not have had notice at the time of such distribution.

Dated, Sept. 23rd, 1889.

SEALED TENDERS addressed to the undersigned, and endorsed "Tender for Harbour Work," will be received at this office until the 18th day of September next inclusively, for works for the improvement of the Harbour of West Sound, Grey County, Ontario, according to Plans and a specification to be seen at the office of the Town Clerk, Owen Sound, and at the Department of Public Works, Ottawa.

Tenders will not be considered unless made on the form supplied and signed with the actual signatures of tenders.

An accepted bank cheque, payable to the order of the Minister of Public Works, for the sum of three thousand dollars ($3,000), must accompany each tender. This cheque will be forfeited if the party decline the contract, or fail to complete the work contracted for, and will be returned in case of non-acceptance of tender.

The Department does not bind itself to accept the lowest or any tender.

By order,

A. GOBEIL,
Secretary.

Department of Public Works,
Ottawa, 3rd Sept. 1889.

IT PAYS TO

GO TO THE BEST

AND THAT IS THE

Northern Business College,

OF OWEN SOUND.

The best and most practical [illegible]
The best teaching talent [illegible]
The best methods of instruction [illegible]
The best results from that [illegible]
Our students graduate [illegible]

For annual announcements giving [illegible] regarding the course of study [illegible]

C. A. FLEMING, Principal.

REMOVAL.

I desire to inform the public generally and my well known [illegible] to

MOORE'S Block, Durham St.

[illegible] stock of [illegible] in my new premises.

REPAIRING

EAVETROUGHING

Etc.

done as heretofore.

I have secured the agency for the celebrated Singer Sewing [illegible]

Requesting my old friends [illegible] me in my new [illegible]

JAS. SULLIVAN.

CATARRH COLD IN THE HEAD

NASAL BALM

CATARRH

[illegible] such as head[illegible] of smell, hawking, [illegible] throat, general [illegible] [illegible] with many of the [illegible] Catarrh, and [illegible] Nasal Balm [illegible] cold in head [illegible] consumption and [illegible] druggists, or will be [illegible] (50 cents and $1)

FULFORD & [illegible] ALE ONT.

Beware of imitations.

It is understood Mr. [illegible] Smith's Bystander will be [illegible]

A MINING HORROR.

Recovering Bodies from the Maurice Wood Mine.

GHASTLY AND SORROWFUL SCENES.

An Edinburgh cable says: Sixty-three men and boys have perished through the fire in the Maurice Wood pit near Penicuick, Midlothian. Twenty-one bodies have been recovered. This fire is one of the most disastrous mining calamities that has ever befallen Scotland. On Thursday morning 65 miners, including a contingent of boys, went down the pit to prosecute their calling, and all but two have perished. Hitherto mining disasters in Scotland have been confined to explosions of fire damp, and these have all been in the west of Scotland, where, as at Blantyre and Udstone, there are fiery seams of coal. On the east coast fire damp in any dangerous quantity is a thing unknown, and consequently mining has hitherto been considered exceptionally safe. The present calamity, however, shows that other perils have to be faced, and the disaster of the Maurice Wood mine takes rank with the two great tragedies of Blantyre and Udstone in the awful destruction of human life. On Thursday night the list of dead consisted of four, and there were 59 entombed. Now there is not the faintest hope of any one in the pit having escaped, except five men who brought the intelligence of the fire to the surface. The pit belongs to the Shotts Iron Company, and was worked solely as an ironstone pit, but recently considerable check was put on the industry through an interdict having been obtained by certain landed proprietors against companies carrying on calcine work in connection with the production of raw material. Since then the ironstone has been conveyed to shoots and rather more attention has been directed to the production of coal, though the ironstone was still worked. The coal is of good quality. The mouth of the pit is situated on the top of a hill shortly slanting from the turnpike road. The shaft descends a distance of eighty fathoms, running in a southerly direction. From the bottom of the shaft is a level mine extending fifty fathoms, at the extreme end of which the shaft of the Greenlaw pit communicates. Branching off near the junction of Greenlaw pit is an incline which descends on a scale of about eighty in 100 feet. For a distance of 160 fathoms from the bottom of this incline the workings run in opposite directions right and left. The mine has thus no second shaft leading to its utmost depth, as the Greenlaw connection only extends down to the eighty fathom level. The coal and iron was conveyed up the incline by hutches running on rails, and thence up the shaft to the usual cages. The coal sides of the incline were lined with wood, but the roof, which was of ironstone, was bare. It is this wood lining which appears to have taken fire, and that too at a point lower than the connection with the Greenlaw pit, the consequence being that the miners who were engaged at the lower level were literally hemmed in, and could find no way of escape.

A SURVIVOR'S STORY.

Then ensued a scene which happily is not often witnessed, and which is perhaps best described in the words of one of the survivors, David Robb, who was at the deepest part of the workings. He says: "I immediately shouted, 'Boys, the pit is on fire.' The boy Tolmie volunteered to enter the workings to warn the men. Not far from the bottom of the incline two men, Hunter and Wright, were driving the new road, and Tolmie went specially to warn them. Just at that moment I got the bell from the top to send up the men's carriage. As it was leaving empty I formed the resolution to go with it, and jumped in. I had no idea of the serious nature of the fire, and thought if I could get to the 80-fathom engine-house I might be able to turn the water down and so extinguish the flames. But before I got to 80-fathom the smoke became so dense that I was almost suffocated. I could see nothing and I heard no one. I thought I should never come through it, and at 80 fathoms station, where the carriage halted as usual, all I could do at the top was to yell 'for God's sake bell away.' That meant to go. Fortunately they heard me at the bank or I should not have been alive to tell the story."

From the time of the alarm till now relays of men have worked at the task of rescue, but without any result. All through last night there was kept up a struggle with overmastering fumes in putting up brattice work to obtain ventilation. Two or three men were let down the incline in a truck, and besides having to battle with a current of smoke so thick as to obscure all vision, their efforts were rendered almost of no avail by the force of the current itself, which threatened again and again to destroy their work as soon as it had been completed. The men would come to the surface after each effort with streaming eyes and perspiring faces. Their object was to reach 80-fathom level, from which it was hoped it might be possible to turn the current to clear the incline. At midnight there were still some four or five fathoms to be bratticed before the 80 fathom level could be reached. From that time the work proceeded at the rate of not more than a fathom per hour. Shift after shift went down, and the men came to the surface in despair at the slow progress they were making. While working on the incline the men, about 3 o'clock this morning, came on the bodies of John Walker and Hugh McPherson. Both bodies were found in the vicinity of the 80-fathom engine. It was part of the duties of these men to attend to it, and they seem to have died at their post.

A GHASTLY SPECTACLE.

Dr. Badger, who examined the bodies on their arrival at the surface, states that the corpses were frightfully scorched, not with actual fire, but with the hot air in the pit, the temperature of which is stated to have been high enough to melt lead. The flesh adhered to their clothes, and the ghastly spectacle was rendered the more hideous by the fact that on endeavoring to remove their boots the feet nearly parted from the legs. Shortly after 3 o'clock it was found that the east side of the pit began to fall in, and in order to retain the sides and roof a large number of props were utilized. A quantity of stuff, however, fell, considerably hindering the operations of the rescuers. About 4 o'clock information reached the pit head that although six bodies are visible of the west side they could not be approached. On the east side there is not a man alive. The rescuers made gallant efforts to get at the bodies, but were repulsed by the fire and foul air. By 7 o'clock it was seen that nothing further could be done in the way of recovering the dead. Meantime in consequence of the fire on the east side of the workings and the after-damp on the west side the explorers cannot reach the bodies, although they can see a number, and from their position it would appear as if they had made a rush almost in a body to get out of the air which overwhelmed them. One of the rescuers, named Anderson, ventured too far, and had to be carried to the surface in a helpless condition.

THE CRONIN CASE.

Remarks of Counsel Prove Cold Comfort for Prisoners.

A Thursday night's Chicago despatch says: Though no jurors were finally accepted in the Cronin case on Thursday considerable progress was made. The defence expended nine peremptory challenges in addition to the four used Saturday, thus exhausting thirteen of Dan Coughlin's quota, and reducing the number which the defence can exercise from 100 to 87.

Once during the preliminary discussion the court used the following language, which sent a thrill through the court room and caused some of the defendants to start in their seats: "The question, Have you formed an opinion as to whether Daniel Coughlin knew when he engaged the horse and buggy from Dinan that the horse and buggy were to be used to take Dr. Cronin to the Carlson cottage to be murdered?' practically asks the jurymen to determine at this time and say whether or not he believes these defendants guilty of murder. I think it is not proper."

Even the attorneys for the defence seemed to be startled at the significance of this language. But Mr. Forrest added emphasis to it by saying: "We think it is competent because it almost covers the question of guilt." Here was a declaration, also an admission of awful import to the accused. Coughlin and O'Sullivan seemed to be utterly bewildered for a few minutes after these utterances, which produced a profound and painful impression.

A HAPPY LIFE.

A New Armored Pleasure Carriage for the Czar.

A London cable says: A new Imperial train has just been built for the Emperor of Russia. The saloons are covered with iron outside, and then come eight inches of cork instead of steel plates with which the carriages of the old train were protected. All the saloons, which communicate by covered passages, are exactly the same in outward appearance, so that no outsider may be able to discover in which carriage the Czar is travelling. During the Emperor's journey last autumn he passed most of his time in a carriage which from the outside looks like a luggage van.

The Terry Shooting Affray.

A San Francisco despatch says: In the Nagle habeas corpus proceedings yesterday Justice Field described the tragedy at Lathrop, and expressed the opinion that if Nagle had not shot Terry, he (Field) would have been dead within the next five seconds. He said the expression of Terry's face when he raised his hand to strike a second time was full of malice and murder. The justice had no difficulty with Terry prior to a year ago. In fact, they had always been on friendly terms. Several witnesses stated that when Terry fell to the floor in the depot at Lathrop, Mrs. Terry threw herself upon her husband's body and remained there a minute or two. When she arose she declared Terry was unarmed. A pistol was produced which was found in Mrs. Terry's satchel.

The Hamilton Case.

A New York despatch says: The midwife who gave the baby known as Beatrice Hamilton to Mrs. Swinton and Eva, to be palmed off on Mr. Hamilton as his own offspring, was taken to Atlantic City today, where she identified both the baby and Mrs. Hamilton. The midwife's name is kept secret. Joshua Mann stated to-day that during the four or five years he and Eva had lived together he had never been absent from her more than two or three days at a time. During that time she had never been in a delicate condition. The child in question was born some time between November and January last, and Mann swears positively no such event occurred within that period. Inspector Byrnes said he had no evidence that the conspirators proposed to get rid of Hamilton to secure his property.

It Puzzles the Anatomists.

A Council Bluffs despatch of Wednesday says: Frank Havens, aged 38, dropped dead last evening. A post-mortem disclosed an abnormal arrangement of the vital organs. The heart was on the right side. A coagula, amounting to about two quarts of blood, surrounded his heart. The liver was on the left side of the abdomen and the stomach was on the right. The lungs were only one-third the regular size and were pressed upward. How the man could have lived any length of time after birth seems a mystery to the surgeon.

T. Granger Stuart, M. D., F. R. S. E. Ordinary Physician to H. M. the Queen in Scotland, Professor of Practice of Physic in the University of Edinburgh, writes: "Acute bronchitis is common especially in the advanced stages of Bright's disease, and tends to pass into the chronic state. Phthisis (consumption) in its various forms is found occasionally associated with these renal (kidney) affections. It usually proves fatal while the renal malady is yet in its early stage." It thus becomes evident that consumption and bronchitis are intimately associated with kidney disease, and Warner's Safe Cure should be taken early in the disease to prevent the damaging influence the kidney malady exerts upon the presiratory organs.

—Author—I want you to give my book a good notice. I want to see it in the hands of every mother, wife and daughter in the country. Editor—I can fix that. In criticising the book I'll say that it is not a proper book for any self-respecting lady to read, and then they all will buy it.

TERRIFIC EXPLOSION.

Forty Million Cartridges Explode and Fire the City of Antwerp.

PROBABLY 200 LIVES LOST.

A last night's cable from Antwerp gives the following: A terrible catastrophe, the consequences of which are as yet incalculable, took place at Antwerp this afternoon. At a quarter-past two a terrific explosion was heard even so far as Ghent. The whole town was shaken, and immediately afterwards it seemed as if a rain of glass was falling over the surrounding country. There is not a whole window in Antwerp. The magnificent stained glass windows of the cathedral were also destroyed. The townspeople were panic-struck. It was first supposed that an earthquake had taken place, but suddenly the sun, which was shining brightly, was obscured by an impenetrable cloud of smoke tinged by the red glare of a great fire. It was near the port, and just behind the dry-docks, that the catastrophe took place, in a powder magazine belonging to M. Corvillain, merchant, who had recently purchased forty millions of old cartridges, intending to sell the powder. His workpeople, over a hundred in number, more than half of them being women, were occupied in the task of opening these cartridges when the explosion took place. To what it was due there is very little hope of discovering, for not one of Corvillain's employees has yet been found alive. In fact, not a single corpse has been found intact. It was not only in the Corvillain factory that lives were lost. A large number of persons were also more or less severely wounded by pieces of glass, and the roofs of several houses fell in for a great distance. All around the ground was strewn with cartridges and debris of all kinds. All was not over yet, however. A few minutes after the explosion a vast sheet of flame leaped up into the sky, and it was seen that the petroleum warehouse not far from the powder magazine was on fire. Even in broad daylight the blaze of 40,000 barrels of petroleum on fire was visible at a distance of over thirty miles, at Brussels. Then the Maison Hydraulique, of Antwerp, which furnishes the motive power for all the cranes and other machines of the port, suddenly gave way and became a heap of ruins. Everywhere in the streets were wounded persons, and at frequent intervals one came across parts of the human frame, such as legs and arms. The petroleum mart is, as I wire you, still ablaze, and the heat is so great that it is impossible to approach within several hundred yards of the conflagration. The spectacle is terribly superb, and there is nothing in recent history that can be compared to it save the scene which Paris presented during the last days of the Commune and the great fire in Chicago. The fire has spread in all directions. City warehouses in which from 20 000 to 25,000 barrels of petroleum are stored are on fire, as are many of the vessels in the docks.

The Scheldt resembles a river of fire. The whole of the garrison and a large part of the male population of the town are aiding the firemen, but their efforts are simply useless. It is impossible even roughly to estimate the number of persons killed, but suppositions range from 200 to 400, while there are certainly a thousand persons injured. The latest information is that there are 150 half-burned corpses in the hospitals. The population is in a state of panic, for though the fire at present is confined to the neighborhood of the port, it can scarcely be prevented from gaining the town were the wind to turn to the north. With regard to the material damages it is needless to say that they are enormous. When Corvillain sought permission to erect his cartridge manufactory the city authorities opposed him might and main. The Provincial Council, however, were less far-seeing and accorded Corvillain the authorization he asked for.

The fire is still raging. Many soldiers are dropping from suffocation. I have ascertained that the disaster is really the outcome of political bickering between the Town Council and Provincial Council. The former is Liberal and the latter clerical. The latter only granted permission to Corvillain to locate the powder factory in such a dangerous position to annoy the Town Council. This disclosure causes intense indignation. Explosions are constantly occurring, and ships are going further back in the Scheldt to avoid the flames. The King has telegraphed an expression of sorrow and a request for hourly information.

Dr. Chalmers' Daughter.

In one of the alleys running off from Fountain Bridge, Edinburgh, a street crowded with drunkenness and pollution, is the low-roofed building in which this good woman is spending her life to help men and women out of their miseries. Her chief work is with the drunkards, their wives and daughters. In the winter when the nights are long and cold you may see Helen Chalmers with her lantern going through the dark lanes of the city, hunting up the depraved and bringing them out to her reform meetings. Insult her, do they? Never! they would as soon think of insulting an angel of God. Fearless and strong in the righteousness of her work, she goes up to a group of intoxicated men, shakes hands with them, and takes them along to hear the Thursday night speech on temperance. One night as she was standing in a low tenement talking to an intemperate father, and persuading him to a better life, a man kept walking up and down the room as though uninterested in what was said, but finally staggered up and said, "I shall get to Heaven as you will, do you not think so?" Helen answered not a word, but pointed to the passage, "No drunkard shall inherit the kingdom of God." The arrow struck, and that little piece of Christian strategem ended in the man's reformation.

Hon. William Macdougall says the reference to the Jesuit Estates Bill to the law officers of the Crown was a mean evasion of duty.

Capt. Wissmann, with 400 men, has started for Upwapwa to punish Bushiri for killing officer Neilson, of the East Africa Company.

"Papa, why do they call it Labor day?" "Because, my son, it is the day on which workingmen do not labor."

AWFUL DEATH.

An Electric Light Lineman Tortured to Death While at Work.

A Buffalo despatch says: An electric light lineman falling from the upper wires of a pole on Seneca nearly opposite Jewett's stove worsk, attracted a crowd just before 12 o'clock yesterday. He caught on a cross bar and hung there in the wires unable to save himself and giving evidence of extreme suffering wherever he encountered the powerful shock of the electric light wires. The fire department was telephoned to, but it was 15 minutes before help came. It appeared that the man while at work at the wires near the top of the pole took hold of one of the wrong wires and got the "ground current," or waste current. If he had taken the full active current it would have been almost instantly fatal. The arm on which he caught in falling was about 30 feet from the ground. He hung head down till hook and ladder No. 2 arrived, twitching at intervals in a way that thrilled the spectators. He was alive when taken down, but entirely helpless and speechless. He died a few minutes after reaching the Fitch Hospital. His right breast was badly burned and the fingers of his left hand were burned almost through the bone. He did not recover consciousness. He had been in the employ of the company but a few days. His name was Hugh Perry.

Fireman James T. Lawler of truck 2, who took Perry down, first cut the wrong wire with the rubber-handled shears used in cutting electric wires at fires. Then he put Perry's head between his knees and held him while he cut the other wire. The twitching body was lowered to the walk by means of a rope.

Fireman Lawler got a hard shock and ruined his clothes in the operation. He is a very careful man and escaped getting the full current.

Perry was about 38 years old, short and stout, wore chin whiskers and came here recently from Detroit, where he has a wife and children. He boarded at the Spencer House and had been in the employ of the Brush Company only a few days.

TOO HASTY SWITCHING

Results in Wrecking a Sleeper and Injuring Five Persons.

A Pittsburg, Pa., despatch of last (Friday) night says: Passenger train No. 1 on the New York, Pennsylvania & Ohio Railroad, due at Youngstown, Ohio, at 5 o'clock this morning, was derailed at Pymaturning. A freight train was lying on a siding, and a brakesman at the switch, in a hurry to get his train out, turned the switch as the last sleeper was passing over. The coach was thrown on its side, and the following persons were injured, though not fatally: Mrs. H. W. Clark, Mrs. E. L. Clark, Thos. Clark and Marion Clark, of Pittsburg; W. H. Shields, of Eaglesville. The injured were cared for by surgeons and forwarded to their homes.

Scriptural Lore.

Curious essays are said to have been produced by some of the younger pupils at the recent examinations in connection with the elementary schools. The following appeared in answer to the request of H. M. I. to write on account of the Good Samaritan. "A certain man went down from Jerslem to Jeriker and he fell among thawns, and the thawns sprang up and choked him. Whereupon he gave tuppins to the host and said tak care on him and put him on his hone hass. And he past by on the hother side." The following are two other essays which are said to have just seen the light: "Who was Moses?" "He was an Egyptian. He lived in a hark made of bullrushes, and he kept a golden carf and worshipt brazen snakes, and he het nothin' but quables and manner for forty years. He was kort by the 'air of his 'ed while ridin' under the bow of a tree, and he was killed by his son Abison as he was hanging from the bow. His end was peace." "What do you know of the patriarch Abraham?" "He was the father of Lot and had tew wives. One was called Hismale and tother Haygur. He kept wun at home and he hurried the tother into the desert, where she became a pillow of salt in the day time and a pillow of fire at nite."
—Altringham Advertiser.

Boulanger to Demand a Court Martial.

A Paris cable says: General Boulanger has written to Prime Minister Tirard claiming the right to be tried by court martial and pledging himself to appear before such tribunal. The refusal of a trial by court martial, the General says, will be equivalent to an admission on the part of the Government that it fears the impartiality of a military court. In the event of a refusal the General says he will submit himself to the judgment of the people at the polls. Gen. Boulanger also expresses his willingness to be tried by the First Chamber of the Court of Appeal.

The Soir says that in the event of the return of Gen. Boulanger to France the Government will order the arrest of M. Lagnerre, Laisant and DeRoulede as accomplices of Boulanger, and include them in a new trial.

Removing Large Trees.

Spring is the best time to remove large trees, says Country Gentleman, and if they have been much shaded by other trees, and thus rendered hardy against cold, it would be quite necessary to do the work in spring. If growing alone, they would be hardy enough to transplant in autumn. Trimming or pruning, to render the tops lighter, may be done at the time of removal; but we would advise the operation to be rather sparingly performed in autumn, as heavy pruning always makes a tree more tender for a time.

King George, of Greece, is one of the handsomest monarchs in Europe. He is 44 years old, about 5 feet 10 inches tall, with a straight and well-formed figure. He looks younger than he is.

A very striking miracle is reported to have taken place at La Bonne Ste. Anne, yesterday, in the presence of a large pilgrimage, the beneficiary being a woman who had been bed-ridden for years and who had to be carried into the church on a stretcher. Suddenly, towards the close of the service, she arose to her feet without assistance, and, exclaiming that she was cured, walked out of the church with a strong, firm step. Hundreds were eye-witnesses of the startling incident.

AGED POPE LEO.

A Pen Picture of His Holiness Drawn by a Catholic Editor.

A St. Louis despatch says: The Rev. D. S. Phelan, editor of the Western Watchman, the Catholic paper published in this city, is travelling in Europe. Father Phelan sends to his paper an account of an audience he had with the Pope. He thus describes the Pope: "What struck me most forcibly was his very great apparent age and feebleness. He fairly looked a hundred years old if he looked a day. His face is almost inhumanly white. He looked too old and gone to impress one only as a relic might impress. I was very much struck and disappointed. I had hoped to see a stirring face and an eye full of life and fire. Leo had both once, but they are now gone. When I knelt at his feet his look was very feeble. I noticed the play of his features as he spoke, for there was not enough life in that blessed face to dazzle. The Pope has a full set of pearly white teeth, well preserved. His lips are heavy and very purple, in striking contrast to his white face. The Holy Father drawls very heavily when he speaks, but seems able to conduct a conversation without fatigue. After about a quarter of an hour of a very one-sided conversation for the Holy Father talked almost without ceasing, I introduced my travelling companion, for whom I had obtained the honor, informing His Holiness that he was a Protestant, but very well disposed to the Church. He immediately reached out his hand and bade him advance. He took his hand in his and placed the other on his head and blessed him. He turned to me and asked me if he had any children, evidently intending to bless them also. When I answered in the negative he repeated his first benediction, and bade us both depart with his blessing on us and and ours. I left feeling that I had spoken to the greatest man of this century, and one of the greatest Popes who ever occupied the chair of Peter, but a man ready to close his eyes forever. We may have a few more fitful flashes of that one great light, but it must soon go out forever."

BLOWN TO ATOMS.

A 25-Pound Can of Dynamite Explodes, Killing Two Men.

A Jacksonville, Fla., despatch of Thursday says: Capt. R. G. Ross, in charge of the Government jetty work at St. John's Bar, has been for several days blowing up the submerged wreck of the Dutch brig Neva, which has for years obstructed the channel of Mayport. He had in his employ a lighter, commanded by Capt. A. C. Moore, with a crew of 12 men. Two of the men, R. T. Moore, son of the captain, and G. Powell, colored, were soldering a 25-pound can of dynamite to-day when it exploded and blew both men to atoms. Only one toe of Moore was found. Engineer Dunn was badly wounded in the side and arm. Capt. Moore was blackened by the explosion and badly shaken up.

"The Light of Asia."

Sir Edwin Arnold, the English poet and journalist, who is on a visit to Canada and the United States, arrived last night in Toronto. He is a man of medium height, rather inclined to be stout, and his appearance is that of a pleasant, scholarly gentleman, who is possessed of a large fund of the energy and force of character that is so essential to success. He wears a full beard, which, however, does not conceal the strong lines of his face. All his movements are sprightly, and there is that about him which immediately convinces an observer that he is a close student and tireless worker. To one who has read his works, and particularly his exquisite lyrics, his appearance is scarcely what might be expected, for it seems to lack that ideal touch which admirers are accustomed, unjustly perhaps, to look for in the face and form of their heroes. But his kind smile and affable manners are such as cannot fail to put one who meets him at ease immediately, and to make the meeting pleasurable.

Sui Generis.

Mrs. Land (an inveterate match-maker.—Though my son Charles is an accomplished man of the world, Miss Cavendish) you will find him no slave to form or the dictates of fashion. He is so original, and does everything in the most independent manner. Don't you think so?

Miss Cavendish—Well, I've just met him, Mrs. Land, but I thought so the moment we commenced to waltz.—Puck.

Justifiable Homicide.

"How came the jury to acquit the prisoner?" asked the astonished stranger. "The evidence all went to show, did it not, that he killed the man?"

"Yes," replied the juryman, "but it also appeared in evidence, before you came in, that the man he killed always persisted in saying 'Is that so?' whenever anybody told him a bit of news."

"Hemorrhage may take place from the kidneys or from the mucus membranes, particularly that of the nostrils." So writes T. Granger Stewart, M.D., F. R. S. E., Ordinary Surgeon to H. M., the Queen in Scotland, Professor of Practice of Physic in the University of Edinburgh, in an article on Bright's disease. Hence the only natural inference is that the kidneys must be restored to a healthy condition before its effects will disappear. Warner's Safe Cure is the most efficient agent for this purpose known to science.

"I suppose," said Professor Huxley, speaking of the oyster, "that when this slippery morsel glides along the palate few people imagine that they are swallowing a piece of machinery far more complicated than a watch."

The place of meeting of the Irish Catholic Benevolent Union next year will be St. Louis, Mo.

The Kenmare estates trouble has been settled by the cancellation of the arrears of rent now due.

Sir Hector Langevin, Minister of Public Works, made an inspection of Toronto harbor yesterday.

Mr. Wanamaker's postal telegraph scheme looks to a great extension of the wires to small places.

First newspaper man—Did you do any literary work on your voyage across? Second newspaper man—Yes, I contributed extensively to the Atlantic!

IMPORTANT TO POLICEMEN.

A Detective Mulcted in $200 and Costs for Handcuffing a Prisoner.

Mr. Justice Rose gave judgment at Osgoode Hall yesterday in the case of Hamilton vs. Massie and McGrath, tried before him at the Toronto Assizes held last January. This will be remembered as an action brought by an employee of the Central Prison against Warden Massie and Detective McGrath for false arrest. Hamilton committed the offence of bringing tobacco into the prison to a prisoner, which is an infraction of prison rule 210, and a misdemeanor under R. S. C., ch. 173, sec. 25. He was arrested by McGrath by order of Warden Massie, and taken before a magistrate. He was discharged, the Warden not pressing the complaint against him, and brought this action for damages for the arrest. Judge Rose expresses his opinion that the arrest and taking before the Magistrate were justifiable. But the plaintiff when arrested was at once handcuffed and thus taken through the streets. There was no evidence that this was necessary to prevent Hamilton's escape, or that he had attempted to escape—indeed the evidence was to the contrary effect.

It may perhaps be a surprise to many people to learn that there was no right to handcuff the man under these circumstances, and that the person who "put the darbies on" was a trespasser and liable for damages. The law for this is to be found in Wright vs. Court, 4 B. and C. 598; 6 Dowl. and R. at p. 624, per Bayley, J.; Addison on Torts (3rd ed.), p. 710.

"The English law," says Mr. Justice Rose, "has always been sensitively careful of the liberty of the person, something not always well remembered in these days: and while the courts have always protected its officers in the discharge of duty, they never have, nor indeed can they, brook injustice being committed in the name of law.

There was not the slightest evidence offered here to justify the handcuffing, and the amount of damages awarded cannot in any degree be deemed large when the jury were informed that the plaintiff was in broad daylight led handcuffed from the Central Prison to King street, then to Adelaide street, along Adelaide street to St. Andrew's Square, and from thence to No. 3 Police Station, where he was locked up.

"Clearly upon the law and evidence the detective is liable in trespass, and judgment must be entered against him for the damages, $200 and costs of suit.

"I do not think the plaintiff is entitled to recover against the defendant Massie. If I have taken the proper view, the arrest was justifiable, and in directing McGrath to take the plaintiff into custody Massie did no wrong, and there is no evidence, I think, to justify a finding that Massie in any wise directed the handcuffing. That was in my opinion the act of McGrath alone.

"Judgment must be entered for defendant Massie, dismissing the plaintiff's action with costs."

Physiological Reasons for Sunday Rest

The question of Sunday work has, of course, a moral side, and it is that side which most strongly influences many who are striving to lessen the evil. Physiologists are universally agreed that men need, for purely physiological reasons, one day's rest out of the seven. There is plenty of evidence upon this question, all pointing in the same direction; and the conclusion is inevitable that the almost universal desire of workmen for rest on Sunday, and their strong objection to working continuously every day, is the result of a natural physiological law, which, like all other laws of the kind, cannot be violated without some one having to suffer the penalty. There is good reason for believing that many railway accidents are directly traceable to physical and mental exhaustion of trainmen, caused by the strain of severe and exacting duties, performed without relaxation for a period of time beyond that which is allowed by nature. And in the case of street railway employees, who are required to work from twelve to sixteen hours every day, Sunday included, it is probable that society suffers, and will suffer, a large share of the penalty. For the presence in the community of a considerable body of men to whom civilization means almost, if not quite, nothing, upon whom society has imposed burdens almost intolerable and infinitely heavier than are imposed by nature as a condition of living—we say that the presence of a body of men living under such conditions is a menace and a danger to Republican institutions.—American Machinist.

Susceptible to Alcohol.

Mrs. Prim—It's dreadful the way the men drink these days, isn't it? My husband's head is so weak he can't drink. A glass of vichy makes him roaring.

Mrs. Blim—Yes, and my husband can't read the label on a beer bottle without getting a headache.

All Corner Lots.

Eastern Speculator—So this is the plat of Boomerville, is it? Don't you think you have the blocks laid off rather small?

Kansas Real Estate Man—You see, that is an idea of my own. There are only four lots in a block, so there will be nothing but corner lots. Great, ain't it?

Four billion five hundred and eight million gallons of beer and ale are consumed annually in Europe, according to the Jewish Messenger. Less of this is consumed in England than on the continent. Germany alone consumes 1,128,000,000, while Austria-Hungary makes way with 354,000,000 gallons. In Bosnia and Roumania the amount consumed per head yearly is little more than a quart, while in Bavaria 65½ gallons are consumed yearly on the average by every man, woman and child in the country.

The Chinese minister will bring his wife to Washington this winter. However, society will not be allowed to gaze on her, as she will be kept in strict seclusion. It is said that she is the first high caste Chinese woman every permitted to leave the flowery kingdom.

Friend—Do you still continue to send matter to the newspapers, Cholly? Cholly—Yes; but's merely for good faith, and not necessarily for publication.

Kissable girl (suddenly)—Take care, some one will see you! Good-looking but bashful beau—What am I doing? Kissable girl (scornfully)—Nothing.

ON HORSEBACK.

A Talk About Horsemanship—Keep Hands Well Down and Head Well Up.

New York Herald.

The three most essential points in race riding for a jockey are to keep his head up, his hands down and his mouth shut, it, of course, being understood that he has a strong seat on a horse. And these three points are not so easy to carry out as the casual observer might imagine, and, as the experienced horseman knows, the most difficult one being to keep the hands down. Long practice and experience in riding are required to enable the jockey steadily to keep his hands where they ought to be—well down below and on each side of the wither. The amateur jockey, perhaps a good cross country rider with strong seat and light hands, may know just what he ought to do; he may sit his horse in the most orthodox manner for some time after the start, but the hands will get up. In fact, I think I am safe in saying that hardly any amateur jockey can ride a race of any length and keep his hands in the right position.

Of course the rule to keep the hands down is a general one, to which there are exceptions. For instance, at the finish a jockey may be obliged to use his whip, taking both reins in one hand, or, again, in riding his horse out in a close struggle he may sit down in the saddle, and raising both hands above the wither, "shake his horse up" with a sort of circular motion of the reins with both hands. The reason why it is so difficult to keep the hands down is because during a race, while a jockey does not sit down in the saddle, but is more or less balanced over the centre of it, so as to interfere as little as possible with his horse's action, the arms, in order to keep the hands down must be extended both forward and downward, and kept more or less rigid. The tendency of an inexperienced rider to get his hands up is caused by his perhaps generally tiring and therefore steadying himself by a direct pull of the reins on his horse's mouth, or by the giving out of those particular arm and wrist muscles which have not had the professional's constant exercise to strengthen and harden them.

Now, as to keeping the head up, it is certainly an easier matter than keeping the hands down, but the tendency is to lower the head, more particularly when the rider is endeavoring to keep his hands down. A poor rider may win a race on a good horse with his hands "all over the place" and his head held anyhow if he keeps his mouth shut, but he might as well try to run a foot race against horses as keep his mouth open while riding a race, for the amount of air forced down his windpipe at the rate of thirty miles an hour would soon exhaust him and make it difficult for him to stick on let alone to steady a tired horse or get the most out of him in a close finish. It does not require any great knowledge of horsemanship to understand why the head should be kept up while riding a race. The rider who does not can not see what the other horses are doing, nor can he guide his own horse properly so as to take every advantage of the ground and of his position in the race; besides, keeping the head down tends to throw the body forward, thus throwing extra weight on the horse's forelegs. Keeping the hands down steadies them, and the pull on the reins is then in the direction of the horse's neck. If the hands are above the wither it is difficult to keep them steady, and very little will throw a horse out of his stride, particularly if tired, and make him lose a length or so.

In cross country riding the above rules also hold good, but in a modified form, and yet not all of them, for if ever there was a time when a rider should keep his head up and use his eyes and judgment it is in charging a big fence during a fast run. As in race riding, too, a good cross country rider keeps his hands down, and if he keeps his mouth open he will not only lose his breath, but be very likely to get it filled with mud or other samples of the local soil from the heels of the horses in front of him. If a jockey has a strong seat, light hands and good judgment, the grace with which he rides his horse is a secondary consideration, but on the road or in the park a graceful seat is of the first importance.

To look well on horseback a man must first have a strong seat, without which it is impossible to have confidence in one's self or to ride with ease and grace. A good firm seat is generally accompanied by what is known as good hands—that is, a light hand on the reins; a weak seated rider, having to balance himself by the reins, cannot have light hands. If a horse stumbles and by so doing jerks his head down, a poor rider is apt to go over its head, or at least, by throwing his weight forward, to make it difficult or impossible for the horse to recover itself. On the contrary, a good rider sits firmly in the saddle, his body from the waist down forming, as it were, a portion of the horse; above the waist as on a pivot swaying gracefully with the animal's motions. Should the horse stumble a pull on its mouth helps it to throw up its head, and throwing the upper part of his body back he still further assists the horse's recovery.

Although to look really well on horseback a firm seat is essential, still one not so fortunately gifted may present a good appearance by care and attention to the principal rules of good horsemanship. Commencing at the highest point, he will, as I have said before, keep his head up, his shoulders square and his body erect over the centre of the saddle, at the same time sitting comfortably and at his ease, yet he must not be stiff, his body from the waist upward conforming with the horse's motions. This is a very important point. The hands should be kept moderately well down, yet not so low as in racing or in the hunting field. The reins should be held so as to give a gentle feeling of the horse's mouth, giving and taking, and here the wrists come into play. When riding with a plain snaffle the rider has only to shorten up the reins through his hands till he gets the proper touch with his horse's mouth; when using both snaffle and bit (bit and bridoon) the snaffle reins must first be arranged, then those of the bit tightened up sufficiently. To do this properly can only be learned by experience, and depends upon how much the horse pulls, or if he requires to be held together. When using snaffle and bit it is important to see that the curb is neither too tight nor the reverse; if too tight it will hurt the horse's lip; too loose, it will do away with nearly all the advantage of the extra leverage of the bit over the snaffle.

In race riding or in the hunting field the stirrup leathers are shortened up and the feet are put further in the stirrups than for road riding. A good rule for the length of the stirrups is to place the tip of the second finger of the right hand on the top of the stirrup leather, under the flap of the saddle, and let the stirrup iron down so that the bottom of it will just reach, touching under the armpit. When sitting in the saddle a plumb line from the point of the shoulder should about touch the back of the heel, but most riders keep their feet a little further forward. The heel should be lower than the ball of the foot, and the foot nearly parallel with the horse's side, but turned out slightly. In racing or hunting it is necessary to hold the reins with both hands, to steady the horse and keep his head straight, but under ordinary circumstances one hand only should be used; in fact, it looks ridiculous to see, as one often does in the park, an individual riding with two hands a perfectly broken hack, and holding the reins as if preparing for a start in a race. There is too much of the stiff riding school style about most of these riders, and it can be detected at a glance.

A poor rider should not wear spurs, as he is very apt not to be able to use them at the proper moment to coerce a refractory steed, and still more likely to give the unfortunate animal a "dig" when there is no necessity for it. After an amateur steeplechase I have often seen spur marks on a horse nearly on the back and the cantle of the saddle cut from the same cause. But if a rider can wear spurs they are much more effective than the whip. A good rider directs his horse more by the pressure of his legs and by judicious use of whip and spur than he does by the bridle.

The rider of a troublesome horse should remember that what may appear to him to be vice is as often fear, for which patience and kindness is the cure. Ladies when riding are apt to hold the head down and keep the left shoulder too far back.

The Greatest Lathe in the World.

Perhaps one of the most marked novelties in the Machinery Hall at the Paris exhibition, writes a correspondent, is the monster lathe shown by Messrs. Greenwood & Batley, of Leeds. This extraordinary machine tool weighs nearly 300 tons, and has been made for Schneider's steel works at Le Creusot. It is intended for rough boring and turning steel ingots of the largest dimensions, such as those used in the manufacture of heavy gun tubes and jackets. I am told it is the most powerful lathe in the world. The space it occupies is about 75 feet by 20 feet. An ingot 52 feet long and 8 feet in diameter can be turned by this "leviathan." It has four independent saddles, each of which carries two tools, eight tools being thus set to work if required at one time. Each tool takes a cut 1½ inches in depth, and advances at the rate of 4 to 5 cuts per inch. A hole 40 inches diameter may be bored through an ingot 32 feet long. The machinery showed at Paris this year is dwarfed by the great display made at Manchester two years ago. While the latter exhibition was literally crammed with "good things and new" in the mechanical line, the Paris show is made to cover a lot of space with but a limited number of highly deserving specimens.

Home-Made Soap.

I have found a way in which I can make soap while waiting for the teakettle to boil for supper, says a writer in Good Housekeeping. It is very easy. Get of a druggist or grocer a pound box of pulverized lye now sold so cheaply and in such convenient shape. It will cost you 15 cents. It comes in a neat can, which can be opened with any penknife. Dissolve this lye in three pints of cold water. The lye heats the water, and you must wait till this heat passes off before making your soap. Melt your grease and strain through a cheesecloth and weigh 5½ pounds. As soon as this melted grease is cool enough to bear your hand in, pour grease and lye together and stir thoroughly a few minutes, and you will see it thicken. Now pour it into a box or dripping pan, lined with greased paper, and let it stand in a warm place for twenty-four hours, then cut into bars. It will be ready for immediate use, will keep growing better, is clean and thoroughly satisfactory for dish-washing and the laundry, makes a good suds and is economical, having cost you only 15 cents, the price of your lye, as the grease was saved at odd times. It can be made without fire, as you see it does not have to be boiled or even have boiling water added. Our laundress uses it and says "It is good," and she is apt to be critical.

Many of the recognized authorities in civil as well as military circles say, "The malarial disease is most dangerous in that the kidneys are most liable to break down." Such men as Dacosta, Atkinson and Pepper, professors in our leading medical schools, and Soldaton, Surgeon Gen. in the Russian army, Woodward, Surg. Gen. in our American army, speak of malaria as a direct complication of chronic Bright's disease. The kidneys must be kept free from disease and the poisonous germs of malaria; they must act normally in cleansing the blood, for 65 gallons of it passes through them every hour. People in malarial localities recover from both the cause and effect of malaria by using Warner's Safe Cure. Every person, in the spring or fall, who has either kidney disease or malaria, should use Warner's Safe Cure as a precautionary measure.

A Circus in Itself.

Robert Vance, of Napanee, is a genius. For three years he has devoted all his spare time to fitting up a collection of automatic figures to work by one power, and he has accomplished a marvel of skill and ingenuity. He has over one hundred figures all working independently, and illustrating nearly every industry. He had the weaver at his loom, a spinning wheel, boat races, a bird in the bushes, water wheel and windmill, watchman on tower, ship at sea, blacksmith, engine, minstrel troupe, circus, Salvation Army, flour mill, saw mill, hurdy-gurdy, carpenter, shoemaker, bicycle races, company of soldiers, darkey preacher, train of cars and so many other novelties that it is impossible to name them, all hard at work. It is the first machine of the kind ever constructed in Canada.

EMERSONIAN GEMS.

Pearls of Thought Set in English by the New England Philosopher.

The young man or woman who fails to read and study Emerson's Essays misses an intellectual feast. There is not one of those sparkling productions but abounds in epigrammatic sentences, each one worthy of a permanent corner in our memory. His style is crisp, lucid and pleasing; his language faultlessly pure; his thought lofty and ennobling. Here are a few crystalized thoughts from the vast treasure house they open to the student:

FROM "HEROISM."

Life is a festival only to the wise. Seen from the nook and chimney-side of prudence it wears a ragged and dangerous front.

The hero is a mind of such balance that no disturbances can shake his will, but pleasantly and as it were merrily he advances to his own music, alike in frightful alarms and in the tipsy mirth of universal dissoluteness.

Heroism feels and never reasons, and therefore is always right. * * * It is the avowal of the unschooled man that he finds a quality in him that is negligent of expense, of health, of life, of danger, of hatred, of reproach, and that he knows that his will is higher and more excellent than all actual and all possible antagonists.

Heroism is an obedience to a secret impulse of an individual's character.

Self-trust is the essence of heroism.

When the spirit is not master of the world it is its dupe.

The magnanimous know very well that they who give time, or money, or shelter to the stranger—so it be done for love and not for ostentation—do, as it were, put God under obligation to them, so perfect are the compensations of the universe.

The brave soul rates itself too high to value itself by the splendor of its table and draperies.

The essence of greatness is the perception that virtue is enough.

See to it only that thyself is here, and art and nature, hope and dread, friends and angels and the Supreme Being shall not be absent from the chamber where thou sittest.

That country is the fairest which is inhabited by the noblest minds.

O friend, never strike sail to a fear. Come into port greatly, or sail with God the seas.

Let us be generous of our dignity as well as of our money.

Greatness once and forever has done with opinion.

FROM "SELF-RELIANCE."

God will not have His work made manifest by cowards.

Trust thyself. Every heart vibrates to that iron string.

Society everywhere is in conspiracy against the manhood of every one of its members. * * * The virtue in most request is conformity. Self-reliance is its aversion.

Nothing is at last sacred but the integrity of our own mind.

Your goodness must have some edge to it, else it is none.

What I must do is all that concerns me, not what the people think. * * * It is easy in the world to live after the world's opinion; it is easy in solitude to live after our own; but the great man is he who in the midst of the crowd keeps with perfect sweetness the independence of solitude.

With consistency a great soul has simply nothing to do. * * * If you would be a man speak what you think to-day in words as hard as cannon balls, and to-morrow speak what to-morrow thinks in hard words again, though it contradict everything you said to-day.

We pass for what we are.

Character teaches above our wills.

The force of character is cumulative. All the foregone days of virtue work their health into this.

Every true man is a cause, a country, and an age; requires infinite spaces and numbers and time fully to accomplish his thought; and posterity seem to follow his steps as a procession.

Welcome evermore to gods and men is the self-helping man. For him all doors are flung wide.

Insist on yourself; never imitate.

That which each can do best none but his Maker can teach him.

FROM "COMPENSATION."

Every excess causes a defect; every defect an excess.

Everything in nature contains all the powers of nature.

Justice is not postponed. A perfect equity adjusts its balance in all parts of life. The dice of God are always loaded.

Crime and punishment grow out of one stem. Punishment is a fruit that, unsuspected, ripens within the flower of the pleasure which concealed it. Cause and effect, means and ends, seed and fruit, cannot be severed.

We can no more halve things and get the sensual good, by itself, than we can get an inside that shall have no outside, or a light without a shadow.

A man cannot speak but he judges himself. With his will or against his will he draws his portrait to the eye of his companions by every word.

You cannot do wrong without suffering wrong.

Fear is an instructor of great sagacity and the herald of all revolutions. * * * Fear for ages has boded and mowed and gibbered over government and property. That obscene bird is not there for nothing. He indicates great wrongs which must be revised.

Always pay; for first or last you must pay your entire debt. Persons and events may stand for a time between you and justice, but it is only a postponement.

He is great who confers the most benefits. He is base—and that is the one base thing in the universe—to receive favors and render none.

In general every evil to which we do not succumb is a benefactor.

The nature and soul of things takes on itself the guaranty of the fulfilment of every contract, so that honest service cannot suffer loss. If you serve an ungrateful master, serve him the more. Put God in your debt. Every stroke shall be repaid. * * * Compound interest on compound interest is the rate and usage of this exchequer.

A Lovely Woman

overheard one say of her, "By heaven! she's painted!" "Yes," retorted she, indignantly, and by heaven only!" Ruddy health mantled her cheek, enthroned on the rose and lily. Yet this beautiful lady, once thin and pale, with a dry, hacking cough, night sweats, and slight spitting of blood, seemed destined to fill a consumptive's grave. After spending hundreds of dollars on physicians without benefit, she tried Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery; her improvement was soon marked, and in a few months she was plump and rosy again, the picture of health and strength. It is the only medicine of its class, sold by druggists, under a positive guarantee that it will benefit or cure in all cases of disease for which it is recommended, or money paid will be promptly refunded.

A Temperance Woman on Newspapers

Frances Willard urges women to read the newspapers. She says: "Women are a set of passivities on that subject, as a class and I am never more annoyed for my 'sect' than when the newsboy goes trotting through at full speed, if he finds the car contains chiefly women, never dreaming that they want a paper. I clutch his sleeve with a vim, and buy one of every variety he has, and ask him what he is thinking about to lose custom in that way. Gossip is nothing but small news—the nickels, pennies and dimes, while the newspaper deals in dollars and V's and X's, so it widens the mind more to read the newspaper than to gossip about the neighbors."

"An idler is a watch that lacks both hands
As useless if it goes as when it stands."

Alas how many women, though household and children need their care, are necessarily idle, because suffering from diseases peculiar to their sex. To all such Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription is a precious boon, speedily curing internal inflammation, leucorrhœa, displacement, ulceration, tormenting periodical pains, prolapsus, "bearing-down" sensations, morning sickness, bloating, weak stomach, nervous prostration, and tendency to cancerous disease. In all those ailments called "female complaints," it is the most reliable specific known to medical science.

Not in a Hurry.

He—Will you marry me?

She—I am married already and you ought not talk that way to me.

He—I did not mean for you to marry me right away: I am willing to wait a year or two.

No matter what the school of physic
They each can cure an ache or phthisic—
At least 'tis said they can:
But as Science turns the wheel still faster,
And quacks and fogies meet disaster,
To us there comes a man
Whose merit hath won countless zealots,
Who use and praise his "Pleasant Pellets."

The "Pleasant Purgative Pellets" of Dr. Pierce, though gentle in action, are thorough, and never fail to cure biliousness, diseased or torpid liver, and constipation.

All the Difference in the World.

And will you not be mine?" he asked tenderly as he took her hand.

"No, Percy," she replied, "I can never marry a horse doctor, but the moment you become a veterinary surgeon I am yours."

Something New at the Circus.

Jinks—Been to the circus, eh? See anything new?

Blinks—Yes. The children who laughed at the clowns were new.

Fooling the Landlady.

Eli—This steak is awful.

Joe—Then why do you eat?

Eli—To keep it from being made into hash.

A Long, Long, Weary Day.

Gus—What's the matter, Jack? You look all worn out.

Jack—I've been visiting a young couple with their first baby.

For half a million of dollars a year one can become known as a large advertiser in American newspapers; but many an advertiser has expended more than $50,000 in a single month without using a single paper published outside the twelve or fifteen of the largest cities. A page advertisement inserted once in all the New York dailies would cost not less than $8,000.

A writ has been issued at the instance of Bigelow & Morson, acting for a Miss Gokey, formerly of Wallaceburg, in a breach of promise of marriage suit, claiming $10,000 damages from Dr. Dobie, of 160 McCaul street, Toronto. Dr. Dobie was formerly assistant surgeon in the Toronto Hospital.

Rev. Father Murray, who recently severed his connection with the parish of Cornwall, last night bade a formal farewell to his congregation. He was presented with several warm addresses and purses aggregating $1,000, together with warm wishes that he might return to Cornwall as the Bishop of the new district.

At a conference of the window glass manufacturers and representatives of the Workers' Association at Pittsburg, Pa., yesterday, the manufacturers offered to compromise by paying last year's wages. This was rejected by the workmen, who insist upon an advance. Negotiations are now off and a long struggle is anticipated.

Last evening Fred Young, aged 13 years, the son of R. Young, Kingston, was drowned while bathing. He could not swim, and fell off a flat rock. He was got out too late to be resuscitated.

DOWL 38 89.

AGENTS MAKE $100 A MONTH with us. Send 30c. for terms. A colored rug pattern and 50 colored designs. W. & P. BUSH, St. Thomas, Ont.

DUNN'S BAKING POWDER
THE COOK'S BEST FRIEND

FLESHERTON PLANING MILLS

Having purchased the Flesherton Planing Mills from R. J. Sproule, Esq., I now desire to inform the

PUBLIC

that I am in a position to do

ALL KINDS

—OF—

General planing mill work,

such as

SASH, DOORS, DOOR FRAMES

Planing and Matching, re sawing, etc.

Good Workmanship Guaranteed.

A large quantity of good dry pine lumber on hand.

W. J. HOWARD,

Flesherton.

The Most Successful Remedy ever discovered, as it is certain in its effects and does not blister. Read proof below.

FLESHERTON, P. Q., May 3, '89.

DR. B. J. KENDALL CO., Enosburgh Falls, Vt.

Gentlemen:—I have used Kendall's Spavin Cure for Spavins also in a case of lame shoulder and found it a sure cure. I consider it to all horsemen.

Very respectfully yours,

CHARLES J. BLACKALL.

KENDALL'S SPAVIN CURE.

ST. THOMAS, P. Q., April 22, 1889.

DR. B. J. KENDALL CO., Enosburgh Falls, Vt.

Gents:—I have used a few bottles of your Kendall's Spavin Cure on my colt, which was suffering from Inflammation in a very bad form, and can say that your Kendall's Spavin Cure made complete and rapid cure. I can recommend it as the best and most effective liniment I have ever handled. Kindly send me one of your valuable books entitled "A Treatise on the Horse." Yours respectfully,

I. F. WILKINSON.

KENDALL'S SPAVIN CURE.

FORT ELLICE, MAN., May 10, 1889.

DR. B. J. KENDALL CO., Enosburgh Falls, Vt.

Gentlemen:—I always keep your Kendall's Spavin Cure and Blister on hand and I can say I have never failed in what you state they will do. I have cured a bad case of Spavin and also two cases of Ringbone of years standing, on mares which I bought to breed from, and have not seen any signs of disease in either since. Yours truly,

D. J. O'KEEFFE.

Price $1 per bottle, or six bottles for $5. All druggists have it or can get it for you, or it will be sent to any address on receipt of price by the proprietors.

DR. B. J. KENDALL CO., Enosburgh Falls, Vt.

SOLD BY ALL DRUGGISTS.

SALESMEN

Wanted for our complete line of NURSERY STOCK. All new, choice and FAST-SELLING SPECIALTIES. I can furnish PAYING POSITIONS to workers. My large experience in the business enables me to offer special advantages to beginners. I CAN MAKE A SUCCESSFUL SALESMAN of any one who will follow my instruction. Permanent employment. Wages paid each week. Outfit free. Apply at once and secure choice of territory.

EDWARD P. SNELL,

Nurseryman, ROCHESTER, N. Y.

MENTION THIS PAPER.

A Complete History of the Johnstown and CONEMAUGH VALLEY FLOOD

embracing also, a history of the floods in Williamsport, Lock Haven, Sunbury, and all the flooded districts in the State of Pennsylvania, also in Washington, D. C., New York, Maryland, Virginia and West Virginia, all of which caused the total loss of over 11,000 lives and the destruction of over $40,000,000 worth of property;

By GEO. T. FERRIS, A. M.

Octavo, 522 pages; Illustrated with Forhty-Eight Full-Page Engravings. Price $1.50. First edition issued August 10th. We pay duty on all books. Agents Wanted. Send 50 cts. for complete outfit.

H. S. GOODSPEED & Co., New York.

D. McTavish,

HORSESHOER AND

GENERAL BLACKSMITH,

Collingwood Street,

FLESHERTON, - ONT.

Manufacturing of Wagons, Sleighs, Buggies Democrats, etc. Horseshoeing promptly attended to. Special attention given to contracted or tender feet.

Logging and Plow Chains constantly on hand.

Why will you cough when Shiloh's cure will give immediate relief. Price 10 cts., 50 cts., and $1. For sale at the Medical Hall.

For Sale

Steam flour mill for sale at Flesherton Station 2 run stone, double reed bolt, smut mill, duster and purifier. Will be sold cheap and on easy terms. This is a bargain. Apply to

ROGER LEVER
Flesherton P O

Monthly Fairs.

Orangeville—The second Thursday in each month.
Dundalk—Tuesday before Orangevie
Flesherton—Monday before Orangevie
Markdale—Saturday before Orangeville
Durham—Third Tuesday in each month.
Chatsworth—Monday before Durham
Holland Center—Saturday before Chatsworth
Priceville—Monday before Durham.
Hanover—Monday before Durham.

This Year's

MYRTLE

CUT and PLUG

SMOKING TOBACCO

FINER THAN EVER.

See

T & B

in bronze on EACH PLUG and PACKAGE

Improved Farm for Sale.

Lots 11 & 12, 1 and 2 range east, T. and S. R., containing 100 acres, 80 cleared, good clay loam, well improved, good frame house and log barn, frame stable, good orchard, etc. This farm is well watered and improved, and is considered one of the best in this section. It is one mile and a half from the village of Flesherton. Will be sold on very easy terms. For further particulars apply to

JAS BEECROFT,
Flesherton P O

FLOUR, FLOUR, STONE FLOUR!

MR. P LOUCKS

is prepared to do your Gristing on short notice and grinds on the old terms of every twelfth bushel. Seven cents per bag of two bushels for Chopping done every day. The Little Mill is big in the estimation of the public.

Satisfaction Guaranteed

P. LOUCKS, Proprietor.

Good stabling for horses.

BLACKBURN'S

is the place for choice goods and fair prices.

Choice Roller Flour, Bran and Shorts, at rockbottom prices.

Cured Meats, Bologona.
Mixed bird seed
Pure prepared Corn,
General assortment of canned goods

CHOICE HONEY

CONFECTIONERY of all kinds
ICE CREAM

and cooling summer drinks. Choice Fruits a specialty

OAT MEAL, CORN MEAL, CRACKED WHEAT and GRAHAM FLOUR,

always on hand.

Remember the place, next door to M. Richardson & Co's

PRICEVILLE BAKERY.

A. WATSON!

Desires to inform the public that he can furnish

CAKES AND PIES

To Order.

FIRST CLASS BREAD ALWAYS ON HAND,

will visit Flesherton twice a week—on TUESDAYS and FRIDAYS, with a full supply of goods.

DROP A CARD IF YOU DESIRE ME TO CALL.

WEDDING and FANCY cakes a specialty

A. WATSON,
Priceville.

A nasal injector free with each bottle of Shiloh's catarrh remedy. Price 50cts. For sale at the Medical Hall.

Shiloh's Cure will immediately relieve croup, whooping cough and bronchitis. For sale at the Medical Hall.

He Tackled the Bear.

It was a state election in Alabama, and among the crowd filling the little town where I happened to be stopping were some queer characters. Among the queerest were an old man and his son—the father about sixty years old, the son about to cast his first vote. The boy had primed up pretty well and by ten o'clock in the forenoon he was saying:

"Father, git ten men to hold me, fur if I turn loose this town won't be nowhar!"

Be calm, Jonas, be calm," advised the old man as he patted him on the shoulder.

"Whoop! yi! yi! Whar's the critter as says he will challenge my fust vote?"

"Thar's no critter sayin' anything of the sort, Jonas. Jist be quiet! Don't be raisin' your voice too much."

Jonas circulated around for a while, took another drink and then came back to the tavern steps and said Father, I've got to turn — e ose."

"Shoo! Jonas!"

"But I hev. I'm a-goin' to cut loose and go fur the hull crowd, fur I can't hold myself no longer."

At that moment a Turk or Bohemian or foreigner of some sort came up with a hand organ and a dancing bear, and I saw a new idea strike Jonas like a landslide. The father saw it too, and he protested:

"Now Jonas doan make no critter of yo'self. You jist let that b'ar alone."

"Pop, I'm gwine ter clinch him. He's altogether too funny fur this yere locality."

"You'll git busted, Jonas. B'ars is onery varmints."

"Got to do it, pap. I'm bubblin' up like bilin' soapsuds, and somethin' has got ter be done or the biler will give way. Stand back! Whoopee!"

Every citizen in the town heard his yell. The bear was about five rods away, going through a waltz, and he stopped his movements to see what was going to happen. Jonas made a bee-line for him, and as he came within six feet he rose in the air and came down astride of Bruin and grabbed him by the ears and yelled:

"America agin the hull arth whoop!"

It was in the middle of the street and the street was dusty. Therefore I cant swear as to what took place during the next two minutes. When the foreigner pulled his bear off there was a bundle of something lying in the dust. It looked like old clothes but it turned out to be Jonas. He wasn't saying a word. He did'nt know it when the father and two others lifted him over against the fence and got water from the town well to pour over him. It was a full quarter of an hour before he opened his eyes and faintly asked:

"Father, did I clean out the hull crowd?"

"No Jonas. You tackled that b'ar agin my advice."

"And kerwolloped him."

"Skeercely. You've done gone got the wust maulin' yer ever heard of in yer born days."

"Licked?"

"I should obsarve. You's bit, clawed, knocked, rolled, paralyzed, and broke, and you won't be fitten to work fur a month. Jonas, you's a critter, a pore fule of a critter, and if this doan't take the swellin' outer your head I'm gwine to hire a nigger and a maul to knock it off. Say, Baker, kin you load this critter into yer cart and tote him out home and leave him at the gate."

A CIRCUS MARRIAGE.—A somewhat unique marriage ceremony was performed at Ottawa one night lately by Rev. W. Winfield at his residence, when he united in holy bonds of matrimony Ali Bin-Debe, chief of the Arab troupe with Barnum's show, and Mrs. Nellie Hamilton, the snake charmer of the same show. some months ago the dark eyes of Nellie captivated the susceptible heart of the dusky denizen of the desert, and he made love by signs and fashions. These culminated in their marriage.

A Woodstock young man attempted to steal a ride on a Grand Trunk freigh train and was killed.

Shiloh's catarrh remedy—a positive cure for catarrh, diptheria and canker mouth. For sale at the Medical Hall

Fall Shows

Following is a list of the dates of fall fairs in this vicinity:

NAME	PLACE.	DATE.
East Grey	Flesherton	Sept. 23 and 24
Artemesia	Priceville	Oct. 3rd
Glenelg	Markdale	26 and 27
South Grey	Durham	Sept. 24 and 25
Great Northern	Collingwood	Sept. 25 to 27
Central Ag'l Soc'ty.	Walters Falls	Sept. 24 and 25
Industrial	Toronto	Sept. 9 to 21
Proton	Dundalk	Oct. 1 and 2
Osprey	Maxwell	Oct. 4

BOOTS & SHOES.

I have a very large supply on and and

Selling very Cheap.

IN LADIES WEAR. Prunlela, Kid, Polish calf and Buff Dongola, Lace and Button.

Misse's, Youth's and Children's

A large assortment, all sorts and sizes.

MEN'S WEAR

Fine Calf and Dongola, Balmorals and Gaiters, also Heavy Boots and Shoes. Prices and Material cannot be beat.

W. CLAYTON.

Photos, Photos, Photos.

We are now turning out work far superior in style and finish to any ever produced in Flesherton.

COPYING and ENLARGING at MODERATE RATES.

PICTURE FRAMING

done in all its branches. A good stock of FRAMES and MOULDINGS kept constantly on hand. Will also introduce the new BROMIDE PORTRAIT, a picture that is giving entire satisfaction wherever introduced. SAMPLES can be seen at my Gallery where all particulars as to Price, Style &c., can be ascertained.

MRS. BULMER,

FLESHERTON

HEALTH FOR ALL.

HOLLOWAY'S PILLS & OINTMENT

THE PILLS

Purify the Blood, correct all Disorders of

Liver, Stomach, Kidn'ys, and Bowels.

They invigorate and restore to health Debilitated Constitutions, and are invaluable in all Complaints incidental to Females of all ages. For Children and the aged they are priceless

THE OINTMENT

An infallible remedy for Bad Legs, Bad Breasts, Old Wounds, Sores and Ulcers. It is famous for Gout and Rheumatism. For disorders of the Chest it has no equa

For SORE THROAT, BRONCHITIS, COUGHS, COLDS

Glandular Swellings, and all Skin Diseases it has no rival, and for contracted and stiff joints it acts like a charm

Manufactured only at Professor HOLLOWAY'S Establishment,

78, New Oxford Street (late 533, Oxford Street), London.

and are sold at 1s. 1½d., 2s. 9d., 4s. 6d., 11s., 22s., and 33s. each Box or Pot, and may be had of all Medicine Vendors throughout the World

☛ Purchasers should look to the Label on the Pots and Boxes. If the address is not 533, Oxford Street, London, they are spurious.

FLESHERTON STOVE EMPORIUM

A large assortment of STOVES, also STOVE FURNISHINGS, TINWARE, COPPERWARE, LAMP GOODS etc., constantly on hand

EVETROUGHING A SPECIALTY

F. G. Karstedt,

Strain's old Stand
Flesherton.

Heard's Carriage Works.

MANUFACTURER OF

Carriages, Buggies, Wagons, Sleighs, Cutters, &c., &c.

HEARD'S IMPROVED HARROWS AND GATES.

Special Attention given to PAINTING, TRIMMING, HORSE-SHOEING and all kinds of JOB WORK. Nothing but first-class material used throughout and satisfaction guaranteed. We have for sale

—Lumber, Lath and Shingles.—

Also Agent for Dick's Rollers, Mowers and Binders. Dick's Champion, Royal Rob Roy, Granger and Standard Plows. Two and Three-Furrow Gang Plows. Horse Powers for 4 Horses. Straw Cutters, Scufflers and Turnip Drills

JOHN H. HEARD, Durham Street, Flesherton.

FLESHERTON ADVANCE.

"TRUTH BEFORE FAVOR"—"PRINCIPLES, NOT MEN."

VOL. VIII., NO 430. FLESHERTON, ONT., THURSDAY, SEPTEMBER 26, 1889. W. H. THURSTON,

Visitors to Flesherton

Exhibition should not fail to call and examine the fine stock of Watches, Clocks, Jewelry, Silverware, Spectacles, etc.,

—AT—

Russell's Noted Jewelry Store, Flesherton,

which has just arrived, consisting of Gold and Silver Watches, Ladies' and Gents' sizes, Rings, Cuffbuttons, Charms, Gents' and Ladies' Gold Chains, Diamond Rings, etc. We expect to do the trade this fall and winter and have a very fine selection of Goods on hand, call and examine, no trouble to show goods.

And always take your watches, etc. to Russell to repair, if you want a perfect job.

Russell's Jewelery Store, Flesherton

TO WHOM IT MAY CONCERN.

The CASH STORE is offering special lines in all departments.

Our DRY GOODS DEPARTMENT

has lately been filled to overflowing, with as choice a Line of goods as ever shown. In making our selections we realize that to the quality of the goods sold, we must look to the building up of that confidence between buyer and seller, so essential to a commercial success and permanence. Customers will find that in respect to quality, our stock has no superior.

DRESS GOODS

in leading shades, plain and durable. Prices ranging from 10c. to 50c. with trimmings to match. In Braids, Gimp, Plushes and Velvets, Gray, White, Navy Blue and Red Flannels, second to none for QUALITY and PRICE. It would take too much space to mention all our lines in this department separately. But we would request an inspection, guaranteeing satisfactory results.

Our BOOT and SHOE Assortment Larger Than Ever.

Special lines of women's high Laced Boots at $1.14
Men's long Boots from $1.75 up. Misses and Children's in all sizes. Groceries, Crockery and general merchandise.

Persons visiting the fair would do well to give us a call.

McDONALD & EVANS,

Wright's Old Stand.

Pumps! Pumps!

J. McCullough,

Markdale,

manufacturer of pumps, desires to inform the public that he is prepared to furnish pumps for

Deep wells, gravel wells, etc.

parties who have heretofore had difficulty with their wells are

Guaranteed Satisfaction

using my articles. I learned my business with the late J. Fear, of Meaford, the superiority of whose pumps was a household word in Grey a few years ago

Do sure and call on me if you desire anything in the pump line

J. McCullough.

FARM FOR SALE CHEAP AND ON EASY terms, lot 7, con. 2, township of Euphrasia containing 200 acres. This is a splendid valuable timber farm. Well timbered with mixed hardwood, hemlock and cedar. Splendid soil. 1½ miles from the beautiful village of Kimberley in Queen's Valley where there are mills, stores, post office and church, and 11 miles from Flesherton on the C. P. R. where there is a splendid market for all kinds of produce, stock, lumber and timber. Apply to R. J. Sproule, auctioneer and real estate agent, Flesherton.

Flesherton Livery Stables.

D. CLAYTON, Proprietor.

First class horses and vehicles for hire at reasonable rates.

Stables opposite Munshaw's hotel. Special attention paid to commercial business

THE ADVANCE.

Is published

Every Thursday,

FROM THE OFFICE,

Sydenham Street, - - Flesherton, Ont.

TERMS OF SUBSCRIPTION

$1 per annum when paid within the year in advance $1.50 per annum when [illegible]

ADVERTISING RATES

One column 1 year $80, half do 2 [illegible] quarter [illegible]

[illegible] of nonpareil space [illegible]

W. H. THURSTON,

[illegible]

EDITORIAL NOTES.

The trial of the prisoners charged with the [illegible] which was in progress during most of last week, goes to show what inhuman brutes some men can make of themselves when they take law into their own hands. They have been sent up for trial, and it is hoped a just reward will be meted out to them providing guilt is established. The act alleged to have taken place on that boat was worthy of pirates.

Mr. J.J. Dearn, a candidate for the Newfoundland Assembly, has a magnificent command of language, as witnessed by the following. He recently remarked that the reason the people of St John's allowed the Telegram to exist was because "they looked upon the editor as a foolish, [illegible] imbecile, [illegible] witless, [illegible] Yorkish, [illegible] addled, unenlightened, [illegible] prejudiced, purblind, narrow minded, crotchety, conceited, mulish, [illegible] infatuated, hypocritical, cadaverous, half fledged, unwashed, God-forsaken, hungry-looking, soft-brained, woolly-headed, knock-kneed, long eared, squint eyed, lantern jawed, slab sided, ill natured, puerile, insignificant, puppy, vicious, effeminate, sheepish, mellow, utterly depraved and miserably wretched nincompoop, and so let him slide."

The terrible catastrophe which befel Quebec on Thursday evening last is another exemplification of the remarkable indifference of humanity to danger in some instances. In this case it is all the more wonderful from the fact that two similar catastrophes have occurred in that identical spot during the past fifty years. There is food for deep thought and moralizing in this case. Two similar warnings had been given, many lives had before been lost in the same manner, yet the people still continued to live under the shadow of death with the fond hope (if they hoped at all) that a disaster would not overtake them in their day and generation. Familarity bred contempt in their case, but alas the fate came upon them, and ten million tons of rock wiped out the lives of two and a half score, while more than the same number live in agony to bewail their folly. It is pitiful to think of the awful indifference which man can pay to deadly danger. No more terrible proof of this can be found than in the fate of these dwellers under the shadow of Cape Diamond.

The Witness Prize Competition

The winners of the Montreal Witness "Dominion Prize Competition" have just been announced. The competition, concerning which we notice some writers request that it should be made annual, or at least repeated, was a capital device for stimulating patriotism and native literature at the same time. Tales and sketches were asked for from all school children, illustrative of pioneer life in Canada. The Northern Messenger, a small paper published at the same office, was offered as a prize for the best tale in every school in the Dominion. A prize of greater value, Macaulay's last ryin five volumes, was sent to the writer of the best tale in each county, and a set of Parkman's works was the reward of the best in each province. The judges appointed to award these prizes were men of recognized ability, the judge for the province of Ontario having been Mr Wm Houston, Parliamentary Librarian Toronto. Finally a Dominion prize a set enbid type-writer, was awarded by Lord Lorne. The Dominion prize has very curiously been taken by a young lady outside of the Dominion, the Witness having in view of its numerous readers in Newfoundland, counted that province for the purpose of this competition, as though it had been a part of Canada. None will be jealous that our little province has carried off this honor. The winner is Miss May Selby Holden of St. John's, whose portrait and autograph appear in the Witness with her tale. The second honor is awarded by Lord Lorne to Norman L. Cook of Gaya River, N.S. The other province prize winners are: Miss Ellie Ladner, Kamloops, Yale Co., British Columbia; Miss Lizzie McLaren, Woodworth, Lennis Co., Manitoba; Miss Mary Ann McPherson, River Charlo, Restigouche, New Brunswick; Miss Abigail Smith, Harwich, Kent Co., Ontario; Benj. Howard, Summerside, Prince Co. Prince Edward Island; Victor Morrill Stanstead, Stanstead Co., Quebec.

Following are the names of the prize winners for Grey County:—Fred Custer, Miss Martha, P. Williams, Miss Kate Malone, Wm. J. Clark, Meaford; Thos. Gadd, Varney; Martha Patterson, Wesley; R. L. Dean, Louise; Miss Bella Anderson, Eastwood; Miss Annie Hewis, Kemble; Herbert G. Goodere, Miss Alice Perves, Allen Park; David H. Moss, Bayview; Miss Goldie Hopkins, Blantyre; Archie Randall, Camperdown; Miss Ida Stone, Flesherton Station; William G. Nadigar, Lamlash; Miss Ella Cook, Traverston; George Dixon, Dromore; Herbert Boon, Thornbury; Miss Herron, Tara; Miss Mamie McRae, Wareham; Miss Sarah Garvie, Clement M. Keys, Clarksburg.

Eugenia.

From an Occasional Correspondent.

This last week professor Howard, of Ithaca University, New York state, and one Mr. Linden, of Rochester, have been scouring the woods around Eugenia in search of a plant called Chinsing. It is one of the most valuable plants known to science. It is dried and sent to China, where it is worth its weight in gold. It grows quite plentiful in the woods around this part of the country. In searching for it professor Howard picked up pieces of rock which he thinks indicate very valuable silver mines around Eugenia. He says the ground and the rock and the plants that grow around all show very plain signs of valuable mines, both of gold and silver, also copper. The Professor has sent away some of the rock to the University to be analyzed. He is coming around again to see more about it. When Mr. J. W. Heath sunk his well some time ago he raised up some rock that had rich veins of copper. Some of the pieces were sent to New York as specimens of the rocks in this part of Canada. The gentleman who got it was so impressed with the belief that it contained copper that he had it examined by an expert who said it was rich in copper, with some gold. That was only twenty-seven feet down where it was found. If the Americans take it in hand we may hope for something to turn up yet at Eugenia, but unless they do we may sleep on for another decade, as nothing short of an earthquake will waken up the people of Eugenia to their own interests.

Mr James Purvis, of Toronto, has been trying to recruit his failing health at his father's, Mr William Purvis of Eugenia. The pure air has benefitted him wonderfully in a few weeks time.

GLENFIELD.

Several brigands were surprised [illegible] Servian village by gendarmes, who set fire to the house and burned up three of the outlaws.

[illegible]

THE MARKETS.

FLESHERTON.

Carefully corrected every week.

[illegible]

Flour
Fall Wheat
Spring Wheat
Barley
Oats
Peas
Butter
[illegible]
[illegible]
Potatoes
Hay

SIGN

"Big Spen

Gold, filled go and Coin-silve cases.

Ladies and Gents

Walnut and Nickle Cl

I am represented by A. J. Watson backed up by reliable warrants Lomes of Central Grey that I doing [illegible]

If prices are [illegible]

QUALITY Considered

I would not be able to hold my share of Grey Co. trade as I have at

"CASH or CRE

will pay you better by a

Goods, Work

Warrants Considered

than you can do elsewhere [illegible] cally fitted

Work Carefully Done

Fair Char

Stock now complete in [illegible]

Can save yo to $3.00 o watches

Other lines will be held on [illegible] live margins.

W. A. BROWN

Jeweler and [illegible]

MARKDALE, Ont

THE CAYUGA'S CLAIMS.

Canadian Indians Want a Quarter Million From the State of New York—A Nonagenarian Witness.

A Buffalo despatch says: The Standing Committee on Indian Affairs of the Senate, to which was delegated the duty of investigating the claims of the Cayuga Nation of Indians, was to have held a meeting yesterday afternoon at Senator Laughlin's office. There was no quorum of the committee, but by consent of all the parties the testimony of Henry Phillips, a Seneca Indian, 94 years of age, was taken, to be used before the committee with the same effect as if all the members were present.

The claim of the Cayugas grows out of a treaty made between the State and that nation at a time when certain of its lands were purchased, the consideration being an annuity of $23,000, to be paid by the State. During the war of 1812 a portion of the Cayugas went to Canada and joined the British army and from that time out received no portion of the annuities, the American Cayugas taking the whole amount. The claim now made on behalf of the Canadian Cayugas is that by the treaty of Ghent the United States became at peace with them, and therefore that they were and still are entitled to their share of the annuities and should be paid the amount to which they were entitled from the date of the ratification of the treaty of Ghent until the present time, amounting to about a quarter of a million dollars.

The members of the Senate Committee are Messrs. Vedder, Laughlin and Pierce; and they are represented by Mr. Johnston, of Salamanca. The Canadian Cayugas are represented by Gen. James C. Strong, of this city, and the Dominion Government is represented by Messrs. Richie & Mickham, barristers, of Toronto. Mr. George H. Thornton is the official stenographer of the committee. An adjournment was had until November 11th, at Brantford, Ont.

Probably Wrongfully Imprisoned.

A Montreal despatch says: Last spring a man named Hennessy was sentenced to 14 years in the Penitentiary for committing an assault on a Miss Roberts. At the present term of the court a man named Mulcahey is being tried as an accomplice of Hennessy. A sensation was created in court to-day when Spicer, a Grand Trunk watchman, swore that neither Hennessy nor Mulcahey resembled the men from whom he had rescued Miss Roberts at the time the outrage was committed. He pointed to one of the witnesses in the case as being most like one of the fellows. Hennessy, produced as a witness against Mulcahy, solemnly protested his innocence and declared that, so far as he knew, Mulcahy, too, was innocent. An impression is getting abroad that some of the witnesses for the prosecution may be the guilty parties. If Mulcahy is acquitted it is possible an application may be made for the release of Hennessy.

Newspaper Postage.

An Ottawa despatch says: The Deputy Postmaster-General stated to day that the object of the Department in asking postmasters to note the weight of printed matter mailed at their office was solely for statistical purposes. Not since the institution of free postage for newspapers has an accurate return been made of the amount actually carried through the mails, and for this purpose therefore, postmasters have been asked to furnish a return of newspapers and periodical matter mailed at their offices from Sept. 1st to 14th.

Stanley's Movements.

A despatch from Zanzibar says: Henry M. Stanley, on leaving the basin of the Albert Nyanza, endeavored to make his way southward by passing to the west of the Victoria Nyanza. He failed, however, in his attempt. He then went northward and reached the eastern shore of the lake. Emin Pasha accompanied him. After a long stay on the borders of the lake awaiting supplies from Msalala and Tabora, Stanley, leaving Emin Pasha, marched in the direction of Mombasa. He is expected to reach the eastern seacoast about the end of October.

War Amongst West Virginia Negroes.

A Huntington, W. Va., despatch of Friday says: News has reached here of a terrible encounter among negroes at Bramwell, Mercer County. A number of colored miners had been drinking and engaged in a fight. Knives were drawn, and Dan Lambert and Tom Kadle were literally cut to pieces. Three of their companions were seriously, if not fatally, injured. The fight arose over a remark which some one made concerning Lambert's wife.

FREDERICK T. ROBERTS, M. D., Professor of Clinical Medicine at University College Hospital, London, England, says: "Bright's Disease has no symptoms of its own and may long exist without the knowledge of the patient or practitioner, and no pain will be felt in the kidneys or their vicinity." All the diseases to which the kidneys are subject and to which they give rise can be prevented if treated in time." Warner's Safe Cure is the only recognized specific. R. A. Gunn, M. D., Dean, and Professor of Surgery of the United States Medical College; "Editor of "Medical Tribune," author of "Gunn's New and Improved Hand-book of Hygiene and Domestic Medicine," says: "I am willing to acknowledge and commend thus frankly the value of Warner's Safe Cure."

They Turn Him Over.

In France, when a patient is under chloroform, on the slightest symptom appearing of failure of the heart they turn him nearly upside down—that is, with his head downward and his heels in the air. This, they say, always restores him; and such is their faith in the efficacy of this method that the operating tables in the Paris hospitals are made so that in an instant they can be elevated with one end in the air, so as to bring the patient into a position resembling that of standing on the head.

A Bad Omen.

Charley—What do you say to Lord Lovell's intending to stay here, and become an American citizen?

Kyrle—Evidently poverty-stricken—compelled to change his last sovereign!

ELECTRICITY WILL KILL.

An Italian Fruit Vendor Instantly Killed by a Live Wire.

A Friday's New York despatch says: Joseph Matz, an Italian, met a horrible death to-day by coming in contact with a "live" electric wire at the corner of East Houston and Chrystie streets. Matz and another Italian kept a fruit stand there. On account of the rain torrents of water poured down from the gutter, and the board awning was partially filled with mud. To remove this mud Matz climbed an electric light pole and gained the roof of the awning. On this pole were thirty wires. When Matz stooped to clean the gutter he faced a network of wires about breast high. In performing his work he slipped, and in trying to save himself he grasped one wire with his hand and fell forward on another, which caught him under the neck and chin. Matz then gave a shout which startled the passers-by. The latter saw the man actually burn alive. Blue light shot from the wire when it came in contact with his skin, and the wire burned into his flesh with a crackling sound. One Albert rushed into the house, and climbing out of the window, took hold of Matz and tried to pull him from the wires. The moment that he touched the body Albert received a shock that nearly threw him to the ground. Finally two linemen arrived and cut the wires and pulled the body into one of the windows, just ten minutes after the wire had touched him. The body presented a horrible appearance. The wire had burned a hole four inches long and penetrated to the larynx. The hand which clutched the wire was burned almost to the bone. The odor from the body was sickening. An ambulance surgeon who had been summoned said death was instantaneous.

PLACING THE BLAME.

The Official Investigation Into the Antwerp Disaster.

An Antwerp cable says: Nothing remains of the cartridge factory in which the explosion occurred on Friday. The village of Austruwell, situated 200 metres from the factory, and which consisted of 40 houses, has vanished. The hydraulic machines used in the dry dock were almost entirely destroyed. A number of merchandise depots, including the Prussian stores, which were constructed of iron, were overturned by the explosion, and an immense quantity of goods was ruined. Two stained glass windows in the cathedral were broken, but the building is intact. For a distance of 500 to 1,000 metres the windows of houses were shattered. Not a drop of the burning petroleum got into the docks, the depots being surrounded by a high embankment. The official report says 135 persons were killed, twenty are missing, 100 were seriously and 200 slightly injured.

The Government's official report says nothing has been clearly established regarding the origin of the explosion. The Governor says the cartridge factory worked three months without a license, when it was closed by order of the city authorities. M. Corvillain, the proprietor of the factory, then applied for a license, which was granted after an inspection of the factory and the imposition of stringent regulations for its management. The Governor says he does not know whether the city authorities' inspection was adequate or not. When the explosion occurred an inquiry was proceeding with reference to an accident that had resulted from the unauthorized introduction of a steam engine into a factory.

Another Boulangist Manifesto.

A Paris cable says: Gen. Boulanger has issued a manifesto to the electors of Montmartre. In it he says: "If I ask the suffrages of the people, it is because I represent, not the personality depicted by my calumniators, but a national sentiment aspiring to throw off the burden of a growing debt and the intolerable iniquities and humiliation to which the country is subjected." Despite the refusal of the Prefect of the Seine to receive Gen. Boulanger's declaration of candidacy for member of the Chamber of Deputies, placards were posted in Montmartre, in the Department of the Seine, announcing that he would be a candidate. The police have torn down the placards and arrested the men who posted them.

Killed by a Ballast Train.

A Halifax despatch of Thursday says: On Monday, as the C. P. R. express going north was passing Greenville, it struck a young Frenchman named Melauson, a laborer, on the ballast train which had taken the siding to allow the express to pass. It is supposed he was standing too near the track. He was badly cut and bruised about the head. His jaw was broken in three places and his collarbone broken, besides internal injuries. The man was taken to Oxford for medical attendance and thence to his home at Meadowbrook, Westmoreland county, N. S., where he died on Tuesday night.

How do You Lace Your Boots?

Not one person in a thousand laces his shoes correctly. About the nearest anybody gets to it is to lace as tightly as possible. The correct way is to put your foot when you are about to lace your shoe as much as possible in the heel of the shoe. You can do this best by lacing your shoes with the heel of your shoe resting in a chair standing in front of the one you are seated in. Over the instep the lacing should be drawn as tightly as possible. This will hold your foot back in the shoe, giving the toes freedom and preventing their being cramped. Lace about the ankle to suit your comfort.—Vanity Fair.

How It is Done.

Son—Papa, how do they catch lunatics?

Cynical Father—With large straw hats and feathers and white dresses, jewelry and neat gloves, my boy.

Mamma (musingly)—Yes, I remember that time how I dressed before we were married.

The Pall Mall Gazette says: "It has been arranged that H. R. H. the Duke of Connaught, who is Commander-in-Chief of the Bombay division of the British army in India, shall return to England in March next. He will travel home via China, Japan and Canada, passing through Ottawa, Montreal, etc. H. R. H. is a Lieutenant-General in the army.

THE STRIKE ENDED.

The Dockmen to Receive an Increase on November 4th.

A Wednesday night's London cable says: The negotiations between the representatives of the dock companies and the wharfingers were resumed to-day. The conference was private, though with a view to prevent subsequent misunderstandings a stenographer was present to transcribe the proceedings. Several more wharfingers have conceded the demands of the strikers. Nearly 1,000 men resumed work this morning.

The strikers are as resolute as ever. Their pickets display greater activity, and have prevented many batches of new men engaged to take the place of strikers from proceeding to the docks.

Another meeting of strikers was held at Tower Hill. Mr. Tillett and Mr. Champion made addresses, in which they congratulated the strikers upon the increase in the subscriptions for their benefit, and the better organized plan for the distribution of relief. They expressed the belief that Cardinal Manning, who they say is deeply impressed with the justice of the strikers' demands, would succeed to-day in arranging a settlement.

There is a pause in the strike negotiations. Cardinal Manning has postponed his interview with the directors of the dock companies until to-morrow.

Mr. Burns is ill from overwork, and is taking a day's rest.

Further contributions of money for the relief of the strikers have been received from Australia. The Strike Committee have nearly $12,000 on hand. The Seamen's Union has sent a request to the unions in Australia to refuse to unload vessels from London loaded by "blacklegs."

A London cable of Thursday night says: Australia sent an additional contribution of £700 to the strikers' fund to-day. The Mansion House Strike Committee announce that a more amicable feeling prevails on both sides, and that only extraneous questions now prevent a settlement, which it is hoped will be attained to-morrow.

Some city gentlemen, believing the Australian contributions to the strikers' fund have been sent under a wrong impression, have sent a cable despatch to Australia, with the view of preventing further remittances.

The Pall Mall Gazette suggests that an organization be formed for the purpose of raising the £10,000 necessary to pay the dock laborers sixpence per hour from November 1st to January 1st. A leading business man has offered to contribute £2,000 for this purpose on condition that the remaining four-fifths be subscribed immediately.

A Friday night's London cable says: The Joint Committee appointed to consider the proposals of the strikers have agreed that the wages demanded by the dock laborers shall be conceded, the advance to take effect on November 4th. The Lord Mayor, at a conference with the directors of the Dock Companies to day, gave assurance that the men were now ready to resume work on Monday. In view of the approaching end of the dock laborers' strike, the lightermen are seeking to resume work.

The Mansion House Committee announce that the dock directors and the men have practically agreed, and that as soon as other interests are arranged all the men will resume work on the understanding that the deferred concession will be granted in November.

The Secretary of the Surrey Commercial Docks has officially refused to grant the terms demanded by the men's manifesto, but it is expected the matter will be arranged, as the southern men are only striking out of sympathy with the northern men.

FIRE AND PANIC.

The Cry of "Fire" Starts a Mad Scramble Among 10,000 People.

A Sunday's Chicago special says: Nearly 10,000 people rushed pell-mell out of the Exposition Building here last night, falling over each other down stairs and jumping through windows in their hurry to escape. Fire had started in one of the big booths near the center of the huge structure, and the glare of the flames and the crash of the plate glass caused a panic. Men, women and children joined in the mad scramble for the exits, which, fortunately, were numerous enough to prevent fatal crushing. Within five minutes the excited thousands were safe outside. Before the flames were extinguished one-fourth of the interior of the exposition was in ruins. The damage to the building itself was slight. Probably $75,000 will cover the loss, which is distributed among some of the largest exhibitors. Nobody was seriously injured, though many doubtless suffered minor hurts. One young lady and her escort had to descend by ladders from the roof, the elevators and stairways having caught fire. The fire was caused by an ignited carbon falling from one of the electric lights into a pile of ribbons.

Transplantation of the Cornea.

The London Lancet says that Dr. Gradenigo, Professor of Ophthalmic Surgery in the University of Padua, has just succeeded in transplanting the cornea from the eye of a barn fowl into the eye of a patient under his care. On the eighth day after the operation the transplanted cornea presented a quite pellucid and convex appearance. Such a result has not before been recorded in the annals of continental surgery.

In the Gloaming.

She (after a moment of silence)—What are you thinking about, Charley.

He—Oh, just about the same thing you're thinking yourself.

She—If you do I'll slap you.

—"Yellow work" is the latest popular phrase for bad work. Whence do these slang expressions come? All at once they are in the air, and all who are without repect for the purity of the English tongue are using them. They have their day and then they vanish. They die probably of inanition, but their birth is a mystery.—Boston Herald.

It is said all the husbands who go to Chicago after a divorce cross the cantilever bridge.

A man with a pinchbeck watch called it Faith, because it was without works and therefore dead.

RATHER APOCRYPHAL.

Gossip About the Disagreements in the Royal Nest.

A London cable gives this story: In Court circles just now interest is centered upon the private and personal affairs of the Royal family, which do not present a picture of harmony and good feeling. The Queen, it is understood, has been gradually submitting more and more to the aggressive domination of Prince Henry of Battenberg, who, although he is regarded as a person of little consequence or character, seems to have a domineering spirit, and to have succeeded in persuading Her Majesty that he is able to manage the realm as well as anybody. It is reported that the Queen takes his advice upon everything, submitting her own judgment to his opinion on all manner of subjects. With the increase of influence which has come with Her Majesty's growing favor, Prince Battenberg has developed an arrogance of behavior which is extremely offensive to all who are obliged to come into any sort of relation with him. The Prince of Wales, upon learning that the Queen had consulted Prince Henry with regard to the Bill in the House of Commons for the provision of the Royal family, sent a furious protest against the interference of a comparatively insignificant outsider with the private affairs of his family. In addition to this the Duchess of Fife complained to her father of the insolent and overbearing behavior of Prince Henry, which did not tend to calm the rage of the Prince of Wales, or to make matters any more pleasant between him and his royal mother. The Queen's protection alone prevents Battenberg being boycotted by the other members of the Royal family. They all want him to be sent to reside on the continent, but it is not at all likely the Queen will yield an inch or allow her peculiar fondness for this unpleasant young man to be interfered with.

A GOOD NAVY, BUT IT COMES HIGH.

A Specimen Warship of John Bull that Cost $1,313,970.

A hundred years ago the expense of building a ship-of-the-line of 100 guns in the Royal Dock yards was £67,600. This included the cost of coppering and copper bolting, and of masts, yards, rigging, sails, anchors, cables, and all other boatswain's and carpenter's stores. This was the original expense of the Royal George, a 100-gun ship, launched in 1788 at Chatham. She was of 2,286 tons, and was about 190 feet long and 52 feet broad. The modern equivalent to the old wooden line-of-battle ship of the first rate is the first-class iron-clad battle-ship, and the Trafalgar may be regarded as a good specimen of the finest and most recent vessels of this type. Her original cost, exclusive of armament, was no less than £862,794. She is of 11,940 tons displacement, and is 345 feet long and 73 feet broad. Thus, while the first-class battle-ship of a hundred years ago cost only about £29 11s. 4d. per ton, the first-class battle-ship of to-day costs over £72 6s. per ton.

In the course of the century we have quintupled the size and increased by about twelve times the expense of our men-of-war of the first class. The cost of smaller line-of-battle ships in 1786 was: For a 98 gun ship, £57,120; for an 80 gun ship, £53,120; for a 74 gun ship, £43,820. The smallest sea-going ironclad of the present era, the Hotspur, cost, as a first charge, over £171,500. The frigates of 1789 were the equivalents of our present second class cruisers. A 44-gun frigate then cost £31,000; a 38-gun frigate, £20,830; a 36 gun frigate, £19,070; a 32 gun frigate, £15,080, and a 28-gun frigate, £12,420. The original cost of some modern second class cruisers was as follows: Inconstant, £215,324; Forth, £201,952; Mercury, £213,252; Phaeton, £145,198. We may take it, therefore, that, roughly speaking, a large cruiser nowadays costs ten times as much as she did a hundred years ago.

Speed of Locomotives.

The question, "How fast can a locomotive run?" has been a good deal discussed recently in the engineering papers. The conclusion appears to be that there is no authentic record of any speed above 80 miles an hour. That speed was obtained many years ago by a Bristol & Exeter tank engine with nine foot driving wheels—a long extinct species—down a steep bank. But it has, apparently, never been beaten. It is indeed, not a little strange how sharply the line appears to have been drawn at 80 miles an hour. Records of 75 miles an hour are as plenty as blackberries. Records of 80 miles are exceedingly rare. Records of any greater speed have a way of crumbling beneath the lightest touch.

The "Addressee."

The postoffice department has recently coined a word which will probably find its way into the dictionaries. It is "addressee," and signifies the person to whom a letter is addressed. We presume it will be equally applicable to the charming young lady who is receiving the addresses of a lover. It would work something in this way in such a case:

"Jones is paying his addresses to Miss Smith."

"Indeed, is the addressee rich and handsome?"—Boston Courier.

A Great Barrier.

Friend—What's come up between you and Miss Dumpling?

De Leffs sadly)—Her father.

Miss Adele Aus der Ohe, the pianiste, intends making a tour of the country, which will extend to San Francisco.

A daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Kendall is to make her debut as an actress in England after the return of her parents from their American tour.

During his tour in this country Signor Salvini will confine his repertoire to three plays—"The Gladiator," "Othello" and "Samson."

Mr. Wilson Barrett is at work at present re-writing "The Lord Harry," which he intends to produce during his forthcoming visit to this country.

The Boston Ideal Opera Company this season will contain many singers new to the organization. Among them are Miranda, the baritone, who has been for a long time at Covent Garden; Scovel and Bassett, the tenors, and Mme. L'Allemand and Mlle. Romeldi, sopranos. The repertoire has been enlarged and will include many Italian operas.

OUR NORTHWEST.

Currency is given to the reports that Mr. Hugh Sutherland will become a candidate for the Local Legislature for Kildonan.

The charge of embezzlement against Martin McDonald, late Registrar of Deeds at Brandon, has been dismissed.

Mayor Ryan received a telegram this morning from the Governor-General's Secretary stating that His Excellency would remain in the city on the 24th, 25th and 26th inst. Probably a reception will be given on the evening of the 23rd to His Excellency.

A letter received yesterday from Sir John Lister Kaye states that harvest on his farms is now over and that the yield will be at least 120,000 bushels, which he considers very satisfactory.

Rev. M. McHaffie and his companions, who were reported drowned, arrived at Selkirk at 3.20 this afternoon. They report having a very rough trip, and were compelled to take shelter for many days, which accounts for their delay.

The annual meeting of the Manitoba Branch of the Royal Caledonian Curling Club last night was largely attended by delegates from outside Clubs. It was decided to hold the next big bonspiel in the second week in February.

It has been discovered that Messrs. Isaac Campbell and Perdue, the lawyers who acted for Burke, the Cronin suspect, received $600 for their services. The money came from three different channels, enclosed in a piece of white paper without a note of explanation. It was evidently the intention of the senders to give no clue to the source of the financial assistance given to Burke.

Between 800 and 1,000 men are employed on the Regina and Long Lake Road. Forty miles of the road are graded and track-laying has been begun.

The Morris and Brandon branch of the Northern Pacific will be opened for business about the middle of November.

A. Pearson has announced his intention to be a candidate for the Mayoralty at the next election.

Sproule, ex-Chief of Police of Portage la Prairie, was up for trial this morning for embezzlement, before Magistrate Giles, of that place. The constable in charge of Sproule was sent out of the court room for some papers, when Sproule walked out of the back door, and before the court had recovered from its surprise he had skipped for the bush on the river south of the town and has not been seen since. He will doubtless escape over the boundary.

Five Mennonite men, while under the influence of liquor at one of the Mennonite villages, in Southern Manitoba, brutally assaulted a young Mennonite girl, aged 18. After the brutes had accomplished their foul purpose the poor girl was released in an almost nude condition, and is at the point of death. The matter was hushed up, as the Mennonites do not believe in going to law, and the brutes were let off by the Chief of the village on the payment of one dollar each.

Commissioner Wrigley, of the Hudson Bay Company, has just returned from a trip to Alaska. He says work has been begun on the coal mines in Queen Charlotte Island.

Principal Grant has returned to the city from the Pacific coast.

The Northwest Legislative Assembly will meet on October 16th.

Mandeville's livery stable, on the corner of Graham and Fort streets, was destroyed by fire and also the adjoining building, known as the old International Hotel. Seven valuable horses were burned. Total loss, $12,000.

It is said the writ for the new election in Denis, rendered necessary by the appointment of Mr. Maclean as Provincial Secretary, has been issued. Nomination is fixed for the 28th inst., and polling a week later.

A brakeman named Kennedy was killed near Medicine Hat while coupling cars. His parents reside in this city.

New Uses for for Cocoanut Oil.

It is found that cocoanut oil is not only an excellent lubricant, but it is of great value for lighting purposes. A Frenchman in Cuba has just established a factory for the manufacture of this oil. He has imported the most perfect machinery, in order that the oil produced shall be as pure as possible. The oil is very fluid, oxidizes slowly, and is said to keep long without turning rancid.

Evidences of Thrift.

Omaha Papa—So you are going to marry, are you, my son? I presume the young lady you are to wed knows all about housework and looking after the wants of a family?

Omaha Youth—Well, you just bet she does. I wish you could see a cotton batting dog she made last week, and some butterflies she painted on velvet.

Quick Justice in England.

A condemned criminal in England must be allowed to see three Sundays between his sentence and his execution. Of course, he can thus be hanged in a little over two weeks, but the three Sundays must pass over his head before the gallows claims him. The custom is a relic of medieval times, when a criminal was allowed that much of a respite to prepare for death.

The Lesser of Two Evils

Clerk (entering theatrical manager's sanctum)—There's a young man waiting who wants to read a play to you, sir; and another man who says he's come to horsewhip you for breach of contract.

Manager (taking off his coat)—Oh, show in the man who's going to horsewhip me.

TROT OUT YOUR ELIXIR

We thank thee Doctor Brown Sequard,
That science is not all in vain,
The female sex are glad to learn
Old maids may be made young again

'Tis better to have loved and lost
Than never to have loved at all,"
The poet says; what "might have been
May all come back at their recall.

Dear, darling Doctor Brown-Sequard,
This problem solve, if in thy power;
A monument to thee we'll raise
Far higher than the Eiffel tower.

Gods! how the earth will bloom afresh
And poets sing a glad refrain,
If thou canst cause such happiness
As make the old maids young again

A. H. W.

—Editor (returning from his vacation)—Anything happened since I've been away? Assistant—Yes, the assessors assessed the office towel as real estate.

MANCHESTER'S CANAL.

One of the Great Engineering Feats of the Present Age.

The objective point of this (Saturday) morning was the famous ship canal now in course of construction between Liverpool and Manchester, says Julian Hawthorne in a letter to the Detroit News. These two great towns, each containing at least 500,000 inhabitants, have long been jealous rivals, after the fashion of our own St. Paul and Minneapolis or St. Louis and Chicago. By making this canal Manchester will immensely improve her position, for it will render her a seaport in every way as convenient and accessible as Liverpool herself. The canal has long been in contemplation, but has been delayed by many causes, among which the opposition of the railway corporations are not the most formidable. But all the obstacles were at length overcome. The route of the canal was surveyed with extraordinary care and judgement. The contract was given to one man, the renowned Mr. Walker, whose successful management of an enterprise at Buenos Ayres, involving a cost of £5,000,000, and of the Severn tunnel have given him an unsurpassed reputation. No part of the contract has been sublet; he conducts it all himself, and so careful were his calculations that he will clear a handsome profit from the transaction. He began work eighteen months ago and will complete the job in 1891, or in about four and a half years. The total cost will come within £10,000,000—$50,000,000. He employs an army of 12,000 workmen, and dredging and other machinery that save the labor of ten times as many men. The men work ten hours a day, beginning at 6 a.m. and ending at 5:30 p.m., with intermissions for breakfast and dinner. I was informed by the overseer of the ninth section (whose department we were visiting) that no workman had been discharged since operations began. The wages are from fourpence to sixpence per hour. The contractor has built at intervals of five miles along the route of the canal cottages, chapels and gymnasiums for the use of the workmen, and I believe schools for their children, all free. This has never been done before, and the results have been very gratifying. We visited one of the chapels, a fine, airy, clean edifice of wood, perfectly simple but entirely adequate. The men themselves, so far as we saw anything of them (Saturday was a holiday), were fine, healthy, quiet fellows, not perhaps so intelligent as the corresponding class would be in America, but undoubtedly well up to their work. In fact, English operatives are, as a rule, at least as expert as ours, because they have been at work all their lives, and not only that, but their fathers and grandfathers before them. Their skill is, so to speak, congenital. The operations are being pushed forward all along the route of the canal, from Liverpool through the valley of the Mersey. The lines are as straight as practicable, the river winding along beside it. The entrance is at Eartham, a place on the Cheshire bank of the Mersey, a few miles above Birkenhead, which is opposite Liverpool. The cut has a uniform depth of 30 feet, with a breadth of 120 feet (as against 72 feet in the Suez), and the water is 26 feet deep. It is lined throughout with solid concrete, the walls sloping slightly outward, and is faced at the top with huge blocks of Cornish granite riveted together. There are four locks in the total length of 35 miles, each giving a lift of 15 feet. The largest steamships afloat can come up this canal direct from the ocean, and unload their cargoes in the vast basins that are building here, and in a few years the singular spectacle will be presented of these leviathans of the Atlantic steaming slowly through the verdant English valleys. The time occupied on the trip from Liverpool will be about seven hours, including all stops. The canal widens out at the locks so that there are three locks abreast at each point. As we were about to depart an engine came steaming along the track, carrying the week's wages of the workmen, who were gathered together in their best clothes—corduroys and yarn stockings. They were very orderly and clean looking. A greater contrast in every respect than this great work and all those concerned in it offers to the New York aqueduct job could hardly be imagined, and the contrast is nowhere in favor of the latter. Everything is done here as it was planned to be done; it costs only what it was promised to cost; it is being completed within the time it was contracted to complete it in; the work in every detail is the best and soundest of its kind, and there is no politics in it. There is food for reflection for Americans in the Manchester ship canal.

Stuttering.

It is said that stutterers, when speaking in a whisper, show no impediment of speech. This fact has been turned to account by Coen. In his method of treatment, for the first ten days speaking is prohibited. During the next ten days speaking is permissible in the whispering voice, and in the course of the next fifteen days the ordinary conversational tone may be gradually employed.—Ex.

Whose Life is Always Spring.

First—There is at least one man with whom life is always spring.

Quiz—And who is that?

First—An acrobat.

The Pall Mall Budget says: After all, the Princess Victoria will not, it is said, marry Lord Chelsea, as everybody says she will. In a few days you will hear officially that Her Royal Highness is affianced to the Prince of Hohenlohe-Langenburg, a second cousin of the Queen, being the grandson of Her Majesty's half sister. On the other hand, the fine estate in Suffolk which formerly belonged to the Cornwallis family, and which Earl Cadogan has bought, is to be rebuilt on a scale of absolutely princely magnificence, as if, indeed, preparations were being made for the reception of a Royal bride, who may after all be no less a personage than the Princess Maud. Very well informed people authoritatively state that this will be so, but I think you will find that it will be the Princess Mary of Teck who will become Countess of Chelsea.

Members of beneficiary societies should see that assessments are punctually paid. By a lapse of ten days a recent certificate became void, thus depriving the heirs of the expected benefit of $2,000.

THEY'RE MARKED FOR LIFE.

The Bertillon System of Identifying Prisoners as Practiced in the Armory.

Once a criminal is measured by the Bertillon system he is sure of being identified the next time he is caught. The Bertillon system was imported to this country from France not a great many years ago, and is as yet in use in but few prisons and penitentiaries. Several of the eastern state prisons use it, and the Illinois State Prison Board was the first to adopt it. The system is followed at the Harrison and Armory stations in this city. Capt. Lloyd said yesterday that it had been the means of identifying more criminals since it had been adopted here than any other of the numerous schemes devised. On the second door of the Armory, where none but officers is allowed, is a room where all prisoners of any prominence are measured, according to the Bertillon system, and where their photographs are taken. The measurements are as follows: First the full length is taken, then the distance from the middle finger of one hand to the middle finger of the other, with the arms held out straight from the side; the length of the fingers, the length of the joints of the middle finger from the elbow to the end of the middle finger, the size of the wrist, arm, and shoulder, the measurement of the neck, size of mouth, the size of head, distance around the head from the top of each ear, distance from the root of the nose to the crown of the head, length of ear, the length and breadth of forehead, bumps or marks on the same, length of foot, the distance from the ball of the same to the knee joint, length of toes, distance from first joint of big toe to heel, and the exact breadth of foot from the last joint of big toe to the little toe. Those are the measurements of the body. Then the color of the eyes, hair and every scar, india-ink mark and blemish on the skin, no matter how trivial, are noted. If the prisoner be a man grown, and is caught twenty years later, his identity can be established beyond the peradventure of a doubt. "The system succeeds where a photograph will fail," said Capt. Lloyd, "because a prisoner can squirm around and screw his features into such shapes that the identity is lost in a photograph, but by the Bertillon system, no matter what a man does he cannot prevent us holding him and taking his measurements. A large number of the criminals we have measured, upon going back to their old life, when released, were again caught and identified by this system, where otherwise we would have failed. There are not two persons on the face of the earth alike, and the measurement of one man cannot tally with that of another. The only tools required are a little measure made to fit about the head and a rule.—Chicago News.

How to be Eloquent.

It is only when a minister preaches out of his own heart that he reaches the hearts of others. A purely intellectual sermon stops with the intellect, a doctrinal sermon is nothing more than a spiritual opiate. But let a man utter what he has felt and known, let him touch the harp-string that has vibrated in his own soul, and there comes that hush and spell over an audience, that chained attention, that lifting of faces which seems like a white tablet for God's finger to write on. Who has not felt the irresistible power of a hidden experience interpreted by another soul? This is the secret of all oratory, of all sympathetic power of man over man. The greatest preachers are not those who may lay claim to the highest scholarship, who are profound philosophical thinkers or doctrinal giants, but whose large hearts have throbbed with the deepest spiritual experience. "Out of the abundance of the heart the mouth speaketh." These are men who can lay hold on vast audiences and sway them as the wind sways a forest. Their language may be plain, their style unpolished, their manner awkward, but they know the stops and keys of the human heart as the organist knows his instrument, and all the solemn and sweet music of life answers to their touch.—Herald.

Baby Shows at Fairs.

The improvement of the fall fair that it may keep up with the times is necessary. But he would be a bold man who would suggest the addition to the prize lists of the following offers: Handsomest baby of any age, $5; handsomest girl baby, not less than 2 nor more than 3 years old, $5; handsomest boy baby, not less than 2 nor more than 3 years old, $5; handsomest girl baby, not less than 1 nor more than 2 years old, $4; handsomest boy baby, not less than 1 nor more than 2 years old, $4; handsomest girl baby under 1 year old, $3; handsomest boy baby under 1 year old, $3; handsomest colored baby, any age, $3; fattest baby, any age, $3; handsomest pair of twins, $5; handsomest triplets, $5.

A Dying Request.

"Susan," said an Arkansaw man who was very sick, "ef I should die I reckon yer'll have a hard time makin' a livin' an' I reckon yer'll have ter get the children homes whar they kin arn their vittels an' clothes, but thar's one thing I don't want yer ter do."

"What's that, Jerry?" said the wife, who sat sobbing by the bed.

"I don't want yer ter let nobody have old Boze, 'cause thar ain't more'n a dozen men in this county knows how to treat a good coon dog."

A Success.

Man of Family—That burglar-alarm is a grand success; wouldn't part with it for a mint of money. It went off at one o'clock this morning.

Dealer—Eh? Did you catch a burglar trying to get in?

"No; but I caught my daughter's young man trying to get out."

THE GOOD TIME COMING.

When women vote—all hail the day!
Twill be a blessing great,
When equal rights shall hold full sway
Where voters congregate.

In horse cars men may sit, although
A dozen women stand,
And masculine content will grow
Throughout this glorious land.

The Central telephone office is all ready for work, and the operator will be Miss Rose who has been connected with the Hamilton exchange for some time.—Rat Portage News.

LORD-LIEUTENANT OF IRELAND.

The Third Earl of Zetland who has Succeeded the Marquis of Londonderry.

The Right Hon. Sir Lawrence Dundas, Bart., third Earl of Zetland, Baron Dundas of Aske, near Richmond, in the county of York, who has succeeded the Marquis of Londonderry as Lord Lieutenant of Ireland, was born at Stirling on Aug. 16th, 1844, son of Mr. John Charles Dundas, of Woodhall, Wetherby, Yorkshire, M.P. for Richmond, who was fourth son of Lawrence, the second Baron Dundas and first Earl of Zetland, says the New York Morning Journal.

The barony was created in 1762 and the earldom in 1838. There are four branches of the ancient Scottish family of Dundas, some members of which have held high public offices in Scotland and in the United Kingdom. The branch distinguished as Dundas of Fingask had an hereditary connection with the Orkney and Shetland or Zetland Isles, usually holding the offices of Lord Lieutenant and Vice-Admiral in those islands. Their estates in Yorkshire accrued from the marriage of Sir Thomas Dundas, in 1794, to a daughter of the third Earl Fitzwilliam, and this gentleman was raised to the peerage 50 years afterward.

Mr. J. C. Dundas, father of the present Earl of Zetland, married, in 1843, a daughter of Mr. James Talbot, of Wexford, so the new Lord-Lieutenant of Ireland is the son of an Irish lady. In 1876, on the death of his uncle Thomas, second Earl of Zetland, the well-known Grand Master of the Freemasons of England, and renowned as a sportsman, the present Earl succeeded, two other uncles having died young.

Lord Zetland, who held a commission in the Royal Horse Guards Blue, had married, in 1871, Lady Lilian Lumley third daughter of the late Earl of Scarborough, and he has several children. Her Ladyship's sisters are married to the heirs of the Duke of Westminster, the Earl of Bradford, and of Lord Boston. Lord Zetland has been a Lord-in-Waiting to the Queen. He resides at Aske Hall, Richmond, and at Kerse House, near Falkirk in Scotland.

The Decline of Constantinople.

The British Consul-General at Constantinople, in his last report, refers to the declining commercial importance of that city. Its trade has suffered considerably since 1878, and more particularly during the past two years. Large wholesale houses which formerly did business with Persia and Central Asia, and acted as middlemen between European manufacturers and the merchants of these parts, have in recent years lost their customers, and are gradually disappearing from the city. This is owing, in a measure to new and more direct routes having been thrown open to markets that were formerly supplied from Constantinople, and also to the fact that produce which used to go to the Turkish capital for shipment to Europe is now despatched direct from the exports. Persia, which previously drew a considerable part of her imports from Constantinople, has latterly commenced to make use of Bushire, and the entire import trade of Lower Persia is at present centred in that place. The export trade of the city has suffered in a similar way. The produce of Turkish Kurdistan, estimated to amount to an annual value of £1,500,000, which two years ago went through the capital is now shipped from Bagdad—a route which is considered to be less expensive and safer. As regards Persian trade especially, Mr. Fawcett observes that during the years 1887-88 it was not satisfactory. Dealers in Manchester goods suffered considerably, owing partly to Russian competition, and also to the high rate of exchange prevailing at Odessa.

The Hebrew Oath.

In the city court this morning in the case of Charles Freeman against Charles Goldman for the recovery of $25, the orthodox Hebrew oath was administered by the Jewish rabbi. To take the oath the witness has to wash his hands and put on a Talith, or prayer cloak, and while swearing to take and hold in his hand a torah, or the five books of Moses, written on parchment, for the use of the house of worship. The party must swear by the name of Jehovah, and, looking at the word, he shall swear: "I swear by Adonai," and continues his oath, "So help me God to future happiness." A small casket contains the ten commandments and is held in the left hand, a strap attached being bound about the arms, and another such casket is strapped on the temple. The rabbi administered the oath to several witnesses before court adjourned for dinner.—Times-Herald.

Connubial Asperities.

"Mrs. Litewaite, said that lady's husband, in a tone of solemn warning, do you know that the newspapers speak of cases where women have been tried as common scolds?

"And do you know," said she, with deliberate emphasis, "that there is a growing popular impression to the effect that a fool-killer is preparing for effective work?

A Young Barbarian.

Fond Mother—Tommy, darling, this is your birthday. What would you like best?

Tommy (after a moment's reflection)—I think I should enjoy seeing the baby spanked.

An Imported Smell.

Miss Trust—Why, Mr. Bluffer, where have you been all this time? I haven't seen you for two months!

Mr. Bluffer (breathing a balmy odor of gin and bitters)—I have been abroad, you know.

Miss Trust—How delightful! And, of course, you visited Cologne? I knew I smelled some perfume when you came in.

WARNER'S Safe Cure cures nervousness, insomnia, hysteria and neuralgia. Why? Because these are symptoms of an impure condition of the blood, caused by unhealthy kidney action. The poisonous urea and uric acid being retained in the blood cause the symptoms of kidney disease first noted.

—Mrs. Proctor, widow of the late astronomer, will deliver a number of the professor's lectures next winter, using his lantern slides.

WHERE TIME GOES.

The Ordinary Duties of the Day Classified and Time Accounted For.

A man whose head is bulging with mathematical problems has figured out the disposition of every hour of the daily life of an average man, and tells just how many hours a man of 50 years has devoted to his toilet, meals or newspaper. "Let us assume," said he, "that the sleeping hours of an average man will number eight daily. That is one-third of his time, so that in fifty years your man will have slept, all told, sixteen years and eight months. The man who is shaved daily at fifty years probably had his face scraped not oftener than three times a week at twenty-five years, while during the first eighteen years a razor never touched his face. Say that the semi-centenarian has averaged two shaves a week for fifty years, that will give 1,700 scrapes in the half century. At an average of fifteen minutes per shave, the time devoted to this one small element of life will run up to fifty-nine days and nine hours. If a man should not shave in fifty years, and then attempt to make up his proportion all at once he would have to shave eight and day for nearly two months. The average man who is not limited to twenty minutes for dressing, breakfast and finishing his train consumes about thirty minutes in getting outside his clothes in the morning. Half an hour per day for fifty years would amount to one year, fifteen days and five hours, so that if a man started even with the start in life for the whole fifty years he would pass two weeks beyond his birthday anniversary, and this means working twenty-four hours per day. A good shoe-shiner, however, and twenty minutes a day for that purpose would put a man in the hot for eight months, thirteen days and eleven hours out of the fifty years. For other demands of the morning toilet allow ten minutes per day for four months, five days and twenty hours in half a century. Why, just a single minute spent in looking for a collar button means twelve days and fourteen hours in the course of fifty years. Half an hour for breakfast, forty minutes for lunch and an hour for dinner amounts to five months, five days and nine hours of eating in fifty years of life. The man who lives away up in the twenty-eighth ward and spends an hour each day jogging to and from business in a horse car may not realize it, but it is nevertheless true that in thirty years, one year, three months, one day and six hours of his time will go that way. When a man reckons his time at fifty cents an hour it seems rather rough to think that it takes $500 worth every year to get to business and back home again every day.

A Bit of French History.

Sept. 4th, 1870, before dawn Comte de Palikao announced to the French Chamber the surrender of the Emperor's army at Sedan. Jules Favre at once declared for defending France to the last, deposed the Imperial Dynasty, and proposed the concentration of power in the hands of Gen. Trochu. This was at 1 a.m. At 5 p.m. at the suggestion of Thiers the Chamber appointed a commission of government and national defense, ordered the election of a constituent assembly and adjourned. On the sitting being resumed an hour later the hall was invaded by a mob demanding the establishment of the republic. Most of the members left the chamber while Gambetta and the other Liberals proclaimed the deposition of Napoleon III. and the formation of a republic. Simultaneously the Imperial Senate held its last meeting and declared its adhesion to the Emperor. The government of national defense was then proclaimed on the meeting of the Legislative Assembly. Thiers presided when Favre announced the formation of the government. A protest was made, but Thiers counseled moderation. Such was the beginning of the third French Republic nineteen years ago. On the same evening Sept. 4th the Empress Eugenie and Comte de Palikao secretly left Paris and entered Belgium.

He Was Lazy.

One of the laziest men in the country is John Curtis, who is serving a three years sentence in the State Prison at Salem, Oregon. Curtis worked in the foundry and about three months ago took off his boots on the plea that they hurt him and then burnt his foot so severely that he was laid up. When the burn was healing he put vinegar on it and aggravated it to prevent its getting well. The prison physician threatened him and managed to cure the wound. Curtis was set at work again. He worked four days and then with a hatchet cut off his left hand. It took two blows. One cut through the fleshy part of the hand, the other clean through the wrist joint. He confessed that he did it to avoid work.—Salisbury Dispatch.

How to Dry Umbrellas.

Umbrellas should be placed handle downward to dry. The moisture falls from the edges of the frame and the fabric dries uniformly. If stood handle upward, as is commonly the case, the top of the umbrella holds the moisture, owing to the lining underneath the ring, and it takes a long time to dry, thereby injuring the silk or other fabric with which it is covered. This is the main cause of the umbrella wearing out so soon at the top. Umbrella cases are responsible for the wear of the silk. The constant friction causes tiny holes to appear so provokingly early. When not in use the umbrella should be left loose and when wet left loose to dry.

Life Worth Living.

"I see that a soda water trust is talked of," remarked a Pittsburger to his best girl, as they quaffed the sweetend atmosphere.

"Ah," she replied. "Then if they would only trust us for ice cream, too, how nice it would be."

THE CHANGE.

God pity the heart that is stricken to tears
God pity the eyes that are never wet
By the sight of another's woes or fears
Or the scent of a rose or mignonette—
Tender and faint as a song that smote
The gates of Heaven from a thrush's throat
Yet strong enough to bear and float
A heavy soul o'er the vanished years
To some dear memory above it set
The immortelles of a vain regret—
To some small grave by which we know
The sad, sweet peace of death and woe.
God pity the life that is withered and dry
From a frozen heart and a desert eye.

WHY THE LEAVES TURN.

A Brief Explanation of the Causes of the Red and Golden Glory of Autumn.

Probably not one person in a thousand knows why leaves change their color in the fall, remarked an eminent botanist the other day. "The common and old-fashioned idea is that all this red and golden glory we see now is caused by frosts. A true and scientific explanation of the causes of the coloring of leaves would necessitate a long and intricate discussion. Stated briefly and in proper language, those causes are these. The green matter in the tissue of a leaf is composed of two colors, red and blue. When the sap ceases to flow in the fall, and the natural growth of the tree ceases, oxidation of the tissue takes place. Under certain conditions, the green of the leaf changes to red; under different conditions it takes on a yellow or brown tint. The difference in color is due to the difference in combination of the original constituents of the green tissue and to the varying conditions of climate, exposure and soil. A dry, cold climate produces more brilliant foliage than one that is damp and warm. This is the reason that our American autumns are so much more gorgeous than those of England. There are several things about leaves that even science cannot explain. For instance, why one of two trees growing side by side, of the same age and having the same exposure, should take on a brilliant red in the fall and the other should turn yellow; or why one branch of a tree should be highly colored and the rest of the tree have only a yellow tint are questions that are as impossible to answer as why one member of a family should be perfectly healthy and another sickly. Maples and oaks have the brightest colors.—Field and Forest.

Nasal Catarrh

is a dangerous disease. From its tendency to extend to the throat, bronchial tubes, and finally to involve the lungs in consumptive disease, it should be promptly cured, that those grave dangers may be averted. So confident are the manufacturers of Dr. Sage's Catarrh Remedy of their ability to cope successfully with this very prevalent disease, that they have for years offered, in good faith, $500 reward for a case of catarrh, no matter how bad or of how many years standing, which they cannot cure. Remedy only 50 cents, by druggists.

How Her Hair is Dressed.

It has been observed by the all seeing eye of the London reporter that the Princess of Wales has changed the style of dressing her hair. The curly front piece has altered in shape; it is worn farther off the forehead and the back hair has consequently lowered on the neck. Of course the London reporter says the Princess looks much better (if that were possible!) for the change, and it is safe to predict every feminine head in the kingdom is going to adopt the new coiffure. Be it remembered, however, that the adorable Alexandra wears a wig.

[illegible]

Female diseases, so terrible in their effects and so prevalent among all classes, can be cured by the use of Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription.

Writing as a Lost Art.

What the coming man will write! Not at all. There will be no more need of his learning to write than learning to spin. Writing will have become one of the lost arts, and a wholly unnecessary art, by the time the coming man appears. His writing will be done by the phonograph, which will be placed on his desk as pens and ink are now, and whenever he has a story, a poem, an essay or a private letter to indict he will simply talk into the phonograph and send on the plate which has recorded his words. The teaching of penmanship will be unknown in the school of the future, and writing, in the present fashion, will be regarded as much among barbaric methods as we now hold the rude hieroglyphics of the ancients to be.—Atlanta Constitution.

[illegible]

Up and down, up and down—one day a millionaire next day "dead broke"—one day buoyant in spirits, next day gloomy as a fog—one day in seeming perfect health, next day "laid out" with a bilious attack or your stomach "on a strike." This is the way the world wags now-a-days. If you are bilious, melancholic, dizzy headed, dyspeptic, want appetite or have torpid action of liver, kidneys or bowels take Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets, purely vegetable, perfectly harmless; one a dose.

Quite Work for a Time.

Foreman—You might as well look for another job, Jerry.

Bricklayer—What for? What have I done.

"Your trowelful of mortar struck the owner of the building down on the first floor."

"Let him keep out of the way. If the bell strikes 12 when I've got a trowel of mortar I don't care where it drops."

Didn't Come to Work Overtime.

Chief industrious clerk in Government office)—Why didn't you dot the "i" in the last word of your report last night?

Industrious Clerk—I beg your pardon; but you see the clock struck 4 just at that point, and I didn't care to work overtime.

DOWIE 39 89

AGENTS MAKE $100 A MONTH with us. Send 25c. for terms. A colored rug pattern and 50 colored designs. W. & P. PUSH, St. Thomas, Ont.

DUNN'S BAKING POWDER
THE COOK'S BEST FRIEND

GEO. MITCHELL,

BANKER,

FLESHERTON.

DRAFTS BOUGHT AND SOLD.

Special Attention paid to the collection of Notes and Accounts. 2nd door North of Richardson & Co's.

Vicinity Chips.

Characteristics of the Past Week Carefully Culled for the Curious.

Remember the Osprey fall show at Maxwell on Friday, Oct. 4.

Miss Fisher, of Parry Sound, is visiting with Mrs W.K. Flesher.

If your watch or clock needs repairing, be sure and take it to Russell's, Flesherton for a perfect job.

If your watch or clock needs repairing be sure and take it to Russell's, Flesherton for a perfect job.

An account of honey for sale at this office

Mr T Bates, of the Sault, made Flesherton a call on Saturday, leaving for the Sault the same day

Miss Lily Powell, who has been visiting relatives in Toronto and vicinity for some weeks, returned on Monday last.

Mr W Varty and son returned last week from the Canadian Sault, where they have been employed during the past summer

Mr R. Richardson & Co have repaired the clock in their tower. It was illuminated on Saturday evening for the first time this fall

LOST A pair of long boots, slightly worn, on the gravel road leading south of Flesherton. The finder would confer a favor by leaving them at this office.

Each purchaser of an admission ticket to the Stayner Exhibition will receive a numbered ticket, entitling him to one draw for a handsome covered carriage, valued at $110

Now that the harvest is ended and summer is past it would allay an overwrought feeling of lonesomeness could we hear from our Balsam Valley correspondent once more

The most interested man in the prehistoric remains was Dr. Ottewell By the way Mr. Jelly says he finds that the veterinary surgeons can give a better description of the various bones of the beast than any of the scientists

One row per fair day is to be chronicled It was between three beauties from Euphrasia. Two strapping fellows piled on to a little man and both got seriously done up, too. When there must be a row that is the way one likes to see it end.

Theodore Malchell, a native of Macedonia, who is now in this country and studying in Knox College, Toronto, will accompany the Rev. Mr. Emes and preach in the Presbyterian church here on Sabbath afternoon next.

Big Egg

Mr John Davis made The Advance a present, on Monday, of two eggs which measured sixteen by thirteen inches. They were manufactured by a hen which he employs specially for that purpose They may be seen at this office by the inquisitive

Prize Cheese

Flesherton cheese factory took fourth prize at the Industrial fair for factory cheese. Considering the fact that there were two hundred entries, this is very satisfactory, and proves that our cheese makers are among the very foremost in Canada

A Sure Criterion.

A Cincinnati trade journal says By watching the advertising columns of a newspaper we are enabled to know the exact condition of mercantile affairs and of the general prosperity or depression of the town where the paper is published We can sit at our desk, and pick out the lively businesses all over the country, and also the show of dead ones. There is no better index to a town than its newspaper. It is a better criterion to go by, and is considered so by sagacious men, than a photograph.

Died.

THOMPSON.—In Flesherton on Monday, Sept 23, the infant son of Samuel Thompson, aged six week

Concert.

The concert given in the Town Hall on Tuesday evening by the Presbyterian Ladies' Aid was fairly well attended. The program supplied was very good and consisted of solos by Mr. Anderson, Miss Vanousen, Mr. Evans, Mr. Dorington and Miss Benson, of Markdale; quartet by Messrs. Evans, Russell, Miss Damude and Mrs. Blackburn; recitation by Miss Annie Richardson, entitled "Poor Joe." Rev. J.W. Shilton, B.A., gave a short address, and his remarks were as usual, received with much favor.

Arbitration.

Judge Lane, Inspector Campbell, Inspector Grier, Jas. Campbell, Esq., of Collingwood, and Jas. Elliott, Esq., of Feversham, composed a board of arbitration which met in the Town Hall, Flesherton, yesterday (Wednesday) to hear the petitions of certain ratepayers situate in school sections Nos. 6 and 10, Osprey, who were desirous of being annexed to section No 16, Collingwood. After hearing evidence the request of the petitioners was granted.

